them under the halfe-decke. At their first comming forth of the Cabbin, they met Captaine Daus comming out of the Gun-roome, whom they pulled into the Cabbin, and giving him fixe or feuen mortall wounds, they thrult him out of the Cabbin before them. His wounds were fo

as we receiving them on our Pikes, they would gather on our Pikes with their hands to reach ve mortall, that he dyed affoone as he came into the waste. They pressed so fiercely to come to vs. 10 for the English Merchants which were resident in those parts, and seeing that hee had but two Anchors and two Cables to helpe himselfe withall, thought good to repaire his ships, and to returne home with that poore Voyagethat he had made. When our ships were readie, and that we had taken in wood and water, wee hoysed up our They returne layles the fift of February to returne for England.

The seventh of Aprill we had sight of the Cape of Bona Esperanza, after wee had passed a April 7 1606.

Q. ELIZABETHS Patent for the East-Indies.

The seventeenth of Aprill we came to the He of Santia Helena, where we watered, and found Santia Heiena. refreshment, as Wine and Goates, which we our felues killed. In the said Iland are many wilde 10 Swine and Goates. There are also great store of Partridges, Turkie Cockes, and Ginnie Hennes,

This Hand is not inhabited. VVe departed from thence the third of May.

The fourteenth, we passed under the Equinoctial! Line. The feuen and twentieth of June, we arrived in Milford Hauen in Wales.

The ninth of Iuly, we came to an Anchor in Portfmonth Roade, where all our Companie were in Milford H: difmified. And heere wee ended our Voyage, having beene out vpon the fame full nineteene They care to moneths, in the yeare 1606.

CHAP. II.

A Priviledge for fifteene yeeres granted by her Maiestie to certaine Admenturers, for the discoucrie of the Trade for the East-Indies, the one and thirtiesh of December, 1600.

They arrived

Three or foure with their Swords. It was neere halfe an houre before we could from them backe into the Cab. of the lapenian bin: In which time we had killed three or foure of their Leaders. After they were driven into Leaders killed. the Cabbin, they fought with vs at the least foure houres before we could suppresse them, often tyring the Cabbin, burning the bedding, and much other stuffe that was there. And had we not with two Demy-culuerings, from under the halfe-decke, beaten downe the bulke head and the pumpe of the finip, we could not have suppressed them from burning the ship. This Ordnance being charged with Crosse-barres, Bullets, and Case-shot, and bent close to the bulke head, so One and twen- violently marred therewith boords and splinters, that it left but one of them Handing of two sie Lapours flin and twentie. Their legs, armes, and bodies were fo torne, as it was strange to see, how the shot 20 had maifacred them. In all this conflict they never would defire their lives , though they were hopeleffe to eleape : fuch was the desperatenesse of these laponians. Only one lept ouer-boord. which afterward iwamme to our fhip againe, and asked for grace, wee tooke him in, and asked him what was their purpose? He told vs, that they meant to take our shippe, and to cut all our throates. He would fay no more, but defired that he might be cut in pieces.

The next day, to wit, the eight and twentieth of December, we went to a little Iland to the Leeward off vs. And when we were about fine miles from the Land, the Generall commanded his people to hang this Iapanian: but he brake the Rope, and fell into the Sea. I cannot tell whether he Iwamme to the land or not. We tooke our coarferight to the little fore-faid Hand, and came there to an Anchor the thirtieth of December. We remained there three dayes to mend our 30 Boat, and to take in wood and water. In this Iland we found a ship of Patane, out of which we tooke the Captaine, and asked him, whether the ships of China were come to Patane, or no ! He told vs that they were not yet come, but that they would come thither within few dayes. We made the Captaine of that thip to be our Pilot, because he knew very well to what place the Chinish ships would come.

The tenth of Ianuary we purposed to stay their, till it pleased God, that we should meete the Chinifb flips.

The twelfth of Iamarie, one of our Mates climbed up to the top of the Mast, and descreed two ships which came toward vs : but because of the wind they were forced to goe to the Leeward of the Hand. Affoone as we had fight of them wee weighed Anchor, and made toward 40 them. And we fetched up the greatest of them the twelfth of lanuarie in the night. We fought a little with them, and boorded them, and brought them to an Anchor.

The next day, to wit, the thirtieth of Iannarie we valaded some of their goods, to wit, raw Silke and other Silkes. They had fitte Tunnes of Silver of their Countrey: but we tooke little or none of it; because we had good hope, that we should meete with the other Chinish shires. After we had taken some of their Silkes, we let them depart the fifteenth of Ianuary : and gaue them twice as much, as wee had taken from them. And casting them off, wee tooke our course backe agains to China B.w.a. but we could not fetch it vp, because we had contrarie wind; so that we were forced to put Lee-ward vnto two small Hands, which they of lana call Pulo Sumatra:

where we came to an Anchor the two and twentieth of Ianuarie. The foure and twentieth day, as we rode at Anchor there arose a great storme of wind, with which our Cable brake, to that we were forced to put into the neerest Creeke.

The second of February, hue Holland thips met with vs fayling homeward, which put into the fame Roade where wee were. Captaine Warmicke was Generall of these ships. Hee fent to our Generall to dine with him. Our Generall went to him. He told vs that our English Merchants in Bantam were in great perill, and that still they looked for nothing elie, then that the King of Inua would affault them, because we had taken the China ship, whereby the King of Bantam had loft his custome. Wherefore Captaine Warmicke requested our Generall, that hee would ceale to goe any further, and would fayle home vnto England with him. Our Generall answered, That hee had not as yet made his Voyage, and that therefore hee would not returne, untill it should 60 please God to send him somewhat to make vp the Game. The Hollanders perceiving that they could not perswade our General to give over his purpose, departed from vs the third of Februarie.

Our Generall considering, that if he should proceed on his Voyage, it would be very dangerous

LIZABETH, by the grace of GOD Queene of England, France and Ireland. Defendour of the Faith, &c. To all Our Officers, Ministers and Subjects, and to all

Defendour of the Lastin, Occ. 10 miles Out Realism of England, as elfewhere under Our obeposter people affect within this Our Realism of England, as elfewhere under Our obedeence and Iurification, or subcrivife, unto whom these Our Letters Pattents shall bee the deep or read, creeting. Seene, hewed, or read, greeting. Whereas Our most deare, and louing Cofin, George Earle of Cumberland; and The names of

Our welbeloued Subjects, Sir John Hart of London, Kingbs, Sir John Spencer of London, Knight, the Advenge Sir Edward Michelburne, Knight, William Candish, Efquire, Paul Banning, Robert Lee, Leonard ress. Hollyday, John Watts, John More, Edward Holmden, Robert Hampson, Thomas Smith, and Thomas Cambell, Citizens and Aldermen of London, Edward Barker, Efquire, Thomas Marsh, Efquire, Samuel Bachoule, Efquire, Iames Lancaster, Richard Staper, Thomas Cordell, William Garway, Oliver Style, William Quarles, Bartholmew Barnes, William Offly, Robert Chamberlayn, John Haruy, Richard Wifeman, William Stone, Francis Cherry, Thomas Allablatter. Richard Barret, John Swynerton the younger, Thomas Garaway, William Romny, James Deane, Iohn Eldred, Andrew Banning, Edward Loaning, Thomas Iackion, Nicholas Leate, Iohn Wolflenholme, Nicholas Peard, William Chamber, Rowland Bachoufe, Humfrey Smith, Robert Sandy, Henry Robinson, Richard Poyntel, John Highlord, William Haryson, Humphry Style, Humphry Robynton, Nicholas Ferror, Thomas Earryngton, John Combe, Robert Offly, Roger How, John Hewet, James Turner, Morrys Abbot, James Carrell, Robert Brooke, Richard Chamblyn, George Chamblyn, Leonard White, John Cornelius, Ralph Basby, William Genyngs, Gyles Paslow, Robert Bell, Thomas White, Nicholas Lyng, William Palmer, Ellys Crippes, John Merrycke, Humphry Hanford, Thomas Symons, Robert Cox, William Wuftail, Iohn Humphry, Thomas Boilocke, Bartholmew Holland, Richard Cox, William Walton, William Freeman, Thomas Southacke, John Friar, Francis Dent, Richard Bull, Richard Pierce, Roger Henyng, Robert Cobb, Robert Robynson, Francis Euington, Francis Taylor, Thomas Wefrow, John Milleton, Robert Gore, Ralph Gore, William Cater, George Cater, John Buf-

bridge, Thomas Horton, William Bond Merchant-Taylor of London, William Cotton, John Stockley, Roger Owfield, Augustine Skinner, Richard Wife, Robert Towerson, Richard Taylbye, Robert Middleton, Robert Bateman, Richard Goffon, Robert Waldore, Richard Wrag, John Wrag, William Dale, Laurence Waldo, Henry Brydgman, Samuel Armytage, Edward Haryfon, Edward Nicelian, Clement Moiely, John Newman, Humphry Wallot, Thomas Richardion, Thomas Boothby, John Coachman, Reinald Greene, Richard Burret, Robert Myldmay, William Hyne, George Chandeler, Edward Lutterfoord, William Burrell, Stephen Haruy, Thomas Henshaw, William Ferrys, William Aldersey, William Hewet, William Fisher, Joseph Salbancke, Nicholas Manly, Nicholas Salter, William Willaftone, William Angel, Nicholas Barnfly, John 60 Hawkins, Roger Dy, Richard Clarke, Thomas Hewet, George Whitemore, Henry Politee, William Greenwell, Robert Iohnson, Bartholmew Huggott, Humphry Baste, Robert Buck, Ambroie Wheeler, William Hale, Richard Hull Innior, John Hodgson, Alphonius Poote, Edmund Spencer, Robert Dewsy, Richard Piott, William Bonham, Edward Barkeham, George Coles, frincing land Ralph Hammer, Iames Colymer, Samuel Hare, George Vtlye, Gregory Allen, Henry Archer, 1661.

CHAP.II.

They returne from the lle o Two fmall Ilandscalled Pulo Sumatra.

February the

Gibion, Robert Kayes, Hugh Crompton, Richard Wather, George Holman, Morryce Luellen,

Richard Partons, Francis barker, William Turner, John Greenwood Richard Denne, Richard

Ironfide, George Smithes, Iames Dunkyn Edward Walter, Andrew Chamblayn, Robert Start-

ford, Anthony Stratford, William Myllet, Simon Laurence, Thomas Lydall, Stephen

Hodgfon, Richard Wright, William Starker, William Smith, John Ellacots, Robert Bayly, and

Reger Cotton, have of Our certaine knowledge beene Petitioners unto Vs, for Our Royall Affent and

A Body Po-The Style of the Corpora-

140

Licence to bee granted unto them, that they at their owne adventures, costs and charges, as well for the honour of this Our Realme of England, as for the increase of Our Nauigation, and advancement of trade 10 of Merchandise within Our fund Realmes, and the Dominions of the same, might aduenture, might set forth one, or more Voyages, with convenient number of Ship and Pynnasses, by way of traffique and merchandise to the East-Indians, withe Country and parts of Alia and Affrica, and to as many of the Ilands. and Cities, Townes, and places thereabout, as where trade, and traffique of merchandise may by all likelybood, be established or had: Divers of which Countries, and many of the Ilands, Cities and Ports thereof, have long fishence beene discourred by others of Our Subjects, albeit not frequented in trade of Merchand G. Know yee therefore, that wee greatly tendring the honour of Our Nation, the wealth of Our people, and the encouragement of them, and others of Our louing Subjects in their good enterprises, for the increase of Our Naugation, and the advancement of lawfull traffique, to the benefit of Our Common. wealth, have of Our speciall Grace, certaine knowledge, and meere motion, given and granted, and by these 20 Presents, for Vs, Our Heires, and Successiours, doe give, and grant onto Our said lowing Subjects, before m these Presents expressy named. That they, and enerie of them from henceforth bee, and shall bee one bodie corporate and politique indeed and in name, by the name of the Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, one bodie corporate and politique indeed, and in name really and fully for Vs, Our Heires and Successours. Wee doe erect, make, ordaine, constitute, establish, and declare by these Presents, and that by the same name of Gouernour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading it to the East-Indies, they shall have succession, and that they, and their Successours, by the name of Gouernour and Company, trading into the East-Indies, be, and shall be at all times hereafter, persons, able and capable in Law, and a bodie corporate and politique, and capable in Law, to have, purchase, receive, possesse, enior, and retaine lands, tenements, priviledges, liberties, jurisdictions, franchises, and hereditaments, 30 of what soener kind, nature, and qualitie soener they be, to them and their successours. And also to give, grant, demise, altene, assigne, and dispose all and singular other things, lands, tenements, and bereditaments, by the same name, that to them shall, or may perfaine to doe. And that they and their successours, by the name of the Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, may plead, and be impleaded, answer, and be answered, defend, and bee defended in what seemer Courts, and places, and before what soener ludges and inflices, and other persons and Officers, in all and singular Actions, Pleas, Suits, Quarrels, Causes, and Demands what soener, of what soener kind, nature, or sort, in Such manner and forme, as other Our liege people of this Our Realme of England, being persons able and capable, may, or can have, purchase, receive, possesse, enior, retaine, give, grant, demyse, aliene, assigne, dispose, plead, and be impleaded as siver, and be answered, defend, and bee defend d, release, and bee released, 40 doe permit and execute. And that the faid Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their fiecessours, may have a Common Seale, to serve for all the Causes and Businesse of them, and their successours. And that it shall and may bee lawfull, to the said Gouernour and Company, and their successioners, the same Seale, from time to time, at their will and pleasure to breake, change, and to make new, or after, as to them shall seeme expedient. And further, Wee will, and by these Prefents for Vs, Our Herres, and Successions, Wee doe ordaine, that there shall bee from henceforth, one of the same Company to bee elected and appointed in such forme and manner, as heereafter in these Pr. sents is expressed: which shall be called the Gouernour of the Said Company, and that there shall bee from henceforth, foure and twentie of the find Company, to bee elected and appointed in such forme, as heereafter in these Presents is expressed, which shall bee called the Committies of the find Company, who together with 50 the Governour of the faid Company, for the time being, Shall have the direction of the Voyages, of, or for the faid Company, and the proution of the flipping and merchandifes thereto belonging, and also the file of all merchandises, of, or for the said Company, and the managing and handling of all other things belonging to the fund Company : And for the bester execution of this Our Will, and Grant in this behalfe : 11 ee haue affigued, nominated, conflictuted, and made, and by these Presents, for Vs, Our Herres, and Suscessiones, wee doe affigue, nominate, confitute, and make the faid Thomas Smith, Alderman of London, to bee the first, and present Gouernour of the Said Company, to continue in the Said Office, from the date of these Presents, untill another of the said Company, in due manner, be chosen and sworne unto the said Office, ac-The fift Com. cording to the ordinances and pronisons, beereafter in these Presents expressed, and declared, if the faid mitties for the Thomas Smith shall so long line. And also Wee have assigned, nominated, and appointed, and by these 60

Thomas Smyth Alderman the frit Gouer.

direction of Presents for Vs, Our Heires, and Successours, Wee doe assigne, nominate, constitute, and make the same the affaires, Paul Banyng, Leonard Holyday, John More, Edward Holmden, Richard Staper, Thomas Corthe Gompany dell, William Garway, Oliver Style, James Lancaster, Richard Wiseman, Francis Cherry, Thomas Allablafter, William Romney, Roger How, William Chambers, Robert Sandy, John Eldred, Richard Wiche, John Highlord, John Middleton, John Combe, William Haryson, Nicholas Lyng, and Robert Bell, to bee the foure and twentie first and present Committies of the said Company, to continue in the faid Office of Committees of the faid Company, from the date of these Presents, for one whole yeere next following. And further, Wee Will and Grant by these Presents, for Vs, Our Heires, and Successours, unto the faid Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their successours, that it shall and may bee lawfull, to, and for the faid Governour and Company, for the time being, or the more part of them present, at any publique Assembly, commonly called, The Court holden for the faid Company, the Governour of the faid Company, being alwayes one from time to time, to elect, nominate, and appoint, one of the Said Company to be Deputie to the Said Governour; which A Deputy to

CHAP. II. Q. ELIZABETH'S Patent for the East Indies.

10 Deputie shall take a corporall Oath before the Governour, and five or more of the Committies of the said the Governor. Company for the time being, well, faithfully, and trucly, to execute his faid Office of Deputie, to the Gouernour of the Company; and after his Oath so taken, shall and may from time to time, in the absence of the said Governour, exercise and execute the Office of Governour of the said Company, in such fort as the Gouernour ought to doc. And further, Wee will, and grant by these Presents, for Vs, Our Heires, Executors, and Succeffours, onto vs the faid Governour and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their successours, that they, or the greater part of them, whereof the Gouernour for the time being, or his Deputie to become, and from time to time, and all times hereafter, The first day fall, and may have authoritie, and power yeerely, and every yeere, on the first day of luit, or at any tume, of luly, or with within fixe dayes after that day, to affemble, and meet together in some convenient place, to bee appointed in 6. dayes affrom time to time by the Gouernour, or win's abfance, by the Deputte of the faid Gouernour, for the time ter the yearely

20 being. And that they, being so affembled, it shall and may bee lanfall, to, and for the faid Contrnour, or Covernour. Deputie of the faid Governous, and the faid Company for the time being, or the greater part of them which then finall happen to be present, whereof the Governour of the find Companie, or his Deputie for the time being to be one, to cleek and nominate one of the faud Company, which shall be Gouernour of the same Company for one whole years from thence next following, which per fon being so elected and nominated to bee Governour of the faid Company, as is afore find, before he be admitted to the execution of the faid Office, shall take a corporall Oath before the last Governour being his Predecessor, or his Deputie, or any sixe or more of the Committies of the faid Company for the time being, that hee shall from time to time, well and truly execute the office of Governour of the Sud Company, in all things concerning the same, and that immediately after the faid Oath so taken, he shall and may execute and use the said Office of Gonernor of the faid Companie, for one whole yeare from thence next following. And in like fort we will and grant, that as Eucry Brother well every one aboue named to be of the faul Company or Fellowship, as all others hereafter to be admitted, to take a coror free of the said Company, Shall take a corporall Out before the Governour of this said Company, or his Deputie for the time being, to such effect as b, the said Guernour or Company, or the more part of them. In any publique Court to be held for the faid Company, finall bee in reasonable manner set downe and deuifed, before they shall be allowed, or admitted to trade or traffique as a Free-man of the field Company. And The foure and further we will and grant by these Presents, for Vs, Our Heires and Successions, unto the said Gouernour twentic Comand Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their Successors, that the faid mitties to bee Gonernor or the Deputie of the said Gonernour, and the Company and their Successors for the time being or yearly elected, the greatest part of them, whereof the Governor, or the Deputie of the Governor from time to time to be one, on the first of 40 Balland may from time to time to be one, shall and may from time to time and at all times bereafter, have and days after. thorstie and power yearly, and every yeare on the first day of Iuly, or at any time within six dayes after that day, to affemble, meet together in some convenient place to be from time to time appointed by the said Governor of the faid Company, or in his absence by his Deputie. And that they being so assembled, it shall and may be lawfull, to, and for the faul Governour, or his Deputie, and the Company for the time being, or the greater part of them, which then shall happen to bee present, whereof the Gouernous of the fund Company, or bis Deputie for the time being to be one, to elect, and nominate twentie foure of the Said Company, which thall be Committees of the faid Company for one whole youve from thence next enfuing, which perfore The Commit-being to elected, and nominated to be Committies of the faul Company as afore faid before they bee admitted to the execution of their faid Offices, shall take a Corporall Oath before the Governour or his Deput corporal Oath. 50 tie, and fixe or more of the fuid Committies of the fuid Company, being then last Predecessives for the time being, that they and every of them, shall well and faithfully performe their find Offices of Committies, in all things concerning the same. And that immediately after the said Outh so taken, they shall and may execute, and vie the faid Offices of Committees of the faid Company for one whole yeare from thence next following. And moreover, our will and pleasure is, and by these Presents, for Vs, Our Heires It the Goverand Successors, we doe grant unto the find Gouernour, and Company of Merchants of London trading nour dye, or into the East-Irelies, and to their Successors, that when, and as often it shall happen to the Governour of be removed, a the faid Company for the time, at any time within one yeare, after hee shall bee nominated, elected and fen.

from to the Office of the Governous of the faid Company, as a store-faid, to dee, or to bee removed 60 from the faid Office, which Governous not demeasing himselfe well in his said Office, Wee will to bee remooneable at the pleasure of the said Company, or the greater part of them, which shall bee present at any their publike Assemblies, commonly called their generall Court holden for the faid Company, that then, and so often it shall and may be lawfull to and for the residue of the said Company, for the time being, or the greater part of them, within connenient time after the death, or removing any such Gonernour, to afsemble themselves in such convenient place, as they shall thinke fit for the election of the Governour of the new to be cho-

CHAP. IL

142

Freedome for the Sonnes & Apprentifes of fuch, as are Company.

That the Company may affemble in any conucnient place.

Authority to make realonable lawes by find Company; or that the faid Company, or the greater part of them being then and there present, shall and may then and there before their departure from the faid place elect, and nominate one other of the faid Company to be Gouernor of the faid Company in the place or steed of him, that so dyed, or was so remaued , which per (on being so elected, and nominated to the Office of Gouernor of the said Company shall have and exercise the said Office for, and during the residue of the Said yeare, taking first a corporall Oath, as is afore-laid, for the due execution thereof, and this to be done from time to time fo often as the case shall so require. And also Our will and pleasure is, and by these presents for Vs, Our Herres, and Cuccessors Wee doe grant unto the faid Governous and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East-Indies and to their Successors, that when, and as often as it It all happen any of the Committies of the Said Compa- 10 ny for the time being at any time within one yeare next after, that they or any of them shall bee nominated. elected and fixorne to the Office of Committies of the faid Company, as is aforefaid, to dye, or be removed from the faid Office, which Committies not demeaning them selles well in their said Office, Wee will to be remoneable at the pleasure of the said Gonernour, and Company, or the greater part of them, whereof the Gouernour for the time being, or his Deputie to be one, within convenient time after the death, or removing of any of the faid Committies, to affemble themfelues in fuch convenient place, as is or shall bee v fuall and accustomed for the election of the Governour of the faid Company, or where else for the Governor of the faut Company, for the time being, or his Deputie to be one, being then and there profent, shall and may then and there, before there departure from the said place, elect and nominate one, or more of the said Company to be Committies of the faid Company in the places and steeds, place or steed of him or them, that so died, or 20 were, or was so remooned, which person, or persons so elected, and nominated to the Office, or Offices of Committie, or Committies of the faid Company, Shall have and exercise the said Office and Offices for and during the residue of the said yeere, taking first a Corporall Oath, as is aforesaid, for the due execution thereof, and this to be done from time to time for often, as the cause shall require. And further, Wee doe by these Presents for Vs, Our Heires and Successours, will, and grant unto the said Gouernour, and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East-Indies, and their successours, that they, and all that are, or shall be of the said Company of Merchants of London trading into the East-Indies, and enerie of them, and all the sonnes of them, and everie of them at their severall ages of one and twentie yeeres. or upwards: And further, all such the Apprentises, Factors, or servants of them, and everie of them. which hereafter shall be implayed by the said Gouernous and Company, in the said Trade of Merchandise, 30 of, or to the East-Indies, beyond the feas, or any other the places aforefaid, in any part of the faid East-Indies, shall and may by the space of sifteene yeeres, from the Feast of the Birth of our Lord God last past, before the date hereof, freely traffigure and wife the Trade of Merchandise by sea, in, and by such wayes and passages alreadie found out, or discoursed, or which heereaster shall bee found out, and discourred, as they shall esteeme, and take to bee sittest into, and from the East-Indies into the Countries, and parts of Alia and Africa, and into and from all the Ilands, Ports, Hauens, Cities, Creakes, Townes and places of Alia, Africa, and America, or any of them beyond the Cape of Bona Sperancia, to the straights of Magellan , where any Trade or Traffique of Merchandise may beeved or had to, and from eneric of them, in such order, manner, forme, libertie and condition to all intents, and purposes, as shall bee from time to time at any publique Assembly, or Court held by, or for the said Gouer- 40 nour or Company, by or hetweene them..., of them of the said Company, or Fellowship of Merchants of London, triding into the East-Indies, or the more part of them for the time, being prefent at such Affembly or Court, the Cournour, or his Deputie being alwaies present at such Court or Assembly limitted, and agreed: And not otherwise, without any molestation, impeachment, or disturbance: any statute, vsage, diverfice, religion, or faith, or any other cause, or matter what seever to the contrarie not with standurg : so alwaies that the same Trade bee not undertaken, nor addressed to any Countrie, Hand, Post, Hauen, Citic, Create, Towns, or place alreadie in the lawfull, and actual possession of any such Christian Prince or State, as at this present is, or at any time heereafter shall bee in league or amitte with Vs. Our Herres or Successours, and who doth not, or will not accept of such Trade, but doth ouertly declare and publish the same, to bee otterly against his or their good will and liking. And further, Our will 50 and pleasure is, and by those presents for Vs, Our Heires, and Successours, Wee doe grant unto the sud Gouernour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and to their succesfours, that it hall and may bee lawfull, to and for the faid Gonernour, and Company, and their successions from time to time, to assemble themselves for, or about any the matters, causes, assaures, or businesse of the said Trade, in any place or places for the same convenient, during the said terms of sisteene yeares within Our Dominions or elsewhere, and there to hold Court for the faid Company, and the affaires thereof; and that also it shall and may be lawfull, to, and for them, or the more part of them, being so assembled, and that shall then and there be present in any such place or places, whereof the Gouernour, or his Deputie for the time being to be one, to make, ordaine, and conflitute such and so many reasonable Lawes, Constitutions, Orders, and Ordinances, as to them, or the greater part of them, being then and there prefent shal seeme necessary & 60 convenient, for the good government of the same Companie, and of all Factors, Masters, Marmers, and other Officers imployed, or to be imployed in any of their Voyages, and for the better aduancement and continuance of the faid trade, and traffique, and the same Lawes, Constitutions, Orders, and Ordinances so made, to put in and execute accordingly, and at their pleasure to renoke, or alter the same, or any of them as occafion shall require, and that the said Gouernour, and Company, so often at they shall make, ordaine, or chablish any such Lawes, Constitutions, Orders, and Ordinances in forme aforesaid, shall and may Lawfully inpole, ordaine, limit, and provide such paines, punishments, penalties, by imprisonment of body, or by fines, or americaments, or by all or any of them upon and against all offenders, contrary to fuch Lawes, To punish of Constitutions, Orders, and Ordinances, or any of them, as to the faid Gonernour, and Company for the fend is either time being, or the greater part of them, then and there being present, the said Governour, or his Deputy in body er beeing alwayes one, shall seeme necessary, requisie, and convenient for the observation of the same pur stockee Lawes, Confistutions, Orders, and Ordinances, and the same fines, and americaments shall and may the Lawes of leavie, take, and have to the vie of the faid Governour, and Companie, and their Successor's without the Realme.

10 the impediment of Us, Our Heires, or Successors, or of any the Officers, or Ministers of Us, Our Heires, or Successors, or without accompt to Vs, Our Heyres, or Successors, to bee rendred or made. All and fundry which Lawes, Constitutions, Orders, and Ordinances, so as afore faid to be made, We will to be duely observed, and kept under the paines and penalties therein to bee contained, so alwayes the faid Lawes, Constitutions, Orders, Ordinances, Imprisonments, Fines, and Americanents be rea-Sonable, and not contrary or repugnant to the Lawes, Statutes, or Customes of this Our Realme. And for as much as the faid Gouernour, and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East-In- Freedome of dies, have not yet experience of the kinds of Commodities and Merchandizes, which are or will bee Customoof vendible, or to be vittered in the faid parts of the East-Indies, and therefore shall bee driven to carrie goods outto those parts in their Voyages divers and sundry Commodities, which are likely to be returned againe yeeres.

20 into this Realme: We therefore of Our especiall Grace, certaine knowledge, and meere motion, for the better encouraging of the faid Gouernour, and Company of Merchants trading into the East-Indies, . and for the advancement of the faid trade, doe grant unto the faid Governour and Companie, and to their Successors, that they and their Successors during the foure first Voyages, which they shall make or set forth for or towards the said East-Indies, shall or may transport and carry out of Our Realme of England, and the Ports, Creekes and Hauens thereof, all such and so much goods and merchandizes, beeing goods and merchandizes lawfully passable, and transportable out of this Realme, and not prohibited to be transported by any Law, or Statute of this Realme, as Stall be by them, their Fa-Etors, or Assignes, hipped in any Ship or Ships, Vessell or Vessels, to bee imployed in any of the said foure first Voyages, free of Custome, Subsidie or Poundage, or any other duties or payments to Us, or 30 Our Successors due, or belonging for the shipping or transporting of the same or any of them. And yet nevertheleffe Our Will and Pleasure is , and We doe by these Presents straightly charge and command, that all and enery such goods and merchandizes so to be transported out of this Realme, shall from time to time during the faid foure first Voyages, as is aforefaid, shall from time to time be duely entred by the Customer, Comptroller, or other Officer of fuch Port, Creek, or Place, where the same goods, or merchandizes shall happen to be shipped, or laden, to be transported as aforesaid. And also of Our further especiall Grace, certaine knowledge and meere motion, We doe for Us, Our Heires, Successors, grant to and Sixe and fixe with the faid Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and moneths time their Successors, that when and as often at any time during the said terme, and space of sifteene yeeres, custome and as any Custome, Pondage, Subsidie, or other Duties skall be due and payable unto Vs, Our Heyres, subsidie in-

40 or Successors, for any Goods, Wares, or Merchandizes what soener to bee returned out, or from any the ward. Ilands, Ports, Hauens, Cities, Townes, or Places afore faid unto the Port of London, or any of the Hauens. Creekes, Members, or Places to the same Port belonging, that the Customers, and all other Officers for the time being of Vs, Our Heires, or Successors, for or concerning receipts of Custome, Poundage, Subsidies, or other Duties unto whom it skall appertaine, shall upon the request of the Gouernour, and Companie of the faid Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, or any other their Agents, Factors, or Assignes. give unto the faid Governour and Company, their Agents, Factors, or Assignes, fixe Moneths time for the payment of the one halfe, and after those fixe Moneths ended, other fixe Mineths time for the payment of the other halfe of their faid Custome, Poundage, or other Subsidic, or Duties, receiving good and sufficient bonds with surety to the wife of Vs, our Heires and Su coffors, for the true payment of the same accordingle,

50 and upon the receipt of the said bonds with suretie from time to time, to give unto the said Governour and Companie of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies for the time beeing, their Agents, Factors, or Assignes, their Cockets or other warrants to take out, and receive on land the same Goods svares, & Merchandises by vertue thereof, without any disturbance. And that also as often as at any time during the faid terms of fifteene yeeres, any Goods, Wares, or Merchandises of the faid Governour, and Company for the time beeing laden from Our Port of London, or any the Creekes, Members, or Places to the Same the time occupy than from Our cost of Louvail, or way the Ports, Hands, Haueus, Cities, Townes, or Places, It goods mile aforefaud shall happen to miscarie or be lost, before their safe arrivallor discharge in the Ports, for and to the carry outward which the same shall be sent, that then, and so often, and so much Custome, Poundage, Subsidies, or other the value of Duties, as they answered to Vs for the same before their going forth of our said Ports, Hauens, or Creekes, Custome that

60 Shall after due proofe made before the Treasurer of England for the time beeing of the said losse, and the just be allowed in quantitie thereof, bee by vertue hereof allowed by the Said Governour and Company, their Agents, or other good. Factors, by warrant of the faid Treasurer, to the faid Customers or Officers in the next goods, wares, or ped. merchandifes, that the faid Gouernour and Company, or their successors, shall and may ship, for or towards those parts, according to the true rates of the Customes, Poundage, or Subsidies before payed for the goods, moneths.

value of thir-

tie thoufand

pound fore

fixe thouland

thereof bee

After the faid all the reft of the Voviges.

our in cucrie

Voyage thir-

tic thousand

into the realm.

fand thereof be covned in the Mynt.

138

or Bullion, the firft Voyage, in pound of fuch for ain Coyne.

ny, and not otherwife.

wares, or merchandifes so lost, or miscarrying, or any part thereof. And for that the said Gonernour and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, are like to bring into this Our Realme a much greater quantitie of forreine commodities, from the parts of the faid East-Indies, then can bee front for the necessarie we of the same Our Realme, which of necessitie must bee transported into other Countries, and there vented: Wee for Us, Our Heires and Succejours, of Our special Grace, certaine knowledge, and meere motion, doe grant to, and with the faid Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their successours, that at all times, from time to time, during the space of thirteene moneths, next after the discharge of any the same forraine commodities The Custome To to be brought in, the Subsidies, Poundage, Customes, and other duties, for the Same being first paied, or of goods being compounded for, as aforefuld, it shall be lawfull for the fuld Governour and Company, and their successours, 10 payed at com- or any other the naturall Subjects of this Our Realme, which may, or shall buy the same of them, to transminginto the Realme, irthii port the same in English Bottoms, freely out of this Realme, as well ungarbled, as garbled, without parment of any further Custome, Poundage, or any further Subsidy, to Vs, Our Herres, or Successiours for the Same: whereof the Subsidy, Custome, Poundage, or other duties, Shall bee so formerly payed or compounded for, as afirefuld, and so provided, and the fuld Customer, or other Officer or Officers, to whom in that behalfe it shall appertaine, for the time being, by vertue hereof, shall upon due and sufficient proofe thereof. made in the Custome House, of or belonging to the some Port of London, give them Sufficient Cocket. or Certificate for the fafe paffing out thereof accordingly. And to the end no deceit to be a fed herein to Vs. Our Heires, or successions, Certificate Shall bee brought from the Collector of the Custome, Subsidy Poundage, or other duties impards of Vs. Our Heires, or Successours, to the Collectors of the Custome, Subsidie 20 Poundinge, or other duties outwards of Vs, Our Heires, or successors to the said goods, wares, or merchan-difes, have within the time limited, answered their due Custome, Subsidy, Poundage, or other duties for the same invards. And moreover, Wee of Our further effectall Grace, certaine knowledge, and meere motion have granted, and by these Presents for Vs, Our Hoires, and Successours, doe grant onto the said That it shall be Governour and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, that it shall and may lawfull in the be lawfull for them, their Fastors, or Assignes in their suft Voyage or Fleet, which is now in preparing sick Voyage, to for their first adjusture to the said East-Indies, to transport out of this Our Realme of England, all Such forraine Come of Silver, either Spanish, or other forraine Silver, as they have procured, prepared, and gotten, or stall procure, prepare and get, as likewise all such other Coynes of Silver, as they have procured by and gotten, or shall procure, prepare and get, in the company, procured, or shall procure to bee comed in Our Chynt, within Our Tower of London, out of such 30 Plate or Bullyon, as it shall bee provided for the said Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, their Factors, or Assignes, before the going foorth of the same Fleet in thefe three first Voyages, so as the whole quantitie of Coyne or Monies, to bee transported in this their faid first Voyage doe not exceed the value, or sum of thritie thousand pound sterling. And so as the sum of fix thousand pound, at the least parcell of the faul sum of thirtie thousand pound, be first corned in Our Mynt, within Our Tower of London before the same, shall bee transported as aforesaid; any Law, Statute, Restraint, or Prohibition in that behalfe notwithstanding. And in like manner, of Our feciall Grace, certaine knowledge, and mecre motion, wee have granted, and by these Presents doe for Vs. Our Heires and Successiones, grant ento the faid Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their Successors: That it Shall and may bee lawfull, to, and for the 40 faid Governour and Company, and their Successions, after the faid first Voyage fet forth yearely, for, they may carry and during the residue of the faid terms of sistene yeares, to ship and transfort out of this Our Realme of England, or Dominions of the Same, in any their other Voyages, to, and towards any of the parts 4orefaid, in forme aforementioned, all such forrame Come of silver, Spanish, or other forraine Silver, or Bullion of Silver, as they first during the find terme bring, or cause to bee brought m'o this Our Realme of England, from the parts beyond the Seas, either in the same kind, sort, stampe, or fashion, which it shall have when they bring it m, or any other forme, stampe, or fishion to bee coyned within Our Mynt, within Our Tower of London, at their pleasure, so as the whole quantities of Come or Monies, by them to bee transported in any their said Voyages, during the residue of the said terme, doe not exceed the value or new covined in Summe of thirtie thousand pound in any one Voyage, and so as the summe of fixe thousand pound at the so least parcell of the faid summe, or value of thirtie thousand pound, so to bee transported as aforesaid, bee first corned within Our fuid Tower of London, before the fume Shall bee transported in any of the faid Voyages, any Law, Statute, Refraint, or Probibition in that behalfe in any wife notwithflanding, And further, wee of Our ample, and abound int Grace, meere motion, and certaine knowledge, have granted, and by these Presents for Vs, Our Heires and Successours, doe grant unto the said Genernour, and Com-That the trade pany of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their Successions, that they and their shallbe traded, Successours, and their Factors, Sermants, or Assignes in the trade of merchandise for them, and on their behalfs, and not otherwife, shall for the faud terms of sificene yeeres have, vie, and emoy the whole entire and only trade and traffique and the whole entire and only trade and traffique and the whole entire and only libertie. It and priviledge of trading and trafficking, and whing feate and trade of merchandise, to and from the faid East-Indies, and to and from 60 all the Hands, Ports, Houens, Cities, Townes, or Places aforefuld in such manner, and forme as is abone mentioned, and that the faid Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and enery particular and severall person that now is or that hereaster shall be of trat Company, or Incorporation, shall have full, and free authoritie, libertie and facultie, licence and power in forme aforesaid to trade and to traffique, to and from the said East Indies, and all and every the parts thereof, in forme aforefaid, according to the orders and manners, and agreement hereafter to be made, and agreed upon by the faid Gonernour and Company of Merchans of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their successours, or the more part of them, present at any Court, or publicue Affembly, of, or for the Said Company, the Governour of the Said Company, or his Deputie for the time being alwayes prefent at fuch Court or Affembly, and not otherwife. And for that the Shippes fayling into the faid Indies, must take their due and proper times, to proceed in these Voyages, which otherwise, as we well perceine cannot be performed in the rest of the yeere following : Therefore wee of Our Bestall Grace, certains knowledge, and meere motion, for Vi, Our Heires and Successours, doe

CHAP. 3. S.2. Q. ELIZABETHS Patent for the East Indies.

10 grant, to and with the faid Gouernour and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their Successours, that in any time of restraint fixe good Ships, and fixe good Pynnaces well furnished with Ordnance, and other munition for their defence, and fine hundred Mariners, English-men, to guide and sayle in the same sixe Ships and sixe Pynnaces at all times, during the said fee, shall bee terms of fifteene yeeres, hall quietly be permitted, and suffered to depart and goe in the faid Voyages, yerely permitaccording to the purport of thefe prefents, without any ftay or contradiction by Vs, Our Heires, or Suc- ted to goe into ceffors or by the Lord High Admirall, or any other Officer or Subject, of Vs, Our Heires or Succeffors the East indice, cessors by the Lord High Admirall or any other Ossics or anotes, by reasons interes or ancessors and sue hun-for the time being an any wise, any restrains, law, statuts, viage, or matter what seven to the contrary not-dred Mainers, withstanding. Provided neaerthelesse, that if Wee shall at any time within the said terme of sisteene any restraint geeres, bane inst cause to arme Our Nauy in warlike manner, in defence of Our Realme, or for offence notwithfun-

20 of Our enemies, or that it shall be found needfull to soyne to the Nany, of Us, Our Heires or Successed dings except fors, the Ships of Our Subjects, to be also armed for the warres to such a number as cannot be supplied, the Nauy Royif the faid fixe Ships, and fixe Pynnaces should bee permitted to depart, as abone is mentioned; then upon knowledge given to Vs, Our Heires or Successors, or by any Admirall, to the said Governor and Company, about the twentieth day of the month of July, or three moneths before the faid Gouernor and Company, Shall begin to make readie the same sixe Ships and sixe Pynnaces, that wee may not spare the Said fixe Ships and fixe Pynnaces, and the Mariners requisite for them to bee out of Our Realme, during the time that Our Nause shall be upon the Seas; That then the said Gouernour and Company, shall forbeare to send fixe such Ships, and fixe Pynnaces for their trade of Merchandise, untill that we Shall renoke, or withdraw Our faid Nauis for this seruice. And wee of Our further

30 Reyall fauour, and of Our efeciall Grace, certains knowledge, and meere motion have granted, and by these presents, for Vs, Our Heires and Successors, doe grant unto the faid Gouernor and Company of Aprohibition Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and to their Successors, that the faid East-In- to all other dies, nor the Ilands, Hauens, Ports, Cities, Townes, or Places thereof, nor of any part thereof, hall free of this not be visited, frequented or haunted by any of the Subjects of Vs, Our Heires, or Successors, during Company, for the faid terms of fifteene yeares, contrary to the true meaning of these Presents. And by vertue of trading into Our prerovatine Royall, which Wee will not in that behalfe have argued, or brought in question ; Wee those partsup-Our presonative Royall, which wee will not in that behalfe have argued, or prouppt in question; wee une prison fraightly charge, command, and prohibite for VI. Our Hertes and Successors, of what degree or qualitie sener they be, that none of them, directly, or indirectly, doe visite, haunt, frequent, trade,tra-out the licence sque, or admenture by way of merchandise, into, or from any of the said East-Indies, or into & from any and offent of

of the Hands, Ports, Hauens, Cities, Townes, or Places afore aid, other then the faid Gouerner, or Come the Company, pany of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and such particular persons, as now be. or hereafter hall be of that Company, their Agents, Fastors, and Assignes, during the said terme of fifteene yeeres, unlesse is be by, and with such licence and agreement of the Said Gouernour and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, in writing first had, and obtained under their common Seale to bee granted, upon paine that enerie such person or persons, that shall srade or traffique into, or from any of the faid East-Indies, other then the faid Gouernour, or Companie of Merchants of London trading into the East-Indies, and their Successors, (hall incurre Our indionation and forfeiture, and losse of the goods, merehandise, and other things what soener, which so shall be brought into this Realme of England, or any the Dominions of the same, contrarie to Our faid pro- Forfeiture of 50 hibition, or the purport or true meaning of these Presents, at also the Ship and Ships, with the furni- 800ds & thips. ture thereof, wherein such goods, merchandises, or things shall be brought, the halfe of all the said forfeitures to bee to Us, Our Heires and Successours, and the other halfe of all, and energy the said for seitures, Wee doe by these Presents of Our especiall Grace, certaine knowledge, and meere The division the faith originates. Wee so by too for rejects of Unreference and grant unto the faith Goner-motion, clearly and wholly for Vs. Our Heires and Saccessors, give and grant unto the faith Goner-of the. nour and Company of Marchants of London, trading into the East-Indies : And further, all and enerie the faid Offendors, for their said contempt, to suffer imprisonment during Our pleasure, and Imprisonment. enerie the fara Uffenders, for their faid contempt, to infler imprisonment and influence of the fair fair fair for for the fair for form for the fair fair for form for form, shall become been dening much and convenient, and not to be in any wife delinered, ontil they, and enery of them, shall become been do not a unto the faid Conernour, for the time being, in the summe of a thensand pound at least, at no time thousand 60 there after, during this present Grant, to layle or traffique into any of the Said East-Indies, contrary pound to Our expresse commandement; in that behalfe herein set downe and published. And further, for the How the Comto Our express commandement, in that behalfe berein set downs and published. And surther, for the pain mayering better encouragement of Merchant strangers, and others, to bring in commodities into this Our Pain stone too Realme, Wee for Us, Our Heires and Successours, doe grant unto the faid Governour and Company their, studie of Merchants of London, trading in to the East-Indies, that they and their face fours may from time time.

Thatba Mi-1. fte will not grant to any'o thers to enter into their paris, during the term of 15. yeares. That the Company may admirothers at their ple :-

1.6

brin in after returned withtitle of filuer, gold or forrame Coyne, as they fhall erricounthe first Voyage All filuer or gold carryed forth by the bee shipped at the Ports of London, Dartmouth & Plimshall not extend into any place, being in the actuallpo feffion of any Prince in

Maieftic.

to time, for any consideration or benefit to be taken to their owne ofe, grant or give licence to any person or per sons to sayle trade, or traffique into, or from any of the faid East-Indies, so as such licence be granted or gruen before juch goods, wares, and merchandizes bee laid on land, and fo as fuch licence bee made by the Last Governour and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies for the time being, water their Common Seale. And further of Our speciall Grace, certaine knowledge, and meere motion. we have comblicended and granted, and by these presents for Us, Our Heires and Successors; we doe condiffered and grant zono the faed Governour and Company of Marchants of London, trading into the E41i-Indies, and their Successors, that We Our Heires and Successors, during the Said terms of fifteene ge ares, will not grant libertie, licence, or power to any person or persons what soener, contrary to the tenour the fe our Letters Pasents, to fayle, paffe, trade, or traffique to the faid East-Indies, or into, or from the 10 16 nds, Ports, Hauens, Cities, Townes or places aforefaid, or any of them, contrary to the true meaning of these presents, without the consent of the Said Gouernour and Companie of Marchants of London trading into the East-Indies, or the most part of them. And Our will and pleasure is, and hereby wee doe also ordaine, that it shall and may be lawfull, to and for the said Gouernour and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, or the more part of them, whereof the Gouernour for the time being, or his Deputie to be one, to admit into, and to be of the Said Company, all Such Apprentizes to am of the faud Fellowship or Company, and all such Servants and Fattors, of or for the said Company, and all such others as to them, or the most part of them present, at any Court held for the said Company, the Gouernous, or his Deputie being one, shall be thought fit and agreeable with the Orders and Ordinances to be made for the Government of the fud Company. Provided alwayes, that if any of the persons before named in 20 Prouiso, thatif appointed by these Presents to be free of the Said Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, Shall not before the going forth of the Fleet, appointed for this first Voyage from the Port of the Parent dos London, bring in and deliver to the Ireasurer or Treasurers appointed, or which within the space of twennot brist in his tie dayes next after the date hereof, shall be appointed by the faid Governour and Company, or the more part of them, to receive the Contributions and Aduentures, fet downe by the severall Aduentures, in this last downe, it shall and present Uorage now in hand to be set forth, such summes of money as have beene by any of the said persons, by these Presents nominated to be of the said Company, expressed, set downe, and written in a Booke apt'e Company pointed for that purpose, and left in the hands of the faid Thomas Smith, Gouernour of the faid Company, or of the faid Paul Bannyng, Alderman of London, and Subscribed with the names of the same Aduenturers, under their hands, and agreed upon to bee adventured in the fuld first Voyage, that then it shall 30 be lawfull for the faid Gouernour and Company, or the more part of them, whereof the faid Gouernour or his Deputie to be one, at any their generall Court, or generall Alfembis, to remove, diffranchine, and diplace him or them at their wils and plessiones, And the said Gouernour and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies for them and their Successiours, doe by these Presents couenant, promife, and grant to and with vis, Our Herres and Successors, that they the faud Gouernour and Compan, and their Successors: In all and every such Voyage, as they at any time, or times hereafter during the said The Company terme Shall make out of this Realme by vertue of this Our Grant and Letters Pattents, the first Voyage doepromieto only excepted, shall and will upon enery returne, which shall be made backe against into this Realme, or any of our Dominions, or within fix Moneths next after enery fuch returne, bring into this our Realme of England from the faud E.ft-Indies, or from some other parts beyond the Seas out of our Dominions, as great 40 or greater value in Bullron of Gold or Silver, or other for same Coyne of Gold or Silver respectively for as great a quan every Voyage, the first Voyage only excepted, as shall be by force of these Presents, transported or carried out of this Realme, by them, or any of them in any kind of Silver about filed, what soener in any of the said Voyages, and that all such Silver, as by vertue of this our Grant and Letters Pattents, Shall bee Shipped or laden, by the find Governour and Company, or their Successors to be transported out of this Realme in any of the faud Voyages, shall from time to time at the setting forth of enery such par unlar Voyages be shoped or laden at the Ports or Huens of Lo alon, Dartmouth or Plummouth, or at some of the same Ports of H.uens, and at no other Post or Hauen what soener within this our Realms, or the Dominions thereof, and that all and every such Silver, as from time to time shall be shipped and laden in the sud Ports of London, Dartmouth and Plimmouth, or any of themto bee by force of these Presents transported out of this 50 Realmo, as is aforefued, shall from time to time be duly entred by the Customer, Comptroller, Collector or other Officer, to whomit shall appertaine of enery such Port or Hauen, where the same shall happen to bee Propped or luder, in the Custome Booke belonging to the Said Port or Hauen, before Such time as the Same Shall be shipped or laden to be transported as aforefuld without any Custome or Subsidie to bee pud for the fime. And that in like manner, all, and all manner of Gold and Silver what soever, which shall be brought The Petuiledge into this Realme or any of our Dominions, by the faid Governour and Company, or any of them, according to the true meaning of these P esents shall likewise bee from time to time, duly entred by the Customer, Comproller, or other Officer of every fuch Port, Creeke or Place, where the fame Gold or Silver (hall happen to be unshipped, or brought to Land, before such time as the same Gold or Silver, or any part thereof Builbe conforpped, or brought to Land, as is aforefued Provided a naves, neneribeleffe, and Our will 60 and pleasiere is that these Our Letters Pattents, or any thing the concentagned, shall not in any fors extend to give or grant any licence, power, or authoritie, anto the fail Guerrow and Company of Merchants of league or ami-Lon lon, trade; no the East-Indies, or to any of them, to undertake or addresse any Trade with an Countrey, Port, Hand, Hauen, Cuic, Creeke, Towne or Piace, being alreadie in the lawfull and allud

possession, of any such Christian Prince or State, as at this present is , or at any time hereafter shall bee in league, or amitie with vs, Our Heires and Successors, and which doth not, or will not except of such trade. but doth overtly declare and publish the same to be exterly against his, or their good will and liking any thing in Present before contained, to the contrary thereof notwithstanding. Provided also, that if it hall hereafter appeare to Vs, Our Heires or Successors, that this Grant, or the continuance thereof, shall not be profitable to Vs, Our Heires and Successors and to this Our Realme, that then and from thence-forth appon and after two yeares warning to be given to the fuld Company, by V1, Our Herres or Successors, under Our or their Prince Seale, or Signe Mannall, this present Grant shall cease, bee vord, and determined to all intents, constructions, and purposes. And further of Our speciall Grace, certaine knowledge, and meere 10 motion, we have condificended and granted, and by these Presents for Us, Our Heires and Successors doe condiscend, and grant to the faul Governour, and Company of Merchants of London, trading into the East-Indies, and their Successors, that if at the end of the faid terme of sifteene yeares, it shall seeme meete and convenient, to the field Governour and Company, or any the parties aforefaid, that this prefent Grant shall be continued and if that also it shall appeare unto Vs. Our Heires and Successors, that the continuance therof shall not be preiudiciall, or burifull to this our Realme, but that we shall find the further con-ledge be found tinuance thereof profitable for Vs. Our Heires and Successors, and for Our Realme with such Condions, as vinrositable are herein mentioned, or with some alteration or qualification thereof, that then We, Our Heires or Suc- forth Realme cellors at the instance and humble Petition of the said Governous and Company, or any of them to be made then within unto Vs Our Heires and Successors will grant and make unto the faid Governour and Company, or any of two yeares them so suing for the same, and such other person and persons Our Subsects, as they shall nominate and ap-vade the Pri-20 point, or shall be by Vs, Our Heires or Successors newly nominated not exceeding in number foure and twen-uy Scale, the tie new Letters Patents, under the great Seale of England, in due forme of Law with like Coue- take shall bee nants, Grants, Clauses and Articles, as in these Presents are contagned, or with addition of ey- voide, but it it nants, Grants, Causes and Articles, as in ineje extents are consapina, or with accusion of ex-ther necessary Articles, or changing of these into some other parts, for and during the full terms of lifteen beneficial then yeares then next following. Willing hereby, and streightly charging and commanding, all and singular Our the same to bee Admirals, Vice-admirals, Instices, Maiors, Sheriffes, Eschenters, Constables, Bailisses, and all and renucd with singular other Our Officers, Munisters, Leadgemen, and Subjects what soener to bee arding, fauouring, some additions helping, and affifting anto the faid Governour and Company, and to their Successors, and to their Deputies, Officers, Factors, Seruants, Assignes and Ministers, and every of them in executing and enioyning the Premises, aswell on Land, as on Sca, from time to time, when you, or any of you shall thereunto be required, any Statute, Act, Ordinance, Prouiso, Proclamation, or Restraint beretofore had, made, set forth, ordayned, or provided, or any other matter, cause, or thing what soener to the contrary in any wife notwithstanding. Although expresse mention of the true yearly value, or certaintie of the Premises, or of any of them, or of any other Gifts,or Grants by vs. or any of our Procentors, to the faid Gouernour and Company of Mer-chants of London, trading into the Eufs-Indies, or to any of them before this time made, in these Presents is not made, or any Statute, Act, Ordinance, Provision, Proclamation, or restraint, to the contrarie hereof heretofore had, made, ordayned, or provided, or any other thing, cause, or matter what sever in any wife notwithstanding. In witnesse whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patents, Witnesse our selfe at Westminster, the one and thirtieth of December, in the three and fortieth yeare of Our Reigne. Per breuem 40 Privato Sigillo, f.

HVBERD.

CHAP. III. The first Voyage made to East-India by Master IAMES LANCASTER, now Knight, for the Merchants of London, Anno, 1600. With foure tall Shippes, ( to wit ) the Dragon, the Hector, the Ascension and Susan, and a Victualler called the Guest.

> The preparation to this Voyage, and what befell them in the way till they departed from Saldania.

He Merchants of London, in the yeare of our Lord 1600, loyned together, and made a stocke of seuentie two thousand pounds, to bee imployed in Ships and Merchandizes, for the discouery of a Trade in the East-India, to bring into this Realme, Spices and other Commodities. They bought foure great Ships to bee imployed in this Voyage : the Dragon, of the burthen of fix hundred tunne, the Hellor, of the burthen of three hundred tunnes, the Afcente. if the burthen of two hundred and threefcore tunnes. There thips they furnished with men, victuals and munition for twentie monethes, and tent in them, in Merchandile and Spanish money, to the value of feuen and twentie thousand pounds: all the rest of their stocke was spent and consumed about the shippes, and other necessaries appertaying to them : with money lent to the Mariners and Saylers before-hand, that went upon the Voyage.

The Merchants were Suters to her Maiestie, who gave them her friendly Letters of commendation, written to disers Princes of India, offering to enter into a league of Peace and Amitie with them, the Copies of which Letters shall hereafter appeare in their places. And because no great action can well be carryed, and accomplished without an absolute authoritie of Iustice: Shee granted to the Generall of their Fleet Matter Lanes Lanessfer , for his better command and 10 gouernment, a Commission of Martiall Law.

148

The fard Master lames Lancaster the Generall, was placed in the Dragon, the greatest shippe of Februsy, being Admirall . Mafter Iohn Middleton Captaine in the Hector, the Vice-admirall : Mafter William Brand chiefe Gouernour in the Afcention: and Master John Heyward in the Sufan: and more in every of the faid fhips, three Merchants to fucceed one the other, if any of them should be taken away by death.

These ships were readic and departed from Wolwich in the River of Thames, the thirteenth of February after the English accompt, 1600, with four hundred and four eleore men in them. In the Dragon, two hundred and two men. In the Hector, an hundred an eight. In the Ascention, fourescore and two. And in the Susan, fourescore and eight. The Guest, a ship of a hundred and 20 thirtie tunnes, was added as a Victualler.

These shaped so long in the River of Thomes, and in the Downes for want of wind, that it was Easter day before they arraied at Dartmouth, where they spent flue or fixe dayes in taking in their bread and certaine other promitions appointed for them. From thence they departed the eighteenth of Aprill, 1601 and road in Tor Bay, till the twentieth in the morning. While wee roade there, the Generall sent abourd all the shippes, instructions, for their better company keeping, at their comming to the Seas : and further gaue directions, if any of the Fleet should bee feparated the one from the other, by flormes of wind, tempelts, or other calualties, what * places to repaire vnto, for their meeting together againe.

The second of Aprill, 1601. the wind came faire and wee hoysed our Anchors, and departed 30 out of Tor Bay, directing our course towards the Hands of the Canaria. The wind holding faire, the lift of May in the morning, we had fight of Alegranza, the Northermost Iland of the Canarius, and directed our course betweene Forteuentura, and the Grand Canaria: and comming to the South part of the Grand Canaria, thinking to water there, wee fell into the Calmes, which Cape So'danha, proceed by reason of the high-land that lyeth so neere the Sea-side.

The feuenth of May, about three of the clocke in the afternoone, wee departed from the Grand Canaria, having the wind at North-east, and we directed our course South-west by South, and South South-welf, till wee came into 21. 1. degrees. From the elementh to the twentieth, our course was for the most part South, till we came into eight degrees: the wind being alwayes Northerly, and North-east. In this neight, we found the Calmes and contrarie winds, which vp- 40 pon this Coult of Ginner, at this time of the yeare, are very familiar with many sudden gustes of wind, ftormes, thunder and lightening, very fearefull to be seene and dangerous to the shippes: vnlesse a diligent care be had, that all sayles be stricken downe vpon the sudden, perceiuing the ayre neuer to little to change or alter. And yet many times, although the Mafters of fhips were carefull, and looked virto it with great diligence: the fuddennesse was fach, that it could hardly be preuented. From the twentieth of May, till the one and twentieth of June, wee lay the most part becalmed, and with contrarie winds at South, and turning vp and downe with this contrary wind, with much ado., we got into two degrees of the Northfide of the Line: where weedpyed a flip, to the which, the Generall gaue chale, commanding all the reft of the flips to follow him: and by two of the clocke in the afternoone, we had fet her vp and tooke her. She was 50 of the Citie of Vana in Portugall, and came from Liftone in the companie of two Carrackes, and three Gallions bound for the East-India, which thips the had loft at Sea. The three Gallions were thips of warre, and went to keepe the Coast of the East-India, from being traded with other Na-

Wee tooke out of her anhundred fixe and fortie Buts of Wine, an hundred three-core and fixteene larres of Ovle, twelue Barrels of Oyle, and fine and fitte Hogheads and Fats of Meale, which was a great helpe to vs in the whole Voyage after. The Generall disided these Victualls indifferently to all the fhips, to enery one his proportion without partialitie.

The last of Iune about mid-night, we doubled the Line, and lost the fight of the North-star, having the wind at South-east, and we held our course South South-west, and doubled the Cape 62 of Saint Augustine some sixe and twentie leagues to the Eastwards. The twentieth of July, we were flot into nineteene degrees, fortie minutes to the Southward of the Line, the wind inlargeing daily to the East-ward. Here wee discharged the Guest, the ship that went a long with vs to carry the Promisons, that our foure ships could not take in in England. After wee had discharged her, we tooke her Masts, Sayles and Yards, and brake downe her higher buildings for fire-wood, and to left her floting in the Sea : and followed our course to the South-ward. The foure and twentieth of July, we passed the Tropick of Capricorne, the wind being North-east by North. we holding our course East South-east. Now, by reason of our long being vnder the Line, (which proceeded of our late comming out of England, for the time of the yeare was too farre ipent by fix or feuen weekes, to make a quicke Nangation) many of our men fell ficke. Therefore the nine and twentieth of July being in 28.4. degrees, hee wrote a remembrance to the Gouernour of each ship, either to fetch Saldania or Saint Helena for refreshing.

CHAP. III. SI. Sir IAMES LANCASTER. Soldania. Scorbute.

Thus following on our course, the first of August we came into the height of thirtie degrees, August. 10. South of the Line : at which time we met the South-west wind, to the great comfort of all our people. For, by this time, very many of our men were fallen ficke of the Scuruey in all our thips, and vnleffe it were in the Generals thip only, the other three were to weake of men, that they could hardly handle the fayles. This wind held faire, till wee came within two hundred and fiftie leagues of the Cape Buena Esperanza, and then came cleane contrarie against vs to the East : and so held some fifteene or sixteene dayes to the great discomfort of our men. For now the few whole men we had, beganne also to fall sicke, so that our weaknesse of men was so great, that in some of the ships, the Merchants tooke their turnes at the Helme : and went into the top to take in the top-layles, as the common Mariners did. But God (who sheweth mercy in all diffrestes) fent vs a faire wind againe, so that the ninth of September wee came to Salda- They arrive at 20 nia, where the Generall before the rell bare in, and came to an anchor, and hoyled out his Boats Soldania.

to helpe the rest of the ships.

For now the state of the other three was such, that they were hardly able to let fall an Anchor, to faue themselves withall. The Generall went abourd of them, and carryed good store of men, and hoyfed out their Boats for them, which they were not able to doe of themfelues. And the reason why the Generals men stood better in health then the men of other ships, was this: he brought to Sea with him certaine Bottles of the Iuice of Limons, which hee gaue to Thebefremeeach one, as long as it would last, three spoonfuls every morning fasting: not suffering them to Scurvey. eate any thing after it till noone. This luice worketh much the better, if the partie keepe a short Dyet, and whelly refraine salt meate, which salt meate, and long being at the Sea is the 30 only cause of the breeding of this Disease. By this meanes the Generall cured many of his men, and preserved the rest: so that in his ship (having the double of men that was in the rest of the thips) he had not so many sicke, nor lost so many men as they did, which was the mercie of God to vs all. After the Generall had holpen the reft of the ships to hoyse out their Boats, they began all to be greatly comforted. Then, he himfelfe went prefently a-land to feeke fome refreshing for our ficke and weake men, where hee met with certaine of the Countrey people, and gaue them divers trifles, as Knives, and precess of old Iron, and fuch like, and made tignes to them to bring The most Vnie him downe Sheepe and Oxen. For he spake to them in the Cattels Language, which was neuer uer alllanchanged at the confusion of Babell, which was Moath for Oxen, and Kine, and Baa for Sheepe: guage.

which Language the people understood very well without any Interpreter. After hee had fent 40 the people away very well contented with their prefents, and kind viage order was prefently giuen, that certaine of enery ships companie should bring their sayles a land, and build Tents with Defencents them for their ficke men : and also to make fortifications of desence, if by any occasion the people should take any conceit of offence against vs, and there'ry offervs any violence. And the Generall prescribed an order for buying and filling with the people, which was, that at such times Manner of traas they should come downe with the Cattell, only fine or fixe men, appointed for that purpose, ding with the should goe to deale with them and the rest (which should never bee vader thirtie Muskets and Sauages. Pikes) should not come neere the Market, by eight or ten score at the neerest: and alwayes to stand in their ranke in a readinesse, with their Muskets in their Rests, what occasion soeuers should befall. And this order was most strictly observed and kept, that no man durst once goe to 50 speake with any of the people without special leaue, and I take this to be the cause, why we liured in fo great friendship and amitie with them, contrary to that which lately had befallen the Hollanders, which had five or fix of their men flame by their treacherie. The third day after our comming into this Bay of Saldania, the people brought downe Beefes and Muttens, which we bought of them for pieces of old Iron hoopes, as two pieces of eight inches a piece, for an Oxe, and one piece of eight inches for a Sheepe, with which they feemed to be well contented. VVithin ten or twelve dayes, we bought of them a thousand Sheepe, and two and fortie Oxen, and might have bought many more, if wee would. Now within twelve dayes they ceased to bring vs any more Cattell, but the people many times came downe to vs afterward, and when we made them fignes for more Sheepe, they would point vs to those wee 60 had bought, which the Generall caused to be kept grazing upon the Hilles about our Tents, and was the cause (as we judged) they thought we would have inhabited there, and therefore brought vs no more. But (God be thanked) we were well stored to satisfie our need, and might then, very well forbeare buying. These Oxen are full as bigge as ours, and were very fat, and the sheepe many of them much bigger, but of a very hairie wooll, yet, of exceeding good flesh, fat and * April, 1601. There places were the Calmes of Canarie, and if weakneffe permitted not to the third Cape Saint Romas in Madazascar, to Cirne, and io ro Suma Ya their firft place of Trad:

May the fift.

nelle of this

This Bay is in tweet, and to our thinking, much better then our sheepe in England. The people of this place are all of a tawnie * colour, of a reasonable statue, swift of foot, and much given to picke and fleale : their speech is wholly vetered through the throate, and they clocke with their tongues in *Qualities of flich fort, that in feuen weekes, which wee remained heere in this place, the sharpest wit among the people, and vs, could not learne one word of their language : and yet the people would foone vnderstand any their difficult figure wee made to them.

While wee flayed heere in this Bay, wee had fo royall refreshing, that all our men recoursed their health and ftrength, enely foure or fine excepted. But, before our comming in, and in this place, wee lost out of all our Ships one hundred and fine men, and yet wee made account, wee were thronger at our departure out of this Bay, then wee were at our comming out of England, our men were fo well inured to the Southerne Climates.

ò. I I.

Their departure from Saldania, and proceeding in their Voyage to Achen in Sumatra. with their trading at Saint MARIES, Antongill, Nicubar : the strange Plant of Sombrero, and other occurrents.

🔀 HE foure and twentieth of October, the Generall caused all our Tents to bee taken 20 downe and our men to repaire aboord the Ships; and being fitted both of wood and fresh water; The nine and twentieth of October, wee put to Sea, and went out by a small Hand, that lieth in the mouth of the faid Bay : which is exceeding full of Seales and Pengwines, fo that if there were no other refreshing, one might very well refresh there. Ouer the Bay of Saldania standeth a very high Hill, flat like a Table, and is called the Table : such another plaine marke to find an Harbour in, is not in all that Coast, for it is easie to be seene seuenteen or eighteene leagues into the Sea. Sunday, the first of November in the morning, wee doubled the Cape of Buena Esperança, Nouember. 1. The Cape dourled.

having the wind West North-West a great gale. The fixe and twentieth of Nouember, wee fell with the Head-land of the lland of Saint Lan- 10 rence, somewhat to the East of Cape Sebastian, and being within fine miles of the shoare, wee founded, and found twenty five fathome : the variation of the Compaffe, being little more or leffe fixteene degrees. For in an East and West course, the variation of the Compasse helpeth much, and especially in this Voyage.

Decemb, 15.

Ile of Cirne, or

From the fixe and twentieth of Nouember, till the fifteenth of December, wee plyed to the Eastward, the neerest our course wee could lie, alwayes striuing to have gotten to the Iland of Cane, which in some Cardes is called Diego Rodriques, but wee found the wind alwaies after our comming to the lland of Saint Laurence, at East, and East South-East, and East North-East, fo that wee could not obtaine it; and to firme long in hope of change of windes wee could not, for now our men began againe to fall ficke of the Scurny. Then, the Captaine of the Vice-Admir all called to the Generall, and thought it best to beare into the Bay of Antongile, and there to re. 40 fresh our men with Oranges and Limons, to cleere our felues of this difeate, which was by him and the whole counfell called for that purpose well approoued.

The feventeenth of December, wee had fight of the Southermost part of the Iland of Saint Iles of S. Mary, and the next day wee anchored between Saint Mary, and the great lland of Saint Language Mary, and the next day wee anchored between Saint Mary, and the great lland of Saint Language rence and fent our Boats aland to Saint Maries, where wee had fome ftore of Limons and Oranges, which were precious for our difeated men, to purge their bodies of the Scuruy. Now, as we roade heere, buying Oranges end Limons, there arose vpon vs a very great storme, so that three of our Ships were put from their Anchres : but within some fixteen houres, the storme ceased, and the ships returned, and weighed their Anchors againe. The Generall thought it not good to make 50 any longer stay there, seeing the vicertaintie of the weather, and that there was voon this lland folittle refreshing to be had: only these Orenges and Limons, a little Goates milke, and some small quantitie of Rice:we fawe onely one Cow, and that they draue away, affoone as they faw vs come on Land. Seeing this place to dangerous to ride in, the Generall gaue prefent order to fayle toward the Bay of Antongile, the time of the yeere being fpent, the Easterly winds come against vs, and our men ficke.

People of S.

This Hand of S. Mary is high land, and full of woods, the people are blacke, very handsome and tail men, and of curled haire, onely before in their foreheads they stroke it vp, as the women doe here in England: fo that it standeth some three inches vpright. They are wholly without apparell, onely their priny parts conered, they are very tractable to connerie withall, yet feeme 60 to be very valiant. The most of their food is Rice, and some Fish: yet at our being there, wee could buy but small store of Rice, for the time of their store was farre spent, and their Haruest was at hand. There are two or three watering places on the North part of this Iland: but none or them very commodious, yet with some travell there is water enough to be had.

CHAP. III. S.2. Sir IAMES LANCASTERS Voyage, Antongill.

The twentie third of December, we departed from this Hand of S. Mary, and the twentie nit being Christmas day, we came into the Baye of Antongill, and came to an anchor in eight fa- Decemb. tham water, betweene a small Iland, and the Mayne, lying in the bottome of the Baye, a very Asion: H. good, and a fafe roade. But, the best riding, is neerest vinder a small Iland, for the defence of the winde that bloweth there: for while we abode in this Baye, there blew an exceeding great ftorme, and those of our shippes, that road neerest the small Hand, beeing under the wind sped belt: for two of our ships droue with three anchors ahead, the ground being Ozy, and not firme. At our going a land in the little lland, we perceived by writing upon the rockes, of five Holland fhips which had beene there, and were departed about two monethes before our comming in:

10 and had had fome ticknesse among their men, and had lost (as we perceived) betweene one hundred and fiftie, and two hundred men while they roade in that place.

The next day after our comming to an anchor, we went a land to the Mayne Iland, where the people prefently repaired to vs, and made vs fignes of the fine Holland thips departed, and that they had bought the most part of their prousion. Yet, they entred into parter with vs, for Rice and Hennes, Oranges and Limons, and another fruit called Plantans, and held all at high rates, and brought but a pedlars quantitie. Our market was neere to a great river, into which we went with our boats, and fome men that were app unted to be buyers, went ashore: the rest remained in the boates, alwaies readie with their wapons in their hands : and the boates fome fifteene or twentie yardes off into the water, where the people could not wade to them : and 20 were readie at all times (if they a shore had had any need ) to take them in. So, we trified off fome daies, before (as aforefaid) we could bring them to any reall trade: for all these people of the South, and East parts, are very subtill, and craftie, in their barrering, buying and selling, that villeffe you hold a neere hand with them you shall hardly bring them to trade in any plaine fort. For, they will lift you continually to give a little more, and then, no man will fell with. The want of out that price : fo that you must not in large to any one, more then another : for, in so doing, all this different will have that price, or none. The Generall feeing this, commanded measures to be made of in Virginia (almost) a quart, and appointed how many glasse beades should be given for every measure : and (whiles one he that would not deale in this manner, should not deale at all. The like order was fet downe out of need, or for Oranges, Limons, and Plantans, how many for enery beade, or elfe not. Our Merchants tic, would give 30 after a little holding off, confented, and our dealing was trancke, and round, without any contra- a greater price diction, or words. So, that while we abode heere, we brought 15. 2, tunnes of Rice, fortie or then another, fiftie bushels of their Peale, and Beanes, great store of Oranges, Limons, and Plantans, and to the Swages eight Beeues, with many Hennes. While we roade in this Baye, we reared a Pinnace, which we for their combrought in preces in our shippes out of England : and cut downe trees, of which there were heighbard the very great, and great store, which trees we sawed out in boordes, and sheathed her. This Pin- prizes, and nace was of some eighteene tunnes, and very necessary, and fit to got before our shippes, at our made them comming into India. In the time we stayed heere, there died out of the Generalls shippe, the their corne, &c Mafters Mate, the Preacher, and the Surgeon, with fome tenne other common men. And out of that the round the Viceadmirall there died the Master, with some other two. And out of the Ascention, by a much hinder 40 very great mischance, were flaine the Captaine, and the Boats waines mate. For, as the Maiters ranceto the Mate, out of the Generalls shippe was carried a land to be buried, the Captaine of the Afen. Plantation, tion tooke his boate to goe aland to his buriall: and as it is the order of the sea, to shoote off cerreared taine peeces of Ordnance at the buriall of any Officer, the Gunner of the Ordnance shotte off three peeces, and the bullets being in them, one stroke the Ascentions boate, and slue the Cap- How vaine :

taine, and the Boatswaines Mase starke dead, so that they that went to see the buriell of thing is Man another, were both buried there themselves. Those that died heere, died most of the Flux, which (in our opinion) came with the waters which we dranke : for it was the time of winter, when it rained very much, which caufed great flouds to overflowe the Countrie : fo that the waters were not whollome, as in most places in these hot countries, they are not, in the 50 times of their raines. This difeate alfo of the Flux, is often taken, by going open, and cold in the stomacke, which our men would often doe when they were hot.

themiclues therewith.

We fet faile out of this Baye the fixth of March, an i hold on our course toward the India, and the fixteenth we fell with an Hand called Rogne-Pize, which lyeth in 10. 4. degrees, to the The Ifle of South of the Equinoctiall Line. To this Hand the Generall fent his boate, to fee whether there Rotter-Piece were any fafe riding for the shippes : but the boate ( for the most part ) found deepe water, where the shippes could not fafely ride. As we coulted along this Hand, it seemed very faire, and pleasant, exceeding full of foule, and Coco nut-trees : and there came from the land such a pleatant fmell, as if it had beene a garden of flowers. And furely, if there be any good riding for shippes in this Iland, it must neede she a place of very great refreshing. For as our boates 60 went neere the land, they law great store of fish, and the foules came wondering about them in fuch fort, that with the Oares, wherewith the Mariners rowed, they killed many which were the fattest, and the best that we tasted all the voyage. And or these, there was such exceeding great abundance, that many more shippes then we had with vs, might have refreshed

1602. Dangerous Rackes.

The thirtieth of March 1602, being in fixe degrees to the South of the Line, wee happened vpon a ledge of Rockes, and looking ouer-boord, and feeing them under the shippe about hue fathome deepe, it much amazed vs , falling upon the fudden, and unexpected. Then, as wee were presently casting about the ship, wee found eight fathome : and so held on our course East. One of our men, being in the top faw an Hand South-east of vs, some five or fixe leagues off, being but Thise of Candu. low land: this we judged to be the Hand of Candu, although in our course we could not (by computation) find our selues so faire shot to the Eastward. Bearing on our course some thirteeneor fourteene leagues, we fell upon another flat of Rockes. Then wee cast about to the Southward. and fayling fome twelve leagues, found other Rockes: fo that, proving divers wayes, wee found flats of Rockes round about vs : and twentie and thirtie, and in some places, forty and fiftiefa. 10 thome water in the middest of the flats. Here we were for two dayes and an halfe in exceeding danger, and could find no way to get out. But at last, wee resolued to seeke to the Northward. and in fixe degrees, fortie three minutes (God bee thanked) wee found fixe fathome water: the Pinnaffe alwayes going before vs, and founding with commandement, to make fignes what depth fhe had, that thereby we might follow her. Thus (thankes be to God) being delivered out of this pound, we followed our course with variable windes, till the ninth of May about foure of the clocke in the afternoone. At which time we hall fight of the llands of Nicubar, and bare in, and anchored on the North-fide of the Channell, But the wind changing to the South-west, wee were forced to hoyse our Anchors, and to beare ouer to the South-fide of the Channell : and so came to an Anchor, under a small Iland, that lyeth on the faid shore. Here wee had fresh water. 20 and some Coco Nats, other refreshing wee had little. Yet the people came abourd our shippes in long Canoas, which would hold twentie men, and aboue in one of them : and brought Gummes to sell in stead of Amber, and therewithall, deceiued divers of our men : For, these people of the East, are wholly given to deceit. They brought also Hennes and Coco Nuts to fell, but held them very deare : fo that we bought few of them. We stayed here ten dayes, placing of our Ordnance, and trimming of our ships : because we would be in all readinesse at our arrivall, at our first Port, which we were not (now) farre from. The twentieth of Aprill, in the morning, we fet faile to goe toward Sumatra, but the wind blew so hard at South, South West, and the Currant was against vs, that we could not proceed: but beating up and downe, our thips fell into two leakes, to that wee were forced to goe to the 30 The He of Sam Hand of Sombrero, fome ten or twelve leaguesto the Northward of Nicobar. Heere, we in the Admiral loft an anchor, for the ground is foule, and groweth full of counterfeit Corrall, and fome Rockes: which cut our Cable afunder, to that we could not recouer our anchor.

Other Rocks.

The people of these llands goe naked, having onely the privities bound up in a peece of Linnen cloath, which commeth about their middles like a girdle, and to betweene their twist. They are all of a tauny colour, and annoint their faces with divers colours; they are well limmed, but very fearefull : for, none of them would come aboord our Shippes, or enter into our Boates. The Generall reported, that he had seene some of their Priests, or Sacrificers, all apparelled, but close to their bodies, as if they had beene sewed in it : and vpon their heads, a paire of homes turning backward, with their faces painted greene, blacke and yellow, and their hornes alfo 42 painted with the same colour. And behind them, vpon their buttocks, a taile hanging downe, very much like the manner, as in some painted cloathes, we paint the Divell in our Countrey. He demaunding, wherefore they went in that attire, answer was made him, that in such forme the Diuell appeared to them in their facrifices : and therefore the Priefts, his feruants were so apparelled. In this lland grow trees, which for their talnesse, greatnesse, and straightnesse, will ferue the biggeft shippe in all our Flecte, for a maine Mast : and this Iland is full of those trees.

Treesfufficient for maine Masts. A ftrange

Heere, likewise we found upon the sands , by the Sea side, a small twigge growing up to a young tree, and offering to placke up the fame, it shruke downe into the ground : and finketh, valefle you hold very hard. And being plucked vp, a great Worme is the roote of it: and looke how the tree groweth in greatnesse, the Worme diminishest. Now, as soone as the worme is 50 wholly turned into the tree, it rooteth in the ground, and fo groweth to be great. This transformation was one of the strangest wonders that I saw in all my travailes. For, this tree, being plucked up little, the leaves stripped off, and the pill, by that time it was dry, turned into an hard stone, much like to white Corrall: so that this worme was twice transformed into different natures: Of these we gathered, and brought home many.

ð. III. Their entertainement and trade at Achen.

29. Of May. 1603.

HE nine and twentieth of May, we let faile from this Iland of Sombrero, and the fecond of Iune, we had fight of the land of Sumatra, and the fifth of Iune we came to anchor in the Roade of Achen, some two miles off the Citie. Where we found sixteene CHAP.3. S. 2. Sir IAMES LANCASTERS Voyage. Achen.

or eighteene faile of shippes of divers Nations, some Goserats, some of Bengala, some of Calicut.

called Malabares, some Pegues, and some Patanyes, which came to trade there. There came aboord of vs two Holland Merchants, which had beene left there behind their shippes, to learne the language, and manners of the Country. These told vs, we should be very welcome to the King, who was defirous to intercaine ftrangers : and that the Queene of England was very famous in those parts, by reason of the warres, and great victories, which she had got. The Fame of ten against the King of Spaine. The same day, the Generall sent Captaine Iohn Middleton, Captaine of the Vice-admirall, with foure or fine Gentlemen, to attend upon him to the King :

to declare vinto him, that he was fent from the Generall of those shippes, who had a message, 10 and a letter, from the most famous Queene of England, to the most worthy King of Achen, and Sumaira. And that it would please his royall Maiesty, to give to the said messenger, audience to deliner his medlage, and letter: with a fufficient warrant for the fafety of him and his people, according to the law of Nations, holden in that behalfe. This meffenger was very kindly entertained by the King, who when he had deliuered his mellage, gladly granted his request, and communed with him about many questions: and after, caused a royall banquet to be made him. And at his departure gaue a robe, and a Tucke of Calico wrought with Gold, which is the manner of the Kings of this place, to those he will grace with his special fauour. And withall, fent his commendations to the Generall, willing him to flay one day abourd his ships, to rest himselfe after his comming from the disquiet seas and the next day to come a land, and 20 haue kind audience, and franke leave, with as great allurance, as if he were in the kingdome of the Queene his Miftris. And, if he doubted of any thing of this his royall word, fuch honourable pledges thould be fent him, for his further afturance, as he should rest very well satisfied

The third day, the Generall went a land very well accompanied, with some thirtie men or more, to attend upon him. And first at his landing, the Holland Merchants met him, and carried him home to their house, as it was appointed. For as yet, the Generall would make choyce of no house of his owne, till he had spoken with the King: but stayed at the Hollanders house, till a Noble man came from the King, who faluted the Generall very kindly, and declared, that he came from his Maiestie, and represented his person. Then, he demaunded the Queenes letter of 30 the Generall, which he refuted to deliuer: faying, he would deliuer it to the King himfelfe. For it was the order of Embaliadours, in those parts of the world from whence he came, to deliuer their letters to the Princes owne hands: and not to any that did represent the Kings person.

So, he demaunded to see the superscription, which the Generall shewed him, and he read the fame, and looked very earneftly upon the seale, tooke a note of the superscription, and didlikewife write her Maiefties name; and then, with courtefie tooke his leave, and repaired to the Court, to tell the King what had pailed. Who prefently fent fixe great Elephants, with many The honora-Trumpets, Drums, and Streamers, with much people, to accompany the Generall to the Court : ble entertainto that the prefie was exceeding greet. The biggeft of their Elephants was about thirteene, or fourteene toote high, which had a small Castle, like a Coach ypon his back, courted with Crimeral Weber. In the middle thereof, was a great Bason of Gold, and a peece of Silke exceeding of them. richly wrought to couer it : under which her Mareflies letter was put. The Generall was mounted upon another of the Elephants: some of his attendants rode, others went a foote. But, when he came to the Court gate, there a Noble man stayed the Generall, till he had gone in, to know the Kings further pleafure. But, prefently the faid Nobleman returned, and willed the Generall to enter in. And when the Generall came to the Kings presence, he made his obeyfance after the manner of the Country : declaring that hee was fent from the most mightie Queene of England, to congratulate with his Highnesse, and treat with him concerning a peace and amitie with his Maiestie, if it pleased him to entertaine the same. And therewithall began to enter into further direcurfe, which the King brake off, faying : I am fure you are weary of the 50 long trauaile you haue taken, I would have you to fit downe and refresh your felfe. You are very welcome, and heere you shall have what society you will in any reasonable conditions demannd, for your Princefle take : for the is worthy of all kindnesse, and franke conditions, being a Princelle of great Nobleneffe, for Fame speaketh so much of her. The Generall perceiuing the Kings ounces, a great flanding Cup of Silver, a rich Looking-Glasse, an Head-peece with a Plume of The Queenes Feathers, a case of very faire Dagges, arich wrought embroidered Belt to hang a Sword in, and Presents sent a Fan of Feathers. All these were received in the Kings presence, by a Nobleman of the Court: 10 the King of 60 onely, he tooke into his ownehand, the Fanne of Feathers : and caused one of his Women to dehin. fanne him therewithall, as a thing, that most pleased him of all the rest. The Generall was commanded to fit downe in the Kings prefence, as the manner is, vpon the ground : where was Ametrallof a very great banquet prouded. All the diffus, in which the meate was ferued in, were, either called Tem mind, delivered him the Queenes letter, which he willingly received: and delivered the fame to a Noble man standing by him. Then the Generall proceeded to deliuer him his present, which was a Bafon of Siluer, with a Fountaine in the middeft of it, weighing two hundred and fine of pure Gold, or of another Mettall, which (among them ) is of great estimation, called Time- Lapid.

barcke, which groweth of Gold and Braffe together. In this banquet, the King (as he fate 2loft in a Gallery, about a fathome from the ground) dranke oft to the Generall in their Wine. which they call Racke. This Wine is made of Rice, and is as strong as any of our Aquanita: a little will serue to bring one asleepe. The Generall, after the first draught, dranke either water mingled therewithall, or pure water, the King gaue him leave so to doe : for the Generall craued his pardon, as not able to drinke fo strong drinke. After this feast was done, the King caused his Damosels to come forth, and dance, and his Women to play Musicke vnto them : and these Women were richly attired, and adorned with Bracelets and Iewels: and this they account a great fauour, for these are not viually seene of any, but such as the King will greatly honour. The King alio gaue vnto the Generall, a fine white Robe of Calico, richly wrought with Gold, and a very faire girdle of Turkey worke, and two Crefes, which are a kind of Daggers, all 10 which a Noble man put on in the Kings presence: and in this manner he was dismissed the Court, with very great curtefies, and one fent along with him, to make choyce of an house in the Citie, where the Generall thought most meete. But, at this time he refused this kindnesse, and rather choic to goe aboord his Ships : and left the King to confider of the Queenes Letter, the tenor whereof, hereafter followeth.

ELIZABETH by the grace of God, Queene of England, France and Ireland, defendresse of the Christian Faith and Religion.

To the great and mightie King of Achem, &c. in the Iland of Sumatra, our louing Brother, greeting.

■ He eternall God , of his divine knowledge and providence , hath so disposed his blessings , and good things of his Creation, for the vie and nourishment of Mankind, in (uch fort: that notwithstanding they growe in divers Kingdomes, and Regions of the World: yet, by the industrie of Man (strred up by the inspiration of the Said omnipotent Creator) they are dispersed into the most remote places of the univer fall World. To the end, that even therein may appeare unto all Nations, bis maruelous workes, bee bauing so ordained, that the one land may have need of the other. And thereby, not only breed intercourse and exchange of their Merchandise and Fruits, which doe superabound in 30 Some Countries, and want in others : but also ingender lone , and frendship betwixt all men , a thing natu-

Whereunto wee having respect (Right noble King) and also to the honorable, and truly royall fame, which hath hither stretched, of your Highnesse humane and noble vsage of Strangers, which repaire into that your Kingdome, in lone and peace, in the Trade of Merchandile, paying your due Customes. Wee have beene movied to give Licence unto the seous Subietts, who with commendable and good desires, saile to visite that your Kingdome: Notwithstanding the dangers and miseries of the Sea, naturall to such a Voyage, which (by the grace of Gon) they will make, beeng the greatest that to be made in the World; and to prefen trafficke unto your Subjects. Which their offer, if is shall bee accepted by your Highnelle, with such loue and grace, as wee hope for, of so great and magnanimious a Prince: Wee, for them, doe pro- 40 mise, that in no time hereaster, you shall have cause to repent thereof, but rather to revoyce much. For their dealing shall be true, and their connersation sure, and wee hope, that they will give so good proofe thereof, that this beginning shall be a perpetual confirmation, of love between our Subjects on both parts: by carrying from vs, such things and merchandise as you have need of there. So that your Highmesse Shall be very well served, and better contented, then you have heretofore beene with the Portugals and Spaniards, our Énemies : who only, and none elfe, of these Regions, have frequented those your, and the other Kingdomes of the East. Not suffering that the other Nations should doe it, pretending themselves to be Monarchs, and absolute Lords of all these Kingdomes and Provinces : as their owne Conquest and Inberitance, as appeareth by their loftie Title in their writings. The contrarie whereof, bath very lately appeared unto us, and that your Highnelle, and your royall Familie, Fathers, and Grandfathers, have so (by the grace of GoD, and their Valour) knowne, not onely to defend your owne Kingdomes: but also to give Warres unto the Portugals, in the Lands which they possesse: as namely in Malaca, in the yeere of the Humane Redemption 1575, under the conduct of your valiant Captaine, Ragamacota, with their great loffe and the perpetuall honour of your Highmelle Crowne and Kingdome.

And now, if your Highneste shall be pleased, to accept into your Fauour and Grace, and under your 193.:il Protektion and Defence, these our Subsects, that they may freety doe their businesse now, and continue yeerely her eafter: This Bearer, who goeth chiefe of this Fleet of foure Ships, hath order (with your Highneste Licence) to leave certaine Factors, with a settled House of Factorie in your Kingdome, untill the going thuber of another Fleet, which shall goe thither upon the returne of this. Which left Fa- 60 clors, shall learne the Language, and customes of your Subjects, whereby, the better and more loningly to

And the better to confirme this Confederacie, and Friendship betwixt vs , wee are contented, if your Highnesse be so pleased, that you cause Capitulations reasonable to be made: and that this Bearer dos

the like in Our name. Which wee promise to performe royally, and entirely, as well herein, as in other Agreements and Arguments which he will communicate unto you: to whom, wee doe greatly defire your Highneffe to give intire faith and credite, and that you will receive him, and the rest of his companie, under your Revall protection, fanouring them in what shall be Reason and Instice. And we promise on our behalfe to re-answere in like degree, in all that your Highnesse shall have need, out of these our Kingdomes, And wee defire, that your Highneste would be pleased to fend us answere, by this Bearer of this our Letter, that wee may thereby understand of your Royall acceptance of the Friendship and League, which wee offer, and greatly defire, may have an happie beginning, with long yeeres to continue.

CHAP. 2. S.3. Sir IAMES LANCASTER. Reasons of League.

T his next going to the Court, hee had long Conference with the King, concerning the effect of the Queenes Letter, wherewith the King feemed to be very well pleased, and faid: if the contents of that Letter came from the heart, he had good cause to thinke well thereof. And, for the League, Her Maiestie was desirous to hold with him, hee was well pleased therewith. And, for the further demands the Generall made from Her , in respect of the Merchants trafficke : he had committed all those points to two of his Noblemen . to conferre with him, and promifed, what her Maiestie had requested, should by all good meanes bee granted. With this contented answere, after another Banquet appointed for the General, he departed the Court. And the next day, he fent to thole Noblemen , the King had named to him , to know their appointed time, when they would fit upon this Conference. The one of these Noblemen pointed time, when array would in vp it in a contraint. The one of other Mountain Asthe Tarky in was the chiefe Bifting of the Realme, a man of great efficient on with the King, and all the people; and so he well deferued, for he was a man very write and temperate. The other was one of softer Management of the well deferred, for he was a man very write and temperate. The other was one of softer Management of the well deferred in the was a man very write and temperate. The other was one of softer Management of the was a man very write and temperate. the most ancient Nobilitie, a man of very good grauitie: but, not so fit to enter into those Con- bumeran Prin-ferences as the Bishop was. A day, and a meeting was appointed, where many questions passed betwire them, and all Chiefe Priests the Conferences passed in the Arabicke Tongue, which both the Bishop and the other Nobleman tries of that well understood. Now, the Generall before his going out of England intertained a Iem, who protestion. spake that language perfectly, which stood him in good steed at that time. About many demands, the Generall made touching Freedomes for the Merchants, the Bishop said vnto him: Sir, Great vse of what reasons shall we shew to the King, from you, whereby he may (the more willingly) grant 30 thefe things, which you have demanded to be granted by him? to whom the Generall answered with these reasons following.

Her Maiesties mutual Loue. Her worthmelle in protecting others against the King of Spaine the common Enemie of these

Her noble mind which refused the offer of these Countries. Nor will thee fuffer any Prince to exceed her in kindnesse. Whole Forces have exceeded the Spaniards in many Victories.

And hindred the Portugals attempts against these parts. The Grand-Signor of Turkie hath alreadie entred into League with her Maiestie on honorable Reasons of another kind.

Moreouer, it is not voknowne to the King , what prosperitie, Trade of Merchandise bringeth to all Lands: with increase of their reuences, by the Custome of these Commerces. Also Princes grow into the more renowne and strength, and are the more feared, for the wealth of their Subjects, which by the concurse of Merchandises grow and increase. And the more kindly that Strangers are entertained, the more the Trade doth grow. The Prince is thereby much enriched alto. And for Achem, in partic, lar, this Port lieth well, to answere to the Trade of all Bengala, Iana, and the Moluccas, and all China. And thefe places having vent of their Merchandile, will not let to refort hither with them. So that, by this meanes, the royaltie of the Kings Crowne,

50 will greatly increase, to the decrease, and diminishing of all the Portugals Trade, and their great And, if it shall happen, that his Maiestie wanteth any Artificers , hee may have them out of our Kingdome, giving them content for their travaile: and free course to goe, as they have good will to come. And any other necessarie, that our Countrie bringeth forth, and may spare, shall be at the Kings command and feruice. But, I hope his Maiestie will not vrge any demands more, then her Maiestie may willingly confent vnto : or that shall be contrarie to her Honour and Lawes, and the League she hath made with all Christian Princes her neighbours.

Further, the Generall demanded, that his Maiestie would cause present Proclamation to be 60 made for our lafetie, and that none of his people should abuse any of ours : but that they might doe their businesse quietly. And this last request was so well performed, that although there were a strict order, that none of their owne people might walke by night : yet ours, might goe both night and day, without impeachment of any. Onely, if they found any of ours at road at valawfull houres, the Inflice brought them home to the Generals house, and there delivered

4•

6.

50

After these conferences ended, the Bishop demanded of the Generall, notes of his reasons in writing, as also of his demands of the priviledges he demanded in her Maiesties name for the Merchants , and hee would show them to the King : and within few dayes , he should have his Majesties answere to them. And with these conferences, and much gratulation, and with some other talke of the affaires of Christendome: they broke vp for that time.

The Generall was not negligent, to fend his demands to the noble men, which (for the most part) were drawne out before hand : for, he was not vnreadie for these businesses, before he came

Cock-fighting

Captaine Iohn

This was his

Mich, he was flaine, as before is thew-

Davis.

aland in the Kingdome. At his next going to the Court, and fitting before the King, beholding the Cock-fighting (which is one of the greatest sports this King delighteth in) hee sent his Interpreter with his 16 obeisance to the King, desiring him to be mindfull of the businesse, whereof hee had conferred with his Noblemen. Whereupon, he called the Generall vnto him, and told him, that hee was carefull of his dispatch: and would willingly enter into Peace and League with her Maiestie, and (for his part) would hold it truely. And for those Demands and Articles, he had fet downe in writing, they should be all written againe, by one of his Secretaries, and should have them authorized by him. Which within fine or fix dayes, were delinered the Generall, by the Kings owne hands, with many good and gracious words: the Tenor of which League and Articles of Peace, are too long to be inferted. According to their defires, was to the English granted. First, Free entry and trade, Secondly, Custome free, whatsoever they brought in, or carried forthand affiftance with their veffels and shipping, to laue our ships, goods, and men from wracke in any 20 dangers. Thirdly, Libertie of Testament to bequeath their goods to whom they please. Fourthly, Stability of bargaines and orders for payment by the subjects of Achen, &c. Fiftly, Authority to execute inflice on their owne men offending. Sixtly, Inflice against injuries from the Natiues, Seuenthly, Not to arrest or stay our goods, or set prizes on them. Eightly, Freedome of Conscience. This League of Peace and Amitie being fetled, the Merchants continually went forward, pro-uiding Pepper for the lading of the ships: but there came in but small store, in respect of the last yeeres sterility. So by some of them he understood of a Port, about an hundred and fiftie leagues from thence, in the South part of the same Iland, called Priaman, where he might lade one of his fmaller ships. Then he prepared the Sufan, and placed for Captaine and chiefe Merchant in her,

M. Henry Middleton.

He was also not a little grieued, that Captaine Iohn Danis his principall Pilot, had told the Marchants before our comming from London, that Pepper was to be had here for foure Spanish fecond voyage royals of eight the hundred; and it cost we almost twentie. The Generall, daily grew full of to the indire, thought, how to lade his shippes to faue his owne credit, the Merchants estimation that set him a worke, and the reputation of his Countrey: confidering what a foule blot it would be to them all, in regard of the nations about vs, feeing there were merchandise enough to bee bought in the Indies, yet he should be likely to returne home with empty ships. Besides the Portugall Embassador had a diligent eye ouer every steppe we trode, but was no whit accepted of the King. For the last day of his beeing at the Court, he had demanded of the King, to fettle a Factorie in his Countrey, and to build a Fort at the comming in of the Harbour: 40 his reason was, for the more securitie of the Marchants goods, because the City was subject to Discontentbe- fire. But the King perceiuing what he meant, gaue him this answer backe againe: Hath your Master (faith he) a Daughter to give vnto my Sonne, that he is so carefull of the preservation of my Countrey? He shall not neede to be at so great a charge, as the building of a Fort : for I have a fit house about two leagues from this Citie, within the Land, which I will spare him to supply his Factorie withall : where they shall not need to feare either enemies or fire, for I will protect him. Hereupon the King was much displeased at this insolent demand : and the Emballadour went from the Court much discontented.

è. 1111.

Portugall wiles discouered, a Prize taken neere Malacca.

Partugal fubile-

Hortly after this, there came to our house, an Indian (to sell Hennes) which was appertaiining to a Portugall Captaine, who came to that Port with a Ship laden with Rice, out of the Port of Bengala. This Captaine lay in the Emballadors houle, and the Generall mistrusted, he came only for a Spy to see, and perceine what we did: and yet he gaue commandement, he should be well intreated, and they should alwayes buy his Hennes, and give him a reasonable price for them. At last, he himselfe tooke occasion, pleasantly to commune with the Indian, whence hee was, and of what Countrey: faying, A young man of his presence, merited some better meanes then buying and felling of Hennes. Sir, faid he, I ferue this Portugall Captaine, 60 yet am neither bound, nor free : but beeing free borne, I have beene with him fo long time, that now he partly effeemeth me as his owne : and fo great they are, that wee cannot ftrine with them. Then faid the Generall vnto him; If thy liberty be precious vnto thee, thy person meriteth it. But what wouldft thou doe for him, that would give thee thy libertie without pleading with thy Master for it? Sir, said the Indian, Freedome is as precious as life, and my life I would admenture for him that should do it. Prooue me therefore in any service that I can doe for you, and my willingnesse shall soone make good what I have said. Well, said the Generall, thou hast willed me to prooue whether thou meanest truely, or no. I would aske of thee, What the Embaifador laith of me, and my shipping which I have in this place; and what pretences he bath? Sir, A Sry for the faid the Indian, he hath had a Spie aboord of all your Ships, a Chinefe, who is continually con- Paringal disconerfant with your people: fo that he hath a draught drawne, not onely of your ships, and their nered, greatnesse; but also of every Piece of Ordnance that each ship hath, and how they are placed and the number of your men that are in them. And he findeth your thips strong, and well appointed: But by reason of the ackenesse that hath been in them, they are but weake of men, and easie to be taken, if any force come upon them on the fuddaine: and within few dayes, he meaneth to find his draughts to Malacca, for force to attempt your ships as they ride. The Generall laughed pleafantly to heare these things, saying; The Embassador was not so idle as he thought him: for hee well knoweth (faid he ) that I care little for all the forces of these parts. It is but to make thee, and the rest that are about him beleene, that you are stronger then you be. But goe thy way, and be here once in a day or twaine, and tell me whether the Emballadour goe forward in his proceedings, and when those Messengers shall depart with the plots thou speakest of. And although it will benefit me little to know these things, yet I will give thee thy libertie for thy good will thou she west therein, as I have promised thee to doe. This Indian went away very well contented, as any man might eatily perceine by his counterance, and the lightnesse of his pace. Now, 20 when he was gone, the Generall turned about, and faid to me : We have met with a fit man to betray his Master, if we can make any benefit of the treason. And furely, he was not deceived in his opinion: for by this meanes, what locuer the Embassadour did all the day, we had it either that night, or (at the furthest) the next day in the morning. And this Fellow carried the matter fo warily, that he was neither mistrusted of any of the Embassadors house, nor knowne to any of ours, what businesse he went about. For he had the right conditions of a Spie, being wilv fearefull, carefull, fubtill, and neuer truiting any to heare what conference he had with the Generall: but del uered his minde vinto him alone, and that in fuch careleffe fort, as if hee had answered the

CHAP.3. S.5. Sir IAMES LANCASTER. Craft retorted.

157

Generall idlely, whatfoeuer he demanded of him; for he flood in feare of our owne people, leaft they would bewray the telling of his Hennes, which couered all his comming and going to our The next day, the Generall was fent for to the Court, and the King had conference with him, Theforces of about an Embaffage that the King of Siam had fent him touching the conquelt of Malacca: and the King of Su-

with what force he would affelt him by Sea, if he vndertooke that fertice. For this King of Su- matra; metra, is able to put a very great force of Gallies to Sea, if he may have but some foure or five moneths warning before-hand, to make them ready. This conference the Generall furthered with many reasons, and tooke an occasion to enter into talke of the Spanish Embassadour, how infolently proud he carried himfelfe: and that his comming into his Maietties Kingdome and Court, was for no other purpole, but onely as a Spie, to fee and discouer the strength of his Kingdome. I know it well (laid the King, ) for they are enemies of mine, as I have beene to them: but what 40 causeth thee to see this? The Generall answered him; That he could take nothing in hand, but his Spies attended upon him, to marke what he went about, and to what ende. And among other things (faith he ) he had taken a draught of his ships, and meaneth to send it to Malacca: and to procure forces to fet vpon him at vnawares. The King smiled to heare the Generall mention these things, and faid; Thou needest not feare any strength that shall come from Malacca: for all the strength they have there, is able to doe thee no harme. The Generall answered, I doe not (faid he) feare their strength, what they can doe to me: but it may be much to my hinderance, that they understanding the time I meane to goe to Sea, they shall thereby bee adulfed to keepe themselves within their Ports, so that I shall not be able to offend them. Is it so, said the King ? Yea, faid the Generall, and therefore I would intreat your Maiestie, to make stay of two of the 50 Emballadors servants that are now going to Malacea, within these few dayes, who take not their passage from hence: but will goe to another Port of yours, and there hire a Barke, to transport them thence, because they will be fure not to be intercepted. And if your Maiestie intercept them there, you shall be priny to some of their plots and pretences. Well, faid the King, let me understand of their departure from hence, and thou shalt see what I will doe for thee. So, the Generall tooke his leave of the King, well contented, and had daily conference with his Merchant that fold Hennes: fo that there was not any thing done, or faid in the Embassadors house, but he was priny to it.

Now the time was come, that the Embaffodors two femants were to depart with their plots, 60 and their Mafters Letters: and they went down to a Port about fine and twentie leagues from Achen. But the Generall was not flacke to adule the King thereof, who had given order before to that at their comming thither, and when they had hired their passage, and had imbarked themfelues with all their Letters, and were going ouer the Barre, a mile from the Citie, a Frigget went after them, and caused the Barke to strike fayle, that the Iustice might fee, what their la-ding was. And when the luftice came abound, and faw two Portugals there, he asked them from whence they came, and whether they were going: they answered, They came from Achem, and belonged to the Portugall Emballadour. Nay, faud the Iustice, but you have robbed your Master. and runne away like theenes with his goods: and therefore I will returne you againe to him, from whom you are fled, and there you shall answer it. But in this hurly-hurly, and searching of them. they loft their plots, and their letters, and their Trunkes were broken open: and they lent to A. chem, bound backe againe to the Court, to be delinered to the Embaffador, if they did belong vnto him. The Generall had some intelligence of these things, and the next time he came to the Court, the King called him vnto him, and faid : Now what fayeft thou, art thou contented? The Generall made him obeisance, and gaue him humble and heartie thanks for his clemencie, and Ia kindnelle towards him: and with some other conference, the Generall departed for that time. The Marchant of Hennes came darly following his Merchandize, and as the General! suspected, and he himselfe afterward confessed, not without his Masters consent; to admise from vs, as well as he aduited from his Master.

But now the Summer was past, and September came, the time that the Generall meant to goe to fea to feeke meanes to supply his necessities : and now fell out the greatest Crosse of all to his pretence. The Embaffador himfelfe had his dispatch from the King to be gone. Which the Generall knowing, went to the Court, and where the King fate, feeing the sports that were made before him, he fent his interpreter to him, defiring that it would pleafe him to heare a certain request which he had vnto his Maieftie. Whereupon the King immediately called for him, and deman- 20 ded what he would have him to doe. It hath pleased your Highnesse, said the Generall, to doe me many curtelies, and therefore I am further imboldened, to proceed to request one kindnesse more at your Maiesties hands. What is that (said the King, smiling) are there more Portugals going to Malacca, to hinder thy pretences . Yea, faid the Generall the Emballador himfelfe (as I am giuen to vnderifand) hath your Maiesties dispatch to be gone at his pleasure : and is determined to depart within flue dayes. And what wouldft thou have me to doe, fail the King! Only flay him but tenne dayes, till I be gone forth with my ships. Well, faid the King, and laughed, thou must bring me a faire Portugall maiden when thou returnest, and then I am pleased. With this answer the Generall tooke his leave, and departed; and hafted all that he could to be gone. For he had left the Merchants behind him, and under the protection of the King till his returne; and in the meane time to buy what Pepper they could, to helpe to furnish the Afeentions lading, 14 which was now more then three parts laden. But the Generall would not leave her behind him. riding in the Port, but tooke her in his company: for the road but in an open place, All the three This was Cap- thips were made readie, and there was a Captaine of a Dutch thip in the road, who defired the Generall that he might goe to fea in his company, and take part of his adventure; his ship was aboue two hundred Tunnes, but had as little money to lade himselfe, as we; and therefore refused no confort. So the Generall was contented to give him ; of what should be taken, and heerefled therewith contented. The Generall having taken his leave of the King, and presented two of the chiefe Merchants vnto him, M. Starkie, and M. Styler, the King graciously tooke them into his protection and fafeguard: for these Merchants with some others, were left behind (as I faidbe- 40 fore) for the prouiding of such Pepper, as was there to be had, against the returne of the ships from the Sea. The thips being ready, we fet fayle the eleventh of September, toward the Straights

Eng! fb fauour

with the Por-

Now, let me tell you how the King dealt with the Embaffadour of Portugall, after our departure, which every day vrged his dispatch to be gone: but still, upon one occasion or other, his passage was deferred. At last ( foure and twenty daies after our departure ) the King said vnto him : I margaile you are to hasty to be gone, feeing the English Embassadour is abroad at the Sea with his shipping ! If he meete you, he will be able to wrong you, and doe you violence. I care little for him, faid the Embaffadour, for my Friget is fo nimble with Saile and Qures, that if I have but her length from him, I will escape all his force. Well, said the King: 10 I am the more willing you should depart, because I see you rest so assured of your owne safety: and so he had his dispatch to be gone. This seruice came well to passe for vs, for if he had gone away in time, fuch aduice would have beene given from Malacca, by Frigots into the Straights, that all shippes would have had warning of vs : but (by this meanes ) we lay within five and twentie leagues of Malacca it felfe, and were never descryed, whereby to be prevented. The third day of October, we being in the Straights of Malacca, laying off and on, the Hector clayed a Sayle, and calling to the rest of the shippes, we all discried her. And being toward night, a present direction was given, that we should all spread our selves a mile and an halfe, one from Theme in India. another, that the might not passe vs in the night. The shippe fell with the Hellor, that first efpied her, and prefently she called vnto her, and shot off two or three peeces of Ordnance: 10 60 that the rest of the shippes had intelligence, and drew all about her, and began to attempt her with their great Ordnance, and she returned shot againe. But when the Admirals ship came vp, he discharged sixe peeces together out of his Prow : and then her maine yard fell downe. After that the flot no more, nor any of our thippes, fearing leaft tome vnfortunate thot might light betweene wind and water, and so sinke her, ( for the Generall was very carefull ) so the fight ceased till the morning. At the breake of day, the Captaine with some of the rest, entred their Boate, and the Heller being next her, called them to come abourd him : and Maifter Iohn Middleton the Captaine, being Vice-Admirall, brought the Boate and Captaine aboord the Ge- The Caracke nerall, to whom they rendered their shippe and goods. The Generall presently caused all the yeelded to the chiefe men of the Prize, to be placed aboord our thippes, and onely placed but foure of our men English.

CHAP. 3. S.5. Sir IAMES LANCASTER. Carracke taken.

aboord the Prize: for feare of rifling, & pillaging the good things that were within her; and those foure suffered none other to come aboord. And their charge was, it any thing should be missing, to answer the same out of their wages and shares : for when the shippe was valaden, the Boateto fwaine and the Marriners of the same shippe, did wholly value her, and none of ours came . ( within her to doe any labour. Onely they received the goods into their Boates, and carried them abourd fich shippes, as the Generall appointed them to doe: so that by this order, there was Careto auoyd neither riting, thesing, pillaging, or spoiling, which otherwife would hardly baue beene a rifling and neither rining, the language of sponing, which otherwise would have been bundred foole.

I foole.

Goods taken and fiftie packes of Calicoes, and Pintalos, besides many packets of Merchandize : she had in inthe Prize. her much Rice, and other goods, whe eof we made small account. Now a storme arising, all their men were let abourd, and we left her, riding at an Anchor. This shippe came from a place called Saint Thoma, that lyeth in the Bay of Bongala, and was going for Malaca. When we intercepted her, the had in her aboue fixe hundred persons, Men, Women, and Children: her bur- His cate to 20 then was nine hundred tuns. The Generall would never goe aboord to fee her, and his reason prevent suffiwas, to take away suspicion, both from the Mariners that were there, and the Merchants that cion. were at London, least they might charge, or suspect him for any dishonest dealing, by helping himselfe thereby. He was very glad of this good hap, and very thankfull to God for it, and as he told me, he was much bound to God, that had eafed him of a very heavy care, and that hee could not be thankfull enough to him for this blessing given him. For, faith he, he hash not onely supplied my necessities, to lade these ships I have : but hath given me as much as will lade as many more shippes as I have, if I had them to lade. So that now my care is not for money, but rather, where I shall leave these goods that I have, more then enough, in safety, till the returne of the ships out of England.

The one and twentieth of October, our shippes returned out of the Straights of Malaca for Agreet Sport Achen, where by the way a great Spout of water came powring out of the Heauens, and fell of water, not farre from our fhip, which we feared much. For thefe Spouts come powring downe like a river of water, so that if they should light in any ship, she were in danger to be presently sunck downe into the Sea : it falleth with fuch an extreame violence, all whole together, as one drop, or as water powred out of a veffell : and sometimes dureth a quarter of an howre together, so that the Sea boyleth with froth, of an exceeding height, by the violence of the fall of the Spoute.

Their Present to and from the King : His Letters to Queene ELIZABETH: Their departure for Priaman and Bantam, and fetling a

Sumatra, where the Generall went a shore, and found all the Merchants well, and Achen. in fafety: who gaue great commendations of their good, and kind entertainment received from the King, in the Generals absence. Wherefore, the Generall willing 50 to gratifie the King, with fuch things as he had taken in the Prize, forted out a prefent of diners things, that he thought might be most to his liking : and at his first going to the Court, prefented them vnto him. The King received the Prefent, and welcomed the Generall, and feemed to be very joyfull, for the good facceffe he had against the Portugall: and jestingly faid, hee had forgotten the most important businesse that he requested at his hands, which was, the faire Poreugall Maiden, he defired him to bring with him at his returne. To whom the Generall answered: that there was none to worthy, that merited to be to prefented. Therewithall the King fmiled, and faid: If there be any thing heere in my kingdome may pleafure thee, I would be glad to gratifie thy good will. After this, the Generall commaunded the Merchants to put aboord the Ascention, all such Pepper, Cinamon, and Cloues, as they had bought in his absence : which 60 was scarcely the ships full lading, but at that time there was no more to be had, nor that yeare to be hoped for. And therefore, he willed the Merchants to put all their things abourd the ships, for his resolution was to depart from thence, and goe for Bantam in Iaua maior, where he vnderiftood both of good fale for his commodities, and great returne of Pepper to be had, and at a much more reasonable price, then they could buy it at Achen. This determination once knowne, all men haften to put their things aboord. So the Generall made the King priny to his departure, and went to the Court, and had long conference with him, who delivered him a Letter for her Maiestie, written in the Arabian tongue : The Tenor whereof, is as followeth.

HE foure and twentieth of October, we call our Anchors in the Port of Aches in Returne to

The Letter of the King of Achen, to the Queene of England.

Lorie be to God, who hath magnified himfelfe in his Worker, glorified his Dominion, ordained Kings Jand Kingdomes, exalted himseife alone in Power and Maiestie: he is not to be vittered by word of mouth, nor to be conceived by imagination of the heart, he is no vaine phantafine : no bound may con- 10 taine him, nor any similarde expresse him: his blessing and his peace is over all his goodnesse in the Creature : He hath beene proclaimed by his Prophet heretofore, and fince that often, and now againe by this writing at this present, inseriour unto none. For this Citie, which is not flacke to shew their love, hath manifested it, in the entertainment of that societie, which filleth the Horizons with ioy, and hath confirmed it to the eye by a signe, which bringeth knowledge of remembrance of it generally and particular. ly. And for that their request is sust, with purpose for exchange; and they themselues of honest carriage, and their kindnesse great in doing good in generall to the Creatures, helping the Creature in prosperitte and aduersitie toyntly, giving liberally unto the poore, and such as stand in neede of their abundance. preserving the Creature to their vetermost with a willing mind: which for them now is extended unto *Or Carmania. In its and Arach; sending forth the chiefest men of discretion and note, calling also the best of the 20

This is the Sultana which doth rule in the Kingdome of England, France, Ireland, Holland, and Friseland : God continue that Kungdome, and that Empire long in prosteritie.

And because that he which hath obtained the writing of these Letters, from the King of the Kingdome of Aliney, who doth rule there with an absolute power; And for that there came unto Vs a good report of you, declared and spread very infully by the mouth of Captaine lames Lancaster, (God continue his welfare long.) And for that you doe record that in your Letters , there are commendations unto vs. and that your Letters are Patent Priviledges. Almightie God advance the purpose of this Honorable consociation, and confirme this worthy league.

And for that you doe affirme in them, that the Sultan of * Afrangic is your enemy, and an enemy to 30 your people, in what place soener he be, from the first untill now, and for that he bath lift up himselfe proudly, and fet himselfe as King of the world: yet what is he, besides his exceeding pride and baughtie mind? In this therefore is our toy increased, and our societie confirmed: for that he and his Company are our enemies in this world, and in the world to come : fo that we shall cause them to die, in what place soener we shall meete them, a publicke death.

And moreover, you doe affirme, that you defire peace and friendship with vs. To God be praise and thankes for the greatnesse of his Grace. This therefore is our serious Will, and Honourable Purpose truetowares for the great engine of the State of the American Company of the Writing. That you may frend fr m your people and to Don' Perts, to Trade end to Traffique; and that who fower field be fent or to V in your Highreffe Name, and to whom fower you shall prescribe the time, they shall be of a synt Company, and of common priviledges. For this Captaine and his Company, 40 so some as they came unto us, we have made them of an absolute societie: And we have incorporated them into one Corporation and common Dignities: And we have graunted them Liberties, and have shewed them the best course of Truffique: And to manifest unto men, the love and brother-bood betweene 213 and you in this world. There is fent by the hand of this Cuptaine, according to the custome, unto the famous Citie, a Ring of Gold, beautified with a Ruby, richly placed in his fete, two vestures wouen with Gold, embroudered with Gold, inclosed in a red Boxe of * Tzin.

Written in ' Tarich of the yeere 1011. of Mahomet. Peace be vnto you. " That is, by Computation

Translated out of the Arabick, by WILLIAM BEDVVII. 50

TOr a Present to her Maiestie, he sent three faire Cloathes richly wrought with Gold, of very Cunning worke, and a very faire Rubie in a Ring : and gaue to the Generall another Ring, and a Rubie in it. And when the Generall tooke his leave, the King faid vnto him : have you the ·Pfalmes of Da- Pfalmes of Danid extantamong you! the Generall answered : yea, and weeling them daily. aid knowne to Then faid the King: I, and the reft of these Nobles about me, will fing a Plalme to God for your prosperitie, and so they did very solemnly. And after it was ended, the King said: I would heare you fing another Pfalme, although in your owne language. So there being in the company some twelse of vs, we fing another Pfalme; And after the Pfalme ended, the Generall tooke his 60 leaue of the King, the King shewing him much kin Inesse at his departure : defiring God to blesse vs in our journey, and to guide vs fafely into our owne Countrey, faying, if hereafter your thips returne to this Port, you shall find as good viage as you have done. All our men being shipped, we departed the ninth of November, being three thips, the Dragon, the Hedor, and the Afcer-

" Of London.

Os China.

of time.

CHAP.2. S.5. Sir IAMES LANCASTER. Trade at Bantam.

tion. We kept company two dayes, in which time the Generall dispatched his Letters for England, and fent away the Afcention, the fetting her course homeward, toward the Cape of Buend Esperanza, and we, along the Coast of Sumatra, toward Bantam : to see if wee could meere with the Sulan, which had order to lade voon that Coast.

As we fayled along the Coaft of Samara, we foliably fell among certaine Ilands in the night: Dangerous and the day approching, wee margelled how wee came in among them, without feeing any of Flats, them. They were all low landed, and full of Flattes and Rockes, fo that wee were in great danger, before we could cleere our felues of them : but thankes be to Gal, who delivered vs from many other dangers, as he did also deliver vs from these. So holding on out course from Priaman, Priamas. to wepaffed the Equinoctiall Line the third time, and came thither the fix and twentieth of Nonember, and found the Sufan there, which the Generall had fent before from Achen, to lade there. Now, when they law vs, they were very glad of our comming, and had prouided toward their lading, some fix hundred Bahars of Pepper, and fixtie fixe Bahars of Cloues. Heere our Pepper cost vs lesse then at Achen, but there is none growing about this Port, but is brought fome eight or ten leagues out of the Countrey, from a place called Manangeabo. This place hath Manageabo no other Merchandite growing there; only, there is good store of Gold in Dust, and small graines, Sore of Gold which they wash out of the Sands of Rivers : after the great flouds of Raine, that fall from the in Dust. Mountaines, from whence it is brought. This is a place of good refreshing, and is very wholsome and healthfull, and yet it lyeth within fifteene minutes of the Line. At this Port having refreshed our selues with the good ayre, fresh victuals and water, the Generall gaue Commission to 20 the Captaine of the Sufan, to make what halte he could for his lading, which would be accom- The Sufan first plished with some hundred Bahars of Pepper, and so to depart for England. And the fourth day sens home. of December, we tooke our course toward Bantam, in the fland of lana major : and we entred the December the Straights of Sunda, the fifteenth of December, and came to an anchor under an Iland, three they depart leagues from Bantam, called Pulopanfa.

The next day in the morning, we entred the Road of Bantam, and shot off a very great peale. They arrive in of Ordnance out of the Dragon, being our Admirall, and out of the Heltor: fuch an one as had the Road of neuer beene rung there, before that day. The next day in the morning, the Generall fent his Bantam. Vice-Admireil, Captaine Iohn Middleton aland, with a Message to the King : declaring, that hee was sent by the Queene of England, and had both a Message and a Letter to deliner to his Maieflie from her and required his Maiesties safe conduct and warrant to come a land, to deliuer the fame. The King returned him word, that hee was very glad of his comming, and fent backea Nobleman with Captaine Middleton, to welcome the Generall, and to accompany him a-land.

The Generall tooke some fixteene men in his company, and went a-land with the Nobleman to the Court : where he found the King (being but a child of ten or eleuen yeares of age) fitting The King of in a round-house; with some fixteene or eighteene Noblemen of the Country about him, in some of 10,000 of reasonable esta e. The Generall did his obeysance, and the King welcommed him very kindly. yeares of age. And after the Generall had had some conference about his message, hee delivered to the Kings The Queenes hand, her Maiesties Letter, with a Present of Plate, and some other things withall : which the Letter and King received with a fmiling countenance, and referred the Generall (for further conference) to Prefent to the one of his Nobles, who was then Protector. After some houre and an halfes conference had of many things, the faid Nobleman (as from the King) received the Generall under the Kings protection, and all his Company: willing him to come a-land, and buy and fell, without any kinde of molestation, for there he should be as safe, as if he were in his owne Countrey : and to this, all the Nobles agreed with one confent. There passed many speeches of divers things, which (for Trade began. breuities fake) I omit to trouble the Reader withall : for, my purpose is to shew the effect of this hirl fetling of the Trade in the East-Indies, rather then to particularize of them. The Generall, after his kind welcome and conference had, took his leave of the King, and the rest of his Nobles:

and presently gaue order for the prouiding of housing, whereof the King willed him to make his best choice wherefoeuer he would. So, within two dayes, the Merchants brought goods ashore, 30 and beganne to fell: but, one of the Kings Nobles came to the Generall, and faid, it was the custome of that place, that the King should buy, and furnish himselfe, before the Subjects should buy any thing. The Generall was well contented, for he was admied, that he would give a reasonable price, and pay very well. The King being serued, the Merchants went forward in their sales: so that within some fine weekes, much more was sold there in goods, then would have laden our A Riall of & two shippes : and yet they brought away from thence two hundred and seuentie fixe bagges of is source shill Pepper. These contayned fixtie two pound waight a piece, and coft at first penny 5. 2. Rials of lings six pence eight the piece, beside our anchorage, and the Kings Cultome, which anchorage for our two ships sterling. cost vs (by agreement the Generall made with the Sauendar, or Gouernour of the Citie) fifteene

60 hundred Rials of eight, and one Riall of eight vpon every bagge of custome. Wee traded heere very peaceably, although the lanians be reckoned among the greatest Pickers and Theenes of the World. But the Generall had commission from the King (after hee had received an abuse or two) that wholoeuer he tooke about his house in the night, he should kill them: so, after source or side were thus slaine, we lived in reasonable peace and quiet. But, continually, all night, wee kept a carefull watch. As we went buying Pepper, we fent it aboord, so that by the tenth of February, our ships were fully laden, and readie to depart, But, in this meane time, the Captaine of the Hector, Mafter lobn Middleton, fell ficke aboord his ship, in the Roade (for the Generall obseruid this from the beginning of the Voyage, that if he himselfe were ashore, the Captaine of the Vice-Admirall kept aboord, because both should not be from their charge at one time. The Generall hearing of his ficknelle, went aboord to vifit him, and found him weaker, then hee himfelfe filt, which experience had taught him to know in thele hot Countries. And so it happened with Captaine Middleton then walking vp and downe, who dyed about two of the clocke next led in Bantam. the King of Bantam to the Queспе.

The drash of Captain loin morning. Michigant

Now, the Generall began to put all things in order, and haften his departure, and appointed a 10 Pinnafle of about fortie tunnes (which he had) to bee laden with Commodities, and put in her 40, nan ewith twelve men with certaine Merchants, and lent her for the Moluces : to trade there and fettle a 12. men tento Factorie, against the returns of the next shipping out of England. Moreover, he lefteight men and three Factors in Bantam, the chiefe of which Factors, was Malter William Starter, whom he A Factory fee - appointed to fell fuch Commodities as were left them: and to prouide lading for the thippes, against the next returne, Also the Generall went to the Court to take his leave of the King, where he receiued a Letter for her Maiestie, and a Present for her, of certaine Bezar-stones, very faire, and to the Generall he gaue a very faire lana Dagger, which they much effeeme there, and a good Bezar-stone with some other things. And thus the Generall tooke his leave of the King, with many kind countenances and good words.

Their departure for England, and occurrents in the way.

The twentieth of Februarie, they returne for Esgland.

and let fayle to the Sea toward England, with thankes to God, and glad hearts, for his bleffings towards vs. The two and twentieth and three and twentieth of the 38 fame moneth, wee were in the Straights of Sunda, and the fixe and twentieth wee were cleere of all the iles that lye in those Straights, and cleere of all the land, holding our course South-west, so that the eight and twentieth, wee were in eight degrees and fortie minutes to the South of the Line. Vpon Sunday the thirteenth of March, wee were past the Tropicke of any noune Capricorne, holding our course, for the most pare, South-west, with a stiffegale of windst South-east. The fourteenth day of Aprill, were were in thirtie foure degrees, judging the Land of Madagascar to be North of vs. The eight and twentieth day we had a very great and a finrious storme, so that we were forced to take in all our Sayles. This storme continued a day and a night, with an exceeding great and raging Sea, to that, in the reason of man no shippe was able to live in them : but God (in his mercie) ceased the violence thereof, and gave vs time to 40 breach: and to repaire all the diffresses and harmes we had received, but our ships were so shaken,

He twentieth day of Februarie, we went all aboord our ships, shot off our Ordnance,

A terrible floranc.

that they were leakie all the Voyage after. The third of May, wee had another very fore storme which continued all the night, and the Seas did so beate upon the ships quarter, that it shooke all the Iron worke of her Rother: and the next day in the morning, our Rother brake cleane from the sterne of our shippe, and presently funke into the Sea. This strooke a present feare into the hearts of all men, so that the best of vs, and most experienced, knew not what to doe. And specially, seeing our selves in such a tempestuces Sea, and to storme a place, to that, I thinke, there beefew worle in all the World. Now our ship draue vp and downe in the Sea like a wracke, which way socuer the wind carried her: fo that sometimes we were within three or foure leagues of the Cape Buena Esperanza, then 30 Almost 40. de- commeth a contrary wind, and driveth vs almost to fortie degrees to the Southward into the ched vs exceeding fore, so that our case was miserable and very desperate. Yet all this while the Hellor kept by vs carefully, the company whereof was some comfort vnto vs: and many times the Master of the Hester came aboord our shippe, so at the the last, it was concluded to take our milen Mast, and put it forth at the sterne Port, to proue if wee could steere our shippe into some place where we might make another Rother to hang it, to ferue our turnes home. But this detuce was to small purpose, for when we had fitted it, and put it forth (the Seas being somewhat growne with litting up the Mast) it did in shake the sterne, and put all in such danger, that it was n edfull to make all convenient haste, to get the Mast into the ship againe : which we were 62 very glad when we had brought it to patte. Now we were without all remedie, vnlefte we made a new Rother, and could bring it to paffe to hang it in the Sea: which to performe let query man judge how cafe a thing it was, our thip being of feuen or eight hundred tunnes, and in to dange rous a Sca as this was : but necessitie compelleth to prooue all meanes. Then the Generall comCHAP.2. S.S. Sir IAMES LANCASTERS Sea perils.

manded the Carpenter to make a Rother of the faid mifen Mast, to prooue what wee could doe: but this barre fell in our way; that , at fach time as wee loft our Rother, wee loft also the most of our Rother irons, whetewith to fasten the Rother. But yet, wer went forward, and made all the hafte we could, and one of our mendined, to fearth what Rother irons remayned, who found but two, and one that was broken, to helpe vs withall. Yet, by Gods helpe, finding a faire day, were made fait the faid Rother, and failed on our course homewards : But, within three or fourethoures, the Sea tooke it off againe, and wee had much adoe to faue it, and with the fauine of it, wee loft an other of our irons, forthat now, we had but two to hang it by : and our men began to he defrous to leave the Ship , and goe into the Heller to faue themselves. Nav. faid 10 the Generall, wee will yet abide Gods leafure, to fee what mercie he will shew vs : for I despaire not to faue our schies, the Ship and the goods, by one meanes or other, as God shall anpoint vs. And with that, he went into his Cabbin, and wrote a Letter for England, purpofine to fend it by the Heltor, commanding her to depart, and leave him there: but, not one of the companie knew of this command. The Letter was very briefe, and the tenour litle more or leffe, as followeth.

R lght worshipfull, what hash passed in this Voyage, and what Trades I have settled for this companie. A Letter in a and what other events have befallen as, you shall understand by the bearers hereof, to whom (as occa-desperate case for hath fallen I must referre you. Livill frine with all deligence to faue my flip, and her goods, as you lent 20 may parceive, by the course le take in venturing mine owne life, and those that are with mee. I cannot tell where you hould looke for mee, if you fend out any Pinnace to facke mee: because I line at the denotion of the word and seas. And thus fare you well, desiring God , to send us a merrie meeting in this world, if it be his good will and pleafure.

The Passage to the East India lieth in 62.1. degrees, by the North-west on the America side.

where the incompared on a filter Logic

Your very louing friend,

THE O'S LANCASTER

This Letterbeing defluered, the Generall thought they would have beene gong in the night, according to their Committen' but, when he efpied the ship in the moming, he said to me, thele men regard no Commission. Now, the hip kept some two or three leagues from vs , and came no neerer: for the Mafter was an honest and a good man, and loued the Generall well, and was loth to leave him in to great diffreste. And now, it was time for vs , to seeke all meanes that could be to faue our felues and the ship. Then, the Carpenter mended the Rother we had faued, and within two or three dayes, the weather began to hee somewhat faire, and the seas smooth. So, we put out a figne to the Hellor to come neere vs, out of which the Master, Master Sander Cole came, and brought the best swimmers , and divers that he had in his ship , who hel- Master Sander ped vs not a little in the businesse wee had to doe. Thus, by Gods good bleffing, wee hung our cole Master of 40 Rother againe, vpon the two hookes that were left: fo that, we had some good hope to obtaine the Heller.

one Port or other, to relieue our felues withall. Now, wee had beene beaten to and fro, in these mightie feas, and had many more flormes of weather, then are here expressed, somtimes for one whole moneth together, so that our men began to fall sicke and diseased: and the wind fell so thort, that wee could fetch no part of the coast of Africa, which was neerest to vs. Committing our selues therefore to God, we set faile straight for the Hand of Saint Helena: for, we knew we had doubled the Cape of Buena Esperanza, by the height wee were in to the Northward. As we were in our course, the Maine-yard fell downe, and strooke one of our men into the sea, and he was drowned. This was the end (God be thanked ) of all our hard fortunes.

The fift day of lune, wee passed the Tropicke of Capricorne, and the fixteenth in the mor-50 ning wee had fight of the Hand of Saint Helena: at the fight whereof, there was no smale reioycing among vs. Wee bare close along by the shoare, the better to get the best of the Road, in the They arrive at Harbour, where wee came to an anchor, right against a small Chappell, which the Portugals had Saint Halma. built there, long fince. Our ships rode in twelse fatham water, which is the best of the Harbor. At our going a illoare, we found by many writings, that the Carrackes of Portugall had departed from thence, but eight dayes before our comming. In this Iland, there is very good refreshing of water, and wild Goats, but they are hard to come by, vuletle good direction be given for the getting of them. And this course our Generall tooke, he appointed foure lufty men, and of the best shot he had, to goe into the Hand, and make their abode in the middest of it, and to every thot, he appointed foure men to attend him, to carrie the Goats that hee killed, to the Rende-60 uous : thither went (euery day) twentie men, to fetch home to the ships, what was killed. So there was no hoyting or rumour in the Iland to feare the Goats withall. And by this meanes, the ships were plentifully relieued, and enery man contented. While weestayed here, wee fitted our shipping, and searched our Rother, which wee hoped, would last vs home. All our sicke men recourred their health, through the store of Goats and Hogs, wherewith wee had refreshed our felues, having great need of good refreshing: For, in three moneths, wee had seene no land, but were continually beaten in the fea.

The I'c of Afcention.

The He of

The feue ath of August,

The fift day of July, we fet faile from this Iland, our course being Northwest. The thirteenth day, wee paffed by an Iland called the Aftention, which standeth in eight degrees. No ships touch at this Iland, for it is altogether barraine, and without water: onely, it hath good store of Fish about it, but deepe water, and ill riding for thips. From hence wee held our course fill North-They passe the west, the wind being South and South-east, till the nineteenth day, and then, we passed the Equinoctiall-Line. The foure and twentieth day wee were fix degrees to the Northward, at which time, wee indged our felues to be an hundred and fiftie leagues from the Coast of Ginney. Then wee steered away North and by West and North till the nine and twentieth, at which time, wee had fight of the Hand of Fogo. Here, wee were becalmed fine dayes, ftrining to passe to the East- 10 ward of this lland, but could not : for the wind changed, and came to the North-east, fo we flood

The feuenth day of August, wee were in fixteene degrees, and the twelsth day wee passed the Tropicke of Cancer, that lieth in 23.1. degrees, holding our course Northerly. But the three and twentieth, the wind came Westerly. The nine and twentieth, wee passed the Iland of Saint Marie, the wind faire.

The fewenth day of September, wee tooke founding, judging the Lands end of England to be fortie leagues from vs. The eleuenth day, wee came to the Downes, well and fafe to an anchor; for the which, thanked be almightie God, who hath delinered vs from infinite perils and dangers, in this long and tedious Nauigation.

CHAP. IV.

A Discourse of Iaua, and of the first English Fattorie there, with divers Indian, English, and Dutch occurrents, written by Master EDM VND SCOT, contayning a Historie of things done from the eleventh of Februarie, 1602. till the fixt of October , 1605. abbreniated.

The description of Iaua maior, with the manners and fashions of the people, both Iauans and Chynaffes, which doe there inhabite.

and the Inha-

Ana major, is an Iland which lieth in an hundred and fortie degrees of longitude from the middle part of it, and in the ninth degree of latitude, being also about an hundred fortie and fix leagues long, East and West, and some ninetie leagues broad, South and North, the middle part of which Land is for the most part all mountaines, the which are not fo fteepe, but that people doe trauell to the top of them, both on horse-backe, and on foot. Some inhabitants doe dwell vpon those hils, which stand next to the Sea, but in the very middle of the Land, so farre as ener I could learne, there are no Inhabitants, but there are wild beafts of divers forts, whereof some doe repaire neere the valleyes adioyning to the Sea; and denoure many people. Towards the Sea, for 50 the most part is low moorith ground, wherein stand their principall Townes of Trade, the chiefest whereof lie on the North and North-east fide of the Iland, as Chiringin , Bantam, Iackatra , and Intern or Greefer, The which low ground is very vnwholfome, and breedeth many diseases, (especially vnto strangers which come thither) and yeeld no merchandise worthy trading for, or speaking of, but Pepper, the which hath beene brought in times past from all places of the Land to Bantam, as the chiefe Mart Towne of the Countie, which Towne for Trade doth farre exceed Achen, or any Towne or Citie thereabouts; And Pepper was wont to be brought thither from diversother Countries, which of late yeeres is not, by reason that the Dutch-men trade to every

This Towne of Bantam, is about three English miles in length, also very populous, There are three Markets kept on every day, one in the forenoone, and two in the afternoone: that especially, which is kept in the forenoone, doth so abound with people, that they throng together, as in many Fayers in England. Yet I neuer faw any kind of Cattell to fell , by reason that there are very few tame in the Countrey. Their food is altogether Rice, with fome Hens, and fome Their food Fish, but not much, or in no abun ance. The lanans houles are altogether built of great Canes, Their houses and fome few small Timbers, being slight buildings: In many of the principall mens houses, is good workmanship the wed, as carrings, &c. And some of the chiefest have a square Brick roome, being built in no better forme then a Brickill, which is onely to put in all their houshold stuffe, when fire commeth, but they feldome or neuer lodge, nor eate in them. There are many small Rivers running through the Towne : also, there is a good road for shippes, whereby if they were people of any reasonable capacity, it would be made a very goodly Citie, also it is walled round with a Bricke wall, being very warlike built, with Flankers, and Turrets fcouring every way. 10 I have beene told by some that it was first built by the Chineses. In many places it is fallen to decay for want of repairing. At the very end of this Towne, is the China Towne, a narrow River parting them, which runneth croffe the end of the China Towne, vp to the Kings Court, and fo through the middle of the great Towne, and doth el be and flow, so that at a high water, both

This China Towne, is for the most part built of Brick, every house ig are, and flat over-head. The China some of them having Boords, and small Timbers, or filit Canes over-crosse, on which are laid Townes. Bricks and Sand, to defend them from fire. Ouer thefe Bricke Wate-houles is fet a shed, being built up with great Canes, and Thatched, and some are built up with small Timber, but the greatest number with Canes onely. Of late yeares, fince we came thither, many men of wealth 20 haue built their houses to the top, all fire free, of the which fort of houses, at our first comming, there was no more but the Sabindars house and the rich Chyna Merchants house, which neverthe-Lifely meanes of their windows, and fleds round about them, have been confumed with fire. In this Towne fland the English and Dutch houles, which are built in the fame manner, on- The Dutch and ly they are very much bigger, and higher then ordinary houses, and the Duich-men of late English houses. (their gh with great coft and trouble ) have built one of their houles up to the top all of Bricke, fire free, as they suppose. The King of this place is absolute, and fince the deposing and death of the late Emperour of The King and Damacke, is held the principall King of all that Iland: he vieth alwaies Marshall Liw vpon any hispower. offender whom he is disposed to punish. If any private mans Wife or Wiles be taken with di-30 shonesty, so that they have good proofe of it, they cause them presently to be put to death, both the woman, and the man that is taken in Adultery with her. And for their Slaues, they may execute them for any small fault. To every Wite that a lanan, being a free-man, marrieth, Costly wives. he must keepe ten women-flaues, which they as ordinary vie as their wives; and some of them keepe for every wife, fortie flaues, for fo they keepe ten: they may have as many more as they will, but they may have but three wives onely.

Gallies and Juncts of great burthen, may goe up to the middle of the great Towne.

The lawans, are generally exceeding proud, although extreame poore, by reason that not one lawans proud amongst an hundred of them will worke. The Gentlemen of this Land are brought to bee and poore. poore, by the number of Slaues that they keepe, which eate fafter then their Pepper or Rice groweth. The Chinois, doe both plant, dr fle, and gather the Pepper, and also fowe their Chinois frugall. 40 Rice living as Slaves under them, but they fucke away all the wealth of the Land, by reason that the lanans are fo idle. And a lanan is to proud, that he will not endure one to et an inch in height aboue him, if he be but of the like calling. They are a people that doe very much thirst after blood, yet they will feldome fight face to face one with another, or with any other Nation, but doe altogether feeke reuenge of their enemy cowardly, albeit they are for the most part

men of a goodly stature. Their law for murther, is to pay a fine to the King, and that but a Punishment of fmall fumme : but euermore the friends of the party murthered , will be reuenged on the murs murther. therer, or his kindred, fo that the more they kill one another, the more fines hath their King. Their ordinary weapon which they weare, is called a Crife, it is about two foot in length, the Their weapons bla e being waied, and crooked to and tro, Indenture like, and withall exceeding sharpe, most and lights. 50 of them having the temper of their Mettle poyloned, fo that not one amongst five hundred that is wounded with them in the body escapeth with his life. The handles of these weapons, are either of horne or wood, curroutly carried in the the likenesse of a Diuell, which many of them doe worthip. In their warres, their fight is altogether with Pikes, Darts, and Targets. Of late, some few of them have learned to vie their Peeces, but very vintowardly. The apparell of the bester fort, is a tucke on their heads, and about their loynes a faire Pin- Their apparel, tadoc, all the rest of their bodies naked; tometimes they will weare a close coate, iomewhat like a Mandillion, of Valuet, Chamblet, Cloath, or some other kind of Silke : but it is but feldome, and upon fome extraordinary occasion. The common fort weare on their head, a flat cap of Veluet, Taffita, or C. Ilico-cloath, the which is cut in many peeces, and feamed with a faire flitch, 60 to make them fit flat and compaffe : about their loynes they we are a kind of Callico-cloth, which is made at Clyn, in manner of a tilke girdle, but at the least one yard broad, being of two colours. Alio, there commeth from thence many forts of white colours, which they themselves do both Dye Paint and Gild, according to the fashions of that Countrey: Likewise, they can weare a king of striped stude, both of Cotten, and Rindes of trees, but by meanes of their latinesse, there

Their head & is very little of that worne. The men for the most part, have very thicke curled haire on their heads, in which they take great pride, and often will goe bare-headed to shew their haire : the women goe all bare-headed, fome of them having their haire tucked vp, like a Cart-horse taile, but the better fort doe tucke it vp , like our riding Geldings tailes. About their loynes they weare the same stuffes, which I have before mentioned, alwaies having a faire Girdle or Pintado, of their Countrey fathion, throwne ouer on their shoulders, which hangeth downe loose The principall of them are most religious, but they very seldome goe to Church: They doe

Their religion.

The Diuell

prayed to.

acknowledge Christ to be a great Prophet, whom they call Naby Ifa, and some of them doe keepe of Mahomets Priests in their houses, but the common people have very little knowledge 10 in any Religion, onely they fay, there is a God which made heaven and earth, and them also, He is good they say, and will not hurt them, but the Diuell is naught, and will doe them hurt, wherefore many of them for want of knowledge doe pray to him, onely for feare left he should hurt them. And furely if there were men of learning, which were perfect in their language to inttruct them, a number of them would be drawne to the true faith of Christ, and also would be brought to ciuiltie. For many which I have reasoned with, concerning the Lawes of Christians, haue liked all well, excepting only their plurality of Women, for they are all very lasciniously giuen, both men and women. The better fort which are in authoritie, are great takers of bribes. and all the Isnams in generall, are bad pay-mafters when they are trufted, notwithstanding, their Lawes for debts are fo strickt, that the Creditour may take his Debtor, his Wines, Children, 20

Bribing.

Thecuish peo-Idleneffe.

Likewise, they are all much given to stealing, from the highest to the lowest, and surely in times past, they have beene Man-eaters, before that Traffique was had with them by the Bynaffes, which as I have heard some of them say, is not above one hundred yeares since. They delight much in ease and Musicke, and for the most part, they spend the day sitting crosse legged like a Taylor, whitling of afticke, whereby many of them become very good Caruers, to carue their Crife handles: and that is all the worke that most of them indeuour to doe. They are very great eaters, but the Gentlemen allow their Slaues nothing, but Rice fod in water, with some rootes and hearbs, and they have a certaine hearb called Benaile, which they viually have carried with them wherefoeuer they goe, in boxes, or wrapped vp in a cloath like a Sugar-loafe, and alfoa nut 30 called Pinange, which are both in operation very hot, and they eate them continually to warme them within, and keepe them from the Fluxe, they doe likewise take much Tobacco, and also

Slaues, and all that he hath, and fell them for his debt.

The Lawans themselves, are very dull and blockish to mannage any affaires of a Commonwealth, where by all strangers goe beyond them that come into their land: and many of the Countrey of Cha, which come thither to dwell, doe grow very rich, and rife to great Offices and Dignitic among it them, as their Sabandar, their Laytamougon, and others, especially the Chanefes, who like Ienes line crooching under them, but rob them of their wealth, and fendit The Chinese are very cracky people in trading, ving all kind of couloning and deceipt which any possibly be detailed. They have no pride in them, not will refuse any labour, except they to turne Invars (as many of them doe when they have done a murther, or some other villanie) then

Religion of

Idolater to an-

they are every whit as proud, and as lafte as the lanans. For their Religion they are of divers fects, but the most of them are Atheists. And many of them hold opinion, that when they die, if they be good men, they shall be borne againe to great riches, and be made Gouernors, and if they be wicked men, then they shall be turned into some vgly beast, as a Frog or a Toade. They burne facrifice enery new Moone, mumbling prayers ouer them, with a kind of finging voyce, and as they fing, they ting a little Bell, which at the end of euery Prayer, they ring out as fall as they can. This ceremony they also vie, when any amongst them of account lyeth a dying. The manner of their facrifice is this: They furnish their Altars, with Goats, Hens, Duckes, and 40 divers forts of fruits, the which are sometimes dreiled to eate, and sometimes raw, and then are drelled afterwards and eaten. All that they burne, is onely papers painted, and cut out in curious workes, and valued by them at a certaine price. I have many times asked them, to whom they burne their facrifice, and they have answered me to God : but the Goserats and Turks which are there, fay they burne it to the Diuell. If they do so, they are alhamed to confeile it. to be the ma- They are many of them well seene in Astronomy, and keepe a good account of their moneths and yeares: they observe no Sabboth, nor one day better then other, except when they lay the foundation of a house, or begin some other great worke, which day they ever after observe as a holy day. When any of them that are wealthy die in Bantam, their bodies are burnt to Functall Rices. Ashes, which Ashes they put close in larres, and carry it to China to their friends. I have seene 60 when some of them have lyen a dying, they have set vp seauen Odours burning, source of them being great, and burning light, and they were fet vpon a Cane, which lay crosse vpon two Crotthes, about fixe foote from the ground, and three fet on the ground right vader them, being very small, and burning dim. I have demaunded the meaning of it many times, but I could never have other answer, but that it was the fashion of China; and furely many fuch like things they doe not knowing why, or wherefore, but onely that it hath beene a fathion among it them. They desight very much in Playes, and finging, but they have the worst voytes that one shall heare Playes, any people haue, the which Playes or Interludes, they hold as feruice to their gods: in the beginning of which, they often vie to burne a facrifice, the Priefts many times kneeling downe, and kulling the ground three times, one presently after another. These Playes are made commonly, when they thinke their luncks or hipping are let forth from China; likewile, when they are arrived at Bantam, and also when they set out from Bantam towards China. These Playes fometimes begin at noone, and end not till the next day morning, being most commonly 10 in the open freete, having Stages let vp for the purpole. Moreover, they have amongst them some South-fayers, which sometimes rage, and runne up and downethe streetes like mad men, Southfayers, having fwords drawne in their hands, tarring their haire, and throwing themselves against the ground. When they are in this franticke taking, they affirme, and other Chynefes due beleene, that they can tell what flialf dome to paffe after. Whether they be poffest with the Denill or no, who reuesleth fomething to them, Iknow not, but many Chynefes vie them, when they fend asluncke of any voyage, to know whether they shall speed well or no, and by their report, it hathrfaller out according as these South-fayers have told them. The Chineses are apparelled in long gownes, wearing kirtles under them, hanging something lower then their gownes. They are surely the most esteminate, and coward lieft people that hue. On their heads they weare a Effentiage. 20 Cault, some of them being made of Silke, and some of haire : the haire of their heads is very nesse. long, which they bind up on a knot, right on the crowne of their heads. Their Nobility and Gouemours weare woods of fundry fashions, some being one halfe like a hat, and the other like a French-hood; others being of Net-worke, with a high crowne, and no brims. These people are Feature of botall, and strong of body, having all very small blacke eyes, and very few of them have any haire dy. on their faces : They will steale, and doe any kind of villanie to get wealth : their manner at

CHAP.4.$.2. Treacheries of the Paurans against the English at Bantam.

Bantam, is to buy Women-slaves, (for they bring no women out of China) by whom they have many children, and when they returne to their owne Countrey, not minding to come to Bantam againe, they fell their women, but their children they carry with them. As for their goods, they take an order to fend some at every shipping: for if they die in Bantam, all the goods they 30 have there, is the Kings, and if once they cut their haire, they may never returne to their Haire cutting Countrey againe, but their Children may ; alwaies prouided, that they neuer cut their haire,

A true and briefe Discourse of many dangers by fire, and other persidious treacheries of the Iauans.

Fire our Ships were laden, and all things fet in as good order as it could be: whon the one The Excellent and twentith of February, 1602 our General taking his leave of the shore, departed, lea - leit at Eastern uing behind him to be relident in Bantam nine persons, ouer whom he appointed M. Wil- Mr. Starkes. liam Starkie, to be cheife Comander: likewise he left xiij. more, which he appointed to go in our Pinnaffe for Barda; of which he was appointed for chiefe Comander ouer the reft, Thomas Thomas Tudd. Tudde Merchant, and for Master of the said Pinnaile, one Thomas Keith. The Generall at his de- Thomas Keith.

parture left order, that this Pinnasse should be sent away with all speed; wherefore having taken in, to the quantitie of fifty fixe Chefts and Fardells of goods, vpon the fixth of March at night, the fet fayle, but by reason of contrary winds, after the had spent neere two moneths, beating vp and downe in the Seas, she was forced to returne againe to Bantam. Also at our Generals departure, he left vs two houses full of goods, and likewise some goods lying in the Dutchmens house, 30 but we were too few in number to keepe one well, had not God of his great mercie prefer-

It is not vnknowne to all that were there, the quarrell betwixt the lauans and vs, before our lauans goesfhips departed, who fought all the meanes they could to be reuenged. Infomuch, that prefently bout to fire the after the departure of our Pinnaffe, they began to practife the firing of our Principall house, with English house. fiery darts and arrowes in the night, and not content with that, but in the day time, if wee had brought out any quantitie of goods to ayre, we should be sure to have the towne fiered to windward not farre from vs. And if these fire Arrowes, had not by Gods prouidence, beene cipyed by some of our owne house, as they were, it was thought of vs all, that that house and goods had beene all consumed, as might plainly appeare at the top, when we came to repaire it. But as the 60 mallice of the raskall fort of people began now to appeare, and continued for the space of two yeeres against vs: So Gods mercie began to shew it selfe vnto vs, and continued to the last day. As this discouse will plainely shew hereafter, his Name be bleffed for it.

So some as we had dispatched away our Pinnasse, we began to lay the foundation of our house, The house which was feuentie two foot long, and thirtie fixe foot broad, but by reason there was at that builded.

166

Their head & is very little of that worne. The men for the most part, have very thicke curled haire on their heads, in which they take great pride, and often will goe bare-headed to shew their haire : the women goe all bare-headed, some of them having their haire tucked up, like a Cart-horse taile, but the better fort doe tucke it vp , like our riding Geldings tailes. About their loynes they weare the fame stuffes, which I have before mentioned, alwaies having a faire Girdle or Pintado, of their Countrey fashion, throwne ouer on their shoulders, which hangeth downe loose The principall of them are most religious, but they very seldome goe to Church: They doe

Their religion.

The Diuell

prayed to.

Bribing.

acknowledge Christ to be a great Prophet, whom they call Naby Ifa, and some of them doe keepe of Mahomets Priests in their houses, but the common people have very little knowledge 10 in any Religion, onely they fay, there is a God which made heaven and earth, and them also. He is good they fay, and will not hurt them, but the Diuell is naught, and will doe them hurt, wherefore many of them for want of knowledge doe pray to him, onely for teare left he should hurt them. And furely if there were men of learning, which were perfect in their language to inftruct them, a number of them would be drawne to the true faith of Christ, and also would be brought to ciuilitie. For many which I have reasoned with, concerning the Lawes of Christians, haue liked all well, excepting only their plurality of Women, for they are all very lasciniously giuen, both men and women. The better fort which are in authoritie, are great takers of bribes, and all the Ianans in generall, are bad pay-mafters when they are trufted, notwithstanding, their Lawes for debts are fo strickt, that the Creditour may take his Debtor, his Wiues, Children, 20 Lawes for debt. Slaues, and all that he hath, and fell them for his debt.

Theeuish peo-So L. Vettemannus. Idlenesse.

Likewise, they are all much given to stealing, from the highest to the lowest, and surely in times past, they have beene Man-eaters, before that Traffique was had with them by the Chynaffer, which as I have heard some of them say, is not above one hundred yeares since. They delight much in ease and Musicke, and for the most part, they spend the day sixting cross legged like a Taylor, whitling of a sticke, whereby many of them become very good Caruers, to carue their Crife handles: and that is all the worke that most of them indeuour to doe. They are very great eaters, but the Gentlemen allow their Slaues nothing, but Rice fod in water, with some rootes and hearbs, and they have a certaine hearb called Bettaile, which they vivally have carried with them wherefoeuer they goe, in boxes, or wrapped vp in a cloath like a Sugar-loafe, and alfoa nut 10 called Pinange, which are both in operation very hot, and they eate them continually to warme them within, and keepe them from the Fluxe, they doe likewife take much Tobacco, and also rayant dull.

The Lawans themselves, are very dull and blockish to mannage any affaires of a Commonwealth, whereby all strangers goe beyond them that come into their land : and many of the Countrey of Cyn, which come thither to dwell, doe grow very rich, and rife to great Offices and Dignitic amongst them, as their Sabandar, their Laytamongon, and others, especially the Changles, who like lenes line crooching under them, but rob them of their wealth, and fend it

Chinois crafty. Religion of

The Chineses are very crarty people in trading, vling all kind of cousoning and deceipt which may possibly be detailed. They have no pride in them, nor will refule any labour, except they 40 turne lawars (as many of them doe when they have done a murther, or some other villanie) then they are enery whit as proud, and as laste as the lanans. For their Religion they are of diners fects, but the most of them are Atheists. And many of them hold opinion, that when they die, if they be good men, they shall be borne againe to great riches, and be made Gouernors, and if they be wicked men, then they shall be turned into some vgly beast, as a Frog or a Toade. They burne facrifice enery new Moone, mumbling prayers ouer them, with a kind of finging voyce, and as they fing, they ting a little Bell, which at the end of euery Prayer, they ring out as fast as they can. This ceremony they also vie, when any amongst them of account lyeth a dying. The manner of their facrifice is this: They furnish their Altars, with Goats, Hens, Duckes, and 50 divers forts of fruits, the which are fometimes drelled to eate, and fometimes raw, and then are dressed afterwards and eaten. All that they burne, is onely papers painted, and cut out in curious workes, and valued by them at a certaine price. I have many times asked them, to whom they burne their facrifice, and they have answered me to God : but the Goserats and Turkes which are there, fay they burne it to the Diuell. If they do fo, they are alhamed to confelle it. They are many of them well feene in Aftronomy, and keepe a good account of their moneths and yeares: they observe no Sabboth, nor one day better then other, except when they lay the foundation of a house, or begin some other great worke, which day they euer after observe as a holy day. When any of them that are wealthy die in Bantom, their bodies are burnt to Funerall Rices, Ashes, which Ashes they put close in Iarres, and carry it to China to their friends. I have seene 60 when some of them hauelyen a dying, they have set up seaven Odours burning, source of them being great, and burning light, and they were fet vpon a Cane, which lay croffe vpon two Crotthes, about fixe foote from the ground, and three fet on the ground right vnder them, being very small, and burning dim. I have demanded the meaning of it many times, but I could never have other answer, but that it was the fashion of China; and furely many such like things they doe, not knowing why, or wherefore, but onely that it hith beene a fashion among st them. They desight very much in Playes, and finging, but they have the worth voytes that one shall heare Playes, any people haue, the which Playes or Interludes, they hold as feruice to their gods: in the beginning of which, they often vie to burne a facrifice, the Priefts many times kneeling downe. and killing the ground three times, one prefently after another. These Playes are made commonly, when they thinke their luncks or shipping are set forth from China; likewile, when they are arrived at Bantam, and also when they set out from Bantam towards China: These Player fometimes begin at noone, and end not till the next day morning, being most commonly

CHAP.4. $.2. Treacheries of the Pavans against the English at Bantam.

10 in the open freete, having Stages fet vp for the purpole. Moreover, they have amongst them some South-fayers, which fometimes rage, and runne up and downethe threetes like mad men, Southfayers, having fwords drawne in their hands, tairing their haire, and throwing themselves against the ground. When they are in chis franticke taking, they affirme, and other Chynefes doe beleeve, that they can tell what flull dome to passe after. Whether they be possess with the Denill or no, who renealeth fomething to them, I'know not, but many Chynefes vie them, when they fend a luncke of any voyage, to know whether they shall speed well or no, and by their report, it hathfaller out according as these South-fayers have told them. The Chineses are apparelled in long gownes, wearing kirtles under them, hanging fomething lower then their gownes. They are furely the most effeminate, and cowardliest people that line. On their heads they weare a Effeminate 20 Caull, some of them being made of Silke, and some of haire : the haire of their heads is very nesse.

long, which they bind up on a knot, right on the crowne of their heads. Their Nobility and Gouemours weare woods of fundry fashions, some being one halfe like a hat, and the other like a French-hood; others being of Net-worke, with a high crowne, and no brims. There people are Feature of botall, and strong of body, having all very small blacke eyes, and very few of them have any haire dy. on their faces : They will steale, and doe any kind of villanie to get wealth : their manner at Bantam, is to buy Women-slaves, (for they bring no women out of China) by whom they have many children, and when they returne to their owne Countrey, not minding to come to Bantam againe, they fell their women, but their children they carry with them. As for their goods, they take an order to fend some at every shipping: for if they die in Bantam, all the goods they 30 have there, is the Kings, and if once they cut their haire, they may never returne to their Haire cutting Countrey againe, but their Children may ; alwaies prouided, that they neuer cut their leaire,

A true and briefe Discourse of many dangers by fire, and other persidious treacheries of the Iauans.

Fter our Ships were laden, and all things fet in as good order as it could be: ypon the one
The English and twentish of February, 1602, our General taking his leave of the shore, departed, lease let as testion. uing behind him to be relident in Bantam nine persons, ouer whom he appointed M. Wil- Mr. Starker. liam Starkie, to be cheife Comander: likewise he left xiij. more, which he appointed to go in our Pinnasse for Barda; of which he was appointed for chiefe Comander ouer the rest, Thomas Thomas Tudd, Tudde Merchant, and for Master of the said Pinnasse, one Thomas Keith. The Generall at his de- Thomas Keith. parture left order, that this Pinnasse should be sent away with all speed; wherefore having taken in, to the quantitie of fifty fixe Chefts and Fardells of goods, vpon the fixth of March at night, the fet fayle, but by reason of contrary winds, after she had spent neere two moneths, beating up and downe in the Seas, the was forced to return againe to Bantam. Also at our Generals departure, he left vs two houles full of goods, and likewife some goods lying in the Dutchmens house, 30 but we were too few in number to keepe one well, had not God of his great mercie prefer-

It is not vnknowne to all that were there, the quarrell betwixt the lauans and vs, before our lauans goe aships departed, who fought all the meanes they could to be reuenged. Infomuch, that prefently bout to fire the after the departure of our Pinnafle, they began to practife the firing of our Principall house, with Engils house. fiery darts and arrowes in the night, and not content with that, but in the day time, if wee had brought out any quantitie of goods to ayre, we should be fure to have the towne fiered to windward not farre from vs. And if these fire Arrowes, had not by Gods prouidence, beene espyed by some of our owne house, as they were, it was thought of vs all, that that house and goods had beene all confumed, as might plainly appeare at the top, when we came to repaire it. But as the 60 mallice of the raskall fort of people began now to appeare, and continued for the space of two yeeres against vs: So Gods mercie began to shew it selfe vnto vs, and continued to the last day As this discouse will plainely shew hereafter, his Name be blessed for it.

So foone as we had diffratched away our Pinnaffe, we began to lay the foundation of our house, The house which was feuentie two foot long, and thirtie fixe foot broad, but by reason there was at that builded and some was set on fire, in which fire were many houses full of goods confumed. Amongst other, the of our goods and bold

LIB,III.

Theeues.

168

time, a new Protector cholen, we were put to some trouble and cost, before we could be permitted to goe thorow with it. Also wee ayred all our prize goods, and M. Starker caused the leathers of most of the packs to be stripped off, by whole countell it was I know not but these goods did not keep their colours nothing to well as the rest did, as we found afterwards. The one and twentieth of March, by reason of a China Captaine that shot a Piece, the towne

Dutch house was burnt to the ground, wherein we had lying fixtie fine Fardells of goods, betides fome Pepper. Also we had some Pepper lying in a Chimaes house, which for the most part was, burned and fpoyled, fo that we loft one hunered and ninetic facks cleare, befides the damage, the rest received. Our losse by this fire was great, but we prayle God it was no more, considering how neere the fire came to both our houles, and how winfit they were at that time for fach a 10 danger, especially one, where the fire came within three yards of it; infomuch that the lammes of the windowes were io hot, that a man could hardly faffer his hand to touch them, and yet the old and dry thatch tooke not fire, to the great admiration of all people that were there of many Nations. There was gathered about this house all the villaines in the Countrey, so that all that night, we that kept that house durst take no rest, for fearethey would throw some firebrands vpon it. In the Euening some of vs standing in the doore, there came lauans, whom we knewe Wicked people to be notorious Theeues, and asked vs how many we were that lay in that houle, wee demanded againe, what they had to doe to aske, and if they would know, they should come at midnight and see, at which answere they departed very much discontent, but such is their boldnesse there, that in the day time they would come and looke before our faces, how our doores were hanged, 20 and what failtning they had within, and many times we were informed by some that wished vs well, that if we did not keepe good watch, that there was a Crew, that meant to enter fuddenly vpon vs, and to cut our throates, in fo much that we being but foureat that houle, what with ouer-watching, and what with the Difeafe that raigneth much in that Countrey, which is lookneffe of the bodie, wee were growne to very great weaknesse, and two of vs neuer recous-

Nine faile of

The nineteenth of Aprill, 1603. came into the Road, nine fayle of Hollanders, over whom was Generall Wyborne Van Warwicke, who shortly after tent two of them for China, two for the Moluccoer, two laded at Bantam, one went to Iortan. Also he dispatched a Pinnasse to Achen, to will certaine ships (that went from thence by Cap: aine Spilbergs directions to Zeilon to winne 30 a small Fort from the Portugals) to come to Puntam, in the meane time, he with one ship stayed vntill their arrivall. We are very much behelding to this Generall for wine, bread, and many other necessaries, and courtefies received of him. Hee would eften tell vs how Sir Richard Linfon relieued him, when he was likely to perish in the Sea, for the which he would fay he was bound to be kind to Englishmen wherefoeuer he met them, and to speake truth, there was nothing in his ships for the comfort of sicke men, but we might command it, as if it had beene our owne. Also he in his owne person, did very much reacrence the Queenes Maiestie of England, when hee talked of Her. But there were fome of baier fort in his Fleet, that did vie very vnreuerent spec-ches of Her to some of the Country people.

Death of T. Morean.

The fine and twentieth of Aprill died Thomas Morgan, our fecond Factor heere, who had bin 40 fickly a long time. Also Master Startes began to grow very weake. The eight and twentieth day, came in our Pinnaffe which was lent for Banda; having loft one of her Factors, William Chafe, and the reft but weake and fickly. About this time there came certaine of the Kings Officers, and forbade vs to goe ferward with our house, the reason whereof, as I doe judge was because New Protefor the new Proteftor had not as yet received a Bribe; and the Sabjudar and hee beeing at that time not friends, he could doe vs little pleasure : wherefore we complayned to Cay Tomongone Gobes, the Admirall, who indeed is the Father of all Strangers in that place. He prefently made a great Feaft, and inuited all the principall of the Court, at which Feaft hee began to discourse of our cause, telling them what a shame it was that the King and they would not keepe their words to the English Generall and Merchants, and that rather then hee would breake his word, hee would 50 goe dwell in a small Cottage himselfe, and wee should have his house: but after much ador, he made them grant that we should goe forward with our house, the which in short time after was finished. Our principall Merchant fearing Pepper would be deare, by reason of the Flemmish Inspping that was there present, and the rest that were to come, bought up as much Pepper as he could, and because our house was not as yet readie, he disbursed his money before the Perper was weighed, and by reason the Flemmings are not curious in receiving their Pepper, when we came to weigh ours, we were forced to receive it as they did, or else we should have neither money nor Perper, so that we had in that parcell much fowle and bad Pepper. Vpon the last of Iune, Matter Starker ended his dayes, whose buriall Generall Warnick caused 69 to be honoured with a Company of thot and Pikes, the Colours trayled upon the ground, according to the Order of Souldiers buriall. The fourth of I ly, the great Market on the East-fide of the River, was by villanie of certaine

Mafter Sterkers

Amous, (who thought to get fome spoyle of the Chines goods) fet on fire, in which fire some

Chinois that were indebted to vs, loft all that theywere worth, so that we escaped not without Fire. some losse by it. The seventeenth of July, deceased Thomas Dobson, one of the Factours left for M. Dobson Banda: the fenen and twentieth day the Towne was burnt againe on the East-side the River. death. The fifth of August at ten a clocke at night, there came to our house Captaine Spilberge, Captaine Another fire. John Powlon , and some other Dutch Captaines , who told vs they had that day beene with the Protector about some businesse, who asked them if they would take our parts, if hee should doe any violence to vs, to the which they answered, as they faid, that wee and they were neere

Neighbours, wherefore they might not fee vs wronged, they faid more that heeftraightly charged them, that whatfoeuer he should doe vnto vs, that they should not bee offended nor ayde vs From thence I went prefently to the Protector, and gaue him a final Prefent, and also thankes for his men, which foure or fine dayes before hee had fent to helpe vs in our building. The Prefent he received, but I perceived by his countenance he was angry : He told me, that that day he had much bufineffe with the King, but the next morning he would fend for me, for that hee had to speake with me. The same day the Admirall sent his sonne to him to know what his meaning was to vie such threatning speeches of vs, but he denyed them. In the morning following hee fent for me; when I came he asked me, what they were that had told me he meant to harme vs:

I told him the Hollanders: hee asked agains whether they were Slaves or Captaines, I told him they were Captaines the bad me I should shew his Scriuana those Captaines. He said more, that if 20 any lauan or Chines had done it, he would have fent for him, and cut his throat before vs. Then hee began to find fault with vs , because wee did not come to him when wee had any Sute . but went alwayes to the Sabindar or the Admirall : I answered agains that he was but new come into his place, and that we had as yet no acquaintance with him, but hereafter I would come to him. Then he promifed me he would doe vs all the friendship he could, but it was but dissimulation to borrow money of vs. Also the Flemmings about this time spred a rumour through their owne Fleet, that the King would force vs to lend him five thousand Rials of eight, otherwise he would cause our house to be plucked downe againe, the which was false, for neither the King nor the Protector, had at that time fent to vs for any, nor did in foure monethes after.

The feuenceenth of August, Captaine Spilberge having vented all his Commodities (which he 30 shared in our prise) and laden his ships and his Pinnasse with Pepper, departed thence, having in his company two thips more of Warwicks Fleet. The nineteenth of August, wee brought out certaine packes of goods to ayre, wherefore a Ianan being Slaue to one of the principall of the Country, threw some fire-workes upon a Thatched house, a little to windward of vs, we espy .: Isuant treacheing it purfued him, and tooke him, and carryed him to Cay Tomongone the Admirall, who put him rie. in Irons. Within an houre after there came more of his fellowes, who would have taken him away perforce, wherefore the Admirals men and they fell by the eares, and many were hurt on both fides. So foone as the Admirals men had beaten them away, hee fent him to the King, but because his Master was one of the Kings friends, he was not put to death : although by the Law of the Countrey he should have dyed, neither did we greatly feeke it, because his Master was our 40 very good friend alfo. Likewise, if a Iauan doe offend hee must bee punished with death, for if they inflict any leffe punishment, they are so wicked and bloudie a people, that they will bee cowardly reuenged, not only of Strangers, but of their owne Mafters : fo that if any Slaue doe offend his Mafter, he doth quite forgine him, or elfe hee dyes for it. But they are very obedient, and will feldome offend their Mafters, because they are for the most part as wicked as themfelues. The two and twentieth of August, at night there were certaine I anans gotten into a great yard hard by our houle, who when we were tinging of a Pfalme, which wee did vie to doe when we let our Watch, these Rogues threw stones at our windowes, as if they would have beaten downe our house, and some of the stones came in at the windowes, and milled vs very narrowly, but we tooke fome of them, which yet upon fubmiffion we forred. About this time there grew a quarrell betweene the Flemmings and the Chinois, and tome Quarrell bewere flaine and hurt on both fides. This grew by the misbehauiour of the Flemmings, which in twist (binois that place doe carry themselves very rude and disordered, in that abundant manner that they are and Hollanders. a shame and infamy to Christendome and Christians. I doe not condenne them all, but the vulgar fort, who when they are a-shoare, and their drinke in, their Commanders can beare no rule orders, manhood of the lanans, only fome that were Slaues to some Turne-coate Chinois, would steale behind the Flemmings in the Euening, and cowardly stab them.

One day they being very importunate, for one of their men which was flaine, the Protections demanded of them, when they came to any Countrey to trade, whether they brought Law s 60 with them, or whether they were gouerned by the Lawes of the Countrey they were in: to the which they answered, that when they were aboord their ships, they were governed by their own parishment Lawes, but when they were alhoare, they were vnder the Lawes of our Countrey they were for Marthan in : well, faid the Protector, then I will tell you the Lawes of the Countrey, which is this, if one kill a Slaue, he must pay twentie Rials of eight, if a Freeman, fifty Rials, if a Gentleman, ouer them. They got the world before this quarrell was ended, but not by the Chinois, nor by a hundred Rials. The Flemmings requested to have that under his owne hand, the which they had, and it was all the mends they had for killing of their man, if they would have taken fiftie Rials of eight, they might have had it.

About the fift of September, here came a luncke full of men from the Iland of Lampon, which commits to 14. Standeth in the Straights of Sunda; and are enemies to the lawans, and all others that are dwellers in Bantam: thefe are to like the I anans, that the one is not knowne from the other. Alfo there were many lanans conforted with them. These men having their luncke riding in a Creeke hard by the Towne, and being in all points like vnto the lanans, would boldly come into the Towne, and not only in the euenings and nights come into houses, and cut off the peoples heads, but at noone dayes, in so much that for the space of a moneth, wee could take little rest forthe grieuous crying of the people. One day while we were fitting at dinner, they came and tooke a woman, Ic being our next Neighbour, and muffled her to with a Sacke, that the could not cry, and to carried her into a tuft of bushes in our back-side, and there cut her throate, and meant to have cut off her head, if they had had time. Her Husband missing her, and looking out might see them carrie her, who cryed out, and we role from dinner and purfued them, but it was too late to faucher life. Also they were very fivift of foot, so that we could come neere none of them, and for any thing that we knew, they might be amongft vs , for after the lawans were come wee could not know them. It was thought of some that they lay hid in the bushes till the comming of the Peridious la- Ianans, and then stole out, and put themselves amongst them. There were some Iana women that would cut off their Husbands heads in the night, and fell them to these people. They did ling or much about our house, and furely if we had not kept good watch, they would have attemp- 20 ted the cutting of our throats (if not for our heads) for our goods. But after awhile, many of them were knowne, and being taken were executed, which were men of very goodly stature. The reason they doe make these hard Aduentures, is, their King gives them a woman for every strangers head they bring him, wherefore many times they would digge up tuch as were new buried at Bantam, and cut off their heads, and fo coozen their King.

Also at this time, some credible men that withed vs wel, of whom the Admirall was one, bid

Treacherie intended and preuented.

Crueltie re-

vs haue a speciall care of our good watch, because some of the principall of the Land in birth, though not in wealth nor office, which had many Slaues, but little to maintayne them, had laid a Plot to have flaine vs in the night, and to have made spoyle of our goods which they tooke to be ten times more then were, and after to have given it out, the Lampons had done it. Whereupon we 30 were forced to have Lights burning al night round about our house, otherwise in the dark nights, they being so blacke as they are might have entred suddenly vpon vs, before wee should descry them. For all the vpper worke of our houses by reason of the heat are open, and they are built with Canes, and likewife the fence round about the houses, which is but a weake building, and may quickly be borne downe. There Heathen Deuils came forth two or three times, thinking to have executed their bloudie pretence, but God would not fuffer them. For fo foone as they came within fight of our Lights and might heare our Drumme found at the end of every watch, their hearts failed them, to that they durft not give the attempt, for they supposed, wee were readie not only with our small shot, but with our Murtherers to give them entertainment, and to speake truth, they should have found it so indeed. After they had wayted long, and could 40 neuer find opertunitie, they fell out among it themselves, and so were dispersed. Divers others made bold but vain attempts, and therfore now fel to work with the Chinoir, whose houses at this time were ful of our goods, which they had bought, in io much that energy ight for a long time, we had fuch grieuous crying out, and we looking every houre when we should be affaulted, durft take no reft in the night. Many Chinois about vs were flame, and furely if wee had not defended them with our shot, many more would have bin slaine: for the singing of a Bullet is as terrible to a lauan, as the cry of the Hounds is in the eares of the Hare: for they will not abide if once they heare it. But these continual alarmes, and grieuous out-cryes of men, women and children grew so rife in The miferies our eares, that our men in their fleepe would dreame they were purfuing the Ianans, and fuddenly would leape out of their Beds and catch their weapons : his next fellow hearing the dolefull 50 noyse he made, would buffell vp, and in their sleepe have wounded one another, before those that had the watch could come to part them : and if they should have set their weapons further from them they would not have beene readie, if we should have had occasion, the which we looked for every minute, and being but few of vs, I tooke my turne to watch as long as any, in which I have flood many times more in feare of my owne men then of any other, and when I haue heard them buffel, haue catched vp a Target, for feare they would have ferued me as they did

Terror of the But all this feare was nothing to vs in comparison of that which I will now speake of, which was fire. O this word fire, had it it beene spoken neere me, either in English, Mallayes, Iauanes, 60 or China; although I had beene found a-fleepe, yet I should have leaped out of my bed, the which I have done fometimes, when our men in their watch have but whifpered one to another of fire In to much that I was forced to warne them, not to talke of fire in the night, except they had

And not only my felfe, but my fellowes, Thomas Tudd, and Gabriel Towerson, after our watches had beene out, and we heavie a-fleepe fo that our men many times founding a Drumme at our Chamber doores, we have never bewrayed them, yet presently after they have but whispered of fire, we all haue runne out of our Chambers. I speake not this, that any that may bee fent thither hereafter should be discouraged, for then we were strangers, and now we have many friends there, and the Countrey is growne to much better civilitie, and as the yong King groweth in age, will more and more, because their Gouernment will bee better. In three monethes The Towns space, the Towne on the East-side the River, was burnt five times, but God be prayled the wind five times alwayes favoured vs. and although the Javans many times first it on our side, yet it pleased God burne in three To fill to preience vs, fo that by realon it blew but little wind, it was quenched before it came to monethes.

d. III.

Differences betwirt the Hollanders (filling themfelues English) the Iauans, and other things remarkable.

CHAP. 4. S.3.

Bout this time also, there was much falling out betweene the Flemmings and the Countrey people, by meane of the roda to the second and the se Countrey people, by meanes of the rude behaulour of the Flemmings, and many of them were stabd in the evenings : and at that time the Common people knew not vs from the Flommings, for both they and wee were called by the name of Englishmen, by reason of their vsurping our name at their first comming thither to trade, wherein they did our Nation much wrong, for wee were ever ashamed of their behaviour, and as wee pasted along the street, wee might heare the people in the Market, rayling and exclayming on the Eng-lish men, although they meant the Hollanders, wherefore, we fearing some of our men might be flaine in stead of them; wee began to thinke how wee might make our selves knowne from the Hollanders.

And now the feuenteenth of November drawing neere, the which wee held to be our Coro- digraced vs. 30 nation day, (for at that time, nor the yeare following, we knew no other) we all futed our felues Nouemb. 17. in new apparell of filke, and made vs all Scarfes of white and red Taffata, beeing our Countrie thereby a dif-Colours, Alfo we made a Flagge with the red Croffe through the middle, and because wee that firence made were the Merchants would be knowne from our men, we edged our Scarfes with a deepe fringe betwix vs. of gold, and that was our difference. Our day being come, wee fet vp our Banner of Saint George, vpon the top of our house, and with our Drumme and Shot wee marched vp and downe within our owne ground, being but fourteene in number, wherefore we could march but fingle one after another, and so plied our Shot, and casting our selues in Rings and Estes. The Sabindar and diuers of the Chiefest of the Land, hearing our Peeces, came to see vs and to enquire the cause of our triumph, we told them, that that day feuen and fortie yeare, our Queene was crowned, wher-40 fore all English men, in what Countrey focuer they were did triumph on that day, Hee greatly commended vs for having our Prince in remembrance in fo farre a Countrey. Many others did aske vs, why the English men at the other house did not so : wee told them , that they were no English men, but Hollanders, and that they had no King, but their Land was ruled by Gouernors. Some would replie againe, and fay they named themselves to bee Englishmen at first, and therefore they tooke them to be English men, but wee would tell them againe, they were of another Countrey nevre England, and spake another Language, and that if they did talke with them now, they should heare they were of another Nation. The multitude of the people did admire to fee fo few of vs deliuer fo much flor, for the Iswans and Chinees are no good flot. In the after noone I caused our men to walke abroad the Towne, and the Market, whereby the people so might take notice of them, and the red and white Scarfes and Hat-bands made such a showe, that the Inhabitants of those parts had never feene the like, so that ever after that day, wee were knowne from the Hollanders, and many times, the children in the streets would runne after vs, crying, Oran Engrees bank, oran Hollanda Iahad, which is, the English men are good, the Hollanders are naught. Generall Warnicke went for Patanea, and from thence to China.

The fixt day of December came in two ships, which some fix moneths before he had sent thither, who comming under the Hand of Machen, found a Carracke there riding at an anchor, bee- A Carrier ing full laden with raw Silks, Muske, and divers other costly wares, readie to depart, and at that taken, time, her men were almost all ashoare, so that they tooke her without any resistance, or very little, they laded their two ships and the rest they set a fire, so that there was by their owne re-60 port twice to much borntas they brought away. Comming backe they met with a great luncke of Syon, with whom they fought and killed threescore and foure men. They had some slaine and hurt also, but when they had taken her, and knew her to be of Syon, they let her goe againe, because they had or shortly meant to send Factors there, the Captaine of the Iuncke was slaine, who they fay, when they haled him would not tell them of whence he was, and when they bad

CHAP. 4. S.4.

him strike. Answered that he would not for neuera Saile that swamme in the Sea. The Flemmings not knowing Muske fold great store to certaine of Iapan , which they met with at Sea for little

About this time the Protector sent to mee divers times to lend him two thousand pieces of eight, and if not two thouland, a thouland, but I put him of, telling him we were left there with goods but no money. Alforhat the people of the Countrey ought vs much, the which we could not get in, likewife that as yet we had bought but little Perper, wherefore we must buy all wee could to get lading against we expected our ships. The Flemmings that came in so rich from Mac. kow, had so bribed him, that now he began to harken to them concerning the building of a faire

The fixt of February we lost one of our Company Robert Wallis, and many more of our men Danger by were licke and lame, which camely the heate of the Pepper in milling and shuting it, to that eheate of Pepuer after wee were forced to hire Chines to doe that worke, and our owne men to ouer-fee them

The fixteenth of February, came in a great ship of Zeilan from Pariary, but five or fixedayes before her comming, the fent in a small Slup or Pinnace, willing their Factors to buy vp all the Pepper they could, which made vs thinke that Generall Warnicke, with all his shippes was comming to lade there, wherefore we bought vp all that wee found to bee good and merchantable. For the Chinees spoiled much with water and durt, because the Flemmings refused none, and it is of a certaine, the Chinees bought one of another, and fold it to the Flemmings agains at the fame price they bought it, and yet they would gaine ten Ruls of eight in a hundred lackes, by putting in water and durt, for were it neuer so bad, they knew their Chapmen, and blow which way the wind would, they had shipping to come thither, either from the East or from the Wett, in so much that one would have thought they meant to carrie away the Pepper growing on the Trees, Mountaines and all. The people there hearing our Countries are cold, have asked vs if wee beat buying so much Pepper in our Morter, that we playster our wales with to make our houses warme. This ship hade taken much good purchase, but they sware those Englishmen they had with them, and also charged them upon lefte of their wages, they should tell vs nothing, which we tooke very vnkindly.

There was at this time three houles of Flemmings, and all lay for feuerall accounts, and bought vp Pepper every one fo much as they could get. The fift of March, the Protector fent to mee in 49 the Kings name to berrow a thouland Rials of eight, wherefore I was forced to lend them fue hundred, or elfe they would have fallen out with me, the which the Flemmings would have beene glad to have feene. About this time, there came in a Iuncke from Iore, with certaine Flemmings in it, who fole aaway with their goods, because I ore had a long time beene belieged by the Portugals of Malacco, so that they of the Towne could hardly looke out. They faid the Portugals offered the King of Ine peace, upon condition hee wo. Id deliner those Flemmings that were there into their hands, or kill them himselfe, to the which the King answered, that hee would first lose his Kingdome. In the beginning of this moneth of March, and to make an end of this old and wonderfull yeare, 1602. We had two great fires on the other lide of the water which did much spoile, but God bee 50 thanked the wind alwayes fauoured vs.

And now to begin the new yeare 1604. my Pen affoords to speake of little else, but Murther, Theft, Warres, Fire and Treason, and first to begin with a Tragedie. We had a Malato of Peguin our house, which our ships brought from Achen, and in the great ship that came lately from Pattania, there was one of his Country men, who on Sunday being the eight of Aprill, had gotten a bottle of Wine, and brought it a-shore to make merry with our Molato. In the afternoone, they walke abroad, met with the Prouost of their ship, who bid their Molato get him a-boord, but he answered he would not yet, whereupon the Prouoft strooke him, our Molant feeing his Country-man mil fed and being fomewhat tickled in the head with wine, which hee did feldome vie to drinke, thought he would revenge his Country-mans quarrell, wherefore hee 60 presently came home, and the evening being come, he tooke a Rapier and a Target, and with his Cryfe at his backe went forth. And because at that time there was much quarrelling and brabbling betweene the Lawans and the Flemmings, I charged our men, that if they were fent out in the cuening about any bulinefle, they should take their Weapons with them, for feare some la-or nothing. After they had ipent some fortie dayes in Bantam, and their Mariners, some wickedly and some vainly confirmed their pillage, (which was great) upon the feuenteenth of Ianuary they set saile from thence, being foure ships in company there. One had laded at Bantam, and one that some two monethes before came from China; and had spent foure yeares out of their Countrey, of which time, they had beene fourteene monethes at Cachinchina, where they at their first comming were betrayed, and their Captaines taken Prisoners, whom they made kneele on their knees foure and twentie houres, having their neckes bare, and one standing with a sharpe

Sword readie to have throoken off their heads when the word should bee given. They bare them 10 downe to be men of Warre and Spyes, and no Merchants. These Dutchmen were Papists, wherefore in the end the Portugall Friers faued their lines, and afterwards they were kindly vied . but their ranfome cost them deare.

chimis disho-

Engl finnen with the Hollanders

A luncke from

Anno, 1 6 0 4.

Dangers by a

Crueltie and Treasberie.

want, that knew them not might doe them a mischiefe in the darke, we thinking the Cooke had fent him into the Market for Herbes or something which hee wanted, mistrusted nothing. Also Needs must be there went out with him a Slaue of the Sabindars, which was borne and brought vp amongst the Spaniards at the Manelies. They meeting with the Prouoit, & the other Molato together, our Mo- Doubled and s. Lato beganne to quarrell with the Prouoft, and prefently out with his Cryfe, and stabd him, then This Story befearing his Countryman would bewray him, stabd him also and would have staine him that went curoa left it is out with him, had he not runne thorow a great Ditch, and so got from him, then meeting with foirke one a poore Ianan, and being nufled in bloud stabd him likewife.

There manner is that when a lauan of any account is put to death, although there bee a com- led both w 10 mon Executioner, yet the neerest of kinne doth execute his office, and it is held the greatest fa- lanani & ite. nour they can doe them. The Protectour would have twentie Rials of eight for the lanar whichwas flaine, and the Hollanders his life. And accordingly they came with a guard of fhot, might cauce a the fixteenth of Aprill, to his execution, which the Executioner performed with quickelt dil- third from the

The same evening their Vice-Admirall, having one ship more in company set sayle for Holland. The fourteenth day Thomas Tudd, the Companies chiefe Factor left there for Banda who Thomas Tudd had beene a long time ficke departed his life, so that of seven Factors left there for this place and dyeth. Banda, we were now but two living, and we had lost in all since the departure of our ships, eight men befides the Malato that was executed, and wee were now tenne huing and one Boy. The 20 twentieth day died lasper Gensbery, who was Admirall of the two ships that was betrayed at

The two and twentieth of Aprill, came in a great Iuncke from China, which was thought to Difficultie in be cast away, because she tarryed so late, for they vie to come in February and March, but by Sayles. reason of her comming, Cashis kept all the yeare at a very cheape rate, which was a great hinderance to vs, in the fales of our prize goods, for when Cashis were cheape, and Rials deare, wee could not vent a piece of stuffe at halfe the value we did at our first comming. Againe, the Chinois this yeare fent all the Rials they could get for China, wherefore we were forced to give them credit, or elfe we must lose the principall time of the yeare for our sales. Pepper the Flemmings had left none, but what was in our hands and the Sabindars, who would not fell for any reasona-30 ble price. Also our goods now began to grow old, and the colours of many forts began to vade, for the Ware-houses in that place are so hot and moyst, that although men take neuer so much paines in ayring and turning their wares, yet they will spoyle any fort of Cloth which shall lye long in them.

ð. IIII.

Treacherous underminings, with other occurrents.

Chines borne, but now turned lanan, who was our next neighbour, and kept a victuathose parts of the world, in flead of Wine, had two Out-houses, where his guests did vie to fit, and in the one hee vied to brew, which joyned to our pales, on the South fide of our house; but now he began another Trade, and became an Ingenor, having got eight Viultania Fire-brands of hell more to him, onely of purpose to set our house a fire. These nine deepe workers digged a Well in one of these houses, from the bottome of which Well, they brought a way the Eng-Mine, quite under the foundation of our houle: but when they came up to the Planckes or our life goods. Ware-house, they were at a stand, but before they could make this Mine, they were forced to dig a very deepe Well in their yard, to draw away the water which did abound in this Mine, 10 and because we should mistrust nothing, they planted Tobacco, and many other hearbs, hard by that Well, and would every day be watering of them : Alfo, we might heare them boyling of water energieday, but because they were Brewers, and had many tubbs to wash and to fill, wee mistrusted nothing of that ensued. When they came to these Plancks afore-named, they durit not cut them, alwaies for some of vs were walking ouer them, both night and day. After they had waited two moneths, and could never find opportunitie to cut the boords, they began to cast their Cerberous heads together how they should get in, but the Deuill set them wrong to work, for if they had continued thil, vntil they had come but croffe the ware-house opposite against them, they had found thirtie thouland Rials of eight buried in Jarres, for feare or fire, and also that Great danger.

roome was not boorded at all, to they might have come into the Ware-houfe, and had what they 60 fought for. Well, one of these wicked confortship being a Smith, and brought vp alwaies to worke in fire, told his fellowes he would worke out the plancks with fire, to that we should neuer heare nor fee him : and vpon the eight and twentieth of May, about ten of the clocke at night, they put to a Candle, and burnt a round hole through the boords. So foone as the fire came thorow, the Mats of our Packs tooke fire, which prefently spread, and began to burne; all this

quarre's cau-

CHAP. 4. § 4.

174 while we knew nothing, nor could perceive nothing, by reason of the elesentifie of the Warehouse, for all the windowes were plaistered vp, for feare of fire over-head. After the fift watch was out, wherein I was one my felte, the fecond watch finelt a ftrong funcke of fire, for it was by that time much increased, but they knew not where it should be , and searched every roome and corner. One remembred a Rats hole at laft, behind his Trunke, where he might plainly rerceiue the smoake to steame vp out of the hole. Then presently he came into my Chambal, and told me our Cleath Ware-house was a fire, I hearing this word fire, although I was fast alleepe, yet it was no need to bid me rife, neither was I long a flipping on my clothes, but prefertly ran downe and opened the doores, whereat came out such a strong smoake, that had almost strangled vs. This smoake, by reason it had no vent, was so thicke, that wee could not perceine where a- 10

bouts the fire was, and at that time we had two great lartes of Powder flanding in the Warehouse, which caused vs greatly to seare being blowne vp; yet setting all seare aside, we plucked all things off that lay on them, which felt in our hands verie hot: The Powder we got out, and carried it into our backefide, then we fearched boldly for the fire and found it; we lighted Candles, but the thicknesse of the smoake put them out, then we tied twelve great Waxe Candles together, and lighten them all, which continued alight : we plucked out packes to fast as wee could, but by reason of the heat and smoake which choaked vs, being so few as we were, could doe little good upon it : wherefore we let in the Chinois; then came in as well those that had done it, as others, hoping to get fome spoile. When I faw that these damined Chinois would doe vs little good, but rather harme, I was almost in dispaire, and basing at that time a thousand 20 pound in Gold, which I had received of Generall Hymskerke for Pepper, in my Cheftaboue staires, I ran up thinking to fetch it, and to throw it into a pond on our backe-side, but when I came to my Chamber doore, my mind altered, and I thought I would goe see once againe what might be done, and comming thorough our Hall, I chanced to cast mine eie into our dyning roome, which was right ouer the place where the fire was, where there were Chinois that had remoued the Table, and were breaking vp the Brickes of the Seeling; amongst which was our vnkind neighbour, which was the principall Actor; I bid them leave and g. t them downe, the

which they would not, vntill I began to let flie among ft them : when I had driven them downe, I went downe after them, and defired fome Merchants that flood by, with whom we had dealings, that they would vige the relt of the Chinois to help vs plucke out packes, promiting they 30 should be well paid for their paines : it pleafed God to put so much good in their minds, which

I thinke, neuer had any before nor tince, so that they fell to worke of all hands, and presently the roome was cleered, out of which came fiftie and odde packs, whereof fixteene were on a light fire. Thus by their help the fire was quenched, which they knew, and therefore would not worke any more, and the next day were paid for their worke, befides what they stole.

We wondered much how this fire should come, suspecting the Portugalls had hired Malayes Discouery of to doe it. But a certaine Chines, a Bricklayer, which wrought at the Dutch house, in the morning, told a Flemming that had beene long in the Country, that certaine Chinois had done it, which now were fled, and if we looked well in the roome, we should finde the manner how it was done. The Dutch-man told an English Surgeon what he had heard, and willed him to come and 40 tell vs. and he himfelfe, because he was perfect in the language, would go and inquire after them. The English Surgeon came to me, and defired me he might fee the roome where the fire was, I prefently called for a Candle, and thewed him the roome; he going to one corner, found a little bund hole, which was burned therough one plancke of the floore, whereat I put downe a long flicke which I had in my hand, but could feele no ground : then I called for an Axe, and as fortly as we could, we wrinched up the plancke, where under was a way, that the greatest Chest or Packe in our house might have gone downe, which when I law, as secretly as I could, I called three of our men, and went to the house from whence the Mine came, having our weapons. I set

one in the doore, and charged him he should let none come out, whatsoeder he were, and my felfe with the other two went in, where in one roome we found three men, there were two 50 more in another roome, who hearing vs, fled out at a backe doore, which we knew not of before we fee them; those three, after two or three blowes given, we brought away, one was a dweller in the houle, but the other two we could prove nothing against them: I laid them fast in Irons, and presently I sent Master Towerson to the Protector, to certific him how the case stood, and to decre him they might be fought out, and have Iuftice done upon them, which he promifed thould be done, but was very flacke in performance. The Dutch Merchants hearing we had taken some, and doubting the Chynois would rife against Mollanders vs, came very kindly with their weapons, and fware they would live and die in our quarrell: when we had laid out those goods that had received some water to ayre, then we examined this partie that dwelt in the house, who told vs the names of fixe that were fled, but hee would not con effe 60 that he knew any thing of it: also he said, the other two knew nothing of the matter, neither could be tell vs, as hee laid, whether the reft were fled. Then fearing him with an hot Iron, but not touching him, he confessed the whole manner of all, and that he did helpe; he faid, those two out-houses were built for that purpose at the first, although they put them to other vic, because we should not mistrust them; and more, that the myne was made two moneths before, in which time many nights before, they had been in the myne, ftriuing to get into our house, but

We tortured him, because when we had laid downe the yron, he denied all; but beeing tortu- Execution of red, made a fecond confession. The next morning I fent him to execution: as hee went out of our a china cheese gates, the lawans ( who doe much rejoyce when they fee a Chynefe goe to execution : as also the Chynois doe, when they fee a lanan gos to his death) resiled him, but hee would answer againe, saying, The English-men were rich, and the Chynois were poore, therefore why should they not steale from the English if they could. The next day, the Admirall tooke another of them, and

10 fent him to me, who knew there was but one way with him, and therefore refol ed with himfelfe not to confesse any thing to vs : he was found hid in a pryuie, and this was he that put the fire to our house; he was a Gold-smith, and confessed to the Almitall, he had clipped many Ryalls, and also covned some counterfeit: some things he confessed to him concerning our matter, but not much, but he would tell vs nothing. Wherefore because of his fullennesse, and that it was hee that fired vs, I caused him to be burned under the nayles of his Thumbes, Fingers and Toes, with Cruelltonufharpe hot yrons, and the nayles to be torne off, and because he never blinshed at that, we thought ring. that his hands and legs had been nummed with tying, wherefore we burned him in the hands, armes, shoulders, and necke, but all was one with him: then we burned him quite through the hands, and with raiphes of yron tore out the flesh and sinewes. After that I caused them to knock

20 the edges of his thin-bones with hot fearing yrons. Then I caufed cold ferues of yron to be ferued A diffolutereinto the bones of his armes, and fuddenly to be thatched out: after that all the bones of his fin- tolution. gers and toes to be broken with pincers; yet for all this he neuer shed teare, no nor once turned his head afide, nor ftirred hand nor foote; but when we demanded any queftion, he would put his tongue between his teeth, and strike his chin vpon his knees to bite it off. When all the extremitie we could vie was but in vaine, I caused him to be put fast in yrons againe, where the Amits or Ants, which doe greatly abound there, got into his wounds, and tormented him worse then we had done, as we might well fee by his gesture. The Kings Officers defired me he might bee shot to death; I told them that was too good a death for fuch a villaine, and faid more, That in our Countryes if a Gentleman, or a Soldiour had committed a fact worthy of death, then he was shot

30 to death, and yet he was befriended too, but they doe hold it to be the cruellest and bafest death that is. Wherefore they being very importunate, in the evening we lead him into the fields, and made him fast to a stake: the first shot carried away a piece of his arme, bone and all; the next shot Execution stroke him through the Breast up neete to the shoulder, then he holding downe his head, looked vpon the wound. The third that was made, one of our men had cut a ballet in three parts, which stroke upon his Breast in a triangle, whereat he fell downe as low as the stake would gine him leaves but between our Men and the Flemmings, they shot him almost all to pieces before they left him. Now in this time the Admirall, and the Sabyndar fent vs a guard of men every night, for feare the Chynois would rife against vs, but we seared it not, yet we kept foure of their men to be witnesses, that whatsoener we did, if they should rife, was but in curowne defence. The o-

40 ther two I let free. Another of them I obtained by a bribe, who confessed his associats, viz. Uniete the chiefe, Sawman his partner that dwelt in the house with him, Hynting, Omiepayo, Henfameon, Utee, which was shortly after crysted for lying with a woman, himselfe Boyby, Irrom, and Lackow, which were fled to lackatra: the which Irrow and Lackow I had never heard of before, I made all the meanes I could to get them, but I could not except I would have been at exceeding great charges, and there were others that belonged to some lanans, which were great men, and gerting into their houses, we could not get them: some of them did offer them to fell to vs, and wee did beat the price as one would doe about an Oxe or a Calte but they held them fo deare, that I durst not deale with them: I proferred them as much for energy one, as they might buy them another flaue 50 in their roomes, and some benefit, but they were so fit instruments for their purpose, beeing pra-

Ctifed in all villanie, that they would not part with them without a great fumme. For all the All the people lanans and Chynies, from the highest to the lowest are all villaines, and have not one sparke of naught. grace in them; and if it were not for the Sabindar, the Admirall and one or two more, which are Clyn-men borne, there were no living for a Christian amongst them, without a Fort, or very ftrong house all of bricke or stone. This Boyhoy we tortured not, because of his contession, but cry-

Amongst all other of the deuils Instruments here upon earth, there was one of the Kings bloud, A noble silvers called Panggranman delicke, who kept one of those nine villaines in his house. One day he com- laine ming to our house to buy cloth, we defired him he would deliuer this fellow into our hands, pro-60 ming him that we would cause our Generall to give him thankes, and told him how good it would be for the Countrey, to roote out fuch v llaines as they were the answered again, That we should tell them so, that had the government of the Countrie in their hands, or cared for the good of the Countrey, for he did not. Some three or four daies he came to our house againe, and would have had me given him credit for fixe or feuen hundred Rialls of eight in cloth, but because Hymskerke.

CHAP.4.5.4.

and beeing at our gate, he looked backe vpon our house, and said, It was pity but it should bee burnt againe. Also he would have had a Chynese that we had some dealings with, to have helped to some Chynois that dwelt neere vs, to undertake the firing of our house againe. Hee beeing a man generally hated of all for cruelty that he had done, the Chynois teld vs what he faid: where-Miferable goand I faw it, for the King and the Gouernour, had fent to him often times, to deliuer vs that fel-

A woman Rollen.

The beat of Pepper in those parts.

A merry leaft. he preferrly fwore, A woman: I ran downe, and caused her to be searched and examined present-regard to it in the night. This being a fit place for her to hide her in; get behind the decre, so 20 farre as she could stand for heat, and her husband would have sought all Iana and Chyna, before he would or durft come thither to feeke. In the night after our watch was fet, one of our Company went into our backfide, the which place we did very much frequent night and day; but as he was comming backe, and beeing a little starre light, he saw the woman stand in the Pepper house our pales, and to hide her telfe. It is an ordinary thing for the Chines to beate their Wives, especially she being a Cuchinchyne woman, which had no friends in Towne, for the lanant will hardly fuffer them to beat their wo- 10 men wherefore now having fearched and fecured every place, I thought it would prove but fome fuch left. The next morning her husband came, who falling downe on his marie-bones, defired me to be good vnto him, for I having so lately torqued some Chines, he thought I would torture him : But in my confcience he needed no more plague or punishment then iuch a Wife, wherefore I prefently difmifled them both. The Protector, a little before had given vs, all the houses and ground which joyned to our pales, and belonged to those Chynnis, which vincermined our house, but although it were given, yet I thinke, there was neuer English-man paid so deere for so little ground, in any Countrey in the world: the houses were rotten, but the ground did vs great pleasure. We bought also a house of a Pingran, or Gentleman, which came to neere our Pepper-houle doors, that it was verie troublefome to vs. when wee flould carry in or out our Pepper, wherefore I bought that houle 40 with the ground, so that now we had a very spacious yard.

The ninth of September, the Protector fent a Proclamation, that no Chines should weigh any Pepper to the strangers, meaning the English and the Hollanders : the which Proclamation was procured by the Hollanders, and we knew it very well, for the same day they dined with vs, and at dinner they told vs, the Protector owed them ten thouland facks of Pepper, but I told them that was not fo, for they would neuer be fuch feoles to truth him fo much. The next morning, I went to the old woman, who commands the Protector, and all the reft, and indeed is called Queene of the Landby the Sabindar, and divers others, although the bee not of the Kings blood, but onely for her wisedome, is held in such estimation among the of all serts, that the 40 ruleth, as if the were foly Queene of that Country. After we had made our griefes knowne to her, the presently sent for the Protector, willing vs to talke with him before her: when he came, I demanded of him, for what cause he had forbidden vs to Trade; he answered, he must buy ten thouland tacks of Pepper for the King, I told him againe, that the Flemmings themselves told me, that the Pepper he would buy was for them, and that he owed them ten thouland lackes. Many shifts he vied, but the Queene our constant friend faid, he should not hurt vs. For the Estantial landers, when they faw they could get no trading with the people for Pepper, then they deliuered the Protectour money, and wrought with him, as I have before sehearied : and if we had had but ten thousand Rials of eight, more then we had, the Flemmings should have got little Pepper that yeare in Bantam. It is most certaine, they are very much hated there, and what 60 they doe or procure, is for feare of their shipping, wherein they doe abound in all those parts. The twelfth of September, the Protector lent Rials vp and downe amongst those that were dealers in Pepper. In the Kings Name, some to serue him an hundred sackes, some fittie sackes, fome ten, fome hue, as it were a begging, and indeed he tooke it vp at the Kings price, which he was a man not to be trufted, I excused the matter, saying, That I looked enery day for our Ships. and that I could deliuer no goods, but I must have Pepper presently, whereby I might have lading readie. After he had beene very earnest, and faw he could not preuaile, he went out very angry, fore I would presently have gone to the Court to have complained of him; but many wished me not to doe fo: for they faid, He was a desperate villaine, and cared neither for King nor Protector. but if we brought him to that open shame, he would doe vs a mischiefe whatsoeuer came of it: Ie low he had, but he cared not for them. Shortly after, we had many shrewd attempts to have fired our house: for the towne was fired in three places at one instant in the night, a little to wind-Oftentreche- ward of our house, and twice another night, but God bleffed our industry and preserved vs. Amongst all these forrowfull and troublesome discourses, it happened that a certaine Chynoic which dwelt hard under our pales, did steale away another Chynies wife, and being hardly pursued by her husband, they had no meanes to shift her away, but to put her ouer the pales into our ground. And at that time we having newly flot much Pepper into our Warehouse, which was io extreame hot, that we were forced to keepe the doore open night and day, having alwayes a doore, who came forth to take breath, for the had been better to haue been in the stoues so long:

ly; She told vs that her husband would have beat her, wherefore fire was forced to climbe over was 4. a Riall in a facke leffe then we paid. The Chines with much grudging ferued him, a while after he feta taxe vpon them to serue him so much more; then the Chines railed vpon the Protector, and the Hollanders both, and many of them would not receive their Money, but the Officers would throw it downe in their houses, and take their names.

The affected of September, by meanes of an old Trot, which was making of Candles, the Townewas fet on fire, the which confumed all the vpper worke of our three houles, to our exceeding great danger, cost and trouble: The Sabindar came to vs in the tumult, also the Admirall, who had charge of the Court, in the Kings and Gouernors ablence, then in progresse, sent vs a great traine of his principall men; likewife, one of the Kings Vnckles came to vs with a 10 great number, and also the rich Chyha, with a very great crew. All these came to see that no body should offer vs any violence, for they knew well we had enemies of great force, but not for our takes, but for our goods. Now we were laid open to all our enemies, for our fence for the most part was burnt to the ground, and we had not a place to dreffe our victuals in , yet as good fortune was, we had one little thed in the middle of our yard, which was our Court of Guard, that eleaped, where we incamped by night. The Dutch house escaped, though but narrow- Dutch enemics ly, wherefore we borrowed fome of their men For it is to be noted, that though we were mortall intrade, other enemies in our Trade, yet in all other matters we were friends, and would have lived and dyed wifefriends. one for the other. Alfo the Admirall and Sabindar fent vs men energy night, so that we with our Drum, Shot, and Pikes, lined a Souldiers life, vntill our fence was made vp, and afterwards too.

20 For this was but to frew vs the way; and our fence was no fooner vp, but wee looked euerie houre when it should be burnt downe, or borne downe by those that would have had the cutting The Pangrus Mandelicke in the end of September, fell to robbing of Juncks, one of which was of Int, laden with Rice, Men and Women: with a great crew of villaines, his Slaues , he feazed on the Juncke in the night, and carried away all the Rice, with the Men and Women as his prisoners. The which was the next way to keep away all other luncks, which yied to bring victuals withe Towne, whereby to ftarne them all, for that land is not able to ferne one quarter of the people that are in it. The King and his Protectour fear to him, commanding him to deli- Anarchy world wer the people and goods which he had taken, the which hee would not, but presently fortified then yearny. 30 himselfe. Also the reft of the Pangrames that were of the Kings blood, and his, but being all many grants traytors to the King, maintained him; fo that the Kings Officers durit, not meddle with him. The Protector, Sabinlar, and Admirall, fent to vs to take fixed to our lelues, the Rebels grew euery day ftronger and ftronger, and all the people in the Countrey, and alto ftrangers began to be in great feare. I was forced to borrow fome small Ordnance of Chyna Merchants, which were our friends, and with Chaines and Bulhes to fortifie our selues, and our men were besides euerie day, a making of Chaine-ihot, Langrall-shot, and Crosse-barre-shot. All Trade of Merchan-Dingerous dife was laid afide, neither did any in the Towne looke after buying and felling : And every day, we should have the Rebels espyals would come into our yard, who would be very inquisitive, what, and wherefore those were, which our men were all so hard at worke vpon, wee would 40 plainely tell them, that we looked every night for fuch a mans comming, wherefore we made prouision for his entertainment.

ominon for mis enternaments.

About the twentieth of October, came in the King of Incarra, with a crue of fitteene him-sing of Incarra.

About the twentieth of October, came in the King of Incarra, with a crue of fitteene him-sing of Incarra. dred fighting men, befides straglers, and had a thouland more comming after. Hee challenged the Rebels, and likewise the Pangranes to fight with him and his Company only: hee had indeed a a great quarrell against them all, forbut a little before, they fought meanes to put him out of his Kingdome, but the Rebels keepe their fortification, and would not come out. The like and twentieth of October, the King of Incarra, and the Admirall fent for vs, to know if there were no meanes to fire them a reasonable distance off, out of the reach of their Baces, of which they had a great number. We told them if there had beene a ship in the Road, it might easily have bin 30 done, but for vs to doe it, we thought we should hardly find things wherewithall. The Admirall asked me what things we would have, I told him Camphire, Sait-peeter and Brimstone; as for fome things we had alreadie. The Admiral faid he would helpe vs to all thefe, and defired vs wee would helpe them: also he had a long Bow and Arrowes, fit for such a purpose, but I thinke a Musket had beene better. We were minded to have caufed the Kings Ordnance to have beene planted, and to have shot red hot Bullets among st them, which I thinke would have made perullous worke, both with them and their Thatched houses, and fortifications made of Canes. The principall Rebell had fought all the meanes he could to fire vs, now we meant verily to fee if we could he him: but whether it was for feare of the King of Iacatra, or hearing wee were about fuch a matter: The Pangranes and the Rebels, both came to an agreement within two dayes af-60 ter, the which agreement was this, that the principall Rebell should within six dayes depart out of the King of Bastams Dominion, having with him only thirtie of his houshold, the which hee did. For the space of tendayes, we looked every houre, both night and day when the Kings Forces and the Pangranes would soyne battle, for they were both readie: but the lamans are verse strucs cause loth to fight if they can chuie; the reason they say is, their wealth Iveth altogether in Slanes, fo of not Sphing that if there Slaues be kild, they are beggered, wherefore they had alwayes rather come to a fetfeail, then a pitched Battell.

The olde

The Oucene ter her death.

The feuenteenth day of Nouember, which we tooke to be our Coronation day, and having renowned af- all our Peeces and Chambers lying laden fince the troubles, we inuited the Flemmings to Dinner, in the middle of Dinner we dranke a Health to our Queene, and also shot off all our Ordnance.

There refort to this Towne of Bantam a number of many Nations, the which divers of them are Liegers. These people having heard much fame of the English Nation in times past, before euer they faw any of vs, had an especiall eye to our carriage and behaulour, and wee were growne a common admiration among ft them all, that wee being fo few should carrie such a port as wee did, neuer putting vp the least wrong that was offered by either lauans or Chinees, but alwayes 10

Englifbrefolu-

did Justice our selues, and when the Protector did wrong vs himselfe, it was knowne that wee did not spare to tell him of it foundly, and in such fort that he wanted very much of his will. It is well known e alfo, that at the first comming of our ships, the lawns offered vs much wrong, in purloyning our goods, but so many as we tooke, were either slaine, wounded, or soundly beaten: the lauans thought we durft not doe fo, when our ships were gone, wherefore they did practife to fleale both day and night, but they found it all one, the which they did admire at, for it is most certaine, and I have heard many Strangers speake it, that have beene present when wee have beaten some lauans that they never knew or heard of any Nation but vs, that were Liegers there, that durst once strike a lauan in Bantam, and it was a common talke among all Strangers and others, how we flood at defiance with those that hated vs for our goods, and how little wee cared 14 for them. Likewise, how we neuer offered any wrong to the meanest in the Towne, and also how we were generally beloued of all the better fort: they would fay, it was not so with the Flemming, nor with no other Nation. And all the while I was there . I never heard, that ever the Flemmings gaue a lauan fo much as a box on the care, but many times fowle of the Chiness. who will very schome make any resistance, yet it is of truth, they are mortally hated, aswell of all forts of Lawner, as Chineet.

Now every day they looked for their shipping, and having little Pepper, nor knew not where to buy any, for the Chinees would fell them none, to long as we would give as much as they And more then that; for when all our Rials was layd out, some of them fold ws Pepper to bee paid when our thips came, not, knowing when they would come, nor we neither at that time, but as is we gueffed. If they would have goes to the Flammings, they might have had readie money, and great thankes. They therefore bought what they could by rerayle in the Markets, fending it to Chinefirand. 2 Chinefes houle by Boate in the evening, but the charge confumed the gaine. About this present time, the Emperour of Danack, who not many yeares before for tyrannie had beene deposed by the Kings teereabouts, going by Sea from Baniam, to another Towne vpon the Coast, was by one of his sonnes stabd in his Bed sleeping. The Chineses will mingle vitally their Pepper in the night if you leave it with them, or put in dust, or transport it, and wethould be fure to find that which wee had not liked, at one mans yefleriay, now in another mans house, a good distance off, and the next night after at another house, as who should say, it was another parcell, and the olde Ware-house where it lay first 40 should be shut, or a parcell of better Pepper in it.

In November, and the beginning of December, we were busied both in building and getting Q. alia, death in, and making cleane of Pepper, the fourteenth of December, came in a Durch Pinnalle, who told vs of the death of our late Queene, and of the great Plague and Sicknesse, that had beene ouer all Christendome, which strooke more terrour to our mindes, then all the troubles weehad paffed, but they could tell vs no newes of our fhips, which canfed vs much to doubt, only they told vs, the King of Scots was crowned, and that our Land was in peace, which was exceeding great comfort vnto vs, also they told vs of the peace that was likely to be betwixt England and Spaine. In all the Duich Fleet, and because we heard of no Letters for vs in the Pinnaste, I made halte, and went aboord the Dutch Admirall to bid him welcome, also to enquire for Letters, the 30 which we found in their Vice-Admirall. The two and twentieth of December, by meanes of Principal Mi. fome of our friends, Visite that was the principall that undermined our house, being described and taken, having beene long in the Mountaines, and for want of food, was forced to repayre to certaine houses neere the Towne, from whence he was brought to the rich Chinas house, to some as I heard of him, I fent Malter Tewer fon to the Protector to certifie him of it, and withall to tell him, we would hortly execute him, for fince the time that this mischiefe happened, I neutr went out of fight of our house my felfe, but once, vntill our ships came in , the which once was when the Protector crossed vs, so that then I was constrayned, and my feare was so great, that I thought all would be burnt, before I should come backe againe, likewise three times every weeke, I vied to fearch all the Chinees houses round about vs, for feare of more undermining.

CHAP.2. S.5. Capt. Middleton, and Capt. Colthrust. Much fickenesses

ð. V.

Generall Middletons arrivall, the sickenesse and death of many. Quarrells twist Ours and the Hollanders, begunne by Captaine Severson, a Dutchman, and the King of Bantams circumcifion, and pompous Triumphes.

HE same day towards Euening, we descried our Ships comming into the Road, to all English ship-cour extraordnaring great togs, but when we came aboord of our Admirall, and sawe ping, ome, and their weakeneile, alio hearing of the weakenesse of the other three ships, it griened vs their weaknes. much, knowing that Bantam is not a place to recouer men that are ficke, but rather to Bantam vnkill men that come thither in health. At my first comming aboord, I found our General, Captaine healthfuil. Henry Middleton, very fickly and weake; to whom I made relation in briefe what troubles we had Hong Middle paffed; also I certified him neuertheleste, we had lading realy for two ships, which was some content vnto his mind, very much grieved for the weakenesse of his men. They had hardly siftie found men in their foure ships, and of the ficke men a number died. Also of those that came thither in health, many neuer went out of the Road. The four e and twentieth day, our Vice-Admirall, Captaine Coulthurst came a shore, with Captaine Colfome other Merchants; on which day we executed this Villaine which we had lately taken. Ha- thruft, 20 uing now flaine the fourth principall, and one more was kild for flealing of a woman; at my comming away there remained four aline, of which, two were at lacatra, one with Mandelicko the traytor, and one with Cay Sanaparty Lama, which we could not as then come by. The fame day, our Vice-A lmirall beeing accompanied with vs there refident before, and also fome other of the newe Merchants, went to the Court to certifie the King, that our Generall had Letters from the Letters from King of England, with a present for him, and more to tell him our Generall was weary, having King lames. been long upon the Seas, and so soone as he was a little refreshed, he would come himselfe to see him, and also to deliuer the Letters, and the Present.

The fine and twentieth, being Christmas day, we dined aboord our Generall: but I should have spoken before of a Counsell that was holden on Sunday, being the three and twentieth day, 30 wherein it was thought of all, that the Dragon, and the Afterfion were fittest to goe for the Dragon sent to Moluccos, for divers reasons which need not here be rehearted; and the Heltor, and Susan to lade the Moluccos. Pepper, and to be dispatched home. And the same weeke after, we were busied in getting of fresh Mensicke of victuals, Herbs, Fruits, and Flowers, for the recourry of our men, which were most pitiful- the Scorbute. ly payed with the Scuruy.

The one and thirtieth day, our Generall came on shore, and beeing accompanyed with all the Marchants that were in health, and divers others, he went to the Court, and delivered the Kings Letters and Prefent, the which were as followeth: One faire Bason and Ewre, two faire stan- Presento the ding Cups, all parcell-gilt, one gilt ipoone, and fixe Muskets with their furniture: the which Eng. were kindly received. Aday or two after our General ipent in viliting our chiefest friends, as the 40 Sabindar, the Admirall, the rich Chynois, and alto game them Prefents, who very thankfully receitted them. After this we fell all to worke, both ashore and aboord, to packe vp, and take in gools for the Molecos: but after our men were a little recovered of the Souruy, the Fluxe forcees them, so that we continued shill very weaks in men, in someth, that it was propositely in the source of the source them, so that we continued still very weake in men, in so much, that it was empossible in mans bute. judgement, that ever we should be able to accomplish our businesse in that manner. On Monday, being the feuenth of Ianuary, the Dutch fleet, being nine tall Ships, befides Pinnaces and Slupes, let layle for Amborna, and the Moluccos, fo that we rested very doubtfull a long time, whether our ships should get any lading in those parts that yeare, by reason of their number of shipping which was gone before ours. Neither could our Ships possibly goe sooner, by meanes of our weakenedle.

The tenth of lanuary, the ships that were bound home, began to take in Pepper, but they Muchsicknesse, were so oppressed with sickenesse, that they could make no dispatch. The eighteenth day, our shippes having taken in all the goods which we thought meet for those parts, fet sayle for the 1- The Alexion lands of Banda, having their men for the most part extreame weake and ficke: but how they inn to Banda, spent their time vntill their returne to Bantam; I must referre to their owne reports. Presently after the departure of these thips, the protector tent vinto vs to agree about Cultome, the which we had thought we had known tince our first shipping departed, but he asked many duties, which we never heard of before, & because I would not grant to pay the, he comanded the Porters they should carry no Pepper: wherfore to preuent that this should not be a hinderance to vs in lading

60 our ships (for we had hinderance enough betides) I was forced to agree with him, to pay in hand according to that rare as our ships paid before, and to let the full agreement rest vittill the returne of our Generall, and he thought he did vs great kindnele herein. It pleased God to take away Deathosmany the two Masters of these two ships which we were now a lading, Samuel Spencer, Master of the Heltor, and Habbabuck Pery, Matter of the Sufan. Allo William Smith, the principall Matters mate of the Heltor, and foone after Captaine Styles, with many other of their principal men. with a number of their ordinarie faylers, so that we were not onely constrained to lure men to doe them all the case we could there, but likewise to hire to many as we could get of Goofferates and Chynois to helpe bring home our thips, to our exceeding great cost and charges. With much turmoyle, we got them both laden, by the fixteenth of February, but it was the fourth of March, before they could make their thips ready to fet fayle.

Meffor and Su-England.

The fourth of March, the Hetter and Sufan iet fayle for England, having fixtie three persons in the Heltor of all forts, English and others, but many of her owne men beeing ficke. The Sulan fo neere as I could learne, had forty seuen of all forts: also many Englishmen ticke, I pray God send vs good newe of her, William Crane being Matter of the Heiter, and Richard Hacknefe, Matter of 10 the Sufan.

The fixt of May, came in a thip from Holland, who had come all along by the Coast of Goa. and meeting there with two this more of Holland, which were bound out for Cambaya, they three had taken foure Portugall thips, wherein they found great riches, onely one of them was laden with great horses, which they set on fire, and consumed both ship and horses. This ship came out of Holland in lune, 1604. but they could certifie vs of no further newes, then our own fhips had done. Their Captaines name was Corneliu Syverson, who was a very proud Boore, and had neither wit, manners, honefty, nor humanitie, prefently after whose comming in, the Flem. mings withdrewe their tamiliaritie, which they were wont to hold with vs, and that as wee thought, by Generall Warwicks charge to them.

Captaine Syverjon firft breachbetwint Hollanders and Eng-Circumcifion of the King of

But now I will leaue this contemner of curtefie and hater of our Nation, with his rafcall crue which he brought with him, and speake somewhat of the manner and order of the Kings Circumcifion, and of the Trumphes that were held there every day, for the space of a moneth and more before his going to Church, whereby all the better fort of that Country had beene buffed, from the time of the comming in of the Chyna Iuncks, which is in February and March, vntill the foure and twentieth of Iune, about making preparation. There was a great Pageant made, the forepart of which was in likenesse of an huge deuill, vpon this Pageant was set three chaires of State, the middlemost was for the King, which was placed higher then the other by some two foote, on either of his hands were placed the fonnes of Pangran Goban, who is heire apparant to the Crowne, if the King should die without issue. This Pageant was placed on a greene before 10 the Court gate, and rayled in round about. The manner of their Countrey is, that when any King comes newly to the Crowne, or at the Circumcifion of their King, all that are of abilitis must give the King a prefent, the which they must prefent in open manner, with the greatest shew they are able to make. And those that are not able to doe it of themselues, doe ioyne a Company of them together, and so performe it, both strangers and others. About the five and twentieth of Iune, there shewes began, and continued all that moneth, and the next, except certaine raine dayes. The Protector began himfelte the first day, and eucry Noble man, and others had their dayes, not as they were in birth, but in readinesse, and sometimes two or three Companies in a day. Because the lanans are no good shot, the Protector borrowed shot both of vs and the Flomcay. Decaute the small step good most sixed reference between the both of shade the emings; when they came to let forth, there was a great fittie whether floud goe fore-most, they contemning our paucity, and ours their fordindede. Our menwere in near apparell, with feartes 10 contemning our paucity, and ours their fordindede. and coloured hat-bands; they in thrumbed greafy caps, tarred coates, and their shirts (if they had any) hanging betwixt their legges. Ours went therefore in the rereward, refuling to follow next Every morning the Kings guard, which were both shot and pykes, were placed without the rayles round about the Pageant, been g commonly in number, about three hundred men but some principall dayes of shewes, there was vpward of fixe hundred, the which were placed in files ac-The difference cording to our martiall discipline. But in our march we doe much differ: for whereas wee commonly march, three, fue, feuen, or nine, they neur goe but one, and to follow one another to close as they can, bearing their pykes right vpright. As for that they have not beene vsed vnto. 50 Their drummes are huge pannes made of a mettall called Tombaga, which make a most hellish found. They have also their Colours and Companies sitable, but their Standerds and Ancients are not like ours: their Ancient staffe is very high, bending compasse at the top, like the end of a long Bow, but the Colours on it is har, ly a yard in breadth, hanging downe from the top with a long pendant. The fift day beeing the greatest day of shew, there were certaine forts made of Canes, and other trash, fet vp before the Kings Pageant, wherein were certaine lanans placed to defend them, and other companies were appointed to affault them, and many times the aliaylants would fire them; but full when the lauans were at it in iest with their pikes, our men and the Flemmings were at it in earnest with their shot, and were forced to march apart. The Prote-Gor perceiuing it, fent to them, defiring both parties to be quiet, whereupon they were quiet for 60 that day. The next time we saw their Marchants, which was that Euening, Lasked one of them if he thought Halland now were able to wage warre with England, that there should be such equalitie between their men and ours, to ftrine who should goe foremost? And likewise weereld them all, that if Englipmen had not once gone before, their Nation might have gone behind all

Nations of Christendome long agoe: but they would answer that times and seasons doe change, Deteb increase and without doubt the greater multitude of them here, doe hold themselves able to withstand a rude & Pride ny Nation in the world: but I can fay nothing of the opinion of their States at home, and of the in many La nier fort. Now a word or two in what manner the King was brought out enery day, and what shewes the fault is not were presented before him : Alwaies a little afore the shewes came, the King was brought out (those) Natiovpon a mans thoulders, bestriding his necke, and the man holding his legs before him, and had nalbur Per.omany rich ty. afoles carried ouer and round about him: his principall Guard came out before him, mail, thau modified me and were placed within the railes, round about the Pageant. After the King came out, a number Authors file, 10 of the principall of the land, which gave their attendance vpon the King, as it should feeme, and left out they had their dayes and times appointed them. The showes that were brought, came in in this some bather manner: First, acrue of shot beeing led by some Gentleman-slaue, after followed the pikes, in censures, seast the middle of which was carried their colours, and also their mulique, which was ten or twelve Puession.

CHAP.4. $ 5. The King of Bantams pompe and presents.

The Kines pannes of Tombaga, carried vpon a coulifaffe betweene two; thele were tuneable, and euery one triumphall a note about another, and alwayes two went by them which were skilfull in their Country mu- pompe, fique, and played on them having things in their hands of purpole to firike them, also they had the fhor. nduc, an payet in their maintenance and after, but thele pannes are the principall. Musicke.

After the pykes followed a crue of Targettiers with darts, then was brought in many forts of Darts.

Darts. trees, with their fruit growing vpon them, then followed many forts of beafts and foules both a- Trees, Beafts 20 live, and also artificially made, that except one had been enere, they were not to bee differned and Fowles.

from those that were aliue. After these followed a crew attyred like Maskers, which before the King did dance, vault, Dancers and and flew many frange kind of tumbling trickes, of thefe there were both men and women. Af- Tumblers, ter all there, followed sometimes two hundred, sometimes three hundred women, all carrying Prefents only at every tenth woman, there went an old motherly woman Souldier to keep them in order, which carryed nothing. These Presents were of Rice and Cashes, the which were layd in Presents. frames made of iplit Canes curioutly fet out for shew, with painted and gilded papers, but the present it selfe was not commonly worth about twelve pence or thereabouts. After them followed the rich presents, which was commonly a faire Tuck, and some fairer Cloth of their Coun-30 trey fashion, being curiously wrought and guilded, or imbroydered with Gold for the Kings cwn wearing, the which was carryed also by women haning two Pikes borne voright before them. Also every present which was for the Kings wearing, had a rich Tieratell borne over it. Last of haue any, being very richly attyred after their Countrey manner, with many lewels about their Heire, armes and middles, of Gold, Diamonds, Rubies, and other itones, having also rich Tieraloles borne ouer them, and a number of men and women attending on them; after hee hath done his obeyfance to the King, he fits downe vpon a Mat being lay I vpon the ground, which is their order in generall, the presents are all borne by the Kings Pageant into the Court, where there are some Officers appointed to receive them. After all which past, one within the Kings Pageant, 40 speakes out of the Deuils mouth, and commands filence in the Kings name, Then beginnes the chiefest of the Reuels and Musicke, and now and then the shot discharges a Voley. Also the Pike- Reuels. men and Targettiers with Darts doth shew all their seates of Armes: their shot is very viskilfull, but the Pikes and Targets are very expert, and alwayes when they come to charge their Enemie, they come towar is him dancing, because his Aduerlary shoul I have no steadie ayme to throw his Dart, or make a thruft at him. Likewife among it fome of these shewes there came Iunckes fayling, artificially made, being laden with Cashes and Rice. Also in these were figni. Iunckes and fications of Historicall matters of former times, both of the Old Testament, and of Chronicle Iunca.es.

matters of the Countrey, and Kings of lana. All thele Inventions the lanans have beene taught Histories. in former times by the Chinees, or at least the most part of them; for they themselves are but 50 Block-heads, and some they have learned by Gooffarats, Turkes, and other Nations which come

We brought a very faire Pomgranate Tree being full of fruit growing on it, both ripe, halfe English Preripe, some young, and some budded: this Tree wee digged up by the roots, which wee set in a tent. frame being made or Ratanes, or Carricke Rushes, somewhat like a B rds Cage, but very wide. At the roote of this Tree we placed earth, and upon that greene Turfes, so that it stood as it it Conies, Rivihad beene still growing; upon these Turfes we put three Silver-hayred Conies, which our Vice- ties in idea. Admirall had given me, and at the top, and round about upon the boughes, we with small threds made fasta number of small Birds, which would ever be chirping. Likewise, we had foure very furious Servents, which the Chinest there can make artificially, vpon these wee hung the Cloth 60 which was for the Kings owne wearing, which were fine pieces curiously wrought, and guilded after their falhion. Some other pieces of Stuffe there were also for the King to beltow upon some of his followers. More wee gave him a favre Peternell damasked, and a Cafe of Piffols damasked. with very fayrer Cases seuerally belonging to them, the which had great silke strings, with Tatfels of Gold. Now we had no women to carry thele things, wherefore we borrowed thirtie of all followed the Heire to that party which fent the presents, which is their yongest sonne, if they Yongest Sonne

The King and divers others about him tooke great delight in the Comies. Also our men carried fome Fire-workes with them, which were very rare matters to the young King and his playfellowes, but the women cryed out, for feare they would fet the Court a fire.

Pollanders Va-

The Flemmings gaue a present which they can easily bragge off, small matters, they doe not spare to bragge very much of their King, meaning Grane Maurice , whom they call in all these 10 parts at enery word Raia Hollanda. Much quarrell arose betwixt our men and them, the Flemmings in drinke still beginning and brazing, and viually getting the worst. I had much to doe to reftravne our men, which yet was necessary confidering wee had a great charge of goods, the charge of which lay vpon me. Also wee were but badly housed, and in a dangerous Countrey. likewife if we gaue them blowes, it was likely, a number of them would come vpon vs: we being but few could not defend our felues without shedding of bloud, the which would require reuenge. They were aboue a hundred men in the House, Ship, and Flye-boat, which (no doubt) would have come upon vs having fuch an occasion, and wee but thirteene in a Straw-house.

King of Iccatras pompe &

trary to our

The eighteenth of July, the King of Incatra came in to prefent his shew before the King of Bantam, also to give his present, and to doe his homage, the which was performed the three and 20 twentieth of July in this manner. In the morning early, the King of Bantams Guard (which was on this day an extraordinarie number) were placed in files, their Pikes let vpright in the ground, and their that lying in order, and every man fitting by his Armes, being clothed in red Coates, About eight of clocke my felfe with some other of our Merchants and men went to see this shew. and taking vp our standing neere the Kings Pageant, the Kings Guard would often bid vs sit downe, but we would answere, they must first bring vs a forme : for indeed there is no Nation fulfered to fland in the Kings or any great mans presence, if they be necre them. Wee and the Standing 1 to- Flenmings were commanded by the Officers to fit downe, as well as the rest, but wee were too ken of honour, frout (knowing they had no fuch Commission) to stoope under their yoke: but for other Nations they would bang them if they refuted, although the ground and place where they should fit were neuer fo durtie. But the lanans, who cannot indure to have any stand over them, would remove 30 miffion; cona good distance from vs, and many of the Kings Guard for socke their Weapons, and would goe fit afarre off, neither can they indure that one should lay his hand on their head, the which is not for any point of Religion, as some will affirme, but only of meere Pride. Many times, when I have come into a Chinees house, where I anans have fet in the floore, I fitting downe on a Cheft, as our order was, they have all flart up, and ranne out at doores: the Chinees would tell vs, if any other Nation should doe so, but we or the Hollanders, they would stab them, but they durft not But now to my former matter. About nine a clocke the King was brought out in the same

Many pettie

Cowardly

guard of some hundred persons about him: so some as ever hee came in fight, the Kings Guard all rose ve, and every man proved his Weapon, the which wee had never seene before when any fhew came in, to that it should feeme that there was great feare, not that the King of lacatra would offer any violence, but there was a number of other pettie Kings, who had great troupes of men, the which Kings were his mortall Enemies , wherefore fearing they might rife against him, we plainly perceived the King of Bantams Guard, had their charge to bee readie to defend the King of Iacarra, if such a matter should happen. When hee came neere the innermost file of the Kings Guard, he could not palle to the King but hee must needs goe thorow a ranke of these pettie Kings, whom he knew did most deadly hate him, wherefore fearing the cowardly stab. which is vied amongst that Nation, he began to looke very gastly, and wildly on it, although he so is as stout a man, as any is in all those parts: passe them hee would not, but sat downe, vpona Leather that was layed on the ground, the which every Gentleman hath carryed after him for that purpose. So soone as he was set, hee sent to the King, to know if it were his pleasure, hee should come vnto him, whereupon the King fent two of the principall Noblemen about him, to conduct him to his presence, and after the King of Iacatra had done his cheysance, the young King imbraced him, and welcommed him according to the Countrey order: after this the King of lacatra fat downe in a place appointed for him. All this while there was some other prettie fhewes presented.

manner, as I before have mentioned, some two houres after the King of Incatra came, having a 40

About twelve a clocke came his shew and presents. The Souldiers came in order as I have be-King of Isra- fore declared, being about three hundred in number, then followed to many women with Cathes 60 orers Presents. and strange Fowles both aline and artificiall, and likewise many strange beasts; amongst which was one furious beaft called by them a Matchan. This beaft is somewhat bigger then a Lion, and very Princely to behold if they be at libertie, they are spotted white and red, having many black ftreakes which came downe from the reines of his backe under his belly. I have feene one of them iump at the least eighteene foot, by many mens estimation for his pray. They doe kill ma- Matchan a ny people neere the Towne of Bantam, and many times the King and all the Countrey, goeth a fierce wild hunting of them, not onely in the day time, but in the night. This Matchan, which I now beaft. spake of, was in a great Cage of wood, which was placed upon Trucks of old carriages, and being drawne in with Buffels, he lay for all the world like a Traytor vpon a hurdle. There was drawne in like manner a huge Gyant, which by our estimation, might bee some thirtie soote in Ahuge Gyant height : also a Deuill came in, in like order : more there was drawne in a Garden having many and a douil forts of hearbs and flowers in it. In the middle of which Garden, was a Fift-pond, wherein was A garden and divers forts of small Fishes, and all forts of Fishes which they doe know in those parts, were fish pond-

CHAP. 4. S.6. Pageants at the Kings Circumcifion, Dutch fray.

10 brought in either aliue, or artificially made. Amongst these things, came in many Maskers, Maskers and Vawters, Tumblers, very strangely, and saluagiously attired, which did dance and shew many Tumblers. ftrange feates before the King. There was drawne in likewile a very faire bed-ftead, whereon was a faire quilted bed; also eleven boulfters and pillowes of Silke, embroidered with Goldat the ends. The potts of the bedtlead were very curioufly carned and gilded, with a faire Canopy wrought with Gold : A number of other pretty toyes, were brought in and presented. Last of all, came in his youngest sonne, riding on a Charlot, but it was drawne with Buffels, which mee A Charlot thought was very vulcemely. Indeed they have but few horfes, the which are small Nags. Ineuer faw any of them put to draw, but onely to ride on, and to runne at Tilt, after the Barbary Horfes few & fashion (as I have heard some Barbary Merchants say) which exercise they vie every Saturday not vied to 20 towards Euening, except in their time of Lent, which is a little before ours.

The fecond day after this show was presented, being Friday, and their Sabboth, the King was carried on his Pageant to Church, where he was circumcifed. His Pageant was borne by many King of Bantam men, it was reported to me by the Kings Nurse, foure hundred but I think she lied, for me thought circumcifed. there could not fland fo many vnder it.

The foure and twentieth of July, our Generall came into the Road from Ternata: fo foone as The Generals we discerned the shippe, and knew her to be the Dragon, I tooke a Praw and went abourd to bid returne from him welcome, who declared to me the dangers they had paffed, and also of the vikind dealings Ternala. which he had of the Hollanders, aloest he faued fome of their lives. Nevertheleffe, he told mee hee had (though with great paines and turmoyle) gotten a good quantitie of Cloues to-30 wards his lading, the which was good newes to vs, wherefore wee gaue God heartie thanks for all, especially that he had brought him thither agains in safetie, not doubting but within short time, we should be able to furnish him with the rest of his lading. The eight and twentieth day, came in the great Encuser of Holland from Ternare : Also the tame day the King of lacatra came

è. VI.

Further quarrels between the English and Dutch, with other accidents.

HE first of August in the afternoone, our Generall, and all the rest of the Merchants, being very butie in the Ware-houle, taking an Inuentarie of the remainder of prizegoods, and all other goods, there was word brought that the Flemmings had wounded English wountwo of our men, the which we faw come bleeding in at the gate. Our Generall commanded enery man to get him weapons, with all speed, and to lay them ouer the pates foundly, the which presently was performed: himselfe could find no weapon ready, wherefore hee tooke vp a barre of Iron, but finding that too heavy, he came into the streete onely with a finall Cudgell. The Flemmings were banged home to their owne gates, one was runne quite thorough the 50 body, what became of him we could not certainely tell, yet fome faid he escaped it, two more both their armes, the Merchants with divers others of their house came with shot. The Flemmillo Dutchmen Stif-Merchants came to our Generall, but hearing that their men began, they answered, that they had fied with their but their defarts : and after they had drunke a Cup of Wine, they kindly tooke their leave of our felloweste-Generall, and all the rest of the Marchants, and so departed. Newes was presently carried to ward. the Court, how the Flemmings and we were by the eares, and that there was two flaine. Some about the King, asked whether they were English or Flemmings, which were flaine; answer being made, that they were Flemmings: They faid, it was no matter if they were all flaine. In this broyle, I thank: God, we had no man hurt, but two, the which was done before the complaint came, neither had they any great harme; one having a flash over the hand, the other a stab vinder 60 the aide with a knife, which was not very deepe : this was the first time, but it was not long, but we were at pell mell againe, and againe, where the Flemmings iped as they did now.

The eleuenth of August, came in two ships from Cambaya, who had taken great wealth from Ships from the Portugals, the same day came in one ship from Ternate. The sixteenth day, came in the Ascen- The Ascentian tion from Bands; The eight of September, the Dutch Merchants inuited our Generall, and all from Bands, his Merchants and Malters to a feast, where there was great cheere, and also great friendship was made betweene vs. The fifteenth day of September, two Dutch ships fet faile for Holland, one being a small ship, which had laden Pepper at Bantam; the other, had taken in some Cloues at Ternate. The rest of her lading was of prize-goods, which was taken out of the ships which came from Cambara. The one and twentieth day, came in the Ducth Admirall from Bands. The two and twentieth day, our Generall fent fome of his Merchants to the Dutch house, to bid him welcome. On which day, a drunken Flemming caused a new fray, which began with our Surgeon, and after parts, were taken on both fides, and some of the Duich wounded. Againe, about one a clocke the same afternoone, our Generall sitting vpon a bench at our gate.

New Dutch

a Duichman.

Racke house, where hot

drinkes are talking with a Portugall which fate by him, who fometimes had beene of good reputation, there Ic Another drun-ken quarrell of came one of their drunken Swads, and fate downe betweene our Generall and this Portugal Our Generall feeing the rudenesse of this vnmannerly Flemming, gaue him a boxe on the eare. and thruit him away. Prefently, diversof his conforts came about our gate, drawing their Knives and Sables, and began to swagger. We taking the But-ends of Pikes and Halberds, and Faggotflickes, draue them into a Racke-house, who shutting the dcore vpon vs, we brake it open, and knocked some of them downe, bringing them away as prisoners to our Generall. So many of the Flemmings as came by in peace, our Generall caused to goe into our yard, where they were in fafetie, and those that would not, bare it off with head and shoulders. So soone as weehad beaten them well, that tooke the Racke-house, there came another troope of them downe the ffreete to take their parts, with whom we met; and after a few brabbling words past, we laid on 20 fuch load, that they were forced to give ground, and to betake them to their heeles: some of them were beaten downe in the streete, and many had their pates pittifully broken, others were forbloudy defigne ced to runne thorough a great myrie Dirch, to escape from vs, they were chased in attheir thence inten- owne gates.

The Master of their Admiral had occasioned this fray, and gone from ship to ship, to bid them goe weaponed on shore, and kill the English-men they met with. And when some went to goe aboord the Dutch shippes on businesse, some English-men of their Fleete, with weeping eies called to them, that they should not come : For strait order was given, to kill as many English-men as they could, either aboord or on shore, and willed them to certifie our Generall of it. Wherefore the Flemmings have no cause hereafter to complaine, but to say we dealt kindly with them: 30 for the truth is, it lay in our hands that day, to have flaine a great number of them, the which had beene done, if our Generall had but given the word. Their frayes were greatly admired at, of all Nations in that place, that we should dare to bandy blowes with the Flemmings, they hauing feauen verie tall ships in the Road, and we but two. There was not one of our men had any harme, onely Master Sarys Merchant, who received a cut on the fore-finger with a Sable.

M. Says. Dutch General

At the latter end of this fray, the Durch Generall came to our house, with a great Guard of Captaines, Merchants, and divers others, whom our Generall being in like manner accompanied, met in the freets, and brought him into our house. After the beginning of the matter was declared to the Dutch Admirall, he liked well of that we had done. Some of the Captainesabout him faid, we complained, but their men bore away the blowes, as might appeare by their 40 bloudy pares and shoulders : the Dutch Admirall answered, it was no matter, for he saw plainely, the fault was in their men, wherefore hee would take order henceforward, that so many of them should not come ashore at once. After much talke had passed, and a banket of sweet meates ended, the Dutch Admirall kindly tooke his leave of our Generall : and all the rest of the Merchants, both English and Dutch, shaking hands one with another.

There were certain launs, which belonged vnto two of the principall men of that Landsnext vnto the King, who had folne nine Muskets and Calliners out of the Ascentions Gunner roome: shortly after two of them comming to steale more, were taken by our people with the manner. Our Generall fent me aboord to examine them, and to bring them ashore. They first told me, they belonged to great men, which were our very good friends, but I miltrufting they did diffemble 10 with me, bid them confelle the truth, and they should find some fauour, then they confessed truly whose Slaues they were, and said the Peeces were forth comming. After they came ashore, our Generall sent the King and the Protector word of it, and defired he might have his Peeces againe; The Protector fent to the Malters of these two Slaves for them, but they louing the Peeces better then their men, faid they had no Peeces, but what they had bought with their Money, yet they fent to our Generall to defire him, to deferre their execution for a day or two, the which was granted; but because their Masters were no great good willers to the King, the Protectour in the Kings Name fent the Executioner to put them to death, with a Guard of Pikes. When they came to the place of execution, our Generall taking pitty of them, would have given them their lives : But the Hang-man faid, their lives were in the Kings hands, and 60 not in our Generals, wherefore because the King had sent him, he would execute them. Which the two Theeues very patiently suffered, as the manner of all that Nation is, when they are bound to it. They doe hold it the greatest glorie that can be, to dye resolutely without any show of feare : and furely so they doe, in as carelesse a manner as it is possible for flesh and bloud, the experience of which I have feene by divers, both men and women. One would thinke thefe men should be good Souldiers, but it is not so, this valour is but when there is no remedy. Against the people of those parts of the world, they are reasonable tall men, but they will not meddle with Christians, except they have some exceeding great advantage of number, or o-

The fixe and twentieth of September, by meanes of a Iauan shooting off a Peece, the Towne The Towne set was fet on fire, but by reason wee had good helpe of our Mariners, who were many of them a- en fire. shore at that time, our house was preserved, but the Dutch house being to leeward, although they Dutch house had never fo much helpe, could not be faued, but the vpper worke of one of their principall burned. 10 houses, which did iowne to their great house, was burnt, and all their out-houses, wherein lay cables, hawlers, pickled porke, and divers other things, whereby they fulfained great loffe. Some that had ferued there five yeares, loft all that they had gotten in those parts. Not long after this, the Towne on our file the way, was twice fired by the Ianan; in the The Towne night, which put vs to great trouble, in carrying and recarrying our things, but by labour of our twice fiered.

Mariners and the Chinees, it was quenched. The third of October, our Generall made a feast, which was for his farewell, whereunto he inuited the Dutch Admirall, with all the reft of his Captaines, Matters, and Merchants, where wee were all exceeding merry, and great friendship was made betweene vs.

The fourth of October, our Generall being accompanied with divers Merchants and others, Preparation went to the Court to take his leaue of the King, and his Nobles. The fixt of October, being to dep-to 20 Sunday, about ten a clocke, our General, with all that were bound home, went aboord, who going by the Dutch brouse, went in, and tooke his leave of the Dutch Admirall, and the rest of his Merchants. Also there went abourd with him Master Gabriel Towerson, who was to stay for M. Towerson. Agent there, and some other Merchants, who after dinner, some went ashore, and some stayed untill the next day. About three a clocke we wayed Anchor, and with some Ordnance bid the Towns and Dutch shippes fareweil. About eleuen or twelue a clocke at night, we came to an Anchor under an Hand, where the next day we tooke in wood, which our Generall had fent our men before hand to cut ready. The feuenth day towards evening, we wayed Anchor againe, and fet faile : Malter Tower fon, and some other of the Merchants, then tooke their leave to go affecte. whom wee committed to the protection of the Almightie; and our felues to the curtefie of the Seas, defiring God to bleffe both them and vs, and if it be his will, to fend vs a happy meeting againe in England.

CHAP. V.

The second Voyage set forth by the Company into the East-Indies, Sir Henry Middleton being Generall: wherein were employed foure ships; the Red Dragon, Admirall; the Hector, Vice-Admirall; the Ascension with the Susan: written by Thomas Clayborne in a larger Discourse, a briefe extract whereof is beere delinered.

CHAP.5.

HE second day of Aprill, 1604, beeing Munday, about twelve of the clocke, we had fight of the Lizard. The three and twentieth day, West South-West to the West-ward, two and twentie leagues, latitude fifteene degrees, and fine minutes: The lile of S. and this day we fell with the Westermost part of S. Iago, beeing West by North 120. fixe leagues, and at five of the clocke we flood to the East-ward for Maio, the Maio, wind at North.

The foure and twentieth day we fell with Maio, and flood to the South-ward of the Iland, and came to anchor at fifteene fathomes, one point North-West and by North, and the other

The fine and twentieth day we landed, and loft one of our Merchants, who was taken by the Theyland in people of the Iland. The fixe & twentieth day in the morning, we landed an hundred men to fee Maio. if we could get our Merchant againe, but could not come neere any of the people of the Hand; fo we lett him behind vs, and this night about nine of the clocke wee fet fayle, the wind at North.

The fixtcenth day of May, latitude oo. fifteene minutes, and this day we passed the Equino-Stiall. The thirteenth of July in the forenoone, we had fight of Cape Bona Efferanza being off 60 vs fifteene leagues. The feuenteenth day we came to anchor in the Road of Saldania, having fix- They came to tie men ticke of the Scuruy, but (God be prayled) they all recoursed health before we went from the roads of hence. Saldama is in latitude thirty three degrees, fittle fixe minutes, or thirty foure degrees. Saldama Here M. Cole was drowned, beeing Master of the Heltor, our Vice-Admirall: and here we stay- M. Cole drowed nue weekes wanting a day.

The

Amboyne. The Meluccas.

Banda.

The twentieth day of August being Munday we weighed, and set sayle out of the Read of Saldania, the wind Southerly, and we flood to the West-ward. The three and twentieth of December, being Sunday, we came to anchor in Bantams Roade.

where we found fixe Holland thippes, and three or foure Pinnaffes. The eighteenth day of Ianuary, we fet layle out of Bantam roade, with the Dragon and the A. Scention; but they parted at Amboyna. The Generall went with the Dragon to the Molnecas, and the Ascension ( whereof M. Colthruit was Captaine) for Banda; and the Hector and the Sufan la-

Banda is in 4. degrees 40. minutes. An high bur-Сиппанаррі.

ded Pepper at Bantam, and let fayle from thence about the middle of February. The twentieth day of February, the Ascension arrived at Banda, and anchored in four fathoms and an halfe, by Nera, which is the cheifest place in those llands. From the South-part of Am. 10 boyng to Banda, the course is East by South, to the South-ward thirtie leagues : the latitude of Banda is foure degrees, fortie minutes, and the going in is to the West-ward. There is a very high hill that burneth continually, and that Hill you must leave on the Larbord-side, and the other great Hand on your Star-boord fide. The going in is very narrow, and you cannot fee it till you come within halfe a mile : but feare not to stand with the Iland, that the high Hill is on. while you come within two Cables length of it; for so you must doe, and then you shall haueabout twentie fathomes; and then stand along still by that Iland about a Cables length from it, if the wind will give you leave, and then you shall find shallower water, eight, seven, fixe fathoms, and in the very narrow of all, you shall have five fathomes, and so that depth vntill you come in-

Pulowat. Pulatin.

By Gods helpe, a man may goe in without any danger, keeping neere vato the aforenamed Iland; it is somewhat shallow on the Star-board side, in the narrow of the going in, but that will thew it felfe. There are two small Hands, one called Puloway, and the other Pulorin, and they lie about three leagues to the West-ward of the going in: there is no danger about them, but may be very well perceived. You may leave those llands on which side you please, either at your going in, or comming out.

About the middle of March, here we found the wind to be variable, and so continued till the middle of Aprill; and then it continued, and stood betweene the East and South-East foure moneths to our knowledge. But it doth vie to continue fine moneths, as the people of the countrey say, and likewise fine moneths betweene the West and North-West, and the other two moneths variable. Here in the darke Moones it is given much to guity weather, and much raine. 30 Here we staved one and twentie weekes, and sixe dayes, in the which time we had eleven men died, and most of the Fluxe. The one and twentieth day of July, 1605, beeing Sunday, we let faile from Banda, the wind

They Bayed weckes.

Barre.

Defelem

the South-end of Burro, the wind at East South-East. The feuen and twentieth day we fell with Defelem, and then we came about the South-end of the Hand, leaving feuen Hands on our Lar-board fide. We flood close by the wind to the Northward, faire by the maine lland of Defelem, to cleare our selves of a small lland and a shold, that lieth off the South-West part of Deselem, and leaving this Hand, and all the other sholds on our 40 Larboord-fide, we flood North, North-West, along the West fide of Deselem, while wee came in fixe degrees and tenne minutes: then we steered West eighteen leagues, and fell with the point thold that lieth off the South-West end of Colobes: And the very Souther-most part of that shold,

The fixt day of October beeing Sunday, we fet fayle out of Bantam roade, with the Drason and

The fifteenth day of November, latitude thirty one degrees, fortie eight minutes, the wind

we came within a ships length of a Rocke, or sunken Iland: the water shewed vponit very so

North North-Well, thicke foggy weather. This day about tenne of the clocke in the morning, browne, and muddie, and in some places very blue, and beeing a ships breadth or two to the North-ward of it, we saw the water by the ships side very blacke and thicke, as though it had been earth, or groffe fand boyling vp from it. The variation in this place, is one and twentie delieth in fixe degrees, and beeing cleare of that, we flood to the Well-ward.

The fixteenth day of August, we came to anchor in Bantam road.

at East South-East, and we stood to the West-ward. The two and twentieth day, we fell with Celebes .

Bantam. They returne from Bantam for England. Note. A funken Ithe Ascention.

The variation from North to Weft decrea-Sight of land.

53. men de id

grees from North to West decreasing. The fixteenth of December, West nine leagues, latitude thirtie foure degrees, and twentie minutes. This day in the morning we had fight of the land of Ethiopia, distant from vs some

The fixe and twentieth day, latitude thirty foure degrees, thirty minutes. Now beeing in the latitude, and in the light of Cape Bona Efteranja, and within one league of it, we steered North-Bons Eferansa. West, and North North-West, and North, and as the land lay about the Cape.

The feuen and twentieth day, we came to anchor in Saldania roade, where we found our Admirall, and the Hellor, which ship the Dragon, our Admirall, met withall seuen dayes before, driving vp and downe the Sea about foure leagues off the Cape Bona Elperanfa, with tenne men in her. All the rest of her men were dead, which were in number three and fiftie, which died fince the came out of Bantam, which time was nine moneths: being in great diffreste, thee loft company of the Sufan, three moneths after the came out of Bantam roade, which thip (the Sufan) The Sufan vtwas neuer heard of fince. Here we came to anchor in feuen fathomes, having the low point go- terly loft. ing in North-West by West, and the Sugar-loafe South-West, 1. a point to the West-ward, the point of the breach of Pengwin Iland North-West by North, and the Hill betweene the Sugarloate and the low point, West South-West, the peake of the Hill to the East-ward of the Table,

The fixteenth day of January in the morning, we fet faile from Saldania Road, and went to the Northward of Pengwin Iland, betweene that and the Mayne. When wee had the Iland South to from vs about one mile and a halfe we founded, and had ground twentie fathomes, white Corrall, and Whiftles of thels. When we were cleare of the Hand, we flood off West by South, and West South-west, while we brought the Hand South-east by East off vs, now being about sixe of the clocke in the after-noone, we had fight of the Hellar, comming out to the Southward of the Iland, for we left her at Anchor when we weighed. Now the wind being at South, westood all night to the West-ward, close by a wind, in the morning following we had lost fight of the Hefor, and then we fleered away North-west with a low faile while noone, being the seuenteenth day thinking to get fight of the Hellor, but we could not.

The first day of February, West to the Southward fixteene leagues of Latitude, fixteene degrees and twentie minutes: this day about one of the clocke in the after-noone, wee had fight of 20 Saint Helens, bearing West to the Northward from vs. about twelve or thirteene Leagues.

The second day West, and West by South foure Leagues, then having the Iland West from vs about eight or nine Leagues, the wind at South-east wee lay off and on, to the Eastward of the Iland, most part of the night, and in the morning following, we stood to the Northward of the

This day about twelue of the clocke, wee came to anchor in the Road of Saint Helena. our Santa Helena Land anchor lay in feuenteene fathomes, our shipperid in twentie fathomes, blackish, grauelly fand. We had one point North-east of vs., and one sharpe Hill like a Sugar-loase (with a Crosse on the top of it) that bare North-east by East. The Church in the Valley South-east. In this Valley there are many Trees likewife, the high-land South-east up from the Church, and all the 30 Valley besides is full of Trees: the other point of the Land South-west to the West-ward. Wee mored South-east, and North-west. Our anchor in the offing lay in one and twentie fa-

The third day at night being Munday we had fight of the Hellor, comming about the South end of the Iland, but could not fetch into the Roade, yet flood to the North-ward as neere as the could lye, the wind at East. The foure and fine dayes, our Boates went out to helpe to get her into the Roade, but they

The fixt day at night being a little wind, wee towed her in with our Boates, into thirtie fine fathomes, one mile and a halfe from the shore, bearing from vs South-west by West, distant a-40 hout two Leagues.

The eleuenth day, we set faile from Saint Helena, the wind at East North-east, and we see- fortie five mired North-west. This North-west part of the Handlyeth in the Latitude of sixteene degrees, nucles of variaand in seuen degrees, fortie sine minutes of Variation Note this, that the Church that bare Southeast of vs, when wee were in the Roade, standeth in the bottome of the fift Valley from that point that bare North-east of vs.

We came to anchor in the Downes, on the fixt of May 1606. where wee rid eight dayes for a faire wind.

CHAP.

50

Io

CHAP. VI.

A lournall of the third Voyage to the East India, set out by the Company of the * The Confent, Merchants trading in those parts : in which Voyage were imployed three held no con-Ships, viz the Dragon, the Hector, and the * Consent, and in them cen: with the Dragon and Hethe number of three hundred and ten persons, or thereabouts: ctor, whole written by WILLIAM KEELING, chiefe Voyage you shall have by Commander thereof. it felfe. This Iournall of lings and that of Captaine Hawkins, written at Sea-leafure, very voluminous in a hundred finets of Paper; I have beene bold to to to shorten as to expresse only the most necessary Observations for Sea or Land Affaires,

Their diasters and putting backe for Sierra Leona, and what happened till they departed from Saldania.

Prill the first 1607, the Dragon and Hellor were fallen as low as the Downess and after their departure from thence their hands after their departure from thence their hopes were by diners difafters fo fallen downe, and croffed, that after they had passed the Line in the beginning of lune, piercing foure or fine degree of Southerly Latitude, they were inforced by Gufts, Calmes, Raines, Sicknelles, and other Marine inconveniences to returne Northward: and milling the He of Fernando de Loronha, cercaine of nothing but vncertainties which much amazed them, The Generall on July the thirtieth, having confulted with Taxerner the Matter, and hearing his antiwere that they must bee driven to returne for England, the whole Company expecting no other (all which to recite would at once both becalme and be- 30 fforme the Reader) they confulted for their best course, wherein (you shall have it in his owne words) we had some speech of Sierra Leona. I, having formerly read well of the place, sent for the * Booke, and shewed it my Master, who as my selfe, tooke good liking to the place. Wherevpon, my Company beginning to bee grieuously diffafed, wee, without hope to get Fernando de Loranha, (water being our speciall want, and a watering place so nigh.) I called a counfell : and after Dinner propounded what was fitteft for vs to doe. They were generally of opinion, that the Company, we had no reason to stand to the South any longer, for many reasons: and demanding their opinions, concerning a place of watering, Churchward, Sauadge, and Tauerner, opined Mayo the 20000 pounds, htteft, how much without reason, I leave to judgement. Earming, Pokham, Mollmenx, and my Master, held Sierra Leona fittelt; and my selfe, the Author thereof, for many causes. Wherefore, we concluded to feeke for Sierra Leona. I acquainted my Company with our determinations, to maged if they their great comfort.

This morning the fourth of August, we saw many Flowres, a figne of Land, and this evening we had ground from twentie eight to fixteene fathome Ozy, but no fight of land,

I hoyfed out my Schiffe, and fent her to ride neere vs, to proue the fet of the Current: the found by the Log-line, the Current to fet South-east by East two miles a watch howbeit the Schiffe roade wind-road. We steered all this morning East, and East by South, and had from thirtie to Conclusion to twentie, and ten fathome water: no light of land, and the greatest depth was Ozy, the least 2 groffe yellow fandie ground.

About nine of the clocke, we effived the land, being a round plot of meane altitude, bearing 50 North-east from vs, about eight leagues.

We were at noone in the latitude of fourn degrees and fiftie fixe minutes, and have fleered all day East, sometimes North, sometimes Southerly, one point, as our water deepned or shoaled: for we had oftentimes ten fathome vpwards, and at the next cast seven fathome vnder pittie ground. And when we found shoale water, as we bare up Northerly, we deepned, instantly (2 perfivation that we borrowed upon the shoales of Saint Anna, alias Madera Bomba) I allow fince yesterday at noone, fourteene leagues East, and fine leagues West, wind at South, and South by West, and South by East.

In the after-noone we had nine, ten, eleuen and twelue fathome water.

The first land proned Ilha Verde, being a very round land, and a notable marke, for whosever is bound for the place, from the Southwards.

Ilha Verde a very round Land.

CHAP. 6. S.I. Capt. KEELING. His returne to Sierra Leona.

About feuen in the euening, we anchored in twentie fathome water, hard fand, hauing steered fix leagues or more North-east, and North North-east, the South part of Ilha Verde, bearing East off vs : and the Cape of Surra Leona, being a low point North by East, about eight leagues from vs ; but the faid land ouer the faid Cape, is very high land, and may bee feene in a cleere, fifteene

About fixe in the morning, wee made faile for the Roade, and had no leffe then fixteene, The Rocke fifteene, ten or nine fathomes, till we were North and South with the Rocke, (which byeth to the Weltward of the Cape of Sierra Leona) about 1. 1. miles; and one mile from the neerest (hoare) within halfe a mile thereof, we had then, feuen fathome very good shoaling, betweene

10 vs. and the Rocke. And foone after we had passed the Rock, we had twentie fathome water, and A fand on the shoulded to eighteene, fixteene, twelue, and ten fathome, all the way into the Roade, borrowing North shore. very neere the South shore. For there is a sand lying off the North shoare about two miles, or a league from the South shore, whereon the Sea breaketh. Wee road in ten fathome water, good ground, the point of Surra Leona, bearing West Northerly, the North point of the Bay North Surra Leona. Westerly, and the forefaid breach or Sand, North, North-east.

Note, that comming in, when we were North and South with the Rocke, it bare with the South point (for Sierra Leona is the North point of the South land making the Bay, or River) and Ilha Verde, North by West and South by East.

This afternoone, being anchored, we espyed men to weaue vs a-shore. I sent my Boate, which 20 leaning two Hoftages, brought foure Negroes, who promifed refreshing.

My Schiffe founded betweene vs, and the forefaid Breach, and found faire sholding, having two fathome water, within two Boats length of the Breach.

Note, that all the Observations of the Variation, fince our comming from two degrees of Aspecial note. North latitude to this place, proued erronious: for to each diffance, having reference to any Meridian Eafterly thereof, there must be added thirtie leagues, and from such as are referred to Meridians Weiterly, must be substracted thirtie leagues. For it appeareth by our falling with the land, that the thip was so much more Westerly, then we supposed our selues; my selie not with-standing the said errour, being as much, if not more Westerly, then any of our Mariners. Howbeit, I wish euery man to trust to his owne experience : for, Instruments may deceiue, euen the

The feuenth, there came Negroes of better femblance, aboord with my Boate (for whom, as for all other, wee were faine to leaue one of my men, for two of them in hostage) who made fignes, that I should fend some of my men up into the Countrey, and that they would stay aboord in hostage. I sent Edward Buckbury, and my Servant William Cotterell with a Present, vix. One course Shirt, three foot of a barre of Iron, a few Glasse Beads, and two Kniues. They returned towards night, and brought me from the faid Captaine, one small earing of Gold, valued at feuen, eight, or nine shillings sterling : and because it was late, the Hostages would not goe ashore, but lay aboord all night, without pawne for them.

I fent my Boate, and fetched fine tunnes of fresh water, both very good and easie to A good water 40 come by.

The elementh, I went a-shore a fishing, where the people brought their women vnto vs, but feared, we would carry them away. I gaue some trifles, we bought good store of Limons, two hundred for a penny Knife, wind at East.

The twelfth, I went but tooke little fish, wind from North-west to South, rainie weather. The thirteenth, It rayned without intermission : we got fish enough for a meale.

I bought an Elephants tooth of fixtie three pound English, for five yards blue Callico, and feuen or eight pound of Iron in barre.

The fointeenth, I kept aboord, all day rainie.

The fifteenth, I went and tooke within one houre and a halfe, fix thousand small and good fish

Six thousand filtes taken in

After noone, with Captaine Hankins, and a convenient Guard, I went ashore, and to the halfe. Village, where we bought two or three thousand Limons. We esteeme it a faire day, wherein Weather. we have three houres dry over head.

The fixteenth, I licenced our weekly Workers to recreate themselues with me ashore, where in our large walke, we found not past foure or sue acres of ground sowed with Rice: the supersicies of the ground is generally an hard Rocke.

This only day, hitherto, we had faire weather. The seventeenth, It was all day faire weather. I appointed making of Limon-water.

The twentieth, John Rogers returned and brought me a present of a piece of Gold, in forme of 60 an halfe Moone, valued at fine, fix, or feuen shillings sterling. Hee reporterh the people to bee peaceable, the chiefe without state, the landing two leagues vp, and the chiefe Village eight miles from the landing.

The two and twentieth, We went a-shore, where we made fix or seuen Barricoes full of Li- Limon-water, mon-water. I opened the Companies Firkin of Kniues to buy Limes withall. The

M. Hackluits books of Voyagesare of great profit. This faued affirmed to me, which they had returned hom: , which constrayned, if that Booke had not given feeke Sierra Leons. Many flowres, a figne or land. Currents. Sight of land.

The

An Elephant

The feuenth of September in the after-noone, we went all together a shore, to see if we could shoot an Elephant : we shot seven or eight bullets into him, and made him bleed exceedingly, as appeared by his tracke, but being neere night, we were constrayned aboord, without effecting our purpofes on him.

The beff road.

The best Roade and watering place is the fourth Bay, to the East-ward of the point Sierra Leana. It floweth necreit West South-west, within where we roade : and the water highest vp. on a Spring-tyde at the least, twelve foote.

After noone, the wind came at West South-west, and wee anchored in ten fathome water. Ilba Verde bearing from vs South-east + South, and the point of Sierra Leona North-east by East - Easterly, about three leagues from vs, where wee found the floud to fet North-east by North, a strong tyde.

erra Leona, 8. 36. North. The Variation

I have at no time observed the Sunne in the Roade, howbeit I have fundry times purposed the same, both aboord and ashore, but the Master made the Roade by his observation, in eight de-Latitude of Si- grees and thirtie fixe minutes of North Latitude, and the point of Sierra Leona, bare neerest West about a league or foure miles off. The Master also made the Variation to bee one degree. fiftie minutes North-easting : but my Instrument was out of order, and I had no time to 1.degr.50.min. mend it.

The fourteenth in the morning, we wayed the wind all Easterly : but about eight it calmed, and we draue to the North againe : after with the ebbe, draue to the South-west by South, toward night, the floud being come, we anchored in 25. 1. fathome water: the point of Sierra Lee. na bearing North-east by East, about seuen leagues off vs. We have not had lesse then ten fathome water, all day. They found a Current fetting North by West, on the fixteenth day.

Saidania.

The feuenteenth of December, About two in the after-noone, we faw the land, the Table 2t Saldania very plaine, and stood in to make it, till three, then I caused the Master to steere East South-east, and South-east by East, to put about the Cape: what time sicke, and whole, defired to put into Saldania. Whereupon wee bare vp for Saldania, and about noone wee got into the Roade anchoring in 5. 4. fathome water : the West point bearing West North-west, the Iland North North-west, and the Sugar-lofe South-west.

The Sugarbafe.

The Westermost Cape Land, and Pengwin llandbare South by West, &c. There is abreach South of the Hand, about a mile distant.

Betweene the Hand and shore are seuen miles distance. The Sugar-Joase and the He, beare 30 South by East, and North by West. From the West point of the Bay, halfe a mile off is a flat, The Westermost South land, and point of the Sugar-loafe, beareth South South-west, and North

There is another breach, which lyeth East South-east from the Hand halfe a league off. As foone as I was anchored, I fent a shore, finding the people very bold, but deare. I found ashore these words engrauen upon a Rocke, viz. The source and twentieth of July, 1607. Captaine Dauid Middleton in the Confent. The one and twentieth, I went ashore, where we bought a hundred and two sheepe, twelve Bullockes and two Calues, whereof I allowed the Heltor a proportionable share, and this continued divers dayes in which they bought much Cattell.

The arrivall of the Confent at Saldania Iuly 24. 1607. 101, theepe, 1:, bullocks, 2. calues. They bought for 200 yron hoopes, 450. Incepe, 46. cowcs 19. ftec: *, o. calues, and one Bull.

è. II.

Their departure from Saldania, and what happened after till the shippes parted company.

HE first of Ianuary, 1607 by Sunne rising we were both vnder faile, and by fixe in the Euening, we were tenne leagues West Southerly from the South point of the 50 Bay. The nineteenth we shipped much water at the Helme port, and at the hole a-baft in my Gallery, about two after mid-night, which wet some of our bales of cloth-Sea fhipped. Latitude thirty fine degrees, twenty two minutes, I allow thirteene leagues South South-East, wind, East North-East, and North-East, sixe leagues drift South, and three leagues North-East wind all Westerly. Our too great quantitie of kintledge goods, maketh our ship to labour mar-

Land.

The twentieth, I aired and dryed our cloath, also oyled the Companies peeces and blades. I firengthened the cases of Callicoes, &c. I allow thirty leagues North-East as we steered, wind at South-West and South. This afternoone, contrary to expectation, and to the admiration of all our Marriners, we faw the land, bearing North North-West, about twelve leagues off, wee 60 in the latitude of thirty foure degrees. And furely, but that I had many deare experiments of the strength of the Westerly current in my last voyage, I should likewise admire: albeit I am more Westerly then any, by reason I doubted currents for causes before noted, beeing by reckoning an hundred leagues more Easterly, then then the fight of land approoueth vs.

neloufly: wherein the Company must have speciall care, another Voyage.

The two and twentieth, Latitude thirtie foure degrees, foure minutes. I allow thirtie three leagues East by North, Northerly, wind South and South South-West. But by this reckening, the ship should have been in thirtie three degrees, twelve minutes, and wee find her fiftie more South, caufed by the Current. Whereby it is euident, that fuch as depend upon their dead rec- Note. koning and judgement, without respect had to the currents, must needs make intollerable errors. I bring the ship to her latitude upon a South line, in her distance Easterly.

I must acknowledge, that in judgement the Current must be of greatest power here abouts, the land falling away fuddenly North-Faft, and South-West, and we opening the gut. And I prefume, that as we come more Eafterly, past the middle of the gut, we shall find the Currents force

The twentie fift, latitude thirty foure degrees fiftie one minutes. Iudgement alloweth for three watches, nine leagues North-East by East, wind South-West: and for two watches, fine leagues South wind, all Easterly, and East North-East: yet note, how we are continually carried to the South, contrary to reasonable sudgement.

The fixe and twentieth, latitude thirtie fine degrees, twentie eight minutes. I allow thirteen leagues South South-East wind, at East North-East: so I do not finde that the Current vseth such violence as before, except we should be carried by the streame, as much Westerly off the South, as I allow her Easterly thereof, which would raise or depresse the Pole, in the same proportion: but herein our variation (being well observed) will retolue vs.

The seventeenth of February, we saw the land bearing East, about eight leagues from vs, and as I deeme, in the latitude of twentie foure degrees, twenty minutes. We flood in till after fixe a clocke, at what time, beeing within four leagues of the shore, we flatted, the Heltor beeing too neere a sterne for vs to stay. Where we tacked, we had no ground at eightie or ninetie fathomes, no great maruell, for it is low smooth land.

About noone, we were thwart of two small Ilands, seeming to make a good roade: wherefore Two Ilands not knowing our latitude, we flood off till we could observe, it being nigh noone. Note, wee could have no ground at fixtie fathomes within two miles of the shore. The eighteenth, latitude twentie three degrees, thirty feuen minutes: wherefore we flood in againe, supposing this to be the place we fought ; but comming neere the shore, and having fent 30 both Schiffes a head, they found but fixe fathome water; for which, we anchored in fenen 1. fa- Anchored. thome water, fandy ground, about one in the afternoone, the two Hands and breach bearing South Westerly, a mile from vs.

There is an Inlet about three leagues from vs East Northerly, which the Master supposeth to be S. Augustine, and we purpose to search the same. I called a Councell, where we resolved to A Counsell. make some small stay at S. Augustine. Variation in this place, is sitteene degrees, and thirtie Variation 15.30

Variation againe observed this morning, is fifteene degrees, twentie sixe minutes, but I was Variat. 15. 26, faine to observe ouer the Land halfe a degree high to therwise, I should have made somewhat more variation, and to these two observations, I repole great trust. It sloweth East. The nineteenth, we weighed this morning, and in the weighing brake one of our anchors, Anchor brake. through defect therein. And furely, the matter deferueth much blame, but I referre me for the particulars, to a Certificate which I purpose to make thereabout. We steered for the about-mentioned seeming Harbour, or Bay, and found, from whence wee weighed, from tenne, twelue, to twentie fathome: and comming neere the point, in the height of the Bay, we had no ground at an hundred fathomes, till we came very farre into the Bay (our Schiffes being before vs, and having ground ) and then we had from thirtie to eight fathome, and further in deepe water. We anchored in eightcene fathome, and laid another anchor in forty fathome, the South shoare beeing the deepest water, the other, beeing by the comming downe of

The twentieth, we had feventie fathome water at the ship, the ground oaze. The land bea- S. Augustine. reth West by South, and North of vs. and to the North are certaine sholds, and a breach, bearing North-West of vs: fo that we are but five points of the Compasse, open to winds : but the roade is very pitty ground, and deepe water: and there runneth a strong streame downe the river continually. Captaine Hawkins came aboord me, whom with both our Schiffes strong, I sent a shore, my selfe beeing ill at ease. Toward night he returned abourd, without having seene any people; but their fresh tracke in divers places. They left some beades and trifles in a boat which they found, to allure the naturalls. He affirmeth little likelihood of refreshing here: but my fishers from the other fide, tell me of Beafts bones good ftore, and bones have had flesh.

George Euans, one of the Heltors Company, was shrewdly bitten with an Alegarta. I willed all speed in filling our water, and in the meane time, purpose to seeke for refreshing. bitten by an It floweth here neerest East, and higheth much water.

The one and twentieth, we effyed foure Naturals, I fent to prefent them beads, &c. they Tyde. promifed by fignes flore of cattell the morrow.

The two and twentieth, feeing people I went a shore, where we found a subtill people, their Naturalls.

The

bodies ftrong, and well framed: their prinities onely carelefly conered, with cloath made of the rindes of trees. We bought one Calte, one Sheepe, and one Lambe but they would not deale fane for filuer, by any meanes.

After noone, I rowed up the river, aswell to looke for the best watering, as otherwise. The water is very shallow, and brackish.

The foure and twentieth, I went a shore, seeing one man there, where we bought three Kine. two Steeres, and foure Calaes: they coft vs nineteene shillings sterling, besides a few beads.

The Cattell are faire better flesh then those of Saldania, with bunches of flesh on their shoulders, like those of the Cammels, saue that they stand more forward.

The people are circumcifed, as some affirmed to have seene.

Here we found the beautifull beaft.

Water by the ships fide, at an high water very fresh, and at a low water very falt, contrary to finfe. Alfo, fresh water at high water on one side of the ship, and very salt on the other side, the

The five and twentieth, in a gust at North-West, our ship drave, and the cable broke, and we loft the anchor. We bought one Calfe, and one Sheepe, and one Lambe great tayled, which coff two shillings three pence. Ifound certaine Spiders, whose webbe was perfect good, and lings 3. pence. strong as silke.

Note, that all along the low land, from East to West a ledge of rockes lyeth $. a mile from the fhore, whereon the Sea breaketh continually; betweene which and the shore, is two fathome wa- 20

ter neere to, good for landing, and maruelous full of fish, fit to haile a net in.

Note. The eight and twentieth in the morning betimes, we were vnder fayle to put to fea. There lieth a breach foure miles from the North point of the Bay, South South-East. Note , that the ridge of land, like a roofe or barn, is about five miles to the Northward of the middeft of the Bay. S. Augustine vn-I concert this Bay of S. Augustine to be writt for any shippes to exp. & refreshing, it beeing to be had but in small quantitie: the place very vntoward for riding, the water deepe, the ground pitty and foule, as appeareth by the cutting of our cable.

The twelfth of March, latitude fifteene degrees fiftie minutes. We founded fundry times in the afternoone, and had no ground at ninetic fathome, and before eight, we had ground at twentie, twentie eight, seuenteene, and sixteene fathome, all within & a cables length : then wee in- 30 ffantly tacked off, and had nineteene, and twentie foure, and the third caft, no ground at fortie fathome. The ground was small thingle stones like beanes, and we about fine or fixe miles from the flore ( an vntoward place to fall with in a darke night.) This afternoone, we had a fresh gale at East by North, whereby we have gotten fomewhat North by the land.

The thirteenth, latitude fifteene degrees fortie fine minutes. Yesterday afternoone, wee got fomewhat to the North, having a fresh gale at East by North. It hath beene calme from midnight, till eleuen this forenoone, and we have driven South as appeareth by the land. We were at noone within three leagues of the shore.

The foureteenth, latitude fifteene degrees fortie two minutes: fo that wee are gotten North but three leagues, and judgement would have allowed at least Efteene leagues North North-East. So it feemeth that the Current runneth fwift, and I doubt fetteth more South then South-weft. For this morning, though it were hazy, we were not farre from the shoare, seeing the land all along, and now beeing much cleared we can hardly fee it.

The fifteenth, latitude fifteene degrees fortie minutes. I can allow in judgement, no leffe then twentie leagues North by East, yet ice by observation we are gone to the South-wind, at South to South-west a faire gale.

We cannot see the land, yet are but tenne leagues from it. I know not what course to take to get out of this Current: for if we put of, and the Current hold, it may indanger vs of In. de Nowar and keeping the there, God knoweth what dangers there be: and where such a gale stemmes not the streame, it is indiscretion to continue.

The seventeenth, latitude foureteene degrees fiftie seven minutes, so we have gotten twentie fine leagues North. Indgement would allow twelve leagues North North-East, Northerly, and the hath runne nine by observation: so that the maine power of the Current is lessened. My Mafler opineth, that the Moones feafons have peculiar domination over these Currents, causing their force, till three or fowre dayes after the full. But I rather thinke, that the deeps Bay betweene Cape Corientes and Mafambique, caufeth an indraught, or eddy of some streame, comming either from the North-East, or more Easterly in at the North-East of S. Laurence, and so along the land to the Cape Corientes: or elfe the streame, which is affirmed to set from S. Lawrence, Northland ,& trucke well, meeting with the land of Molambique, may by the faid falling away of the land, be drawne that way. Which f poofition, if it be true, then we committed an error, in falling with the land 60 before we had gotten neerer North, then Mofambique point, which trendeth farre into the Sea, left out, as bee- and whence the Norther land lieth away North and South next hand; and the Souther land, ine more fully South-west by &c. for if we had not fallen too much Westerly, and brought the said Cape too knowne by la-ter experience. nigh our Meridian, we should not have felt this streame at all,

Le wing Abbad: kuria they were forced to ride in De'ifa, a Road on the North of Soca era . ti'l the Monfon freed them, at which time Captaine Keeling fet faile for Bantam, and Captaine Hawkins in the Heffer for Surat, as shall after follow.

ð. III.

Instructions learned at Delisa of the Moores and Guserates touching the Monsons, and while they rode there. Their comming to Priaman and Bantam.

HE Moores of this place affirme, that in some yeeres, pieces of Amber-greece are found, Huge quantity Poiz twentie kintals, of fich bulke, that many men may shelter themselves under the of Amber grace, fides thereof, without beeing feene. This is vpon the coafts of Mombafa, Magadoxo, Note.

Pata, Braua, &c. being indeed all one long Coaft. They of this place make yeerely voyages to the Iles of Comora, to buy slaues, and report the Notes of Copeople to be very treacherous, having at times killed fiftie persons by treason; and therefore they, mo. a llands,

They affirme, that there are eight Hollanders upon Pemba, who have been there three or foure Eight Hollanders yeeres, whereof two are turned Moores.

They reckon this Monfon of South winds, to begin yeerely the first of May, and the extrea- ba, whereof mitte thereof to continue one hundred dayes. The most wind (which they report to be wonder-two are Moore, full) is in June and July. For the tenth of Angust, it beginners to be less wind and Come offer. full) is in lune and July. For the tenth of August, it beginneth to be lesse wind, and soone aftercome the North winds with much raine, for three or four moneths more: at what time they 20 make the most Aloes upon the He, and is onely the tuyce of Semper vinens, put into Goates skins, Aloes how

The three and twentieth, I fent a shore to weigh certaine Aloes, and received aboord, 1250, pounds, which cost for the Companies accompt, 250. Dollers, and so at other times. We bought in all 1833 pounds neat. The Chiefe lent to borrow fine hundred rialls of eight, which I returned pound fed to lend. I presented him with two yards of Carsey, gallant colour, and a knife of mine. I Aloes. fent againe a shore, and received 575. pound more Aloes, cost 115. Dollers.

The foure and twentieth, I valerstood more, that the West winds began this yeere the last of Alors 575. Aprill, and doe each yeere come cleuen dayes later then the yeere before: fo that in thirty three Monon. yeares, they begin agains the same day of the same Moneth, which I conceit not to be truth. That 30 the Eafler Monion will come this yeare the thirteenth of October, and continue till Aprill forcible: and then faire weather while May. That the West Monson returneth (both Monsons falling each yeare eleuen dayes later then other) neither haue they more then two Monfons yeerely. That their yeere, called Negroofe, beginneth with the first of the East Monsons. That as the West Monson bloweth here all South, so doth the East Monson all North. That after the twenty fifth of September, ships cannot depart from the Red sea to the East-ward. That Chanl, Dabul, and Danda rageopuree, are good and fate ports, and rich trade townes, upon the coast of inon, and Danua regermer, are good and the property of the lles of Comora, there is abundance of the lles of the lles of Comora, there is abundance of the lles of the lle cheape Rice, and the people good. Inghezeegee, and Malale, two more of the fame Hands, have small store of Rice, and the people very treacherous: at the first whereof they report, that fixteen

40 yeeres lince, an English ship lost many men treacheroully, which furely, was Sit James Lancafter. The loste of M. That this day of (May the fix and twentieth) is the two hundred and four and twentieth of Lane Longler their accompt of Negrooze. No raine on the Coast of Arabia, till the seventieth day of this in Captaine Monion. The three hundred and fift of Negroofe, the best time to goe for Suratt, to put hence I Agmonds voy. fay, and that in ten or twelve dayes they get thither.

Burroms, Mekella, and Carxems, are good Harboroughs for both Monfons on the Coast of A. Burrom, Michella rabia, but no places for Merchandizing.

That Xael, or Xaer, hath no Harborough nor Road for any time, but would vent Iron and Lead, good Ports. a Turke being Aga and that they fend by land for fuch Commodities to Caixem, a dayes journey Kath. to the West war i, but there is no going thither at this time. That in both Monsons, there is a 50 continuall extreame Sea-gate upon the Coast of Arabia: the Current also there as the wind. That there is no riding at the entrance of Suratt, to have any shelter of the West shore, for the West Montons, aiwell by reason of ill anchor ground, as chiefly the extremitie of Tydes, which (by their reports) oner-fet thips not a ground.

This Road of Delfa, is a very good place for the West Monson, but which is strange, two miles either East or West from the Road, it doth continually blow so much wind, that no shippe Note. can ende it. Neither can I give any reason for it, except the distance twixt vs and the high Mountaines cause is: for there is much low land betweet vs and them. Iune the foure and twentieth, we fet faile to depart.

The three and twentieth of July, we faw an Hand, and about noone two more, wee left two An Hand. 60 to the North, and one to the South latitude of four degrees and two minutes, South of the E-4, degrees, q inoctiall. The North of these Iles is great, and high land full of Trees.

Setweene the two Southermoft of their three Illands, ten leagues diffant, there lyetha Breach November Le rous dout halfe way between ethen : to anoyd which we ferred within two leagues of the a did-most land way between ethen ; to anoyd which we ferred within two leagues of the a did-most land way between ethen; to be such the ferred within two leagues of Set-Bondor the add-most land way between ethers, the ferred within two leagues of Set-Bondor the add-most land way between ethers, and the set of the s the a delemost lland very good passage, the breach being then to the South about three leagues Priamas.

alongft the Iother occurrents I haue

Note.

The maine

power of the Current leffe.

Opinion, of Currents.

the cause of the

Nine Beafts

coft 10. fhil-

Oven with bunches on

A beautifull

Anchor loft

Three heafts

-lift ows floo

Danger,

cifed.

beaft. Note.

their shoulders

People circum-

lings ferling.

Note.

Priaman,

Profents.

from vs. It lyeth very dangerous for men bound through by night, not having knowledge thereof. We could differne no vnlikelihood of a pallage, betweene the two Northermoft also, but it is not a league broad. The Southermost Ile is the biggest. Of the two Southermost Iles, the West part of the North, and the East point of the Southermost, beare North and South ten leagues diitant. The Breach lyeth from the Eafter end of the Northermost of the faid two South llands.

South-east halfe the Channell ouer.

The fixe and twentieth, we were halfe way betweene Priamas at Tecu, about three leagues from the shore where I noted, viz. The two Hummockes of Tecu, with the high land ouer them. beare North and by West, and South by East 1. a point Easterly. There lyeth a shoale soure mile from the shore , bearing South and North with the high land of Tecm. Wee had fortie five fathome water, 2. 1. leagues from the shore, we then bearing North-east by East from the Road of 10 Priaman. There is an Iland about four leagues from the laid Road, North-east and South-west. The three Ilands of Priaman, Iye South South-east, and North North-west being distant each Iles of Priefrom other about a mile. Afternoone we got into Priaman Roade, and I faluted the Towne with fiue Peeces of Ordnance. The Gouernour fent me a Goate. I presented the Gouernour with three yards of Stammel. cloath, one blue Callico, one piece flocked, one Barrell, and two Sword-blades. The Gouernour fent me a Goate. The Meffenger spake good Portuguze, to whom I presented one blue Callico.

There came another of Achen, with whom I had good conversation in Arabicte, by whom I had great hope of good trade. The nine and twentieth, I went ashore betimes, shooting seuen Peeces of Ordnance, and 20 comming to the Gouernours house, he presented me with a Buffalo, and appointed mee to make

barganed for Pepper.

price of Pepper with fundry chiefe men. Where being set downe among fixtie persons, they first propounded that I must weigh such Pepper as I bought of them in the Towne: Whereabour we had much speech, I defiring to weigh upon the lland, but they would weigh in the Towne.

They demanded fiftie Dollers the Bahar for Pepper, which much difpleafed me. For the Achen man had willed me to offer but sixteene Dollers, howbeit there was craft in dawbing: for Craftin daw. he being a Merchant, would have ingroffed much Pepper, before I should have bought, and after would have fold it me at his owne price. After much time, and many words, we accorded at 22-Dollers the Bahar, beides fixe per Cento, Custome. I refused to pay two other Customes, or rather Exactions. The one of a hundred and fixtie Dollers, the other not much leffe : whereto, with 10 much adoe, I consented, and Writings were drawne betweenevs.

The last night a man speaking Portuouse, lay abourd mee, who in the behalfe of the late Gouernours Wife, by him titled Queene, defired my syde in taking the Towne, offering mee the one halfe thereof. To whom (not vnacquainted with the finenelle of Moores) I refuled to interoffer of a Mee. meddle, it not being answerable to my Prince, and this morning fent him ashere.

Trecherous

"I fold Cloth to Nakhada, for a hundred fittie nine Maffe of Gold. The Towne and bounds of Priaman yeeld not yeerely aboue fine hundred Bahars of Pepper, Notes of Pris. but with parts neere adicyning, as Paffaman, Tecu, Beroofe, and the Mountaines ouer the Towne are made two thousand fine hundred Bahars yeerely : which quantitie will lade two good shippes, and may bee bought very good cheape, if a Factorie haue meanes to buy all the 40 yeere. But their Harseft is only in August and September, and is setched away by them of Achen and I and only , the Guferats not beeing permitted to Trade there , by

Good counsel, the King of Achen his expresse commandement. So that a ship (touching at Suran) and buying especially blue Callicoes, white Callicoes, blue striped, and checkered Stuffes, and some small and fine Pintatoes leaving a Factorie, shall lay the belt foundation for gaine, against another years, that ever I have heard off: I say, against another yeere, for that I see not, how ships can goe to Cambaya, and come hither time enough in one yeere. And in fuch case the King of Achen his Letter must be procured, for our safer proceeding in these parts.

The eighteenth of September, In the morning we made faile, the Lord prosper vs. The nineteenth, At noone, we were West North-west from the point, to the South of Pris- 50 man, ten leagues we fleered to the East-ward of Ilha de Tristeza. The twentieth, before day, we faw an Hand, a head, and steered East South-east, to go cleere off it: wee went to the Eastward of it foure leagues, the Ile Sumatra being seuen leagues

The one and twentieth, I allow fixe and twentie Leagues South-east by South, we were within fixe or seuen leagues of Sumatra, and West from vs about source leagues was another great Iand? fo that Nauigation vpon this Coast is carefully to be performed, for wee find no such lles

Latitude three degrees, twentie minutes, I allow eighteene leagues South South-east winde 60

Wee being nine or ten leagues from Sumara, have seene another small lland to Sea-boord of vs, three or foure leagues off.

The first of October, 1608. Latitude fine degrees and thirtie minutes, I pricke by the Land. being twelve leagues from vs, and have gone faster to the South then by reckoning.

The second, we saw land in the morning, which we made for the Salt Hand, but it prooued a round Hummock vpon Sumatra. We have made almost no way, yet are at noon in fine degrees and Note. fifte fine minuts, by help to the South. The third, we faw the Salt lle bearing Northeast by North, Sak Ile, in the fome foure or fine leagues from it. It lyeth in latitude fixe degrees fix minutes. Wee were when firaight of we first saw the Hand, within foure leagues or lesse of the South land : whether Hands ( which I thinke) or Iana, it bare from vs East, South-east wind all night, fresh at West and North-west.

Note the South land are Iles, and lye the Wester part, with the Salt Iland (or roundest and Note. 10 highest Hand of the Straightes mouth) South-west by South, &c.

The necrest of the South Ilands, being the Westermost of them, is sixe leagues distant from

The Salt Iland, lyeth halfe Seas ouer, and the distance twixt Sumatra and the Souther land is twelue or fourteene leagues. The Salt Hand, with the point including the whole Bay, wherein is Bantam Road, lye East North-east, and West South-West (which I should have set first.) The Salt Iland with the highest South land of Sumatra (it being a round Hummock, and with the North-west point of Ima, to the East-ward of the foure Ilands, which I formerly call the South land) beare East South-east, and West North-west. The Hummocke of Sumarra, and point 20 of Iana, being about twentie leagues distant,

This euening, we had the Salt Hand, foure leagues North from vs.

The fourth, in the morning we were within fine or fixe leagues of the point, including Bantams whole Bay, East North-east from vs. There are before wee come to the faid point two Rockesfull of Trees, bearing each with other North and South foure miles diffant betweene which two westeered. The Southermost lyeth very neere Iana and the Northermost halfe way and more, betweene the point of Bantam and another low ragged Hand, which (with other two to the Northward of it) beare with the Northermost Rocke, West South-west, and East Southeast, betweene which Ilands we doe not know of any passage.

Note that that ragged Hand maketh the Straight, and we came to the South thereof.

We got into the Road of Bantam where we found fixe Holland flips, whereof two were al- We arrived at most laden with Cloues, and two were to be laden with Pepper.

I found thirteene English aliue, whereof foure were Merchants. I received a Letter from Captaine Danid Middleton.

The fixt, I paid Vnite and Tegin the two Chineses their wages, and released them.

The twentieth, I called my Merchants, and having formerly resolved to returne with the Dra- Counsell and gon for England, vpon special considerations, I now questioned concerning the imployment of resolution, to our Pinnace not yet finished: where we concluded that Browne and Sidall should goe in her for nace for Banda, Iohn Hearne, Iohn Saris, and Richard Sanage to remayne at Bantam. Also, that so soone as 40 the Pinnace could returne from Banda, John Saris should goe in her to Suquedana vpon Borneo. The fifteenth of Nouember, I ient for laques Lermite, and discouered vnto them a purpose in the Innans, to cut their throates whereof I understood very particularly.

The two and twentieth, the Ambassador of Siam came to visit mee, and dired with me. Hee Vent of red affirmeth that a thousand Clothes red, would vent in his Countrey in two dayes, and great quantitie yeerely; they clothing their Elephants and Horses therewith.

Gold is there abundant, and worth (as hee reporteth) three times the weight in Siluer, beeing good Gold. There are also precious stones in quantitie, and cheape. And that their King would account it, one of their greatest happinesses to have commerce with so great a King as his Ma- The King of ieste of England: with whom, as he vinderstood, the King of Holland was not comparable. The eight and twentieth, I tooke leave of the King, the Governour, the Admirall, the old Sabandare, Iura Bassa, Tanyono, and of the Hollanders, with purpose to be abourd the morrow.

The nine and twentieth, I went abourd for altogether.

The fecond of December, within night, our Merchants came aboord, bringing a Letter from Kings Prefere. the King of Bantam, to his Maiestie of England, and two Picolls of Canton, in present vinto

The twelfth, wee espeed a Sayle, which prooued the Hellor, yere wee got out of the Hellor Straights. She had no Captaine he remayning at Swratt, I vnderthood, that the Portugals had M. Will. Haztaken eighteene English, whereof divers of our Factors, and goods to the value of nine thousand the Capting

The fourteenth, we got into Bamam Roade againe, forced to a longer Voyage or losse of repu-

The fixteenth, there came a small Flemming from Amsterdam, with newes of peace, be- Newes of tweene Spaine, France, and the Netherlands: and that his comming was to defit! from their pur prace twist pole to Malacca.

Netherlanders.

for England.

I appointed Master Molineux and Pockham for England, the rest with me for the Maluccoer. The feuenteenth, I removed to the Hellor, and the Masters shifted ships. The one and twentieth, I speeded Master Towerson with all things, willing his departure with all ipeed.

The three and twentieth, The Dragon made faile from Bantam, the Lord profper her.

à IIII.

Their Voyage to Banda, Observations by the way, Actions there.

He first of Ianuary, 1608. About one in the morning we weighed, and with a gale off the shore, got about the East point, East North-east from where wee roade three leagnes. Thence to another point, South-east Easterly three leagues, betweene the two points lyeth a shoale, having little water, a great length : to prevent which, it is good to steere halfe way betweene Iaua, and the Iles Tonda, which are fine leagues distant.

A dangerous

To the Eastward of the second point, close aboord the shoare lyeth the lle Tanara, and is not 20 feene of fuch as come faire off, it lyeth to neere the shoare.

From the second to the third points, bearing East South-east, are four eleagues. And 1. 4. mile off that point North by West lyeth the He Lackee, twixt which and the point is but 1. 1. tathom wa'er by report. We roade all night, haung the He East a league off, fixe fathome water. The fourth, wee weighed and it reed within ; a league of Lackee, having seven or eight fathome water. The Iland Lackee, with the West point including lacatra, lyeth East South-east foure leagues diftant. There lyeth a dangerous fand off the West point of lacarra: io it is good to bor: ow of the lland lying opposite vnto the faid point.

lacatra:

The eighth, I went to lacarra, and anchored farre out. The King fent his Sabandare to defire Powder and Match, and I prefented him thirtie pound of Powder, and a roll of Match. I bought to of them a Portugall Boy (which the Hollanders had given vinto the King) who would by no meanes fortane Christianitie : hee cost mee fortie fine Dollers. The points, as wee roade, bare North-west and East by North source leagues distant : the Towne and highest of the Eastermost hils South by East, and the West hill South by West from vs. Wee haue seene since wee came from Bantam thirtie or fortie llands.

The tenth in the after-noone, we weighed and got under fayle.

There lyeth a tunken lland, even with the water about two leagues West by North from the East point of Incarra. We left it on our Larbord, going tetweine it, and the Easter Iland. The two points making Lacatra Bay, beare East South-east, and West North-west four leagues

... The Eastermost Iland lyeth in a straight Line betweene both points.

The eleuenth, we were at noone ten leagues North-east from the East point of Iacatra. The twelfth, we were at moone South-weit by South two leagues from an Iland, having made East by South thirtie leagues way. And there is a shoale South and North with the faid lland three leagues from Lina, called Lostres Hermanos: the lle lyeth ten leagues from Lana, but not fo farre Easterly as is projected. The fail lland beareth with the highest hill we fee vpon laus North by West. There is a point of Iana, which with the same and the former lland, beareth

An Hand not

* Or Nuiafira.

South by West Westerly. The fitteenth, we were neere Madura, con rary to my expectation. I suppose that the leed I au is not fo long as it is preiected; er elle wet have found a fet to the East-ward. A round 50 Ile, and the highest Easter land of Iana, beare with vs South South-west, halte West about tixe leagues from vs, the Ile within three leagues of vs.

Another He is with a Northwest fine leagues from vs. I pricked according to the land, and doe ouerleape thirtie leagues. The fixteenth, I ailow fixteene leagues East. North-east.

The feuenteenth, I allow fixteene leagues Eati by North.

At noone, wee were two leagues South-east by South from an I and which trendeth East by North two leagues long (no mention hereof in Platts.)

The eighteenth, at noone, wee were neere the Iles * Noffaferes, it was North by West a league off vs. It trendeth North-west and South-east two or three leagues long, in latitude fine 60 degrees, thirt:e minutes.

I allow thirtie fixe leagues East North-east.

We law another flat Iland to the North thereof.

The nineteenth, I allow eighteene leagues East, wind Westerly.

The twentieth, we yet fee no land, albeit the ship hath runne more ground, since wee made Nofis feres then the diffance projected betweene them. This evening wee faw three Iles to the The three Iles North of vs, foure or fine leagues or more: they were low land, and lay a good length East and of Giraliam. West, all small Hands. We sounded thwart of them, and had but nineteene fathome water.

The one and twentieth, this fore-noone we faw the land of Celebes, and effeeme the diffance Celebra. twixt it and our being yellernoone, nine and twentie leagues as we fleered East, and I deeme the Iles we saw yesterday, the Easter of them to be three and twentie leagues from Celebes. But wee could not fetch Macassar by any meanes, the wind fresh Northerly, and North-west. We anchored in twelve fathome water, the South point of Celebes, bearing East by South fixe leagues 10 from vs. Note, that the falling with Celebes, by reckoning nine and twentie leagues before we Note. came to it, was caused by making error in the East end of lana. For whereas I over-leaped thirtie leagues there, as by the fifteenth. I was ashore heere, before wee had his length nine and twentie leagues. Wherefore I opine that the ordinary diffance betweene Bantam and Celebes, being two hundred thirtie fine leagues is neere the truth. Also, that betweene Celebes and Nof- The distance faferes is feuentie fixe leagues, or elfe, that the lles we faw the eighteenth were not (as we fuppofed) Noffaferes. We brake our Cable and loft our Anchor. The three and twentieth, from the point where wee road to another point, that is East by South ten leagues thence, to another low point East by North Northerly eight leagues (and one league East of the said East point, is the notable round land) to another low point is six leagues 20 East, and thence to another point, three leagues North-east by East, but this distance is to the East-ward of the Straights. We haled it all night under the notable round land, it beeing foure leagues East North-east from vs. The highest South land of Celebes, and the West point of Defolam, beare North North-west, tenne or twelue leagues distant. The West end of Defolam, Defolam, and the low East point of Celebes (which is the narrowest of the Straights) beare South by West twelie or fourteene leagues off. The Coast of Defolam is necreft South-west.

The East end of Defolam, with the lles making the Straight, and the East land of Celebes, in of Defolam. The ftraight fight lye all in a right line, South and North necrelt.

The foure and twentieth, This morning we faw Cambina, and cannot pessibly bee more then Gambina, twentie leagues East North-east from the Straights of Celebes.

We were at one afternoone, North-east by North eight leagues from the West point thereof, it being a very high and round hill, the rest higher, but thicke land. The Wester part of what we fee lyeth South-east by South, and the Easter part South-east by East, eight leagues long at the

The flue and twentieth, We have done little, but are full under the Iland, and fee land to the North, whether Celebes or what I know not.

The feuen and twentieth, This morning weewere North and South with land lying twelve leagues East South-east from the East-side of Cambina. Comming neere it, the Wester part proued two Ilands, lying East North-east, &c.

The great Hand lyeth East by North fine leagues, making three or four head-lands. There lyeth a round Hand South from the laid head-lands, eight leagues diffant. From the Eafter point to another North-eaft t. North three leagues thence, to another North-eaft fixe leagues thence, to another North-east by North three leagues. From the last point saue one, South-east by East, eight leagues lyeth a shoale sixe leagues long as it beareth.

The eight and twentreth, From the faid point North-east eight leagues lyeth the lland Tica- Titabeffa. beffa, whereof we had fight. And from the faid point North-east by North fourteene leagues lyeth the East or North-east point or part of Button.

Toward night came a Caracoll with fortie or fiftie men aboord me, fent from the King of Buiton, among which were the Kings Vncle, and S nne, who knew Sidall and Spalding.

The one and thirtieth in the morning, we were fine leagues North-East, Northerly from the 50 point neerest Ticabessa, and within three leagues of the North part of Ticabessa, which are two Ticabessa. or three Iles. At noone, we were fixe leagues South-East from the East point of Button, whereby we have more way fince, then the ship can have runne.

The third, latitude foure degrees twenty fine minutes. I allow twenty foure leagues East North February, 16ck East wind, North-west and North North-West, but we are set Southerly.

The fourth in the morning about eight, we faw Burre, the East point whereof was North-Burre, East by East seuen leagues off, and the West point North by West nine leagues off. I allow twelve leagues, North-tail winde Westerly.

The fift, taking adulte what to doe, all men opined fitteft to goe for Barda; winds not feruing for the Moluces, we cocluded to goe thither. From the last Easter point of Burro, to another four Counses. 60 leagues East and West. The He Blor lieth South and North from the Eastermost end of Burro, Blor. foure or fine leagues. We faw Amboyno from Burro, East by North twelne leagues, and lieth ten Amboyne leagues long East, to the Eastward whereof lie other !les, East and West of good quantitie.

The fixt, we saw the high land of Banda, and is (in my opinion) twentie fine leagues diffent from the Easter part of Amboyno, East by South ; Southerly. The feuenth Pulorin, with the little round lle to the North, beareth South by East fine leagues distant. Puloway with Pulorin, East South-east, and West Northwest , three leagues off.

10

v topar. Palores. A chored in the roade of Laida.

The eight, we got into the roade or harbour of Banda, where the people and Hollanders came to welcome me. There is a small flat Iland lyeth to the North of Pulorins East end. Puloway and the entrance of the Harborough West Notherly, three leagues distant. The two points of the Sound heare North 1. East, &c. one 1. mile distant. He that is bound in, must borrow on the North fide, close viner the highest Hill. We roade in fixe : fathome water, the Soundes entrance beeing West South-west one mile off vs, Nera one mile North, and the low point of the round hill, West one mile. The Hope was put to the East, and came Piloted in the morrow.

Our Kines Lettere and Preferts to Pera.

The ninth, I went a shore, and deliuered his Maiesties Letter to Nera, together with a Present. being the best gilt cup with a couer, the best Head-piece and Gorget, and one of M. Buckes Pieces. 10 which cost twenty five Dollers. It was received with the most State that hath been knowner but they would bethinke themselves for our house till to morrow. The Hollanders shot five Chambers at my landing, and fine at my going aboord. I dieted with them. They report, that the Eak Monton bloweth eight moneths, and beginneth twixt the first and tenth of May.

Monfon.

The eleventh, we agreed for the building of our house.

The one and twentieth, I went to Ortain, to have conference with the people, where I pro-Urtatan. miled to be at Lantor the Sunday following.

Lanter. Our Kings Learer. The Hollanders Stic. No e of the

* Be chara.

The five and twentieth, in the atternoone, I was called, and went to Lanter, where I delivered the Kings Letter, the small gilt cup with a couer, the faire gilt Target, one Piece stocked, and a Barrell, which they received respectively.

Nakhada (hina (as the Hollanders Spie) came aboord mee in the night, to counsell meto speed. Where the Dutch haue a Factorie, let no man looke for better measure, large gifts being better regarded then good dealing.

The thirteenth, they of Linter demanded Screpinang one hundred and fortie rialls of eight, and I required leave to fell my cloath, as I might, with a publike price making. The Priest was fent from the State, to demaund payment of Rooba, Rooba, before we traded : which I denied, except upon condition the whole Country would bind themselues to lade me with Mace and Nuts, within foure moneths. At one hundred Dellers, he tooke time to be chary. I answered, that perceiuing they deferred time till the Hollanders arrivall (which was now in suspence, the Monsons beeing almost spent, and already some East winds come in) I would not give past ninetic ryalls: 30 wherewith he tooke his leave, having as frooth an out-fide, as rough in mind. The fixteenth, there came in three this Hollanders, without anchoring, that thirtie, fixteene, and nine pieces of excellent Ordnance. Two of these shippes came from Tarenate, having lost Paul Van Carden their Admirall, with seventie sowre men taken by the Spaniard, who would hearken to no other ransome for him, except the Fort of Machian, by him formerly taken, might be refigned. The Dutch offered fiftic thouland Dollers for him.

Three Hollan-Loffe of 74.

The feventeenth, the Hollanders visited me by St Brewer.

The eighteenth, the Hollanders or the two least shippes, came to visite me, and supped with me : but an Englishman reporteth, that they meane to harprife vs ere a moneth expire.

The nineteeth, the States fent againe for Rocha, Rooba, which I refused to pay, to they fent 48 againe, to tell me, that now they are together; but except I would exceed one hundred Dollers, I should faue my labour and not trouble my felfe. I sent them word againe, that though I laded not a graine, I would not give above one hundred. They fent soone after to call me, where after Accorded for Spice with the long dispute, we accorded at one huntred Dollers, Rooba, Rooba, three hundred and eightic Dollers, and Serepinang titty Dollers, betides Piffalin, a dutie to the foure Sabandares, of foure peeces S.traffa, or Malaian Pintadoes.

Bandan: ffer.

We received a Beame and waight, the Cattee poize ninetie nine Dollerss, and in the haberdepoize, fine pound thirteene 1. ounces : fo our Rials are too light.

The twentieth, this day we began to weigh, and the Hollanders comming ashore, made price at one hundred, with foure hundred Rooba, Rooba, fiftie Serepinang, and foure cloathes. We payed the Hollunders under-hand price, the we must have beene idle.

Accord with Puloway.

The three and twentieth, I ma ie a fecret accord with the Chiefe of Pulmay to fend a Factory thither, and were confirmed to lend them three hundred Rials, and give Serapinang one hundred Ruls, with foure Malaian Pintadors. The foure and twentieth, the Dutch hearing of my accord with Puloway, fought to prevent me.

The nine and twentieth there came fixe great shippes Hollanders, into the Roade, whom I is-S.x Hollanders.

luted with nine Peeces, answered with three: buides two small Pinnasses. The first of April, received by the Hope i on Puloway, 225. 4. Cattees, Mace, and 1307. 4. C. Nuts, which Mace (all bought by him) I marked with B. forditinction.

Aprilthe first. 1609. An English hou c. Two Hollanders.

The fourth, I went aboord to cure mine eye, which by the heat of Nuts, watching, &c., was very fore. I left the house and goods with Az users Spalding. There arrived from the Moluccostwo imall Hollanders. Note, that now the w. every morning, bloweth hard Easterly.

The ninth, the Dutch Admirall, Peter Williamfon Varboef, went alnore to Vrtatan. The Fleete that fortie Peeces of Ordnance : his thip but five. He delivered a letter from Count Manrice. without prefent, whereof when the people demanded, answer was made : that they had one but it was not yet accorded what it should be. This I understood.

CH A P.6. S.4.

The tenth, the Sabandar at my request, fent for the same Letter, which being in Portuguse, I perused, and found it onely an authoricall Instrument, binding the Prince and State, to confirme what their Admirals and Councels should accord with other States. It was written in Paper. fealed under the Contents, and left open for all.

The eleuenth, we began to bring our Nuts aboord, thereto confrained by the Dutch; their No. meaning was, to goe ashore within a day or two: so that we could neither scheets the best, nor 10 let them lie long enough in fweate.

The twelith, this night after the first watch, the States sent foure men to request my company ashore instantly, which I refused to doe till morning.

The thirteenth, I went betimes ashore, where the Sabandar of Nera came to visit me, and then Mim's after much talke, I propounded (as I had fundry times formerly done ) the formall deligering of the Fana Bandan, to the vie, and in the Name of his Maiestie of England, our Soueraigne, before the Hollanders did land, or begin their purposed Fort. They seemed to like well thereof, and concluded to be chary thereabout, and give me answere to day : but I doubt their inconstancies.

The fifteenth day, the Dutch went ashore, twentie Boats, one thouland and two hundred men: the Naturals fled.

The eighteenth, I went ashore, and sent for some Hollanders of note, to speake with mee, to whom I made knowne many wrongs I had received fince their comming in: withing redreife, and affirming, that though we were not at prefent strong enough to right our selues, yet his Maieltie of England, our Soueraigne, would not permit his Subjects to fullaine any dammage by their meanes, without speciall and found satisfaction.

I affirmed, that notwithstanding wrongs received, I could not chuse but Christianly advertise Note. them, that the people purposed to poylon their water, and to that end warned me not to drank thereof. He thanked me, and having beene with their Admirall, requested me from him, to have patience concerning Rice, till he had had counfaile therein. (Necessitie hath no Law.)

The twentieth, I went ashore to tetch the Rice, in part of Daton Putee his debt to the Company : but the Hollanders had dishonestly taken the same, notwithstanding the Admirall promifed that I should have it. Thence I went among the lawans, to have bought some Rice, who generally affirmed, that the Hollanders had straightly charged them, not to fell me any : neither durst Note. they, though I offered fine Dollers the Coyoung more then the Dutch paid. At my comming home, I found him that the Admirall had formerly fent vnto me, whom I requested to tell his Admirall, that I effee ned his to taking my Rice, a great wrong : and that if he were a Gentleman, he would not permit his base people to abuse me as I walked among them. Whereto was answered, that he was a Weauer. I reprehended the reporter, being an English-man serving them, who affirmed, that his owne people spake so of him generally. Thence I tooke my Praw, and went to Labatacca, where I found such small doings, as was not fit to keepe people thereabout: wherefore I appointed them to come away in the Skiffe, which I would fend for them and their 40 goods to day.

The two and twentieth, I went to Comby, where the Dutch did vs much wrong, even in our The Hellunders yard: whereof having fundry times complained without redresse, is argument, that it proceeded much wrong by order from the chiefe.

The foure and twentieth, they began their Fort.

The fine and twentieth, a Dunch Pinnasse from Puloway, would give me no newes of Browne ganthere. I mannaged my Skiffe, and went to Puloway, where I found little Spice. The people defired me to flay at Ayre Putee, promiting to lade me, offering to enact among tie the penaltie of death, to fuch as would fel one Cattee of Spice to the Hollanders. I feemed to diffrust their words, having once beforce deceived me: whereupon they offered to paile writings and oathes. I questioned the bringing of it abound, which they refused, fearing the Dutch. Toffered to send one Englishman in each Praw, and to runne the hazzard if the Duich tooke it : but they would not hazzard

The fixe and twentieth, in the morning, putting into my Boate foure Suckles of Mace, and many Nuts, with three Chiefe, to confider what to doe: by the way the Chiefe affirmed, that if we would not deale with them, their Spice should not upon the trees, and they would all dye, ere they would deale with the Hollanders. But they are wicked and faithlesse Moores, neither know I what to doe. For by going for the Moluceos, I must loofe two thousand Dollers owing here, and trade there vincertaine; and flaying two moneths more heere, will preuent going to 60 the Moluccos: At last we agreed.

The nine and twentieth, the Chiefe being convented, after many protests, they made mce a writing to deale with me onely, for all their Spice at Pulonay, and Puloron, and at Ayre Putce, Aye Putce, and not to fell or part with the Hollanders one Cattee thereof.

The Hollanders offered twelve thousand Dollers among the Countrey, to make their peace,

Dutch Fort be-

No:e.

and drive vs hence, which they refused : and defired me often, and earnestly, not to concert ill, in English kindnesse to the Dutch in Banda, ill rewarded.

Maythe tourth, 1609.

lorin had fold vs, not weighing to the Hollanders one Cattee.

The quarrels twixt the Dutch pulchres of the dead. Hence murthers and boftilitie. See my P. lg. 1 5.c. 16.5.2

Trunke. Note. Du ch Admiral mutthered. English curtefie to the Hollanders: but how repaid fince, the world hath and Bande Tes, grew partly out of the launy of thefe, and par:ly out of the intolency of those which ftead of merlicing, or ic-

Note. Shot with a

*I haue left out (fearing

that they permitted the Dutch to come ashore, and fell their Cloath, being upon a special confideration, to me immateriall.

The fourth of May 1609. I went to Puloway, where I found the Hollanders offer Cloath at $ our price. I found a thouland Cattees Nuts, and two hundred Cattees Mace, which they of Pr.

The eight, the Dutch there fent to request the conveyance of a Letter, and a fick man abourd them, which I promifed: but my Nuts being readie to lade, Nakhada Goa came to me from the Chiefe, to intreate me, not to carrie their man or letter, but stay also my selfe, which I refused. and fitted hence. Whereof hee having informed, they fent me word againe by him : that if I le went, they would make purchace of whatfoeuer I left behind, and account vs enemies : where-

The ninth, the people sent and required me, not to depart these foure daies. As I was going exercised for- to bed, there came a command upon our lives, that we should not stirre out of doores: and prefently thereupon, Theard that the Dutch were vpon their knees to the people. I armed my lelfe and went out among them, where I found the Dutch ouercome with feare; and demanding the chandling, & cause of comming abourd so late, they answered, that one of them was shot into the legge with his tie of the a Truncke, as he flept in their house: which caused them to feeke my helpe, and were intercepted by the way. I went home with them, and leaving three Erglifb with two of them in their house, I brought two Dutch home with me.

The tenth, in the morning, I caused the goods of the Dutch (at their earnest request) to bee brought home to my house, whereat the Countrey seemed offended with me.

There was counfaile taken, and resolution to kill the Dutch, but Nahhada Goa preserved their lives. The Dutch were commanded by the people, not to stirre out of doores, vpon paine of their liues, their goods and money registred. This evening many Prawes and men went hence. The twelfth, at night, there returned a Praw with newes, that they had flaine the Dutch Ad-mirall, with all his chiefe followers and counfaile. The thirteenth, I had much adoe to keepe the Dutch from being flaine, by those of Campon

Awrat, whose Sabandar was slaine by the Dutch. The foureteenth, two Dutch Pinnailes arrived, and the Countrey would faine have gotten them ashore: whereof my people, by order aduised them. They of Campon Awrat came all ar- 30 med, to haue flaine the Duich, which with much intreaty and danger, I preuented. About noone, I fent away my Schiffe with Letters, of, and for the Duch, This night, wee had much adoe to preserve the Dutch alive with carefull watch. The fifteenth, my Schiffe returned with Letters, from, and for the Dutch.

The fixteenth, the States confulted and refolued, that with me the Duich should be safe : but would not permit them aboord their shippes. I came aboord, and brought Letters from, and to the Dutch, and at the Harboroughes mouth, was hayled by fine Dutch Shallops, and other

The twentieth, in the euening, Simon Hoen, Viceadmirall, came aboord me, giving me many 40 thankes, for kindnelles shewed to the Dutch at Puloway. I shot leaven parting Guns.

The fine and twentieth, I manned my Praw, and went to Labatacca, where they defired a Our hou cold man or two Ledgers, to buy their Spice, which I promifed them. The Hollanders pulled downe my house, and satisfied me for the same, one hundred and siftie Dollers, besides fortic of the boords. When I was going tobed, Van Bergell, and Samuel King, came from the Vice-admirall, to let me know, that they had counfelled concerning my Trade at Labaracca, and concluded to permit my quiet Trale there : except at fuch times, as they should come to surprise the same. Also, they requested me not to take offence, if their Boates laied mine aboord, to fearth what aide I did to their enemies, which I tooke in ill part. And in preuention of which inconveniences, I propounded vnto them : that if they would pay me fuch debts, as Nera and Cumber owed me, 50 amounting to twelve or thirteene hundred Dollers, I would trade at Puloway and Pulorin only: whereof they promifed me answere to morrow.

The fixe and twentieth, Van Bergell brought me word, that I might trade at Labatacca. The feauen and twentieth, I fent Matthew Porter with a Cargafon to Labatacca.

The one and thirtieth, I went to Labatacca to forward businesse. About supper time, Van Bergell and Samuel King came aboord me, defiring private speach with me from their Vice-Admirall : and going into my Cabbine, after many Italian-like Complements, they delinered me a note from their Vice-Admirall, permitting vs trade, but a robibiting victuall and munition to be carried to the people, which they held for enemies, and requesting that their Boates might passe by them to be fearched to that ende, which elfe should be done by force, threatning confileati- 62 on of thip and goods.

I answered; that I would follow my trade, wherein if he wronged me, it would be too heavy neue ; this & other letters for him to answer. That I had a remainder of the Rice, with I fermerly acquainted him, which on both fides. I would fell, except they tooks an vnanfwerable course therein. That for Munition, I had in the shippe not past twenty hand-gunnes, belonging to fundry poore men, the sale whereof I neither could nor would preuent, except they would buy them, which I would cause to be reasonably foll. Concerning my subjection to their search, lanswered, to have rather my effate, and life hazarded here, then my hitherto vnipotted reputation at my comming home:nay, I should therein become a Traytor vinto my Soueraigne, wherewith my conceit was neuer stained.

CHAP. 6. S.4.

The second of June, I fent the Vice-Admiral and Councell a few lines in Answer thereof, by June, 1609. Augustine Spalding, seeking all wayes of Peace.

The third, I received a note from the Dateb, whereby they would continue their fearch by all meanes, offering to buy the hand-gunnes, but not permit the Rice to be carried. Whereto in-To flantly by their Messenger, I answered, as followeth,

THE Vice-Admirall, M. Simon Iahnton Hoen, &c. of the Dutch Fleete, may pleafe to know; My reply.

That to the ende, to take away all cause of quarrell from them to vs., and she world our homest cause, and their wilfulnesse: Whereas they will not permit my Rice to bee carried to Puloway, I will likewise therein consent to them, upon condition, that they shall remoke their purposed search. And to the end they shall have some securitie for the performance, I will posse my yet unfallisted word; or if that (through your incredulitie) be not sufficient, mine outh unto your Deputies, or your selues, generally a: pleasure to the same effect. But if herein you will not (through desire of quarrell with the English) consent unto my reasonable request: then be pleased to knowe, that I will fend it, at what price or ha-20 zard foener. Concerning our munition, I write nothing; your purpose to buy the same, beeing preuen-

tion to your owne doubts, which I pray let bee done speedaly for your owne satisfactions. The I commit you to the Almightie who profer your honest proceedings, as I wish to mine owne. From abourd the Hector in Banda, this third of lune, 1 609.

WILLIAM KEELING.

Toward night, they fent me againe their last resolution ( they having called foure Counsells Dutchresoluthereabout) holding their determination for the fearch. Whereupon, confidering their purpofes, tion. and that the least breach would prooue totall, wherein fixtie two men, against a thousand or more, could not performe much (to the hazarding of thip and goods or at least not permittion to 30 lade, their Fort commanding all) I yeelded as vpon constraint to the search.

The fift, I went with my last Rice to Puloway, the Hollanders having first fent abourd, and fearched, to our great discontents; notwithstanding which, the ship at Lanter we aued vs, and called vs aboord. Irefused; they faid they would thoote: but I neither went aboord, nor they

The foureteenth, I went to Labatacea, where I bought fome Spice, and put away fome cloth.

The foure and twentieth, I went to Cumber, whence I stowed eleven Suckles Mace. The fine and twentieth, I went to Lantor to recour fome debts made by Sidall, which were denied. The fixe and twentieth, I fent my great boat for Puloway. I went to Labaracca, whence

I flowed two Suckles Mace. The feuen and twentieth, my Boat returned with Spice from Puloway. The Iauans began to have conference with the Hollanders.

The nine and twentieth, I went to Cumber, whence I stowed foureteene Suckles Mace.

The first of I sty, 1609. I went to Cumber to account with debters. The second, the Hollanders July, 1609. ( with all the strength they could make, leaving the shippes and fort weakely manned) went and tooke Labatacea: where, as they fay, they killed twenty or fixteene perfons, and burned the Labataceatatooke Labitacca: where, as they tay, they kined evenly of nations persons, and build have hen by the Towne, bringing away pots and pannes. I am verily perfwaded, that fortie men would have helladers, done as much as they did, with more then tenne times to many.

The fourth, I fent to Cumber, and one of my Guferates countelled me to goe no more: for they distrust my Intelligence with the Dutch.

The fixteenth, before day, the Hollanders with their whole power went to the East-ward, and having burned certaine boates, and returning to take Salomo, were there at much strite about landing, not who should land soonest, but who might stay longest aboord. By which, and other Salamorepul their defaults, they were repulled with the loffe of fixe men, befides many hurt : among whom teth the Dank the Gouernour, Mr. Iacob de Bitter, is reported to have behaved himselfe worthily there. Afterward, Matthew Porter and others, defired to goe a flore, which I permitted, by whom one ferr me word, that the Hollanders meant to take me, and withed me to looke well to my thippe and felte. The cause, as he faith, was this: They report that the two last nights wee made fignes a thore; (and were by the people; ariswered ) of the, Hollanders prouision to land : whereof, God knoweth, that I knew nor heard not.

The leventeenth, the Dutch tene Van Bergell, and Samuel King abourd mee, requesting to know when I hoped to be gone; wherein I could not fatisfie them, Puloway delaying mee as & doth. They offered to make good all my debts, if I would be gone speedaly, which I refused: affirming that the Company worldnot feele to small a loste. Also, that I could not answer it at Note. home, having stayed till now, that lading is readie. We had some speach concerning the suppofed fignes, which we should make to the Countrey against them: Wherein I made just proteste to the contrary.

CHAP.6. S.5.

202

They affirmed vs to have made fignes two nights together, and faid, that many Depositione were taken thereupon : (a ligne of their purpole to quarrell with vs.) Also, that one of my men vefferday being in their Fort demanded, why we made fignes to the Countrey! should answere that we had realon to to doe, the Countrey being to much indebted vnto vs, and the Dutch hindering vs what they can. Which imposture, I had no patience longer to hearken vnto, but pawned my hand that they could not preue any thing, first or last : wishing them to take their courles. Howbeit, that I might veterly preuent all cause of mistrust in them of vs euen in the whole Worlds epinion : I offered to goe ride in Laboan lana , where I might neither know their Rir. 10 rings, nor could make fignes to hurt them.

The eighteenth, in the afternoone the Dutch fent many of their chiefe aboord me, who at fint demanded kindly, whether I continued in my former determination of lading here! whereto I answered yea. Whereupon they defired me to take some course to goe hence in friendship, I anfwered, that now Spice was readie, I hoped to get hence within twentie dayes laden, and in friendship. Many reasons passed betweene vs : but when they saw my purpose, they deline. red me a note from their Vice-Admirall and Councell, wherein were forged as many vntruthes as lines. The Copie whereof followeth.

The Dutch their note, fraughted few lines may ons, for all of this Fort, how it was li-

He Generall Master William Keeling , May please to know, that it bath beene by our Depairs 20 proffered unto him, that if he thought good to transport ouer to us, the Debts remayning among the transaction with as many Banuancles, and then in friend/hip witharaw from the Roade, with his simple (which himselfe heretofm varieths, 25 to hath partly made mention of to some of vs.) we are resolved to deale with him in that behalfe. And albeit, this reasonable proffer, to eschew quarrell, is by vs to him motioned : yet hath the Generall afore-said denyed to accept the same. Notwithstanding we have sufficient occasion enough, with good reason to comingrate attecti- mand him, with his faid ship, to withdraw from forth this Roade, and out of our Fleete also, without the command of the Artillery of the Fortresse of Naslau: and that the fore-faid Generall may understand Christ a helps the reasons which mound us to the same we have at large remonstrated the same, as followeth. on performed wato them. &c. together with their felfe worthleffe ouer weening.

The eight of Aprill, 1609. The Worshipfull Admirall Peter Williamson Var Hoef, being anchored with his Fleete, in the Hands of Bands, and there understanding of the Merchants of the wnited East India Company, how they were through the Inhabitants of Banda, daily constrayned and molefted, and also sometimes dispossessed of their Clothes and Merchandizes, which they held for themselves at such rates as they pleased, satisfying for them, as and when they thought The building good : and to remayned indebted to much, as their debt vinto the Generall East India Company, amounted vnto aboue twentie thousand Rials of eight, without intention to recontent the same. ked of the In- And further that our Liegers, concerning their lives, have ever lived in very doubtfull estate, fearing, leaft daily they would votimely practice their ends, as appeared few yeares past, they have murthered our Merchants, and forcibly taken other some, and after their custome, made Heathens 40 clare. Befides, they propha-

Wherefore the Admirall afore-faid was moved by all friendly meanes, to make a Castle or Forned their Buriall ground to treffe, whereby our Liegers, and Merchandizes, might reft in better fafety, both against the Perthit purpole, tugall, and against all other our Enemies : which by most of the chiefe Oran-Cayas, was condescended vinto. And thereupon, have wee proceeded to the building of a Fortreffe, vpon the homination to Iland Nerra. Which Fortreffe, being about halfe finished, the Admirall Var Hoen abouesaid, the Bandinefes. hath procured a Convention of the chiefe Oran-Cayas, and Councell of the Ile of Banda, to meet And how vnlikely is it that with him, and other of his Councell at Rateo: and there to have entred in treatie of a friendly they would adaccord and contract together. To which effect, the faid Admirall appointed the Fifcall, or luespisate their fice of the Fleet, belides other of good account, as Hoftages, to continue at Kenacke: that there- 50 by, they, the rather or with leffe feare might come to the Admirall aforesaid, and his Councell.

Thus the Admirall, with divers of his Councell, together with a Company of his Souldiers, the two and twentieth of May, 1609. came to Ratoo, the nominated place of Convention; their being a Bandanese approached vnto him out of the Woods; who told the Admirall, Their practices that the Oran-Gayas , and other chiefe of the Iles , were neere there in the Woods , but were fo timerous of the Souldiers, that the Admirall had with him, as they feared to come vnto him : and therefore prayed him and his Counfell to come vnto them. The Admirall understanding the report, passed towards them, together with his laid Councell, and left his Souldiers at their appointed place. And being entred amongst them, hee found the Woods replenished with armed Black-Moores, Bandarefes, and Orm-Cayas, who instantly incircled 60 them, and without much conterence betweene them paffed, were by them treacherously and villanoutly maffacred, and gave every of our chiefe, no leffe then twentie wounds. This Stratageme thus performed, they prefently affaulted the Company of Souldiers, intending to have ferned them with the like fawce. But they partly in feare, and doubt of fome treachery, armed themselves, and stood in their defence, and encountered one another, so as in fine they betooke themselves to their best refuge, with losse of some of their chiefe, and so fled vnto Carack : and there have murthered the Fifcall or Iustice afore-laid, with the rest of the hostages, besides diuers others of our people, who were walked into the Woods, to gather Cocus Nuts : infemuch, as at that time, were murthered about forty of ours by the Bandaneffer, contrary to their oathes and promifes. All which, prouoketh vs to execute and practife all revenge possible, toward the inhumane treacherous Bandanesses: which occasions prickeys forward, to prosecute this present bloudy warre against them. Then followed many presumptions of his assistance of the Bandaneffes, by English Powder and Munition, by fignes, &c. which I omit. They conclude on those

10 fuppositions.

We, by vertue of our Commission, and Patent of his Princely Excellency, commaund the forefaid Generall to withdraw with his ship from forth our Road out of our Fleet, and without the command of the Artillery of the Foretreffe of Naffan, within the time of fine daies , after the date hereof. And in that we have conquered, by force of Armes, the Iland Nera, fo doe we also pretend, and hold the Roades thereabout depending, as the Road of Labatacea, &c. to bee under our command : and will not permit any ( the time that we warre with the Bandaneffes ) to anchor there.

Thus by vs ordained, past, and absolutely resoluted upon by the Vice-Admirall, and residue of the Councell in the shippe of Hollandia, vpon the Roade of Banda, the eight and twentie of

Simon Iohnson Hoen, Iacob de Bitter, Hen: Van Bergell, Iohn Cornelisson Wist, Will: Iacobson, 1609. Simon Martens, Rufger Tomassen, Marlaben. 1609. Peter Babucc. 1609. Will Vanderwort,

Whereto I briefely answered by word, that I could not answere my so going hence (lading being now ready ) to my Countrey : and that vnlesse I were otherwise commaunded then by words, I would ride here till I were laden, which would be within fine and twenty daies at the vttermolt. They affirmed, that this their fignification to me, was answere. Whereto I applyed, that oftentimes rash men threatned to kill, which they durit not for life performe. I shot frue parting Peeces.

The nineteenth, I fent away my Schiffe for Pulman, to know of riding there. Van Bergell 30 came abourd to fearch the Boate; I willed him to tell the Vice-Admirall, that I would leave a Factorie at Puloway, in case of constraint: and without constraint I would not hence.

The twentieth, about one this morning, my Schiffe returned from Puloway; without note of our debts, or Inuentory of goods, the principall causes of my writing. He onely affirmed, that the people were willing to pay their debts, if we could flay hiteene or twentie daies : also offer ring vs their best Road at Pulaway. The Datch and we came to some accord for the time of our flay, and for our debts, the Monton also inuiting vs thereto, and the Trade which already we had.

The first of August 1 609. peace generally published twixt the Dutch and Countrey, is an The first of vncomfortable argument , of the Pulojous breaking with vs. The Dutch fent me a Letter of August, 1009. credit, for the receit of my debs left at Banda, payable at Bantans. The Hollanders this evening, Peace between 40 flot an hundred and fittie Peeces of Ordnance, for ioy of peace. Vpon the Governors carneft in the Bellanders treatie, I went to fee the Dutch Fort, whose square may be foote, having thirtie Peeces and the tanda-of Ordnance in circa, whereof eight very good Braffe Demi-canons. The fourth, I fent my Boat to fetch away goods, wherein came a Seruant of Nakhada Guferat, by whom I videritood that the Pulswans were refolued to let me haue no more Spice, except fome little, to shaddow their wrong vnto vs: wherefore I fent the Boat againe for Browne. F Perfidy of the being faire by the Towne, shot fine Peeces, the better to procure my people thence: they not llanders. perceiving that we tooke any displeasure at their ill dealings. I sent againe for Browne; which Boat flaying long, I shot two severall warning Peeces. Wher supon M. Browne came abourd me; but not Spalding : affirming, that they would not let him come, before I came ashore. Wherefore 50 In those patterns to the Early was a not remember of the thing of Mileffer The time of a mental part of the time of the tim more thankes to the love of his good pawne, then their honesties. The tenth, I weighed an halfe handred by our ordinary Banda Beame, and it weighed rifte 1. Bandawaights. Cattees, whereby the Cattee appeareth to weigh fine pound, foureteene 1. ounces haberdepoize. I weighed allo the fingle Cattee, which made fine pound foureteene . ounces haberdepoize:

The eleventh, we anchored neere Macaffar vpon Celebes, I being very defirous to got thither, Macaffar vpon hoping vpon reports, to finde Cloues there for Cloth.

The twelfth, I fent my Schiffe armed, to inquire of the place, who returning, heard that Ma-60 caffer was yet - a daies faile to the North : and that three moneths fince, there was a Dutch thip A ship of Hotloft in fight of the Towne : vpon which dangerous report, we gaue ouer the fearch of Macaffar.

The one and twentieth, we anchored in laccara, where we found the Benda and Enquifen, two Date shippes, having beene eight daies there: who brought our people (in the Hope ) and their goods from Amboyno.

· July eighteene,

all the manager

that neere their Mergid to pro-Religion? fince may awaken the Readers Obferuation. The two and rwentieth of May, 1609. The Admirall and Councell

of the Hollan-libertie, and

The

Set fayle from

They arrive in

The fixe and twentieth, comming neere the point, we met a Praw with Ralfe Hearne, lent by Malter John Saris to me, who had readie three thousand foure hundred eighty one bagges of Pepper. We got betimes into the Roade, and Iohn Saris came aboord me in a Dutch Boat. The thirteenth, upon the Kings request, I fent five and twentie armed men to make him na-

ftime, which he willed in honour of his having the last night, made conquest of his Wines vir-

The three and twentieth, having taken in there foure thousand and nine hundred bags of P.D. per, I questioned the leaving of a Factorie, where to we accorded.

Factory at

The feuen and twentieth, I appointed the Factorie at Bantam, (viz:) Augustine Spalding, Factor, at fiftie pound fterling a yeare : Francis Kellie, Chirurgion, fortie fiue shillings a moneth : le lobn Parfons thirtie shillings a moneth: Robert Neale, twentie nine shillings a moneth: Augustine Admell, foure and twentie shillings a moneth : Etheldred Lampre, twentie shillings a moneth : William Driner, twentie shillings a moneth: William Wilson, two and twentie shillings a moneth: William Lammell, sixteene shillings a moneth: Phillip Badnedg, sixteene shillings a moneth: Francifco Domingo, twelue shillings a moneth : Inan Seraon, ten shillings a moneth : Adrian, Master Tower fons Boy, ten shillings a moneth. I also hired fixe persons to goe with vs for England, and make all possible speed.

The nine and twentieth, we ended with the Gouernor about our customes, with much adoe. The thirtieth, we delivered the Companies bufineffe from Saris to Spalding, giving him speciall charge of the Dutch infolency and hate towards vs, and therefore to haue little to do with them. 20 The fecond of October, 160 9. I went and tooke my leaue of the Gouernour, and defired his fauour to our Factor, which he promited in feeming hartily.

The third, betimes I came abour I for adue, having vitited all my friends.

The first of November, 1.609. About the distance fixe hundred and fiftie from Bantam . wee were in fine and twenty degrees South Latitude, having foure and twenty degrees variation and foure and twentie daies running it

The nine and twentieth, we had all day an hard gale of wind, which towards night prooued a fforme, at West South-west from the North-ward, and put vs to try with our maine course, continuing all night, and the next day. Wherein ( as fundry other times before ) we have found a report of Linfebor to be crue, that generally all Eafterly winds comming about to the Northward, if it proue raine, prefently the win a commeth about to the West South-west, and there 30 bloweth. We were in two and thirting South when the storme tooke vs, and had about this teene degrees variation, and vpward.

Variation thir teene degrees. eight, 1 609. Terra Donatall.

The eight of December, 1 609 We tell betimes in the morning, with Terre Donatall, some fixe leagues off vs, the Weller part where the variation was about eight a degrees. We were at noone vader thirtie one degrees, and feuen and twentie minuts of Latitude, wee standing South South-East (wind at South-west ) under I w sailes.

We met a Hollander, and volerstood by them, that the Erasmus ( a ship of the Fleete, which made homewards, at my arrivall with the Dragon at Bantam ) being very leaky at Sea; and the rest of the Fleete so leaving her, steered for the Iland Mauritim, and there valaded the faid 4 Erasmus, leaving the goods there, with five and twentie persons to guard the same, till it might be fene for ; the reft of her company being now in this fhip ;

The latitude and description of the 11e Mauritius,

That vpon Maurius were two havens; the one, called the North-west, lying vinder twenty degrees, somewhat lesse; the other, the South-East in twenty degrees and fifteene minuts, all kind of refreshments being there to bee had as Fish, Turtles, Manatees, in great abundance, Fowles infinite, and Goates, newly by them brought thither, in fome reasonable number, Hogs allo, and the place very healthfull. The Iland is betweene thirtie and fortie leagues in circuit: and the variation there being one and twentie degrees the North-westing. They came from Bantam in May, were a moneth getting Mauritins, stayed there toure moneths and an halfe, and have beene fixe weekes thence, whereof feuenteene daies with contrary winds.

Cage Day .- Tho two and twentieth, we were in Latitude thirty fine degrees, twentie eight minuts, and within fearen leagues of the Cape Agulbas, which rifeth like two Iles, we being South-East of it: but comming more thwart like three Ilands, two Bayes North making three perspicuous points low, and berning round. We founded about featen in the evening, and had feventy feven tathome water, Oazy ground, being South off the shore, about fine leagues the most, and as I geffe, newly got to the Westward of the Flats shoaldest.

I observed the Sunnes setting, and found small variation, having eight and twentie; degrees (South of the West) Azimoth, our latitude being about fine and thirtie degrees, and fix and twen-

A man bound home upon this Coast, finding no weather for observation, either for latitude 60 or variation, may boldly and lately keepe himselfe in fixtie fathome water, and shelly ground: and when he findeth Oazy, is very neere Cape Das Aghalas and when he loofeth ground at one hundred and twenty fathome line, he may resolue that he hath past the faid Cape, prouded hee be within the latitude of thirty fixe degrees.

The three and twentieth, we steered all night, West by North, and West North-west, a fresh gale Easterly, and in the morning, saw the land all along, about eight or ten leagues from vs high land. About noone, we were neere Cape Buona Speranza, hauing runne twixt Cape D'aghnlas Cape De Buino and it, in seventeene houres. We got within three leagues of the Suger-loafe, and stood off and Springer

The eight and twentieth, I received by the Datch Boate fixe sheepe (the fatted that ever I faw ) from the lland : the taile of one of them was eight and twenty inches broad, and weighed five and thirty point weight.

I received of the Duch a Maine Top-fayle (whereof we had extreame want) and delivered Maine top faile 10 them a note to the Company, to receive twelve pound twelve thillings for the lame: befides, bought, their promises to vs for other wants, are very honest and Christian-like. We tooke fat sheep left on Pengwin Iland, and fet leane in their room. I left a note also there of my comming, and the flate of my company, as others had done before.

The tenth of January, in the morning, wee were under Jayle homeward. Note, that all the January the time we have beene heere, the wind buth beene Westerly , and Southerly : and the two former tents, 1609. times that I was heere, at the fame feafon, it blew flormes Eafterly.

The twentieth, we pasted the Southerne Tropicke, about noone. The Dutch came and supped South Tropick. with me : that three parting Peeces.

Thothirtieth, before day, we faw S. Helena, having steered fixtle fixe leagues West in that la Santa Helena, 20 titude. We roade on the North-west part thereof, a mile from the shore, North-west from the Chappell, in two and twenty fathome fandy ground. The Hand may lie truly two hundred and feuenty, or two hundred and eightie leagues to the West-ward, from the land of Athopia, we were taine to steere close in under the high-land, to get ground, the bancke being steepe too, and without no anchoring. The ninch of February, wee weighed, and made fayle home-ward: having received aboord February o.

heere, for refreihing, nineteene Goates, nine Hogges, and thirteene Pigges. The fixteenth, we faw the Ile Afcention feuen or eight leagues Welt South-welt from vs.

The eight and twentieth, in the morning, the wind being Westerly, and reasonable faire wea-Westerthe ther, westeered with the Dutch (who had made a Wast vpon his Mizen Mast-head for vs.) He Dutch to our 30 told vs, that he had but eight or nine men flanding, the reft ficke, and fixe and forty dead. A Christian grieuous chastisement vnto them, and to vs, a neuer sufficiently acknowledged mercy: that they griete. who offered to spare me ten or twenty men, or more vpon occasion, should so generally decay, and we loofe no one, nay every one in good health.

Toward night, at my Companies earnest fute, confidering our leake, with many other iust causes, on our part, besides our want of meanes to aide them, though we should accompany them: they having ( without any our speech or motion to the like end ) desired vs to acquaint such Dutch, as we should meete with their distresse, that they might take the best course for their ayde, wee made faile, and left them not without sensible and Christian greefe, for our want of meanes to helpe them. Latitude forty fine degrees and fixe minutes.

The first of May, 1610. We had very faire weather, wind South-west, latitude forty nine May1610. degrees, and thirteene minuts.

The fecond, betimes in the morning, the wind came at South, and blew an hard storme, which put vs into our fore-courfe.

Toward night, we spake with a Lubecker, who told vs, that Silley bare East by North (thirtie eight Duch miles, which is fiftic leagues ) from vs : and the weather being faire, we made faile. I told them of the distressed Dutch.

The ninth, in the morning, Beachy was North North-East, three leagues from vs. The tenth, about Sun-set, we anchored in the Downes.

Captaine WILLIAM HAVVKINS, his Relations of the Occurrents which happened in the time of his residence in India, in the County of the Great Mogoll, and of bis departure from thence ; written to the Company.

His barbarous v fage at Surat by Mocrebchan: The Portugals and Icluits treacheries againft him.

*Captain Keeling and be had kept company rogether althe voyage before related ( & not nce ifuil to bee repeated) to the Roade of D.life in See. sora, whence on lune the 24. Captrine Keeing departed in the Dr4gen, as you have beard : the other in the Heller for Sura: (the meane while built a Pinnaffe) on the four b of Auguft hauing received from th: Generall on vader the Great Scale. He commeth en shoare the 28. of August, Chanchana.

The Captaine

Mocrebeban.

T my arrivall " vnto the Bar of Surat, being the foure and twentieth of August, 1608. I presently sent vnto Surat Francis Buck, Merchant, with two others. to make knowne vnto the Gouernour, that the King of England had fent me as his Emballadour vnto his King, with his Letter and Present : I received the Go- 20 uernours answere, both by them, and three of his Seruants sent me from Surat, that he, and what the Country affoorded, was at my command : and that I should be very wilcome, if I would vouchfafe to come on shore. I went accompanied with my Merchants, and others, in the best manner I could, besitting for the honour of my King and Country. A: my comming on shore, after their barbarous manner I was kindly received, and multitudes of people following me, all deirous to fee a new come people, much nominated, but neuer came in their parts. As I was nevre the Gouerners house, word was brought me that he was not well, but I thinke rather, crunke with Affion or Opion, being an aged man. So I went vnto the chiefe Customer, which was the onely man that Sea-faring causes belonged vnto (for the government of Surat, belonged vnto two great Nol lemen; the one being Vice-Roy of Decar, named Chan- 10 chana; the other, Vice-Roy of Cambaya and Surat, named Mocreb chan, but in Surat hee had no command, faue onely ouer the Kings Cultomes) who was the onely man I was to deale withall. After many complements done with this chiefe Customer, I told him that my comming was to establish and settle a Factory in Surat, and that I had a Letter for his King from His Maiefly of England, tending to the same purpose, who is desirous to have league and amitie with his King, in that kind, that his Subjects might freely goe and come, fell and buy, as the custome of all Nations is : and that my thip was laden with the commodities of our land, which by intelligence of former trauellers, were vendible for these parts. His answere was, that he would dispatch a Foot-man fer Cambaya, vnto the Nobleman his Master : for of himselfe he could doe the Commissi- nothing without his order. So taking my leave, I departed to my lodging appointed for mee, 40 which was at the Custome-house : In the morning, I went to will the Governour, and after a Prefent given him, with great gravity and outward flew of kindnesse, he entertained me, bidding me most heartily welcome, and that the Countrey was at my command. After complements done, and entring into the maine affaires of my bufineffe, acquainting him wherefore my comming was for these parts: he answered me, that these my affaires did not concerne him, because they were Sea-faring causes, which did belong vnto Mocrebchan, vnto whom hee promifed me to dispatch a Foot-man vnto Cambaya, and would write in my behalfe, both for the vnlading of my flippe, as also concerning a Factorie. In the meane while, he appointed me to lodge in a Merchants house, that understood the Turkish, being at that time my Trouch-man, the Captaine of that shippe which S' Edward Michelborne tooke.

It was twentie daies ere the answer came, by reason of the great waters and raines that men could not paffe. In this time, the Merchants, many of them very friendly feafted me, when it was faire weather that I could get out of doores for there fell a great raine, continuing almost the time the Mellengers were absent, who at the end of twenty cases I rought answer from Mocrebehan, with Licence to land my goods, and buy and fell for this prefent Voyage : but for a fur ture Trade, and fetling of a Factorie, he could not doe it without the Kings commaundement, which he thought would be effected, if I would take the paines of two moneths trauell, to deliuer my Kings Letter. And further, he wrote vnto his chiefe Customer, that all, whatsoeuer I brought, should be kept in the Custome-house, till his Brother Sheck Abder Rachim came, who 60 should make all the hast that possibly could bee, for to chuse such goods as were fitting for the King: (these excuses of taking goods of all menfor the King, are for their owne private gaine.) Vpon this answere, I made all the hast I could, in easing our shippe of her heavy burthen of Lead, and Iron, which of necessitie must be landed. The goods being landed, and kept in the Customers power, till the comming of this great man, perceiving the time precious, and my thip not able long to flay, I thought it convenient to fend for three Chests of Money, and with that to buy Commodities of the same forts, that were vendible at Priaman and Bantam, which the Guzza rats carry yearely thither, making great benefit thereof. I began to buy against the will of aff the Merchants in the Towne, whose grumoling was very much, and complaining vnto the God pernour and Customer, of the leave that was granted me, in buying those Commodities, which would cut their owne throates at Priaman and Bantam, they not fulpecting that I would buy Commodities for those parts, but onely for England.

CHAP. 7.S.I. Captaine Hawkins. Prond injurious Portugalls.

207

At the end of this businesse, this great man came, who gave me licence to ship it : before the 10 shipping of which I called a Councell, which were the Merchants I had, and those that I thought fitting for the businesse I pretended, demanding every ones opinion according to his place, what should be thought convenient for the delivery of his Maiesties Letter, and the establishing of a Trade. So generally it was agreed and concluded, that for the effecting of these waighty affaires, it neither would, nor could be accomplished by any, but ly my felfe, by reason of my experience in my former trauels and language : as also I was knowne to all, to be the man that was sent as Embassadour about these affaires. After it was concluded, and I contented to stay, I made what haft I could in dispatching away the ship, and to ship the goods. This done, I called Mafter Marlow, and all the company that was on shore before mee, acquainting them with my pretence, and how they should receive for their Commander Master Marlow : willing them that 20 they obey and reuerence him, in that kind as they did me. This done, I brought them to the water fide, and feeing them imbarke themselves, I bad them farewell.

The next day, going about my affaires to the great mans brother, I met with some tenne or twelve of our men, of the better fort of them, very much trighted, telling me the heaviest newes, as I thought, that ever came vnto me, of the taking of the Barkes by a Portugal Frigat or two and all goods and men taken, onely they escaped. I demanding in what manner they were taken, and Peringal, and whether they did not fight; their answer was no: M. Marlow would not suffer them, for that the thirtie menia Portugals were our friends: and Bucke, on the other fide, went to the Portugall without a them. pawne, and there he betrayed vs, for he neuer came vnto vs after. Indeed, Bucke went vpon the This not figh. oath and faithfull promife of the Captaine, but was never fuffered to returne. I prefently iene a brityd d to our

30 letter vnto the Captaine Maior, that he release my men and goods, for that we were Englishmen, menby the Inand that our Kings had peace and amity together. And that we were fent vnto the Mogols cound diens with trey by our King, and with his letter vnto the Mogol, for his subjects to trade in his Countrey: much digrace, and with his Maiefties Commission for the government of his subjects. And I made no question, redwith men but in delinering backe his Maiefties subjects and goods, that it would be well taken at his Kings eft your Selehands: if the contrary, it would be a meanes of breach. At the receit of my letter, the proud Rate fgbts with call braved fo much, as the Messenger told me, most vilely abusing his Maiestie, tearming him the Foregate. King of Fishermen, and of an Iland of no import, and a fart for his Commission, scorning to fend The intollera-

It was my chance the next day, to meete with a Captaine of one of the Portugal Frigats who taine, 40 came about businesse sent by the Captaine Maior. The businesse as I vnderstood, was that the Gouernour should send me as prisoner vnto him, for that we were Hollanders. I vnderstanding what he was, tooke occasion to speake with him of the abuses offered the King of England, and his subiects: his answer was, that these Seas belonged vito the King of Portugall, and none ought to come here without his license. I told him, that the King of Englands license was as good as the King of Spaines, and as free for his Subjects, as for the King of Spaines & he that faith the contract ry, is a traytor, and a villaine, & fo tel your great Captaine, that in abusing the King of England, he is a bale villaine, and a traytor to his King, and that I will maintaine it with my fword, if he dare come on thore. I fending him a challenge, the Mores perceiting I was much mooted, caused the Portugal to depart. This Portugal fome two hours after, came to my house, promiting me, that The angle pre-

50 he would procure the libertie of my men and goods, to that I would be liberall vinto him: I enter-foners tent or tained him kindly, and promifed him much, but before he departed the Towne, my men and Goe goods were fent for Gos.

I had my goods readic, fome fine dayes before I could be cleare, and have leave, for they would Therbird of not let them be shipped, vnt. Il this great man came, which was the third of October: and two October. dayes after, the ship fet fayle, I remaining with one Merchant William Finch, who was ficke the The ship degreater part of his time, and not able to ftirre abroad to doe any bufineffe: the reft were two fer- parterbleauing uants, a Cooke, and my Boy. These were the companie I had, to defend our selves from so many Markins and enemies, which lay daily lurking to deftroy vs: aiming at me for the stopping of my passage to his figures in the great Mogel. But God preserved me, and in spight of them all, I tooke heart and resolution the Country.

60 to goe forwards on my trauels. After the departure of the ship, I understood that my goods and The perfidy & men were betrayed vnto the Portugal, by Mocreb-chan, and his followers: for it was a plot laid treason of Moby the lefinte and Mocreb-chan, to protract time till the Frigats came to the Bar, and then to di- the lefinte Pto spatch me: for till then, this dogge Mocreb-chan his brother came not: and the comming of these nine. Frigats was in fisch secrety, that till they had taken vs, we heard no newes of them.

Pertuga'l Cap.

After the departure of my ship, I was so misused, that it was vnsufferable, but so long as my thip was at the Bar, I was flattered withall. But howfoeuer, well vied or ill, it was not for mee to take thought for any thing, although remaining in an heathen Countrey, inuironed with fo many enemies, who daily did nothing else but plot to murther me, and cosen me of my goods, as hereafter you shall vnderstand. First, misused by Mocreb-chan, as to Iraue postession of my goods, taking what he pleased, and leaving what he pleased, giving me such a price as his owne barbarous conference afforded; that from thirtie five would give but eighteene, not regarding his brothers bil, who had full authoritie from him; and how difficult it was to get money from his chiefe feruant, after the time expired, as it is best knowne to vs, who tooke the paines in receining a fmall part thereof, before his comming to Surat: and after his comming, I was barred of all: al- 10 though he outwardly diffembled, & flattered with me almost for three moneths, feeding me with faire promises of payment, and other kindnesses. In the meane time, he came to my house three times, Iweeping me cleane of all things that were good, fo that when he faw, that I had no more good things left, he likewise by little and little degraded me of his good lookes. Almost all this time, William Finch was extreame ficke of the Fluxe, but thankes be to God recourred past all hope, I, on the other fide, could not peepe out of doores for feare of the Peringals, who in troops lay lurking in by-wayes, to give me affault to murther me, this beeing at the time that the Armada was there.

The firft plot

The first plot laid against me, was: I was inuited by Hogio Nazam to the fraughting of his thip for Mocha, as the cultome is, they make at the fraughting of their thips great tealts, for all 20 gais to kill me, the principallest of the Towne. It was my good hap at that time, a great Captaine belonging to the Vice-Roy of Guzerat relident in Amadauar, being fent about affaires vnto Surat, was likewile inuited to this feast, which was kept at the water fide; and neere vnto it, the Portugals had two Frigats of their Armada, which came to receive their tribute of the shippes that were to depart, as also refreshment. Out of these Frigats, there came three gallant fellowes to the Tent where I was, and some fortie followers Portugals, Scattering themselves along the Sea side, ready to give an afault when the word should be given. These three Gallants that came to the tents, armed with coats of Buffe downe to the knees, their Rapiers and Piftols by their fides, demaunded for the English Captaine : upon the hearing of which, I arose presently, and told them that I was the man, and perceiuing an alteration in them, I laid hand on my weapon. The Captaine Mogol, perceining treation towards me, both he and his followers drew their weapons: and if the Portugals had not been the swifter, both they and their scattered crew ( in retiring to their Frigats) had come short home.

The (econd

Padre Penziron gern: of lefui-How franke would the Iefui:es baue bin to Iudas, be-Priefts which pieces for the price of bloud. and those but fers forry thoufand Royals . (who can de-

Another time, they came to affault me in my house with a Frier, some thirty or fortie of them: the Friars comming was to animate the fouldiers, and to give them absolution. But I was alwaies wary, having a strong house with good doores. Many troopes at other times, lay lurking for me and mine in the streetes, in that kind, that I was forced to goe to the Gouernour to complaine, that I was not able to goe about my bulinesse, for the Portugals comming armed into the Citie to murther me: which was not a cultome at other times, for any Portugals to come armed as now they did. He presently sent word to the Poringals, that if they came into the City armed againe, 4 sicall Sincuits. at their owne perils be it. At Mocreb-char his comming, with a lefuite named Padre Piners in his company ( who profered Mocreb-chan fortie thousand Rials of eight, to fend me to Daman, as I understood by certaine aduse given me by Haffun Ally, and Ally Pommory ) I went to visit him, giuing him a Present, besides the Present his brother had: and for a time, as I have about written, I had many kind outward shewes of him, till the time that I demanded my money, After that, his diffembling was past, and he told me plainely, that he would not give mee twentie g'ue butthirty Manadiesper Vare, but would deliuer me backe my cloath. Vpon which dealings, I diffembled as wel as I could with him, intreating leave for Agra, to the King, telling him that William Finch was the man that I left as my chiefe in this place; and in what kind foeuer, his pleasure was to of two millings deale with me, he was the man to receive either money or ware. Vpon which answer, he gave me 10 fixe pencethe his license and letter to the King, promiting me fortie hortemen to goe with me, which hee did not accomplish. After license received, the Father put into Mocreb-chan his head, that it was not good to let me passe: for that I woul i complaine of him vnto the King. This he plotted with Mosreb-chanto overthrow my journey, which he could not doe, because I came from a King but he faid, that he would not let me have any force to goe with me. And what elle hee would have my them Repail him to doe, either with my. Treuchman and Coachman, to poylon or murther me, if one should Merchans ) at faile, the other to doe it; this invention was put into Morreb chans head by the Father, But God fixepencethe for his mercie fake, afterwart diftouered these plots, and the Counsell of this Iesuite tooke not place, Before the plotting of this, the Issuite and I fell out in the presence of Mocreb chan, for efurtespolicy. vile speaches made by him of our King and Nation, to bee vallals vnto the King of Paringall: 60 Intelleful lime. which words I could not brooke, in fo much, that if I could have had my will, the Father had neuer spoken more, but I was preuented.

His lourney to the Mogoll at Agra, and entertayment

Ow finding William Finch in good health, newly recoursed, Heft all things touching the Trade of Merchandizing in his power: guing him my remembrance and order, what he should doe in my absence. So I began to take up Souldiers to conduct mee. He seneth for-being denyed of Mocrebehan, befides Shot and Bow-men that I hired. For my bet loughty fro ter fafety, I went to one of Chanchanna his Captaines, to let mee haue fortie or offie Horiemen Sande formed ter arety, a went to need to be be being then Vice-Roy of Decan, Refident in Brampers, who did to defeat his power all that I demanded, giving me valiant Horsemen Pattans, a people very much teated in these parts : for if I had not done it, I had beene over-throwne. For the Portugals of Damaia Another danhad wrought with an ancient friend of theirs a Raga, who was absolute Lord of a Prouince, gerous store of thetweene Daman. Guzerat and Decart) called Cruste to be readile with two hundred Harlanger, the Paringest. the virugity warm an angular and Decar) called Cruly, to be readic with two hundred Horlemen (Grey Prosince) to flay my passage : but I went so strong and well provided, that they duss not incounter with vs : fo likewise that time I escaped.

Then at Dayta, another Province or Princedome, my Coachman being drunke with certaine. Diffanother 20 of his Kindred, discouered the Treason that hee was to worke against mee, which was, that hee Prounce. was hiered to murther me : he being ouer-heard by fome of my Souldiers, who at that prefent came and told me, and how it should be done in the morning following, when we begin our trauell: (for wee vie to trauell two houres before day) vpon which notice, I called the Coachman They vie to vnto me, examining him, and his friends before the Captaine of the Horsemen I had with mee: trauelltwo who could not deny; but hee would never confeile who hired him, although hee was very much houres before beaten, curfing his fortune that he could not effect it : for he was to doe it the next morning, fo I day. tent him Pritoner vnto the Gouernour of Suratt.

But afterward by my Broker or Truchman, I understood that both hee and the Coachman The Issuites Duta attended by Mocrebolm, but by the Rathers perilwation, the one to poylon me, and the order blouderplor were hiredby Mocrebolm, but by the Rathers perilwation, the one to poylon me, and the order blouderplor of the order blouderplor discovered to murcher me: but the Truchman received nothing till he had done the deed, which here never discovered to the order bloom to the control of the deed of the order bloom to the order b meant to doe, for in that kind hee was alwayes true vnto mee: thus God preferred me. This was TRI, quain te. fine dayes after my departure from Suratt, and my departure from Suratt was the first of Februa- patarequirat? ry 1608. So following on my trauels for Bramport, iome two dayes beyond Dayta, the Pattans M. Hamkins 19 1000. 30 1010 ming ming left me, but to be conducted by another Pattan Captaine, Governour of that Lordhip, by whom departed before, but to be conducted by another Pattan Captaine, Business Persons unto the from State. I was most kindly entertained. His name was Sherehan, beeing sometime a Prisoner vnto the The fifth of Fee Portugall, and having the Portugall Language perfect, was glad to doe mee any feruice : for that I brusty 1668. was of the Nation, that was enemie vnto the Portugall. Himselfe in person, with fortie Horsemen, went two dayes joureney with mee, till hee had freed mee from the dangerous places; at which time he met with a troupe of Out-lawes, and tooke fome four aliue, and flew and hurt 40 eight, the rest escaped. This man very kindly writ his Letter for me, to have his house at Branport, which was a great curtefie, otherwise I could not tell where to lodge my felfe, the Towne being to full of Souldiers : for then began the Warres with the Decans,

The eighteenth of the faid Moneth, thankes be to God, I came in fafetie to Bramport, and the His arrivallat next day I went to the Court to wifit Chanchanna, being then Lord Generall and Vice-Roy of Etomport. Decan, giving him a Prefent; who kindly tooke it : and after three houres conference with him. he made me a great Feast, and being risen from the Table, inuested me with two Clokes, one of fine Woollen, and another of Cloth of Gold : giving mee his most kind Letter of favour to the King, which anayled much. That done he imbraced me, and so we departed. The Language that we spoke was Turkish, which he spake very well.

I remayned in Bramport with the second of March; till then I could not end my businesses of Hee stryethin Monies that I brought by exchange, flaying likewife for a Carrauan, having taken new Soul- Brampart ull diers, I followed my Voyage or journey to Agra: where after much labour, toyle, and many the feeded of dangers I assistation of the feeded of March. dangers, Larriued in fafety the fixteenth of Aprill, 1609. Being in the Citie, and feeking out for His arrivall at an house in a very secret manner, notice was given the King that I was come, but not to bee Agrachesiafound : He prefently charged both Horfemen and Footmen in many troupes, not to leave before trenthof A-I was found, commanding his Knight Marihall to accompany mee wich great state to the Court, prill, 1609. as an Emballador of a King (ught to be; which he did with a great traine, making such extraordinary hafte, that I admired much : for I could fearce obtayne time to apparell my felte in my beth attyre. In fine, I was brought before the King, I came with a flight prefent, having nothing but Heermebe-

60 cloth, and that not efteemed: (for what I had for the King, Mocreb-chan tooke from me, wher- fore the King, with I acquainted his Maiellie.) After falutation done, with a most kinde and smiling countenance, he bade me most heartily welcome, vpon which speech I did my obeysance and dutie againe. Hauing his Maiesties Letter in my hand, he called me to come neere vinto him, stretching downe his hand from the Seate Royall, where he fate in great Maiestie something high for to be

ò. I I.

feene of the people : receiving very kindly the Letter of me, viewing the Letter a prettie while. both the Seale, and the manner of the making of it vp, he called for an old Isfuite that was there present, to reade it. In the meane space, while the lesuite was reading it, hee spake vnto mee in the kindelt manner that could bee, demanding of mee the contents of the Letter, which I told him : vpon which notice, presently granting and promising me by God, that all what the King had there written, he would grant and allow withall his heart, and more if his Maiestie would require it. The lefuite likewife told him the effect of the Lecter, but discommending the file. faying, it was halely penned; writing Vestra without Maiestad: my aniwere was ento the King, and it it shall please your Maiestie, these people are our enemies : how can this Letter be ill written, when my King demandeth fauour of your Maiestie! he said, it was true.

Iefuiticall

Charitic.

Perceiuing I had the Turkish Tongue, which himselfe well vaderstood, hee commanded me to skilfull in the follow him vnto his Chamber of Presence, being then risen from that place of open Audience, defiring to have further conference with me : in which place I stayed some two houses, till the King came forth from his women. Then calling mee vnto him, the first thing that hee frake. was that he understood that Mocrebchan had not dealt well with mee, bidding mee bee of good cheere, for he would remedie all. It should seeme, that Mocrebehans enemies had acquainted the King with all his proceedings: for indeed the King hath Spies vpon every Nobleman. I answered most humbly, that I was certaine, all matters would goe well on my fide, fo long as his Maiestie protected me. Vpon which speech he presently sent away a Post for Suratt, with his command to Mocrebchan, writing vnto him very earnestly in our behalfes : conjuring him to bee 20 none of his friend, if hee did not deale well with the English, in that kind, as their defire was.

This being diffratched and fent, by the fame Mellenger, Hent my Letter to William Finch, wi-Thing him to goe with this command to Mocrebihan: at the receit of which hee wondred that I came fafe to Agra, and was not murthered, or poyloned by the way, of which speech William

It grew late, and having had some small conference with the King at that time, he commanded that I should daily be brought into his presence, and gave a Captaine named Houshabercham charge, that I should lodge at his house, till a house were found convenient for me : and when I needed any thing of the King, that he should bee my Solicitor. According to command, I reforted to the Court, where I had daily conference with the King. Both night and day, his delight 30 was very much to talke with mee, both of the Affaires of England and other Countries, as also many demands of the West Indies, whereof hee had notice long before, being in doubt if there were any fuch place, till he had spoken with me, who had beene in the Countrey.

Many dayes and weekes being past, and I now in great fauour with the King, to the griefe of Ginhad bin in all mine enemies, efpying my time, I demanded for his Commandement or Commission with Cathe Welladis pitulations for the effablishing of our Factory to be in mine owne power. His answere was, when ther I would remayne with him in his Court, I replyed, till shipping came : then my defire was to goe home, with the antivere of his Maiesties Letter. Hee replyed againe, that his meaning was a longer time, for he meant to fend an Embassador to the King of England, at the comming of the next shipping : and that I should stay with him untill some other bee sent from my King, 40 to remayne in my place, faying this: Thy flaying would be highly for the benefit of thy Nation, and that he would give me good maintenance, and my being heere in his prefence, would bee the cause to right all wrongs that should be offered vnto my Nation and further, what I should see beneficiall for them, vpon my petition made, hee would grant : iwearing By his Fathers Soule, that if I would remayne with him, he would grant me Articles for our Factorie to my hearts defire, and would neuer goe from his word. I replyed againe, that I would confider of it. Thus daily inticing me to tray with him, alleaging as is aboue written, and that I should doe femice, both to my naturall King and him, and likewife he would allow me by the yeare, three thouland The Kings fit- and two handred pounds flerling for my first, and so veerely, hee promised mee to augment my pendary wages Living, till I came to a thousand Horse. So my first should be four hundred Horse. For the No- 50 and honorable bilitie of India have their Titles by the number of their Horses, that is to say, from fortie to twelue thouland, which pay belongeth to Princes, and his Sonnes. I trusting vpon his promife, and feeing it was beneficiall bet's to my Nation and my fale, beeing dispossessed of that benefit which I should have reaped, if I had gone to Bantam, and that after halfe a doozen yeeres, your Worships would fend another man of fort in my place, in the meane time, I should feather my Neaft, and doe you feruice: and further perceiuing great injuries offered vs, by reason the King is so farre from the Ports, for all which causes about specified , Ldid not thinke it amisse to yeeld unto his request. Then, because my name was something hard for his pronuntiation, hee called me by the name of English Chan, that is to fay, English Lord, but in Persia, it is the Title for a Duke, and this went current throughout the Countrey.

Now your Worships thall understand, that I being now in the highest of my fauours, the lefuites and Portugals flept not, but by all meanes fought my overthrow : and to fay the truth, the principall Mahumetans neere the King, enuyed much that a Christian should bee to nigh vnto him. The lefuite Peniero being with Mocrebchan, and the lefuites here, I thinke did little regard their Maffesand Church matters, for fludying how to ouer brow my Affaires : aduice being gone to Gas by the Islantes here, I meane in Agra, and to Padre Peneiro at Surat or Cambaya, hee wor- The practice king with Matribehan to be the Portugals a Milance, and the Vice-Roy fending him a great Pre- of the Perufent, together with many Toyes vnto the King with his Letter. These presents and many more get against out promiles, wrought to much with Mocrebchan, that he writeth his Petition vnto the King, fen- Trade. ding it rogether with the prefent, advertising the King, that the suffring of the English in his land, would be the cause of the losse of his owne Countries, neere the Sea-Coasts, as Surats, Cambaya, and fuch like : and that in any case he entertaine me not, for that his ancient friends the Portsgalle marmured highly at it : and that the fame is spread among it the Portugallo, that I was Ge- Lying, a great to metalltoft ten thousand Horsemen, readie to give the assault upon Dis, when our shipping came. The Vice-Royes Letter likewise was in this kind: the Kings answere was; that he had but one The Kings an-English man in his Court, and him they needed not to feare, for hee hath not pretended any fuch fwere. matter! for I would have given him Living neere the Sea parts, but he refuted it, taking it neere me heere. This was the Kings answere, vpon which answere, the Portugalls were like madde Dogges, labouring to worke my paffage out of the World. So I told the King, what dangers I had naffect, and the profent danger wherein I was, my Boy Stephen Grauener, instantly departing Nicholas Villes, this World, my man Nicholas Viflet extreame ficke, and this was all my English Company, my felfe beginning to fall downe too. The King prefently called the Issuites, and told them that if I dyed by any extraordinary cafualtie, that they should all rue for it. This past, the King was 20 very earnest with me to take a white Mayden out of his Palace, who would give her all things necessary with slaves, and he would promite mee shee should turne Christian: and by this meanes my meates and drinkes should be looked unto by them, and I should hue without feare. In regard the was a Moore, I refuted, but if to bee there could bee a Christian found, I would accept it: At which my speech, I little thought a Christians Daughter could bee found. So the King called to memorie one Mubarique Sha his Daughter, who was a Christian Armenian, and of the Race of Mubarique Sha the most ancient Christians, who was a Captaine, and in great fauour with Ekber Padasha, this an domenian Kings Father. This Captainedyed fuldenly, and without will, worth a Maile of Money, and all robbed by his Brothers and Kindred, and Dibts that cannot be recoursed : leaving the Child but only a few Iewels. I feeing fhee was of to honest a Descent, having passed my word to the 30 King, could not withfland my fortunes. Wherefore I tooke her, and for want of a Minister be- Hee taketha fore Christian Witnesses, I marryed her: the Priest was my man Nicholas, which I thought had Christian beene lawfull, till I met with a Preacher that came with Sir Henry Middleton, and hee thewing Gentlewoman to Wife. She me the error, I was new marryed againe: so ener after I lived content and without feare, she being willing to goe where I went, and hue as I lived. After these matters ended, newes came hi- with him for ther, that the Ascention was to come by the men of her Pinnalle, that was cast away neere Su- England, buthe rait, vpon which newes, I prefently went to the King and told him, crauing his Licence, teg-dying by the ther with his Committon for the felling of our Trade; which the King was welling to be dear way, thee was ther with his Commission, for the fetling of our Trade : which the King was willing to doe, li- after many ed miting me a time to returne, and be with him againe.

But the Kings chiefe Vizir Abdal Haffan, a man enuious to all Christians, told the King, that The Pinnasse my going would be the occasion of warre : and thus harme might happen vnto a great man who of the Ascentiwas lent for Goa, to buy toyes for the King. Vpon which speach, the Kings pleasure was I concast again thould flav and sind away his Commission to make the Figure 2. should stay, and send away his Commission to my chiefe Factor at Surat, and presently gaue cr- The Kings der, that it should be most effectually written. In fine, under his great Scale with Golden Let- Commission ters, his Commission was written, so firmely for our good, and so free as heart can wish. This I in the facour obtained prefently, and fent it to William Finch. Before it came there, newes came that the Afcen- of the English tion was cast away, and her men saued, but not suffered to come into the Citie of Suras, Of that Seele with gollikewise I told the King, who seemed to be very much discontented with that great Captaine den Leuers. Mocreb chan, my enemy : and gaue me another commandement for their good viage, and meanes The Afterior to be wrought to faue the goods, if it were possible. These two commandements came almost cast away. 50 together, to the great toy of William Fineh and the reft, admiring much at these things. And now The greater continuing their great fauours with the King, being continually in his fight, for the one halfe of Kings Nobles foure and twentie houres feruing him day and night, I wanted not the greater part of his No- are Mahamebles that were Mahumetans, to be mine enemies. For it went against their hearts, that a Chri- tans. than fhould be forgreat & neere the King; and the more, because the King had promited to make his Brothers children Christians, which two yeares after my coming he performed commanding them to be made Christians. Awhile after came time of the Assentians Company with my I could have wished of better behaviour, a thing pryed into by the King. ) In all this time, I sharp their could not get my debts of Mocrebchan, till at length he was fent for up to the King, to antivote General Lame for many faults, and tyrannicall In-instice, which he did to all people in those parts, many a man to Aya. 60 being vindone by him, who petitioned to the King fer Juffice. Now, this Degge to make his peace, fent many bribes to the Kings fonnes, and Noi le-men that were neere the King, who laboured in his behalfe. After newes came that Mocrebchan was appreached neere, the King

prefently fent to attach all his goods, which were in that abundance, that the King was two moneths in viewing of them, every day allotting a certaine quantitie to be brought before me:

and what he thought fitting for his owne turne he kept, and the rest delinered againe to Mecrebchan. In the viewing of these goods, there came those Peeces and Costlet, and Head-peece. with other Presents that he tooke from me for the King of mine owne, not suffering mee to bring them my felfe: at the fight whereof, I was so bold to tell the King what was mine. After the King had viewed these goods, a very great complaint was made by a Banian, how that Mocrebehan had taken his Daughter, faying; the was for the King, which was his excuse, deflowring her himselfe : and afterwards gaue her to a Brammen, belonging to Mocrebchan. The man who gaue notice of this Child, protested her to passe all that ever he saw for beautie. The matter being examined, and the offence done by Mocrebchan, found to be true, hee was committed to prison, in the power of a great Noble-man : and commandement was given, that the 10 Brammene his priny members should be cut off.

Before this happened to Mocrebchan, I went to visite him divers times, who made me vene faire promiles, that he would deale very kindly with mee, and be my friend, and that I should haue my right. Now being in this dilgrace, his friends daily folliciting for him, at length goe him cleere: with commandement, that he pay every man his right, and that no more complains be made of him if he leved his lite. So Mecrebeban by the Kings command, paid every one his due, excepting me, whom he would not pay, but deliuer me my Cloath, whereof I was defirous. and to make, if it were possible, by faire meanes, an end with him : but he put me off the mere, delaying time till his departure, which was shortly after. For the King had restored him his old place againe, and he was to goe for Goa, about a faire ballace Ruby, and other rare things promi- 20

fed the King.

ð. III.

The Mogols inconstancie, and Captaine HAVVKINS departure with S'HENRIE MIDDLET ON to the Red-Sea: Thencete Bantam, and after for England.

L L my going and fending to Mocrebehar for my Money or Cloath, was in vaine, I being abused to basely by him, that I was forced to demaund Inflice of the King, who commanded that the Money be brought before him: but for all the Kings command he did as he lifted, and doe what I could, he cut me off twelve thousand and five hundred Mamadies. For the greatest man in this kingdome was his friend, and many others holding on his fide, murmuring to the King, the fuffering of English to come into his Countrey : for that we were a Nation, that if we once fet foot, we would take his Countrey from him. The King called me to make answere to that they faid : I answered his Maiestie, that if any such matter were, I would answer it with my life; and that we were not so base a Nation, as these mine enemies reported. All this was, because I demaunded my due, and yet cannot get it. At this time, 40 those that were neere fauourites, and neerest vinto the King, whom I daily visited, and kept in withall, spake in my behalfe: and the King holding on my side, commanded that no more such wrongs be offred me. So I thinking to vie my best in the recourry of this, intreting the head Vizir that he would be meanes that I receive not io great a losse; he answered me in a threatning manner: that if I did open my mouth any more, hee would make me to pay an hundred thousand Mamadies, which the King had loft in his Suftomes by entertaining mee, and no man durft aduenture by reason of the Portugall. So by this meanes I was forced to hold my tongue, for I know this Money was swallowed by both these Dogges. Now Mocrebchan being commaunded in publicke, that by fuch a day he be ready to depart for Guzerat, and fo for Goa, and then come and take his leave, as the cuftome is: in this meane time, three of the principalleft Mer- se chants of Surat, were fent for by the Kings commaundement, and come to the Court about affaires, wherein the King or his Vizir had imployed them, being then present there when Mocreb chan was taking his lease; this being a plot laid both by the Portugals, Mocrebeban, and the Vizir. For some fixe daies before a Letter came vnto the King from the Portugall Vice-rey, with a Present of many rare things. The Contents of this Letter were, how highly the King of Portugall tooke in ill part the entertaining of the English, he being of an ancient amitie with other complements: and withall, how that a Merchant was there arrived, with a very faire ballace Ruby, weighing three hundred and fiftie Rotties, of which stone the pattern was sent. Vpon this newes, Morreb chan was to be haftened away, at whose comming to take his leave together with Padre Pineiro, that was to goe with him, the aboue named Merchants of Surat 60 being then there prefent, Mocrebchan began to make his speech to the King, saying, that this and many other things he hoped to obtaine of the Fortugall, fo that the English were disamilled: faying more, that it would redound to great loffe vnto his Maiestre and Subjects, if hee did further fuffer the English to come into his parts, Vpon which speech he called the Merchants before the King, to declare what losse it would be, for that they best knew. They affirmed, that they were like to be all vndone because of the English, nor hereafter any toy could come into this countrey, because the Portugal was so strong at sea, and would not suffer them to goe in or out of their Ports; and all their excuse was, for suffering the English.

A Letter from. the Vicerov of the Fall India to the Mogull, against the englift.

A speech of the King a-

Captaine Hawkins. The Mogols inconstancie. CHAP.7.S.3.

These speeches now and formerly, and lucre of this stone, and promises by the Fathers of rare things, were the causes the King ouerthrew my affaires; faying, Let the English come no more: prefently giving Mocreb-chan his commandement, to deliver the Viceroy to that effect, that ne The Kings would neuer fuffer the English to come any more into his ports.

I now faw, that it booted me not to meddle vpon a sudden, or to make any petition vnto the ment vpon 1 now law, that it booten me not to meanite your a mooth, or to make any persons who the falle information 2 no King, till a prety while after the departure of Moereb-chas; and feeing my enemies were fo mation against tion against the state of the stat ny, although they had eaten of me many Presents. When I saw my time, I made patition vnto the English. the King. In this space, I found a toy to gine, as the order is: for there is no man that commeth to make petition, who commeth emptie-handed. Vpon which petition made him, he prefently Nonemake: graunted my request, commanding his Vizir to make me another commandement in as ample pertion to the manner as my former, and commanded that no man should open his mouth to the contrary : for it King without was his pleasure that the English should come into his Ports. So this time againe I was a floate, some Present. Of this alteration, at that instant the lesite had notice: for there is no matter passeth in the Mogels Court in secret, but it is knowne halfe an houre after, giving a small matter to the writer of that day: for there is nothing that passeth, but it is written, and writers appointed by turnes, so

20 that the Father, nor I, could paffe any businesse, but when we would we had notice. So the Iefuite presently sent away the most speedy messenger that could be gotten, with his Letter to Padre Pineiro, and Mocreb-chan, aduertifing them of all that had passed. At the receit of which, they confulted among ft themselves, not to go forward on their voyage for Goa, till I were overthrown againe. Wherefore Mocreb-chan wrote his petition vnto the King, and lecters vnto his friend the headVizir, how it flood not with the Kings honour to fend him, if he performed not what he promifed the Portugal: and that his voyage would be ouerthrowne, if he did not call in the commandement he had given the Englishman. Vpon the receiving and reading of this, the King went a gaine from his word, effeeming a few toyes which the Fathers had promited him, more then his

Now beeing destrous to see the full issue of this, I went to Hogie Iahan, Lord General of the Kings Palace (the second man in place in the Kingdome) intreating him that he would stand my friend. He very kindly, prefently went unto the King, telling bim that I was very heavy and discontent, that Abdall Hassan would not deliuer me my commandemens, which his Maiestie had graunted me. The King answered him ( I being present, and very neere him) saying, It was true, that the commandement is fealed, and ready to be delivered him: But wpon letters received from Mocreb-chan, and better confideration by me had on these my affaires in my Ports in Guzerat, I thought it fitting not to let him have it. Thus was I tolled and tumbled in the kind of-a rich Merchant, adventuring all he had in one bottome, and by casualtie of flormes or pirates, lost it all at once. So that on the other fide, concerning my living, I was fo crofled, that many times 40 this Abdall Haffanhis answer would be vnto me; I know wel enough you stand not in such need, for your Mafter beareth your charges, and the King knew not what he did in giuing to you, from whom he should receive. My answer was, that it was the Kings pleasure, and none of my request; and seeing it is his Maiesties gift, I had no reason to loose it: so that from time to time, he bad mee haue patience, and he would find out a good liuing for me. Thus was Idallied withall by this mine enemie, in so much that in all the time I served in Court, I could not get a lining that would yeeld any thing, giuing me my liuing still, in places where Out-lawes raigned: only, once at Labor by an especiall commandement from the King, but I was soone deprined of it: and all that I received from the beginning, was not fully three hundred pounds, a great part whereof was fpent vpon charges of mentent to the Lordinips. When that I faw that the liming which the 50 King absolutely game me, was taken from me, I was then past all hopes: for before, at the newes of the arrivall of shipping, I had great hope, that the King would performe former grants, in hope of rare things that should come from England. But when I made Arie or Petition vinto the King concerning my liuing, he turned me ouer to Abdal Haffan: who not onely denied me my lining; but also gaue order, that I be suffered no more to enter within the red rayles; which is a place of The red Riles honour, where all my time I was placed very neere vnto the King, in which place there were but aplace of Hofine men in the Kingdome before me.

Now perceiuing that all my affaires were ouerthrowne, I determined with the Councell of of those that were neere me, to resolve whereto to trult, either to be well in, or well out. Vpon this refolution I had my petition made ready, by which I made known vnto the King, how Abdail 60 Hassan had dealt with me, having himselfe eaten what his Maiestie gave me : and how that my charges of fo long time (being by his Maiestie desired to stay in his Court, vpon the faithful promifes he made me) were so much, that it would be my veter ouerthrow: therfore I besonghe his Maiefly that he would consider my cause, either to establish me as formerly, or give me leave to depart.

His answere was, that he gaue me leave, commanding his safe conduct to bee made mee, to passe treely without moleflation, throughout his Kingdomes. When this Commandement was mace. as the custome is, I came to doe my obeylance, and to take my leave, intreating for an aniwere of my Kings Letter. Abdall Haffan comming vnto me from the King, in a difdainfull manner vt. terly denyed me : faying, that it was not the custome of lo great a Monarch, to write in the kind of a Letter, vnto a pettie Prince, or Gouernour. I answered him, that the King knew more of the mightinesse of the King of England, then to be a petty Gourmour. Well, this was mine anfivere, together with my leave taken.

Will, Fin's deecrmined to

I went home to my house, studying with all my endeauours to get all my goods and debts together, and to buy commodities with those Monies, that were remayning ving all the speed I 10 could, to cleere my felie of the Countrey : ftaying only for Nicholas Viflet , to come from Labor. with a remainder of Indice, that was in William Finches power, who determined to goe over land. being past all hopes for ever imbarking our telues at Surat: which course I also would willingly haue taken, but that as it is well knowne, for some causes I could not trauell thorow Tarkie, and especially with a woman. So I was forced to currie fauour with the lesuites, to get meea lase conduct or Seguro, from the Vice-Roy to goe for Goa, and fo to Portugall, and from thence to England: thinking, as the opinion of others was, that the Vice-Roy guing his fecure Royall, there would be no danger for me. But when my Wifes Mother, & Kindred faw that I was to carry her away, inspecting that they should never see her any more, they did so distaste me in these my trauels, that I was forced to yeeld vuto them, that my Wife go no further then Goa, because it was 20 India: and that they could goe and come and vitit her, and that, if at any time I meant to goe for Portugall, or any other-where, that I leave her that portion, that the cultome of Portugallis, to leave to their Wives when they cye : vnto which I was forced to yeeld to give them content, to prevent all mischieses. But knowing that if my Wife would goe with me, all would bee of no effect, I effected with the lefuite to fend for two Secures, the one concerning my quiet being, and free libertie of conscience in Goa, and to bee as a Portugall in all Tradings and Commerce in Goa: (this was to shew my Wifes Parents.) The other was an absolute grant for free passage into Portugall, and to for England, with my Wife and Goods, without any disturbances of any of my Wives friends : and what agreements I made with them to be void and of none effect, but I thould flay or goe, when I pleased with free libertie of conscience for my felfe. This tast Secure 10 I should receive at Cambaya, which at my departure for our shippes was not yet come, but was to come with the Carranan of Frigats.

This and much more the Fathers would have done for me, only to rid me out of the Country: for being cleere of meethey should much more quietly sleepe. About this time, I had notice of the comming of threm English ships; that were arrived at Mocha, and without faile their deter-Berg- mination was to come for Surat, at the time of the yeare : having this Aduertisement by Niche-Las Bangbamstrom Bramport, who departed from me fome fix weekes before, both for the recovery of certaine Debts, as also with my Letter to our shipping, if it were possible to send it, ad-

uertifing them of my proceedings. In this time of my dispatching, newes came of Mocreb-chans returne from Goa, with many 40 gallantand rare things, which hee brought for the King. But that Ballace Ruby was not for his turne, faying it was falle, or at the leaft, made his excuse for feare, that if he should give the Portugall his price, and when it came into the Kings power, it should bee valued much leffe (which ouer-plus he should be forced to pay, as hee had done in former times, for other things) hee left it behind him. And besides, I vinderstood, that Mocreb-chen had not his full content as he expected of the Portugalls. And likewise, at this initiant, the Vizir, my enemy was thrust out of his place, for many complaints made of him, by Noblemen that were at great charges and in debt, & could not receive their linings in places that were good but in barren & rebellious places : and that he male abenefit of the good places himselfe, & roubed them all. For these complaints and others, he had much ado to escape with life, being put out of his place; & fent to the Wars of De 10 sas. Now one Gaibbeig being the Kings chiefe Treaturer (a man that in outward flew made much of me, & was alwayes willing to pleaf ire me, when I had occasion to vie him) was made chiefe Vizir: and his Daughter marryed with the King, being his chiefe Q eene or Paramor. This Vizirs fonne and my leffe were great friends, he having beene often at my house, and was now exalted to high Dignities by the King. Perceiving this alteration, and being certified of the comming of shipping, by certaine adule, fundry wayes. Knowing the cittome of these Moores that without gifts and bribes, nothing would either goe forward or bee accomplished, Hentmy Broker to feeke out for lewels, fitting for the Kings Sifter and new Paramour : and likewife, for this new Vizir, and his fonne.

Now after they had my Gifts, they beganne on all feles to folicite my cause: at which time 60 Three English news came to Agra, by Bantan of Dus, how that of Dus, three English thins were letter, and three days after other news. three dayes after other newes came, that they were at the Barre of Smar Vpon which newes the Berreef Surat. great Vizir asked me what Toy I had for the King, I shewed him a Ruby Ring that I had gotten: at the fight of which he bade me make readie to goe with him at Court time, and he would make my Petrion to the King, and told me that the King was alreadie wome. So once more comming before his Greatneffe, and my Petition being read, he prefently granted mee the establishing of our Factorie, and that the English come and freely trade for Surat: willing the Vizir that with all expedition my commandement be made, vponwhich grant the Vizir made figne vnto mee. to make obeyfance, which I did according to the Custome. But now what followed: A great Nobleman and neerest Favourite of the King being the dearest friend that Mocrebchan and likewife Abdall Haffar had, brought up together from their child-hood, and Pages together unto the King, began to make a speech vnto the King : laying, that the granting of this would be the vtter ouerthrow of his Sea Coasts and people, as his Maiestie had beene informed by petition to from divers of his Subjects : and befiles, that it food not with his Maiefties honour to contradict that which he had granted to his ancient friends the Portugals, and whofoeuer laboured for the English, knew not what he did; if knowing; here was not his Maiesties friend. Vpon the speech of this Nobleman, my basinesie once againe was quite ouerthrowne, and all my time and presents lost : the King answering , that for my Nation , hee would not grant Trade at the Sca

Ports, for the inconvenience that divers times had beene feanned upon. But, for my felfe, it I would remayne in his fer lice he would command, that what he had allowed me, thould be given me to my content : which I denyed, valeffe the English should come vato his Ports according to promile, and as for my particular maintenance, my King would not fee me want. Then defiring agains answere of the Kings Letter, he confilted a-while with his Vizirs, and then sent mee his denyall. So I tooke my leave and departed from Agra, the second of November 1611. being of He departed a thousand thoughts what course I were best to take: for I still had a doubt of the Portugals from Agache scondor Nothat for lucre of my goods they would poyfon me. Againe, on the otherfide, it was dangerous uember 1611. by reason of the Warres to travell thorow Decan unto Masalipatan : by land, by reason or the Turkes, I could not goe : and to flay I would not among it there faithlesse Infidels.

I arrived at Cambaya, the last of December, 1611. where I had certaine newes of the English ships that were at Surat. Immediately I fent a Footman vnto the ships with my Letter , with certaine a luice, affirmed for a tru h, by the Fathers of Cambaya, vinto me, that the Vice-Roy had in a realinesse prepared to depart from Gas, foure great ships, with certaine Gallies, and Frigats for to come vpon them, and Treatons plotted against Sir Henry Middletons perion : of which newes, I was wished by the Fathers to adulte Sir Henry: which I found afterward to bee but Afained politheir p-licie, to put him in feare, and so to depare, and withall, I wished them to be well admitd, sie of the le-And as for me my thirts were to goe home, by the way of the Portugalls, for so I had promised different my Wife and her Brother, who at that preient was with me : and to delude him and the Fathers till I had notice for certaine, that I might freely get abourd without feare, which I was affored to know at the returne of my Letter; in the meane time, I did all that I could to dispatch her Brother away : who within two dayes after departed for Agra, not fulp fting that I had any in ent for the ships. Nicholas Viflet now departing from mee to survey the way, beeing two dayes iourney on his way, met with Captaine William Sharpeigh, Master Fraine, and High Greece fent by Sir Hemy to Cambaya vnto mce, which was no small joy vnto mee, So vnderitanding of the place (which was miraculously found out by Sir Henry Middleton, and neuer knowne to any of the Countrey) I admired and gaue God thankes : for if this place had not beene found, it had beene impossible for mee to have gotten abourd with my goods. Wherefore making all the haste that I could, in dispatching my selfe away, I departed from Cambaya, the eighteenth of Ianuary 1611. and came vnto the ships the fix and twentieth of the faid moneth, where I was most kindly received by Sir Henry Middleton. From this English Fleet. place we departed the eleuenth of February 1611, and arrived at Dabul the fixteenth of the They depart fame : in which place we tooke a Portugal thip and Frigat, out of which we tooke some quanti- with the English tie of goods. And from thence we departed the hft of March 1611. for the Red Sea, with an in- Fleet from Sutent to revenge vs of the wrongs offered vs, both by Turkes and Mogols: at which place wee arratio publik, rived the revent of April 1612. Here was cound three Frails thing their Corne ill was Committed this so rived the third of Aprill 1612. Here we ound three English thips, their Generall was Captaine taken,

Iohn Sarus. Hauing dispatched our businesse in the Red Sea, wee set sayle from thence the fix- 1612. They arteenth of Aug ift, 1612, and arrived in Tecu in Sumarra, the nineteenth of October 1612, and rive at the having ended our bufineff, there, we departed in the night, the twentieth of Novemb. 1612. and mouth of the came on ground the fame night, three leagues off, vpon a Bed of Corall, in three fathome water, The Fleet of or thereabouts, and by the great mercie of God we escaped : but were forced to returne backe a- M. John Sarie. gaine to stop her leakes, the goods being taken out, and some damage received. Now her leakes They arrive as being somewhat Hopped, and her goods in, not loing an houre of time, wee departed from Tero in Suna-where Sir Henry Midleton not finding the Trade inflicient to goe home that yeare, was forced to Residen De. 60 flay and carine her, Hauing ended account with him, as himfelfe liked beft. I tooke my goods cember, 1612. and shipped them in the Salomon, which came for our Voyage, for fauing of a greater Fraight :

but I could not be admitted to goe in her my felfe; Captaine Saris I thanke him, accommodated me in the Thomas, and it was agreed, that the Salemon and wee should keepe company together. From thence we fet faile on the thirtieth of January 1613, and arrived in Saldania Roade, the one and twentieth of April 1613 and comming neere some two hundred leagues from the Cape, we had much foule weather and contrary windes. Here we found foure fayle of Hollanders that departed Bantam a moneth before vs. There was great kindnesse betwixt vs, especially to me, in regard that they had heard much of my great estate in India, by an Agent of theirs, that was Lieger at Masulipatan. Some eight dayes after the Expedition came in, and brought meea arrived in Sal- Letter from your Worships, and delivered it vnto me two dayes after their arrivall. The wind comming faire, we departed from Saldania the one and twentieth of May, 1613. of the Authour Couching Fores, Indian Factories, &c. I have omitted as not fo fitting every Eye. Their departure from Saldavia

A briefe Difcourfe of the strength, wealth, and Gonernment, with some Ca. stomes of the great Mogol: which I have both seene and gathered by his chiefe Officers, and Over-feers of all his Estate.

Irft, I begin with his Princes, Dukes, Marqueffes, Earles, Viscounts, Barons, Knight, Elquires, Gentlemen, and Yeomen. As Christian Princes wfe their degrees by Titles, to they have their Degrees and Titles by their number of Horfes : vnleffe it bee 20 those that the King most fauoureth, whom he honoureth with the Title of Chan, and Immirza. None haue the Title of Sultan but his Sonnes. Chan in the Perfian Language, is and eldest Sonne, and one more, who is of the bloud Royall of Vzbeck, named Chan Azam.

Dukes be nine thousand Fame, Marquelles fine thousand Fame, Earles three thousand, Viscounts much as a Duke, Immirza is the Title for the Kings Brothers Children. They that be of the Fame of twelve thousand Horsemen belong to the King, and his Mother, thousand Officers and Stipendaries of The Rupia is two shillings fterling, four lings and three two shillings and fixe pence.

two thouland, Barons a thouland, Knights foure hunired, Elquires an hundred, Gentlemen fifty, Yeomen from twentie down-wards. All they that have thele numbers of Horlemen, are called Mansibdars, or men of Liuings, or Lordships. Of these there be three thousand, that is to say, four be of twelve thousand Horse a-piece, and they be the King, his Mother, Sulian Permis 10 Prince, and Chan Azam. Of nine thousand Horsemen there bee three, that is to say, Sultan Thefe Ragas be Chorem, the Kings third Sonne, Charchanna, and Kelich Chan. Of five thousand there bee eighteene,named Hafuff Chan, Chan Ichan, Abdula Ghan, Rafa Manging, Ray Durga, Raga Surjag, Ramadas Rechuua, Raga Baffu, Emirel Vmera, Mahabee Chan, Chan Douran, Sedris Chan, Hosu Bey Mirza, Mirza Caze, Ettebar Chan, Abulfet Dekenny, Ielam Cully Chan, Sheik Ferid, Of three thouland there be two and twentie, to wit. Chan Alem, Imirza Ereg, Imirza Darab, Hojio lahan, Hogio Abdal Hassan, Mirza Garsbey, Mirza Shemehadin, Mirza Chadulla, Seffer Chan, Kazımı Chan, Mirza Chin Kelich, Saif (ban, Lalla Berfingdia, Mirza Zeadı, Mirza Allı Echerchuly, Terbiat Chan, Mirza Laschary, Mirza Charucogly, Mirza Rustem, Ally Merdon Badur, Tasber Chan, Abulber. The rest bee from two thousand downwards till you come to twentie so Horses, two thousand nine hundred and fiftie. Of Horsemen, that receive pay monethly, from fixe Horse to one, there be fine thousand, these bee called Haddies. Of such Officers and men as belong to the Court and Campe, there be thirtie fixe thousand, to fay, Porters, Gunners, Watermen, Lackeyes, Horie-keepers Elephant-keepers, Small shot, Frastes, or Tent men, Cookes, Light bearers, Gardiners, Keepers of all kind of Beafts. All these be payd monethly out of the Kings Treasurie, whose Wages he from ten to three Rupias.

All his Captaines are to maintaine ava feuen-nights warning, from twelve thousand to twentie Horse, all Horsemen three Leckes, which is three hundred thousand Horsemen: which of the Incomes of their Lordships allowed them, they must maintayne.

The Kings geerely Income of his Crowne Land, is fiftie Crou of Rupias, every Crou is an hundred Leckes, and every Leck is an hundred thousand Rupix.

THe compasse of his Countrey is two yeares trauell with Carranan, to say, from Candahar to Agra, from Soughtare in Bengala to Agra, from Cabul to Agra, from Decan to Agra, from Surat to Agra, from Tatta in Sinde to Agra. Agra is in a manner in the heart of all his King-

His Empire is divided into five great Kingdomes, the first named Pengab, whereof Labor is the chiefe Seate; the second is Bengala, the chiefe Seat Sonargham: the third is Malua, the chiefe Seate is Ugam: the fourth is Decan, the chiefe Seate Brampore : the fifth is Guzerat, the chiefe 60 Seat is Amadanar. The chiefe Citie or Seate Royall of the Kings of India, is called Delly, where hee is established King: and there all the Rites touching his Coronation are performed.

There are fixe especiall Castles, to say, Agra, Guallier, Neruer, Ratamboore, Hastier, Roughtaz. In every one of these Callles he hath his Treasure kept.

CHAP. 7. S4. The Mogols Treasure and Iewels. Hawkins.

In all his Empire there are three Arch-enemies or Rebels, which with all his Forces cannot be called in, to fay, Amberry Chapu in Decan: in Guzerat, the Sonne of Muzafer, that was Kitg, his name is Bahador of Malua, Raga Rahana. His Sonnes be fine, to fay, Sultan Couffero, Stitan Pernie, Sultan Chorem, Sultan Shariar, and Sultan Bath. Hee hath two yong Daughters, and three hundred Wines, whereof foure be chiefe as Queenes, to fay, the first, named Padsiba Bar u, Daughter to Kaime Chan: the second is called Noore Mahal, the Daughter of Gais Beige: the third is the Daughter of Seinchan: the fourth is the Daughter of Hahim Hamasin, who was Brother to his Father Ecber Padasha.

His Treasure is as followeth, The first, is his severall Coine of Gold.

Normal, of Seraffins Ecbers, which be ten Rapias a piece, there are fixtie Leckes. Of another Arabia Ru-fort of Coyne, of a thouland Rapias a piece, there are twentie thouland pieces. Of another piechalan of for of halfe the value, there are ten thouland pieces. Of another fort of Gold of twenty Tole, and ten apiece, there are thirtie thouland pieces. Of another fort of tenne Tolera piece, there bee fine and the thouland pieces. Of another fort of tenne Tolera piece, there bee fine and the thouland pieces. Of another fort of the Tolera which is this White the thouland piece there be fine and the thouland pieces. and twenty thousand pieces. Of another fort of fine Toles, which is this Kings stampe, of these of one of gold. there be fiftie thousand pieces.

Of Silver, as followeth.

[Nprimis, of Rupius Echery, thirteene Crou every Crou is an hundred Leckes, and every Leck an hundred thousand Rupsus, is one thousand three hundred Lecker. Of another fort of Coine of Selm Sha this King, of an hundred Toles a piece, there are fiftie thousand pieces. Of fiftie Toles a piece, there is one Lecke. Of thirtie Toles a piece , there are fortie thousand pieces. Of twentie Toles a piece, there are thirtie thousand pieces. Of ten Toles a piece, there are twentie thousand pieces. Of fine Toles a piece, there are fine and twentie thousand pieces. Of a certaine Money that is called Sauor, which is a Tole 1. of these there are two Lockes. Of lagaries, whereof five make fixe Toles, there is one Lecke. More should have beene coyned of this stampe, but the contrary was commanded,

Here followeth of bis lewells of all forts.

Norimis, Of Diamantes 1. Battman, these he rough, of all sorts and sizes, great and small: but no lesse then 2. . Caratts. The Butman is fifty fine pound waight, which maketh eightie two pounds ; weight English. Of Ballace Rubies little and great, good and bad, there are fingle two thousand pieces. Of Pearle of all forts, there are twelve Battmans. Of Rubies of all Estime a preciforts there are two Battmans. Of Emerandes of all forts, fine Battmans. Of Estime, which comming Rone commeth from Cathaia, one Battman. Of Rones of Emen, which is a red Rone, there are from Cathaja. fine thousand pieces. Of all other forts as Corall, Topasses, &c. There is an infinite number.

Here followeth of the lewels wrought in Gold.

OF Swords of Almane Blades, with the Hilts and Scabberds set with divers sorts of rich stones, of the richest sort, there are two thousand and two hundred. Of two sorts of Poniards there bee two thousand. Of Saddle Drummes, which they vie in their Hawking, of these there are very rich ones of Gold, set with stones, sue bundred. Of Brooches for their heads, whereinto their Feathers Le put, there be very rich, and of them there are two thousand. Of Saddles of Gold and Silver set with stones, there are one thousand. Of Teaker there be fine and twentie, this is a great Launce conered with Gold, and the Fluke fet with stones, and these instead of their colours, are carryed, when the King goeth to the 30 warres, of these there are fine and twentie. Of Kutasoles of flate, for to shaddew him, there bee twentic. None in his Empire dareth in any fort haue any of thele carryed for his shadow but himselte, of these, I say there are twentie. Of Chaires of Estate, there bee fine, to fay, three of Silver, and two of Gold : and of other forts of Chaires, there bee an hundred of Siluer and Gold, in all an hundred and five. Of rich Glasles, there beetwo hundred. Of Vafes for Wine very faire and rich, fet with Iewels, there are anhundred. Of drinking Cuppes fine hun red, but fiftie very rich, that is to fay, made of one piece of Ballace Ruby, and also of Emerods, of Estim, of Turkish stone, and of other forts of stones. Of Chaines of Pearle, and Chaines of all forts of precious stones, and Ringes of Casing, with Iewels of rich Diamants, Ballace Rubies, Rubies and old Emerods, there is an infinite number, which only the Keeper thereof knoweth. Of all forts of plate, as Dishes, Cups, Basons, Pots, Beakers of Silver wrought, there are two thousand Battmans. Of Gold wrought, there are one thousand Battmans.

Here followeth of all forts of Beafts.

F Horsesthere are twelve thousand. Whereof there bee of Persian Horses foure thou-Jand, of Turkie Horses six thousand, and of Kismire two thousand, all are twelve thou-

Of Elephants, there betwelve thousand, whereof five thousand bee teeth Elephants, and seuen thousand of shee ones, and yong ones, which are twelve thousand. Of Camels there be two thousand. Of Oxen for the Cart, and all other services, there bee tenne thousand. Of Moyles there be one thousand. Of Deere like Buckes for game and sport, there be three thousand. Of Ounces for Game, there be foure hundred. Of Dogges for hunting, as Grey-hounds and other. 19 there be foure hundred. Of Lions tame there are an hundred. Of Buffalaes, there be fine hundred. Of all forts of Hawkesthere bee foure thousand. Of Pidgeons for sport of flying, there bee ten thousand. Of all forts of singing Birds, there be soure thousand.

Of Armour of all forts at an houres warning, in a readinesse to arme fine and twentie thou-

Is daily expences for his owne person, that is to say, for feeding of his Cattell of all forts, and amongst them some few Elephants Royall, and all other expences particularly, as Apparell, Victuals, and other perty expences for his house amounts, to fiftie thousand

The expences dally for his Women by the day, is thirtie thousand Rupias. All this written concerning his Treasure, Expences and monethly pay is in his Court, or Castle of Agra: and every one of the Castles aboue nominated, have their severall Treasure, especially they dye, and to bestow on his Children what he pleaseth: but commonly he dealeth well with them, possessing them with their Fathers Land , dividing it amongst them : and vnto theeldest

Sonne, hee hath a very great respect, who in time receiveth the full title of his Father. There was in my time a great Indian Lord or Prince, a Gentile named Raga Gaginat, vpon whose goods

Maunes in Gold, and every Maune is five and fiftie pound waight. Also his custome is, that of all forts of Treasure, excepting Coine, to say of all forts of Beasts, and all other things of value, a small quantitie is daily brought before him. All things are severally divided into three hundred and fixtie parts, fo that hee daily feeth a certaine number, to fay, of Elephants, Horfes, Camels, Droinedaries, Moyles, Oxen, and all other : as also a certaine quantitie of Iewels, and fo it continuet hall the yeere long : fer what is brought him to day is not feene againe, till that the Kings seizing after his death, he was found (besides lewels and other Treasure) to have fixtie 30

Labor, which was not mentioned. The Cultome of this Mogoll Emperour is to take polletion of his Noblemens Treasure when

The Mogoll heire to cuery

Raga Gazinat

Daily furuey of the Kings

Elephants

He hath three hundred Elephants Royall, which are Elephants whereon himselfe rideth: and when they are brought before him, they come with great iollitie, having fome twentie or thirty men before them with small Stremers. The Elephants Cloth or Couring is very rich, eyther of 40 Cloth of Gold, or rich Veluet : hee hath following him his shee Elephant, his Whelpe or Whelpes, and foure or fue yong ones, as Pages which will bee in number tome fixe, fome feuen, and some eight or nine. These Elephants and other Cattell, are dispersed among his Nobles and men of fort to ouer-fee them, the King allowing them for their expences, a certaine quantitie: but fome of them will cate a great deale more then their allowance commeth vnto. These Elephants Royall eate tenne Rupias euery day in Sugar, Butter, Graine, and Sugar Canes. These Elephants are the goodliest and fairest of all the rest, and tame withall, so managed, that I saw with mine eyes, when the King commanded one of his young Sonnes named Sharian (a Childe of feuen yeeres of age) to goe to the Elephane to bee taken up by him with his fnost; who did fo delinering him to his Keeper that commanded him with his hooke : and having done 50 this ento the Kings Sonne, he afterwards did the like to many other Children. When these Elephants are shewed, if they who have the charge of them bring them leane, then are they checked and in diffrace, whlesse their excuse bee the better : and so it is with all things else in that kinde, that every man striveth to bring his quantitie in good liking, although hee spend of

The Kings

Forty thoufand Elephants

When hee rideth on Progresse or Hunting, the compasse of his Tents may bee as much as the compasse of Landon and more, and I may say, that of all forts of people that fellow I comes as large in compagness the Campe, there are two hundred thousand: for hee is promided, as for a Citie. This King is thought to be the greatest Emperour of the East, for Wealth, Land, and force of Men: as allo 60 for Horses, Elephants, Camels and Dromedaries. As for Elephants of his owne, and of his Nobles, there are fortie thousand, of which the one halfe are trayned Elephants for the Warre; and there Elephants of all beafts, are the most understanding. I thought good here to set downe this one thing, which was reported to me for a certainty, although it feemed very strange. An Elephant having journyed very hard, being on his trauell, was miluled by his Commander, and one day finding the fellow affeepe by him, but out of his reach, having greene Canes brought him to eate, fplit the end of one of them with his teeth, and taking the other end of the Cane with his fnowt, reached it toward the head of the fellow, who being fait afleepe, and his turbant fallen from his head (the vie of India being to weare their haire long like Women ) he tooke hold with the Cane on his haire, wreathing it therein, and withall, haling him vnto him, vntill he brought him within the compasse of his snowt, he then presently killed him. Many other strange things 10 are done by Elephants.

He hath also infinite numbers of Dromedaries, which are very swift, to come with great Dromedaries fpeed, to give affault to any Citie, as this Kings Father did : fo that the enemies thought he had fwifineff . beene in Agra, when he was at Amadauar : and he came from Agra thither in nine daies, vpon From Agrato these Dromedaries, with twelve thousand choyce men, Chan-channa being then his Generall. Amadaus in The day being appointed for the battell, on a juddaine newes came of the Kings arrivall, which frucke fuch a present feare into the Guzerats, that at that time they were overthrowne and conquered. This King hath diminished his chiefe Captaines, which were Rasbootes, or Gentiles, and naturall Indians, and hath preferred the Mahumetans ( weak spirited men, void of resolution) in fuch fort, that what this mans Father, called Echer Padafha, got of the Decans, this King Selim

20 fha, beginneth to loofe. He hath a tew good Captaines yet remaining, whom his father highly Selims rebellieffeemed, although they be out of fauour with him, because that vpon his rebellion against his father, they would not affilt him, confidering his intent was naught; for he meant to have shortned his Fathers daies, and before his time to have come to the Crowne. And to that purpofe; being in Attabase, the regall seate of a kingdome called Porub, hee arose with eighty thousand horse, intending to take Agra, and to have possession of the Treasury, his Father being then at the warres of Decan: who vnderstanding of his Sonnes pretence, left his conquering there, and made half to come home to faue his owne. Before the Kings departure to the warres, hee gaue order to his Sonne to goe with his Forces vpon Aranna, that great Rebell in Malua, who Or Rabbane. comming to parle with this Rebell, he told the Prince, that there was nothing to be gotten by him but blowes: and it were better for him, now his Father was at Decan, to goe vpon Agra, and possesse himselfe of his Fathers treasure, and make himselfe King, for there was no man able to relifthim. The Prince followed his counfell, and would have projecuted it, but his Fathers haft before, vpon notice given, prevented his purpose : at whose arrivall at Agra, hee presently fent vnto his Sonne, that he make choyce either to come and fall at his feete, and be at his mercy to doe with him as he pleased, or to fit himselfe for the battell and fight it out. He well confidering the valour of his Father, thought it meetest to submit himselfe, and stand to his Fathers mercy : who after affronts shewed him and imprisoument, was soone released and pardoned, by reason of many friends, his Mother, Sifters, and others,

This Selim Padasha being in his rebellion, his father dispossessed him, and proclaimed heire sultan coffere apparant, his eldeft Sonne Coffere being eldeft Sonne to Selimfha: for his owne Sonnes younger proclaimed. Brothers to Selim, were ail dead in Decan and Guzerat : yet shortly after his Father dyed, who in his death-bed had mercy on Selim, possessing him againe. But Cossero, who was proclaimed heire apparant, stomached his father, and rose with great troopes, yet was not able to indure after the loffe of many thousand men on both fides : but was taken, and remaineth still in prison in the Kings Pallace, yet blinde, as all men report: and was fo commaunded to be blinded by his Heews not father. So fince that time, being now eight yeares after, he had commanded to put all his fonnes blinded, and confederates to death, with fundry kinds of death; fome to bee hanged, fome spitted, some to is since (asyon have their heads chopped off, and fome to bee torne by Elephants. Since which time hee hath faillfee in Sir so raigned in quiet, but ill beloued of the greater part of his Subjects, who stand greatly in feare of ThaRottielatihim. His cultome is every yeare to be out two moneths on hunting, as is before specified. When out of prilon, he meaneth to begin his journey, if comming forth of his Pallace, hee get vp on a Horfe, it is a figne that he goeth for the warres : but if he get up upon an Elephant or Palankine, it will bee

My diffe in the time that I was one of his Courtiers, have feene many cruell deeds done by Cruell Exercise him. Five times a weeke, he commaundeth his brave Elephants to fight before him : and in the tions, time of their fighting, either comming or going out, many times men are killed, or dangeroully hurt by these Elephants. But if any be grieuoully hurt (which might very well escape) yet neuerlesse that man is cast into the River, himselfe commaunding it, saying: dispatch him, for as long as he liueth, he will doe nothing elfe but curle me, and therefore it is better that he dye pre-60 fently. I have seene many in this kind. Againe, hee delighteth to see men executed himselfe. and torne in peeces with Elephants. He put to death in my time his Secretary, onely vpon fufpicion, that Chan-channa should write vnto the Decan King, who being fent for and examined about this matter, denied it : whereupon the King not having patience, arose from his seate, and with his Sword gaue-him his deadly wound, and afterwards deliuered him to bee torne by

220

Seuerity.

Likewife, it happened to one who was a great friend of mine (a chiefe man, hauing under his charge the Kings Ward-robe, and all Woollen Cloath, and all forts of mercery, and his China dishes) that a faire China dish ( which cost ninetie Rupias, or fortie fine Rials of eight ) was broken, in this my friends time, by a mischance (when the King was in his progresse ) being packed among to ther things, on a Cammell, which fell and broke all the whole parcell. This Nobleman knowing how deerely the King loued this dish about the rest, presently sent one of his tru-

china-machina. fly feruants to China-machina, ouer land to feeke for another, hoping that before he should remember that dish, he would returne with another like vnto it : but his euill lucke was contrarie. Is For the King two yeares after remembred this dish, and his man was not yet come. Now, when the King heard that the dish was broken, he was in a great rage, commanding him to be brought before him, and to be beaten by two men, with two great whips made of cords : and after that he had received one hundred and twenty of these lashes, he commanded his Porters, who bearpointed for that purpose, to beate him with their small Cudgels, till a great many of them were broken : at the least twenty men were beating of him, till the poore man was thought to bee dead, and then he was haled out by the heeles, and commaunded to prilon. The next day the King demaunded whether he was living, answer was made, that he was : whereupon, he commanded him to be carried vnto perpetuall prison. But the Kings Sonne being his friend, freed him of that, and obtained of his Father, that he might bee fent home to his owne house, and 26 there be cured. So after two moneths, he was reasonably well recourred, and came before the King, who presently commanded him to depart the Court, and neuer come againe before him, China machina vntill he had found fuch a like dish, and that hee trauell for China-machina to feeke it : the King allowed him fine thousand Rupias towards his charges; and besides, returning one fourth part of his living that he had before, to maintaine him in his travell. He being departed, and foureteene moneths on his trauell, was not yet come home : but newes came of him, that the King of Per-164 had the like dish, and for pitties fake hath fent it him, who at my departure was on his way homeward. Likewise, in my time it happened, that a Pattan, a man of good flature, came to one of the Kings Sonnes, named Sultan Peruis, to intreat him to beltow somewhat on him, by petition delinered to one of the Princes chiefe men, at the delinery whereof, the Prince caused him to come neere : and demanding of him whether hee would ferue him ; he answered, No, for he thought that the Prince would not grant him so much as he would aske. The Prince seeing him to be a pretty fellow, and meanely apparelled, imiled, demanding what would content him: hee told Prouddemand him plainly, that hee would neither ferue his Father nor him, under a thousand Rupias a day, which is 100 pound sterling. The Prince asked him what was in him that he demanded so much; he replyed, make tryall of me with all forts of weapons, either on horsebacke, or on foote, and for my sufficient command in the warres, if I doe not performe as much as I speake, let mee dye for it. The house being come for the Prince to go to his Father, he gaue ouer his talk, commanding the man to be forth comming. At night the Kings custome being to drinke, the Prince 40 perceiuing his Father to be merry , told him of this man : fo the King commaunded him to be brought before him. Now while he was fent for, a wilde Lyon was brought in, a very great one, strongly chained, and led by a dozen men and keepers : and while the King was viewing this Lyon, the Pattas came in, at whole fight the Prince presently remembred his Father. The King demanding of this Pattan, whence he was, and of what parentage, and what valour was in him, that he should demand so much wages: his answer was, that the King should make tryal of him. That I will, faith the King, goe wraftle and buffet with this Lyon. The Pattans answer was, that this was a wild beaft, and to goe barely vpon him without weapon, would be no triall of his man-hood. The King not regarding his speech, commanded him to buckle with the Lion, who did so, wrastling and buffeting with the Lyon a pretty while : and then the Lyon being 50 loose from his keepers, but not from his chaines, got the poore man within his clawes, and tore his body in many parts : and with his pawes tore the one halfe of his face, fo that this valiant man was killed by this wilde beaft. The King not yet contented, but defirous to fee more sport, fent for ten men that were of his horfe-men in pay, being that night on the watch : for it is the custome of all those that receive pay, or living from the King, to watch once a weeke, none excepted, if they be well, and in the Citie. These men one after another, were to buffet with the Lyon, who were all grieuoutly wounded, and it cost three of them their lines. The King continued three moneths in this vaine, when he was in his humors, for whose pleasure sake, many men loft their lines, and many were grieuoully wounded. So that euer after, vntill my comming away, some fifteene young Lyons were made tame, and played one with another before the 69

Crueil com-

Bloody expe-

Icwels and

King, frisking betweene mens legs, and no man hurt in a long time. Likewile, he cannot abide, that any man should have any precious stone of value, for it is death if he know it not at that prefent time, and that he hath the refusall thereof. His Ieweller, a Bannian, named Herranand, had bought a Diamond of three Mettegals, which coft one hundred thoufand Rupias: which was not fo closely done, but newes came to the King: Horranand likewife was befriended, beeing presently acquainted therewith, who before the King sent for him, came vnto him, and challenged the King that he had often promifed him that he would come to his houle: the King answered that it was true. Herranand therefore replyed, that now was the time, Coffly for that he had a faire Present to bestow upon his Maiestie: for that he had bought a stone of such tainmen a weight. The King smiled, and faid, Thy lucke was good to prevent me. So preparation was made, and to the Bannians house he went. By this meanes, the King hath ingroted all faire stones, that no man can buy from fine Carats ypwards, without his leane : for he hath the refulall 10 of all, and grueth not by a third part fo much as their value. There was a Diamant cutter of my acquaintance; that was fent for to cut a Diamant of three Mettegals and a halter, who demanded a fmall fould Diamant to make powder, wherewith to cut the other Diamant, They brought him Aninefiting a Cheft, as he laid, of three spannes long, and a spanne and halfe bread, and a spanne and halfe of Diagonds.

deepe, full of Diamants of all fizes and forts: yet could be find neuer any one for his purpose, but one of fine Rotties, which was not very foule neither,

He is exceeding rich in Diamants, and all other precious stones, and vivially weareth every day a faire Diamant of great price, and that which he weareth this day, till his time be come about to weare it againe, he weareth not the fame: that is to fay, all his faire Iewels are divided into a certaine quantitie or proportion, to weare every day. He also weareth a chaine of Pearle, very faire and great, and another chaine of Emeralds, and ballace Rubies. Hee hath another Iewell, that commeth round about his Turbant, full of faire Diamants and Rubies. It is not much to bee wondered, that he is so rich in Iewels, and in Gold and Silver, when he hath heaped together the Treafure and lewels of io many Kings, as his forefathers have conquered, who likewife were a great we alth. long time in gathering them together; and all came to his hands. Againe, all the money and Iewels which his Nobles heape together, when they die come all vnto him, who giveth what hee lifter to the Noblemens wives and children; and this is done to all them that receive pay, or liuing from the King: India is rich in filter, for all Nations bring Coyne, and carry away commodities for the same; and this Coyne is buried in India, and goeth not out: fo it is thought , that once in twentie yeeres it commeth into the Kings power. All the lands in his Monarchie are at Those lands 30 his disposing, who gueth and taketh at his pleasure. If I have lands at Lahor, being fent vinto the which are let warres at Decan, another bath the lands, and I am to receive mine in Decan, or thereabouts, near pay to the king the place where I am, whether it be in the warres, or that I be feet about any other bufineffe, for two thirds of the place where I am, whether it be in the warres, or that it be run among any other countries, we the profession any other countries. And men are to looke well write other doings; for if they be found cardie in the profession any other countries. And men are to looke well write other doings; for if they be found cardier in the profession and the profes any other country. And men are to looking their lands: and if complaints of Insuffice of those who neuer so little a matter, they are in danger of looking their lands: and if complaints of Insuffice beginning which they doe, bee made vnto the King, it is well if they sicape with loffe of their lands. He is very seuere in such causes, and with all seueritie punisheth those Captaines, who suffer remaineth to out-lawes to give affault vinto their Citie, without refilting. In my time there were some eight the King In all Captaines, who had their living vpon the borders of Bengala, in achiefe Citie called Pattana, the world is which was forfered to be called pattana, the world is which was forfered to be called pattana, and have lead to be called pattana.

which was suffered to be taken by out-lawes, and they all fied; but that Citie was againe reftonile land, then red by a great Captaine, who was Commander of a Countrey neere thereabouts; who tooke all infomegreat those Captaines that fled, and ient them to the King, to vie punishment vpon them at his pleasure. gares of his So they were brought before the King in chaines, and were prefently commanded to be shauen, Dominions. both head and beard, and to weare womens apparell, riding vpon affes, with their faces backwards.

Punithmen
Cowards. and so carried about the Citie. This being done, they were brought before the King againe, and A there Citie there whipped, and fent to perpetuall prilon; and this punishment was inflicted upon them in called Patteria. my fight. He is feuere enough, but all helpeth not, for his poore Riats or Clownes complaine of He callethre-Iniuffice done them, and cry for Iuffice at the Kings hands. They come to a certaine place, where bek (15the Mea long rope is fathened vinto two pillars, neere vinto the place where the King fitterh in Iuffice. that refused This rope is hanged full of Bels, plated with gold, so that the rope beeing shaken, the Bels are subjection, heard by the King: who lendeth to know the cause, and doth his lustice accordingly. At his first thoughpercomming to the Crowne, he was more seuere then now he is, which is the cause that the Coun- haps some of trey is so full of outlawes, and theeues, that almost a man cannot flire out of doores, throughout them were free all his Dominions, without oreat forces for they are all become Rebels. all his Dominions, without great forces: for they are all become Rebels.

There is one great Ragane betwirt Agra and Amadanar, who commandeth as much land racimposed as a good Kingdome: and all the forces the Mogol hath, cannot bring him in, for his forces are vp- the true fucces. on the Mountaines. He is twentie thouland strong in Horse, and sittle thouland strong in Foote, for of Point ... on the Mountaines. He is twentie thouland strong in Horte, and fittie thouland strong in Foote, whom Alexand many of these Rebels are in all his Dominions: but this is one of the greatest. There are many of these results in all his Dominions is but this is one of the greatest. There are many of these results in all his Dominions is but this is one of the greatest. There are many of these results in all his Dominions is but this is one of the greatest. There are many of the second of the greatest is all his Dominions is but this is one of the greatest. There are many of the second of the greatest is all his Dominions is but this is one of the greatest. There are many of the second of the greatest is all his Dominions is but this is one of the greatest. ny rifen at Candahar, Cabul, Moldun, and Sinde, and in the Kingdome of Boloch : Bengala like- Heis now wife, Decan, and Gnzerat are full, fo that a mon can trauell no way for out-lawes. Their Go- brough, or uernment is in fach a barbarous kind, and cruell exacting upon the Clownes, which cauleth them bought rather to be so head-strong. The fault is in the Chiefe, for a man cannot continue halfe a yeere in his liuing, but it is taken from him and given vnto another; or elfethe King taketh it for himselfe (if acknowledge it be rich ground, and likely to yeeld much) making exchange for a worse place: or as he is be- tribute to the friended of the Vizir. By this meanes he racketh the poore, to get from them what he can, who Megel.

CHAP.7. S.4.

full thinketh enery hours to be put out of his place. But there are many, who continue a long time in one place, and if they remaine but fixe yeeres, their wealth which they gaine is infinite. if it be a thing of any fort. The cuffome is, they are allowed fo much living to maintaine that Port which the King hath given them, that is to say; they are allowed twentie Rupias of cuerie horse by the Moneth, and two Rupias by the Moneth for every horse Fame, for the maintenance of their Table. As thus; A Captaine that hath fine thouland horse to maintaine in the warres, hach likewife of Fame other free thousand, which he is not to maintaine in the warres, but onely for his Table allowed vpon every horse by the Moneth two Rupias, and the other sue thousand. swenty Rupias by the Moneth: and this is the pay which the greater part of them areal. Now here I meane to speake a little of his manners, and customes in the Court. First, in the morning about the breake of day, he is at his Beades, with his face turned to the West-ward. The manner of his praying when he is in Agra, is in a private faire roome, vpcma goodly let flore, hauing onely a Porsian Lamb-skinne vnder him: having also some eight channes of Beads, every one of them containing foure hundred. The Beads are of rich Pearle, ballace Rubyes, Diamonds, Rubyes, Emeralds, Ligrum Aloes, Eshem, and Corall. At the opper end of this let stone, the Pictures of our Lady and Christ are placed, graven in stone: so he turneth ouer his Beads, and faith. three thouland two hundred words, according to the number of his Beads, and then his Prayer is ended. After he hath done, he sheweth himselfe to the people, receining their Salames, or good morrowes, vnto whom multitudes refort every morning tor this purpole. This done, hee like- 20 peth two houres more, and then dineth, and passeth his time with his Women, and at noone hee theweth himselfe to the people againe, fitting till three of the clocke, viewing and seeing his Paftimes, and sports made by men, and fighting of many sorts of beasts, every day fundry kinds of Paltimes. Then at three of the clocke, all the Nobles in generall (that be in Agra, and are well) refort vnto the Court, the King comming forth in open audience, fitting in his Seat-Royall, and Theredrayle. euery man standing in his degree before him, his chiefest fort of the Nobles standing within a red Rayle, and the rest without. They are all placed by his Lieutenant Generall. This rest Rayle, is three (teppes higher then the place where the rest stand; and within this red Rayle I was placed, amongst the chiefest of all. The rest are placed by Officers, and they likewise be within an other very spaceous place rayled: and without that Rayle, stand all forts of horsemen and souldiers, that 30 belong vnto his Captaines, and all other commers. At these Rayles, there are many doores kept by many Porters, who have white rods to keepe men in order. In the middeft of the place, wight before the King, standeth one of his Sheriffes, together with his Master Hangman, who is accompanied with forty hangmen, wearing on their heads a certaine quilted cap, different from allothers, with an Hatchet on their shoulders: and others with all forts of Whips, being there, readie to doe what the King commandeth. The King heareth all causes in this place, and stayeth some two houres every day (these Kings of India tit daily in Inflice every day, and on the Tuesdays doe their executions.) Then he departeth towards his pauate place of Prayer; his Prayer beeing ended, foure or fine forts of very well drelled and roatted meats are brought him, of which as hee plealeth, he eateth a bit to stay his stomacke, drinking once of his strong drinke. Then hee com-

The great Megel his denoti-Some suppose him author of anewica.

ting to his owne home. And after he hath flept two homes, they awake him, and bring his Supper to him, at which time he is not able to feed himfelfe; but it is thrust into his mouth by others, and this is about one of the clocke; and then he fleepeth the reft of the night.

Captin How meth forth into a private roome, where none can come, but fuch as hunfelfe nominateth, (for the private rooms the rooms that the rooms the rooms that the rooms the rooms that the rooms that the rooms the rooms that the rooms that the rooms the rooms the rooms the rooms that the rooms the rooms the rooms the rooms that the rooms in this place he drinketh other five cuptogether neete fuls, which is the portion that the Phylicians alot him. This done, he eateth Opium, and then he about the great artleth, and being in the height of his drinke, he layeth him downe to fleepe, every man depar-

Now in the space of these sixe cups, he doth many isle things; and whatsoeuer he doth, either without or within, drunken or fober, he hath writers, who by turnes set downe enerything in writing which he doth: so that there is nothing passeth in his life time, which is not noted; no, 50 not so much as his going to the necessary; and how often he heth withhis women, and with whom: and all this is done vnto this end, that when he dieth, these writings of al his actions and materials for the chronicles. At my being their children with him, he made his brothers children Christians; the doing whereof was not for any zeale lie had to Christianitie, as the Fathers, and all Christians thought; but vpon the prophecie of certain leatned Gentiles, who told him, that the fonnes of his body should be disinherited, and the children of his brother should raigne. And therefore he did it, to make these children hatefull to all was dembata Moores, as Christianskre odious in their fight: and that they beeing once Christians, when any rickeraber of fuch matter should happen, they should find no subjects: but God is omnipotent, and can turns sensualitie,the the making of these Christians vnto a good ende, if it be his pleasure.

Christians This Christiaof deuction or

This King amongst his children, hath one called Sultan Shariar, of seven yeeres of age, and his Father on a day, being to goe some whether to solace him selfe, demanded of him whether hee would goe with him; the child answered, That if it pleased his Highnesse, he would either goe or flay, as the pleafure of his Father was. But because his answer was not, that withall his heart he would waite upon his Maiettie, he was very well buffered by the King, and that in such fort, that no child in the world but would have cryed; which this child did not. Wherefore his Father demanded why he reyed not; he answered. That his Nurles told him, that it was the greatest shame in the world, for Princes to cry when they were beaten; and ever fince they nurtured me in this kind, faith he, I never cryed, and nothing thall make me cry to the death. Vpon which speech, his Father being more vexed, stroke him againe, and caused a bookin to bee brought him. which he thrust through his cheeke; but all this would not make him cry, although he bled very much, which was admired of all, that the Father should doe this vinto his child, and that he was for from, that hee would not crie. There is great hope of this child to exceed all the reft.

This Emperour keepeth marry feaths in the years, but two feaths especially may be nominated, Two feath. the one called the Nombus, which is in honour of the New-yeares day. This fealt continued eighteene dains, and the wealth and rithes are wonderfult, that are to be feene in the decking and ferring forth of every mans rooms, or place where he todgeth, when it is his turne to watch! for every Nobleman hath his place appointed him in the Palace. In the middelt of that foats. ous place I speake of, there is a rich Post pitched, but so rich, that I thinke the like cannot bee An exceeding found in the world. This Tent is curiously wrought, and hath many Seminars towning round rich Tent, about it, of most curious wrought Veluet, embroidered with Gold, and many of them are of Cloath of Gol land Silver. Their Sommen be shaddowes to keepe the Somme from the compasse of this Tent. I may fay, it is at the leaft two Acres of ground, but fo richly spread with Silke

20 and Gold Carpets, and Hangings in the principal places, rich, as rich Veluet imbroydered with Gold, Pearle, and precious stones can make it. Within it five Chaires of Estate are placed, most rich to behald, whose at his pleasure the King fitteth. There are likewife printer roomes made for his Queenes, most nich where they fit, and see all, but are not seene. So round about this Tent, the compatite of all may bee some fue Acres of ground. Every principall Noble-man maketh his roome, and decketh it, likewife every man according to his ability, ftriueth who may adorne his roome richeft. The King where he doth affect, commeth to his Noble-mens roomes, and is most famptuously feasted there : and at his departure, is presented with the rarest lewels and toyes that they can find. But because he will not receive any thing at that time as a present, he commandeth his Treasurer to pay what his prayfers valew them to bee worth, which are va-

30 lewed at halfe the price. Every one, and all of his Nobles provide toyes, and rare things to give him at this feast : so commonly at this feast every man his citate is augmented. Two daies of this feast, the better fort of the Women come to take the pleasure thereof: and this feast beginneth at the beginning of the Moone of March., The other feaft is some foure moneths after, which The feaft of is called the featt of his Birth-day : This day surry man stringth who may be the richest in ap- his Birth-day. parell and Iewels. After many iports and patimes performed in his Palace, he goeth to his mothers house, with all the better fort of his Nobles, where every man presenteth a lewell vnto his Mother, according to his estate. After the hancket is ended, the King goeth into a very faire roome, where a ballance of beaten Gold is hanged, with one scale emptie for him to sit in; the other scale being filled with divers things, that is to fay, Silver, Gold, divers forts of Grain flie-40 tle, and fo of every kind of Mettall a little, and with all forts of precious stones some: In fine, he weigheth himselfe with these things, which the next day are given to the poore, and all may be valued to be worth ten thousand pounds. This day, before he goeth vnto his mothers house, cue- See hereof ty man bringeth him his Prefent, which is thought to be ten times more worth, then that which Sir Thom. Ret.

he gineth to the poore. This done, every man departeth vnto his home. His custome is, that when you petition him for any thing, you must not come empty handed, but give him some toy or other, whether you write or no. by the gift you give him, he knoweth that you would demand fome thing of him: so after enquiry is made, if he teeth it convenient, he granteth it.

The custome of the Indians, is to burne their dead, as you have read in other Authors; and at Voluntary their burning, many of their Wines will burne with them i because they will bee registred in burning of burning of their bookes, for famous and most modest and louing Wives, who leaving all worldly affaires, women with content themselues to line no longer then their Husbands. I haue seene many proper Women their dead brought before the King, whom (by his commandement) none may burne without his leave husbands. and fight of them, I meane those of Agra. When any of these commeth, hee doth periwade them with many promises of gifts and living if they will live : but in my time no perswasion could preuaile, but burne they would. The King feeing that all would not ferue, gueth his leave for her to be carried to the fire, where she burneth her saline with her dead husband.

Likewise his custome is, when any great Noble-man hath beene absent from him two or three yeares, if they come in fauour, and have performed well, hee receiveth them in manner 60 and forme following.

First, the Noble-man stayeth at the gate of the Pallace, till the Vizir and Lieutenant Gene- Fanourable rall, and Knight Martiall come to accompany him vnto the King : then he is brought to the gate entertainment of the outermost rayles, whereof I haue spoken before, where hee standeth in the view of the ofthe Grandes King, in the middeft betweene these two Nobles; then he toucheth the ground with his hand, and also with his head, very grauely, and doth thus three times. This done, he kneeleth downe touching the ground with his fore-head, which being once done, he is carried forward towards the King, and in the midway he is made to doe this reverence againe other he commeth to the doore of the red rayles, doing the like reverence the third time : and having thus done, he commeth within the red rayles, and doth it once more vpon the Carpets. Then the King comman. deta him to come up the staires or ladder of seauen steppes, that he may embrace him; where the King most louingly embraceth him before all the people, whereby they shall take notice, that he is in the Kings favour. The King having done this, he then commeth downe, and is placed by the Lieutenant Generall according to his degree. Now if he come in difgrace, through exclamations made against him, he hath none of these honours from the King, but is placed in his place till he come to his tryall. This King is very much adored of the Heathen Comminalexinformuch, that they will spread their bodies all vpon the ground, rubbing the earth with their 10 faces on both fides. They whe many other fopperies and superfittions, which I omit, leaving them for other Travellers, which thall come from thence hereafter.

After I had written this, there came into my memory another Feaft, folemnized at his Fathers Funerall, which is kept at his Sepulchre, where likewife himselfe, with all his posterity, meane to be buried. Vipon this day there is great store of victuals dressed, and much money giuen to the poore, This Sepulchte may be counted one of the rarest Monuments of the world. It hath been this foureteene yeares a building, and it is thought it will not be finished these sea nen yeares more, in ending gates and walls, and other needfull things, for the beautifying and feeting of to forth. The leaft that worke there daily, are three thouland people : but thus much I will fay, that one of our Worke-men will dispatch more then three of them. The Sepulchre 20 is some 3. of a mile about made square : it hath seaven heights built, every height narrower then the other, till you come to the top where his Herfe is. At the outermost gate, before you come to the Sepulchre, there is a most flately Palace building: the compasse of the wall ioyning to this gate of the Sepulchre and garding, being within, may be at the least three miles. This Sepulchreis fome foure miles distant from the Citie of Agra.

CHAP. VIII.

The Veyage of Mt DAVID MIDDLE FON in the Confent, a Ship of one hundred and fifteene Tuns, which feet from Tilburic Hope, on the twelfth of March, 1606.

E anchored in the Roade of Saldania all our men in good health : onely Peter Lambers the day before fell off the top-most head, whereof he dyed.

The one and twentieth, the Captain and Master went to Penguin Hand, three leagues distant from the Roade, where wee faw fuch abundance of Seales and Pengwins, that it was admirable, for you may drive five hundred Pengwins 40 together in a flocke, and thousands of Seales together upon the shore. The Iland is not about fome threemiles long, and fome two miles broad : but in mine opinion, there is not an Iland in the world more frequented with Fowle and Seales then this Iland. It hath Pengwins, Wildegeefe, Ducke, Drake, and Pellicanes, and divers other Fowle, and after some pleasure taken there, we returned againe vnto our ship.

Hauing bought some Cattle, and ended all our businesse, and our men well refreshed, wee weighed Anchor the nine and twentieth day, about toure of the clocke in the morning, with very little wind, and came out of the Road of Saldania, our men in very good health, and loath to depart without the company of our Admirall and Vice-Admirall : but we were not certains of their arrivall there, which made vs make fo little flay, fo directing our course for S. Laurence, 50 we left Saldania.

The thirtieth day calme all day, till three of the clocke in the afternoone, and then we had a fresh gale at South-west, and we steered away halfe a watch South and by West, and two watches and an halfe South-East, and at tenne of the clocke at night the Cape De Bona Esperansa, bare North of vs, and all that night blew very much winde, and the Sea much growne: and the ship came betwixt twelve of the clocke at night, and twelve of the clocke next day, being the one and thirtieth of July, nine and twenty leagues, all this day a very plealant gale, iometimes raine, we came foure leagues from the Cape.

August 1.1607

The first of August we had very faire weather, sometimes a gale, and sometimes calme, con- 60 tinuing so all day, and we steered away two watches South-East and by East, and three watches at East and by South, the wind variable, sometimes at South, and sometimes at South by East darke weather, and she ran some one and twenty leagues, then wer were in fue and thirty degrees, and twenty two minuts of height.

CHAP. 8. Captaine David Middletons Voyage to the Molucca's.

The feuen and twentieth of August, the winde at North-wost, and we steered away East, and by South; and at two of the clocke, we faw the land of S. Laurense, or Madagafear, by estimation some fixe leagues off; and then we steered away North, and by West, and at noone we oblerued, and made the ship to be in twentie foure degrees, and fortie minutes, the variation at night fixteene degrees, and twentie three minutes.

The thirtieth, at fine of the clocke in the afternoone, we anchored in the Bay of S. Angestine, Bay of S. A. in fixe fathome and an halfe, great gravell; and we were inforced to goe to lee-ward, being to the gaffine. roome-wards of the Road before we could get in, by reason of a great breach that lyes off the bay, and then came in close vpon a tacke, and had in comming in seven, fixe and an halfe, and five fa-10 thomes all the way, and came very faire by the breach, and rid in the Road, with two Ilands in the wind of vs, and the breach both, The one and thirtieth day, our Captaine with M. Danis went in our long boat to viewe the Ilands, and I my felfe as we went, founded close aboord the Breach, and had fixe fathomes. One of the Ilands is very small, as it were a banke of sand, and nothing on it: the other is about a mile in length, and halfe a mile in breadth, and nothing upon it, but some small store of Wood.

The first of September, 1607. we weighed anchor from our first place, and came within two miles of the mouth of the River, and rid in five fathome and an halfe, very fast ground, for where we rid before it was very foule ground, so that we brake one of our Cables in the weighing. I judge it to be some three leagues from our first place, where we had vrey foule ground.

The feuenth day, having ended all our businesse, being provided of wood and water, and all things elfe, we weighed anchor in the morning about fine of the clocke, with the wind at East A marke on and by North a pleasant cale, and we General away committee on W. G. and W. A. and by North a pleafant gale, and we fleered away, comming out West, and West and by North, abaracor a til we were cleere of the Breaches, and we brought to sea with vs foure Goats, three Sheep, and a longhouse, yong Heifer: here we found great plenty of victualls, both Sheepe and Beeues for little value, This day we observed some three miles from the Iland, before the Bay of S. Augustine, and wee made it tobe in twenty three degrees and force eight minutes of latitude, and after wee were cleare of the Breach, which lies to the North-ward of the Island, we steered away South Southwest, and South and by West, sometimes with very faire weather, the wind at South-East, and by East a pleasant gale.

The eleuenth, a fresh gale at South-east, and South-east and by East, and wee stood into the shore till midnight, and then we saw a great breach, right a head hard by vs, but wee heard the rut before we faw it ( God be praised) and so we tackd, and stood off againe presently. And at noone observed, and made the Ship to be in twentie fine degrees, and twentie two minutes of la-

The twelfth of Nouember in the morning, we saw an Iland, and stood to make it, and sound it to be Ingana, and came to the North-side of it: the Iland is in length fine leagues or thereabot: it lies East and by South, and West and by North: the Easter end is the highest land, and the Wester end is full of trees. It lies in latitude in fine degrees and an halfe, and the variation is foure degrees and thirteene minutes. So after we had made it, having the wind at West North-west, but very much raine: so the thirteenth day in the morning, wee saw the maine land of Sumatra fome foure leagues from vs.

The foureteenth, we anchored in Bantam Roade, about foure of the clocke in the afternoone, being Saturday, where we found the Merchants in very good health, and all things in good order. The next day our Captaine went on shore, and spake with M. Tower on concerning the shippes businesse, and agreed to haue our Iron and Lead a shore which we brought with vs: which beeing effected, with some roomaging, and having fitted our ship in good order, and taken in Merchandize, and our Merchants for the Moluccos, with leave taken of the Merchants, we let faile from Bantam Roade the fixt of December, 1607. with little wind, and came out of the Roade, and anchored that night in fight of the high land of Bantam. The next day, weighed in the morning, and failed with a prosperous wind still continuing faire, passing many Hands, and sunken ground. Some nights we fayled, and other-some lay a hull: raine, thunder, and lightening was no strange thing to vs in those parts, but one comfort we had, that God gaue vs a fayre wind, wherewith we fayled merrily on our intended Voyage. In the beginning of lanuarie, they arrived at the Moluccos. The rest of this Moneth was spent in entertainments and complements betwixt Ours and the Spaniards, as likewise with the Moluccan Princes. So was the whole Moneth of February also. The reason was, The Spaniards durst not admu vstrade till the Camp Master had given leave. And he in those broyles twint him and the Hollanders, except Ours would doe or seeme to doe some piece of service, at least accompanying their sips 60 for greater frew (which our Captaine absolutely refused, being against his Commission ) excused himselfe. Meanewhile they had priny trade with the people by night, and were louisll and frolicke by dry with the Spaniards, which both gaue and received kind welcomes. In the beginning of March, they were permitted open trade. But this within few dayes was countermanded, and wee commanded to bie gone. And thus they spent the time till March the sourceene when they weighed anchor, and set saile.

The

Some trade they had also in the way. This part of the Iournall is long, and I have omitted it, as elsewhere in those things which I thought might be tedious.

March, 23. Straits of Ban-

The three and twentieth, 1608. we entered the Straits of Bangaya. Whereunto having entered, our Cap, aine determined to fend off his long boat to feeke for water, for here he purposed to flore himlife therewith. While he was thus determining, there came a Praw off from the Iland. with all the speed he could make, who came vnto vs, and spake with vs, of whom we demaunded, whether therewere any fresh water in that lland: who made answer, that if our Captaine pleafed, he would bring us to very good water: whereupon we flood ouer for the Eaft shore, and anchored about one of the clocke in the afternoone, in fixtie fathomes of water, where there runs a most crueil Current. Then after we came to anchor, fitting our long Boat with caske, we went to with the Indian to fetch water: where while they were fitting the Boat, he fold some fresh fish for China dishes, very cheape. So at night our men came aboord, and brought very good water, but had a wearilome rowth of it, being fine miles distant from the place where we anchored.

The foure and twentieth in the morning, we went againe for an other Boats lading of water: and this morning by day breake, there came of the countrey people aboue one hundred Prawes. men and women, and brought vs fish, both dry fish, and fresh fish very good, of both kinds great plentie, and very cheape. They brought vsalio Hogges, great and small, which they fold vs for course white cloth, and Hennes and Cocks in abundance at the like price : some for China dishes, and some for cloth. They brought vs also fruits, as Plantans, Cassathoe roots, and divers other fruits, and stated abourd vs all day, that sometimes we were not able to stirre vp and downe the 20 fhip for them. In the afternoone, the King fent our Captaine fome Plantans, and Irea pote to drinke, which is a kind of water called by that name; our Captain gaue the Meffenger great thanks in his Kings behalte, and to requite his kindnesse, sent him a rich Pintado. Then he departed, and all the reft, and about tenne of the clocke at night we weighed anchor, and in the weighing, wee broke both our Star-boord anchors flooks. Then fayling away with very little wind, at length manned our long Boate, and towed our ship all night: for if we had not towed her in this calme, we had been driven to lee-ward more then we should have gotten againe in three dayes, without a fresh gale of wind, the Current rannes so strong there.

The nineteenth of Aprill, the King of Buttone fent one of his brothers againe, to know whether our Captaine were willing he should come aboord; for he was very desirous to see both him to and our ship; because he had heard much of Englishmen, but neuer saw any. Our Captaine sent him word, that he should thinke himselfe much graced if he came. Presently the King came off in his Caricoll, rowed at least with an hundred oares, having in her besides about source hundred men with arm. s, well appointed to right, and fixe braffe pieces, and in her company fine Caricols more, which had at the least a thousand men in them: so our Captaine sent according to his demand, a pledge for him, one Francis Kelly which was our Surgeon. Then he came aboord our Captaine, who kindly entertained him, and intreated him to take part of a banquet of sweet meates, which he kindly accepted; and after the banquet ended, our Captaine demanded what he had to fell: who replyed, he had Pearle, and Turtell shels, and some cloth, which they make themselves, which as we thought was made of Cotton stript. Thenour Captaine intreated to see 40 fome of his Pearle; who faid, he had none there, for he came but vpon pleasure, not thinking to have met with any ship: but if it pleased him to goe with his ship to Buttone ( which was some night and a dayes failing thence) he should see great store of Pearle, and any thing that hee had to fell. And recaute (faid he) the place is vnknowne to you, I will fend you a Pilot, which shall bring you thither: our Captaine and Factor confidering of his speeches, thought best to accept of his kind offer, in regard it was nothing out of the way to Bantam: and beflowed upon him a Musket, a Sword, and a Pintado, thanking him for his kindneile, that he would vouchfafe to come aboord his ship: to whom the King made answer, that he had not any now worth the gining to beltow vpon our Captaine, but promifed to requite his kindnesse before his departure; and in the meane time intreated our Captaine, to accept of two peices of their cloth, who received them 50 with many thanks. About three of the clocke in the afternoone he tooke his leave of our Captaine, promifing presently to send vsa Pilot, to carry vs to the Towne of Buttone. Then wee brought the Cable to the Capítoll, and weighed, and the Pilot came aboord. And at night the King fent a Caricoll vnto vs, to fee if we wanted any thing, and to beare vs company to Battone, by whom he fent our Captaine a Goat. Then we flood away for Buttone with a small gale, but at night it was calme, and the tyde against vs, and we came to an anchor in two and twenty fathomes of water, because we would not drive to lee-ward, and in the morning weighed agains, and stood for the Towns of Buttone.

The King of

The one and twentieth, about tenne of the clocke, our Purser (who had beene sent aftere the day before ) came aboord againe, and brought with him Hennes and Cocos, and told vs that the 60 Indians had carried him vnto a King, who when he came vnto him, was very glad to fee him, because he was the first Englishman that ever he had seene. At his first comming to his house, hee found him drinking and carowing with his Nobles, and round about where he fate, all hanged about with divers mens heads, which he before had conquered: so after some little stav, hee tooke his leave, and came to the Caracoll againe, and lay all night aboord her. This night we anchored in twentie fathomes of water, the place not halfe a mile broad.

Captaine Dauid Midleton his Ship laden with Clones. CHAP.S.

The two and twentieth in the morning it was very little wind, yet wee weighed, and our long Boat towed vs through the Straits, feeing the tide was with vs, and she went a head amaine; to about eleuen of the clocked, we came in fight of the Towne of Bnitone, and came to anchor in fine and twentie fathomes of water, some mile and an halfe from the Towne, where wee staid the Kings committe, but he came not that right. Here we fent our Boat ashore, and bought fresh fish for our Companie.

The three and twentieth, about one of the clocke in the afternoone, the King came vp vnder 10 our flerne, and with him some fortie Caracels, and rowed round about vs, very gallantly set forth with his colours and pendants; and after this, they rowed toward the towne, and our Captaine intertained him with a voley of small shot, and all his Ordnance; and after, caused his long tame intertained him with a voicy of man more than all of the Boat to be manned, then accompanied with M. Siddall and his followers, went after to the Boat to be manned, then accompanied with M. Siddall and his followers, went after to the They goe on Towne of Buttone. The King likewise entertained our Captaine with his smal shot, and his Ordnance, affirming that his heart was now at rest, seeing he had seen the English Natio: promising to tore. do our Captaine all the kindnesse that in him lay; whereat our Captaine gaue him humble thanks, and for that time tooke his leaue, and came aboord, and in the morning weighed, and flood further into the Roade, and anchored in feuen and twentie fathomes of water, some halfe a mile from

The foure and twentieth in the morning, there came aboord our ship a Iana Nokeyday, which 20 had a Juncke in the Read Inden with Cloues, which came from Amboyna, with whom our Factor M. Siddall talked: this lanan promifed our Captaine (if so he pleased ) hee should have all his Cloues. The King intreated our Captaine to take part of his dinner, and to beare with the homely fathion of their Countrey: for comming into the Roome where they fate, their meate was ferued in, in great Chargers made of a kind of wood, close couered with clothes; thus their meat being let before them, the Ring, our Captaine, and M. Siddall dined together, where we had great cheare, and our drinke was Iera pote, very pleasant and sweete in tast, and the King was very merry. And after dinner he had some talke concerning the Cloues which wee should have, and promifed the next day to come aboord himfelfe, or fend fome one of his attendants, to fee a mu-30 fter of all his Cloath: then our Captaine give him great thanks, and tooke his leave, and came aboord.

The five and twentieth, the Kings Vncle came aboord of vs to fee our ship, where our Captaine kindly intertained him; and after him came the Kings brother, and flayed dinner with our Captaine, and after tooke his leave, we full expecting the Kings comming, but he came not himfelte, but fent his Sonne and the Pilot, and they had a view of the cloth, and liked it very well.

The fixe and twentieth, the King and his Sonne came aboord, and dined with our Captaine, and had great cheare, and the King was very merry, and much defired dauncing, whereupon some of our men danced before him, who was well pleased, both at their dauncing and musique : at night the Kings Vnckle fent our Captaine foure fat Hogges.

The feuen and twentieth, there was another King of an Hand thereby, which came in his Caracoll, and his wife with him, who viewed our ship, but we could not intreat him to come aboord. Our ship being laden to the full with Cloues, bought in this place of the lanans, our Captaine The ship full bought some slaves of the King, and as we were busie this night, one of them stole out of our laden with Captaines cabbin doore, and leapt into the sea, and swumme ashore, and was neuer heard of. Cloucs. Then our Captaine the next morning fent Augustine Spalding our Iurabassa, to certifie the King of his escape, and in what manner, who presently made restitution for it, and gaue him another; and then taking leave of the King, came aboord. May the recond, we proceeded for our intended and wished port of Banam, and gaue the Towne of Buttone three pieces of Ordnance for a farwell. The third we had fight of the Straights of Celebes, and stood into it with all the faile wee so could make; but could not get fo neere before night approaching.

May the two and twentieth, we anchored in the road of Bantam. We found not one Christian thip there, but foure China Iunckes which came from China, as their vie is with Taffaties, Dammaskes, Sattens, and diners other Merchandifes.

July the fifteenth, 1608, the Captaine and Merchants having ended all their bulinesse, tooke their leaves. After whose departure, we presently set laile out of the Road of Bantam, now bound homewards to our Native Countrey England, after our long and tedious Voyage. And to avoide the Readers like long and tedious voyage, the rest of this Voyage homewards is omitted, and in steed thereof, we have set downe a Table of the Journal of this ship from the Lizard to Bantam, as it was fet forth by Iohn Danis.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

A briefe Narration of the fourth Voyage to the East-Indies, with the two good Shippes, the Ascention being Admirall, and the Vnion Vice-Admirall, Inder the commaund of ALEXANDER SHARPEY Generall, and RICHARD ROVVLES Lieutenant Generall, with the discouery of the Redde-Sea in the Ascention.

Relations of the faid Voyage, written by THOMAS IO'NES.

N an vnfortunate houre, the foureteenth day of March, in the yeare of our Lord 20 16 07. with the two tall Shippes, the Ascention and the Pnion, we weighed anchor at Woolwich.

The fixth of May 1608. having spent some daies in refreshing our menat Maio, we directed our course for the passing of the Equinoctiall, and so for the Cape of Bona Speranza South-east, and by South, and South South-east. The Equinoctiall we palled very speedily, and then you have the generall wind, that bloweth continually, between the South-east and South-east and by East: so that the further you sayle to the South-ward, you shall finde the wind to Easter the more, as betweene the Equinoctiall and the Tropicke of Capricorne. The eleventh day of Iune, in the Latitude of fixe and twenty degrees, being under the Tropicke, we met with a Caracke that was bound for India, her name was the Naue Palma. This Caracke was cast away afterward upon the Coast of Soffala, within twelve leagues of Mosambike: the Captaine of which said ship came Passenger home in the same Caracke that I came out of India in; being Admirall of the Fleete of source sayle. So according to homein a Cathe cultome of the Sea, having then fome complements in friendly manner, we departed from him, to follow our Voyage:

The Bay of

The Capt.

The thirteenth of July, we came to an Anchor in the Bay of Saldania, and staying there vnto the flue and twentieh of September, in Building of a Pinnasse (at which time the Westerly Monfons have done blowing, and then the wind bloweth more betweene the South and the South-east.) The fine and twentieth of September, wee came out of the Bay, and the fixe and twentieth of the fame moneth, we were incountred with a mighty fforme, at the South South 40 east, which blew so vehemently, that we split our fore-corse that night, and lost the company of our confort the Vnion, and our Pinnasse called the Good Hope, which we had built at the foresaid Cape, and neuer heard of them afterwar!, onely the Pinnasse excepted, which came to vs to Aden in the Red-Sea. Thus with centrary winds, having before neglected our featon of time, we beate up and downe the Sea in following our Voyage, unto the eighteenth day of November, before we could get the great Hand of S. Lawrence. But there wee heate two daies toget about Cape De S. Roman, but could no: This altered their minds, that they bore up for the Hand of Comora, which standeth betwixt the Hand of S. Lawrence and the Maine, in the Southerly Latitude of eleuen degrees. The fixe and twentieth day of October, we came to an Anchor on the Wester-side of the Hand, in fixe and thirty fathomes water. Heere we were vied 50 of the King and people, with all the kindnesse that might be : but could get no fresh water; yet had maruellous good refreshing of Lines, & some Hens, and Coco Nuts, which was a great comfort vnto vs. The last day of the said moneth we weighed Anchor, and departed from the Iland of Comora, and directed our course for the Hand of Zanzibar, minding there to relieue our wants of water. But through the default of our Master, wee ouer-shot the lland of Zanzibar, and fell with the Iland of Pemba, having almost runne ashoare in the night before we did fee it, the winds being by the East North-east, we cast about, and stood off till day, thinking it to bee the Hand Zanzibar. When it was day, we found a place on the South-fide of the Hand, having a Ledge of Rockes to the Eastward of vs, here we road in seuen or eight fathome water, being the feuenthday of December. The Latitude of the place is fixe degrees to the South-ward, be- 60 ing the South-west end of the Hand. The eight of the said moneth, I went ashoare to seeke for water, of which we could not fill aboue fixe Tuns aday. We plyed our bulinesse with great recourse of the people, and familiarity with vs, but all was in treachery. Hauing almost done our businesse, and onely lacking some soure or fine Tunnes of water to fill, being the eight earth day, I went ashore to fill those empty Caskes with water, where against my comming they had laid an Ambush of sometwo hundred men, which brake out vpon vs, yet, praised be God, wee Treatherous did escape their hands, onely my Servant John Harington excepted, whom they tooke and mur- people. thered most cruelly, I not being able to rescue him. Also, they wounded a Seruant of John Elmors, being one of our Masters Mates: but the youth recoursed of his wounds, being eleuen in number. Also a little before they did put their treachery in practice, one of the chiefe of the came vnto me, deliring me to fend one of our men with him to fetch a prefent for our Generall, which I granted, but the fellow neuer came againe. The young-man that went was borne in Greenemich, his name being Edward Church-man, who afterward dyed in Mombasa of a Bloudy-fluxe, 10 as I was credibly informed of the Portugals. Also, while wee made our abode at Pemba, the Portugals were about to man a Flemmish Hulke, ( which had wintered in Mombasa) to come to take our Shippe: but hearing of the force of our shippe, they altered their minds. The people of this lland of Pemba be very cowardly people, and dare doe nothing of themselves without the inciting of the Portugals. We departed from thence the nineteenth day of the faid moneth, determining to beate vp betweene Pemba and the Maine of Melinda, in hope to finde the Current Melinda. the stronger. But that night (to our great difmaying) were came aground vpon the Coast of Melinda, but at that very instant the wind did lander, so that with the backing of our Sayles a sterne, our ship went off to our no little comfort: so that night wee stood to the East-ward till day, our shippe (praised be God ) having received no harme at all. When it was day, wee faw 20 certaine showlds, that lay off the Easter end of Pemba, that we could not weather. Then wee cast about and stood to the North-ward: but in the end we had sight of three Barkes of Moores, which in their language they call Pangaies, which we gaue chase vnto with our Ship and Boats, Three Pangaies and in the end tetched them up : they strucke faile without any resistance, and with our Boates taken. we fetched them all aboord our shippe, who were in number nity men, or there-abouts. These Moores had thought to have betrayed our shippe, as afterwards did appeare. For the chiefe of them being in the Cabbin with our Mafter, and our chiefe Merchant William Renet, and my felfe, WRenet stab. he with his long Knife which he had hid privily about him , did stab our Master Philip Grove to bed. fore, that we had thought he would not have lived : but contrary to the Moores expectation, I ended his daies in the place. The rest of the Moores likewise that were within the ship, did at 30 that very instant put their Tragedy in practise, in stabbing of our Preacher, and one of our Merchants, but ( praifed be God ) in a small time wee vanquished them all , to that there did not Reuenge. escape aboue five or fixe at the most, to carry newes of their fellowes, being a just revenge for our former wrongs. For when they did put this wickednesse in practise, we had not abourd our ilippe aboue fifteene or fixteene men at the most, all the rest being imployed in our Boates. Afterwards, I was credibly informed by the Portugals, of the great lamentation which was made for theie Moores, because they were of the cheife Gentlemen of all the Coast of Melinda, and of the blood Royall. Now after the spoile of these Barkes, we determined to stay no longer on the North fide of Pemba: fo we put out of the West-end of the lland againe, determining to beate vp for the Iland of Socotora: but the winds hanging betweene the East, and East South-40 East, and finding small helpe of the Current, did altogether frustrate our determination. Then we determined to stand off to the South-ward, fome two hundred or three hundred leagues, thinking to finde the windes at East South-east. But heere likewise we were frustrate of our hopes. For in the Offing we found the wind to hang at the East North-east, and at the North-East, and by East, that we lay beating in the Sea, from the twentieth day of December, vnto the fixe and twentieth day of January, and then it was our good hap to meete with certaine Hands, which wee named the Defelate Hands, because there are not any Inhabitants upon The defelate them. The le llands are (at the leaft) some twelve or thirteene in number, and ought very dilllands, not degently to be sought of them, that shall transile hereafter, because of the good at the very disfolic of Coc gently to be lought of them, that shall trauaile hereafter, because of the good refreshing that is Nuss & other vpon them. Water is there in great abundance, also great flore of Coco Nuts, great store of fresh promision.

50 Fish, and likewise store of Turtle-Doues, which are so tame, that one man may take with his hand twenty dozen in a day : also great store of Palmeto-trees, so that these Hands seemed to vs an earthly Paradife.

Having refreshed our selves at the aforesaid Ilands, wee determined to follow our Voyage, but still were crossed with contrary winds, vntill the thirtieth day of March, and then beginne the Westerly Monsons, then we got the Hand of Socotora. But having espyed a Sayle which was bound for the Red Sea, we gave chase, and in the end fetched them vp, being bound for Aden, being glad of his company we conforted with him, and determined to goe both in company together. This ship did belong to Din : but hee told vs that hee did belong to Surat, telling vs certaine newes of Captaine Hambins and of his being at Surat, whereof wee were very glad. 60 Thus we held on our determined course vntill the eight of Aprill, at which time we came to an Anchor in the Roade of Aden, against the Citie. This Citie of Aden is under the Dominion of Aden

the Great Turke, and is the Key of all Arabia falix. The same day wee came thither, the Captaine of the Caitle came aboord of vs with twelve Souldiers to guard our Generall ashore: where when he came, he was received with all the honour that might bee, not fuffering him once

10 all the men had fortaken her, and were gone to Surat by Land.

Our Kings Letterstothe or Sinan. Their Pinnace came alto to murdered.

Ichn Laffeen

Ader.

fearrly to treade on the ground, but mounted him upon a faire Arabian Horse, and so in triumph he was carryed to the Gouernour of the Towne : where after kind intertainment , the Gouernour understanding that he had Letters from the Kings Maiestie of England to the Basian of Ze-Balha of Zenan nan, whole aboatle is fitteene dayes journey vp into the Countrey from Aden, whither they We remay ned in the Read of Aden untill the tenth day of May, and then our Pinnace the English Voyages to the East-Indies. Ascention wracked. LIB. III.

Good Hope, which we had lost before at the Cape of Bona Esperanza, came to vs, having indured great milery, and they had murthered most shamefully their Master lohn Luffken, because (they faid) he would not put in with the shoare to relieve them, beeing then at the Easterne end of Saint Laurence (but the chiefe cause was for his prouision) and the next day they put in with the 10 shoare, and came to an Anchor where they got both water and other prouision. But heere they left my Seruant Edward Hilles behind them, who (as they faid) going to cut wood, could not bee lett on landin heard off. The parties that did the Murther, to foone as they came to vs had their reward, according to their deferts, being both executed aboord the Pinnace where they did the Murther, whole names were Thomas Clarke who was his Mate, and Francis Driner Gunner of the faid Pinnace. Thus were mayned at Aden vntill the fifteenth of the faid moneth, and then our Generalland Mafter determined to goe for the Citie of Moke, which standeth vp higher in the Red Sea lome fortie leagues or thereabouts.

goe vo to Ze-

But at our departure from Aden, the Gouernour did detayne two of our Merchants, whole names were Iohn Iordin and Philip Glaffecocke, and certaine Cloth, and so fent them vp altoge- 20 Ison Lordan and ther to the Basha, where when they came, they were vied most kindly; the Basha demanding of Philip Glaflocke them, whether they had brought the Great Turke his Letter with them, they answered him no: whereupon he told them, he could not give them any leave to fettle a Factorie : but for the cloth which you have heere, I will take this for a prefent, because your thip is the first of the English Nation, that euer came into these parts. And seeing you are come, I give you leave to sell your goods, and buy what you will, and so to depart at your pleasure Custome free, because of the Theypaffe the cloth which I detaine in my hands. Thus with much trouble, because the Westerly Monson Streights of beganne to come in, and then the Current runneth out of the Red Sea) in the end we passed the Straights being not aboue one mile and an halfe broad at the most. the Red Sea.

The cleuenth of June we came to anchor in the Roade of Moka, where we were most kindly to entertayned, and the same day our Generall went ashoare, where he was most louingly received, They arrive at This Citie of Moka is the chiefe Staple for all Indian Trade. For all the goods that are brought to Cairo and to Alexandria come from thence. We stayed in this Roade of Moka in trimming of our Pinnace untill the fixe and twentieth day of July, and then our Generall and Master determined to follow their Voyage for Cambaya, fore against the mindes of the Company, being the chiefe Officers of the fhip. That night through the head-strongnesse of our Master, we lost two

The feuenth day of August we came to the Iland of Secotora, where we had so much windeat South, and South South east, that we were hardly able with our ship to keepe the shore, which our Pinnace not being able to doe, was blowne off, having not aboue two or three dayes victuals 40 in her at the moil. Whilest we lay at this Iland of Sacotora to get in a Boates lading of water, and two or three Boates of itones for ballast, we had such forcible gales of wind, that we broke two more of our best Anchors, having lost (as is aforefaid) two before in the Red Sea: fo vehemently doe those South-west windes blow at that Iland. In that time of the yeare, we now hauing but two left to supply our vies withall. We stayed at the lland of Socotora untill the twentieth day of August, and then we wayed and directed our course for Cambaya.

The found day of September we fell with the Coast of Din, fome eight leagues to the Eastward of Din, we iteredalongit the shoare some seuen leagues more to the Eastward, and then came to an Anchor a head-land. The third day we fent our Skiffe ashore, where the peoplereforted vnto vs, having certaine conference with them, as also buying of them sheepe and other so things. They understanding that we were bound for Surat, one of them came abourd desiring of our Generall passage to Surat, as also certifying our Generall, that the way was very dangerous, offering him for feuen pieces of eight, to fetch a Pilot which should conduct the ship fately to the Port. But (being ruled in most things by our Master) hee not regarding the words of theaforefail Moore or Bannian. The fourth day we wayed Anchor about three of the Clocke in the afternoone, at the last quarter Ebbing; (if we had taken the first quarter floud, we should furely have had water over all those shoulds ) so that night we runne on the shoulds and stroke our Theyrun vpon Rudder off, and the next day being the fift day of September, wee loft our ship also, that night the (boulds of we for fook our ship, and betook vs to our two Boats, being a thing most miraculous, that so many men should be saued in two such small Boates, wee beeing at the least eightene leagues from the 60 fhore. Thus was this tall thip lost to the great hinderance of the worthip tull Company, and to the vtter vndoing of all vs the poore Mariners, being altogether overthrowne with all the treasure and goods, both of the Merchants and the poore Companies, beeing fo farre from our Natiue Countrey. We remay ned vpon the Sea in our Boates, wntill the fixth day about foure of the

the Lord did preferne vs, having as I faid before, delivered vs from the danger of the Sea, hee would not now fuffer vs to fall into the hands of our Enemies, I meane the Portugalls, who lav at that time at the Barre of Surat, with fine fayle of Frigats to take our Boates at our comming Gods mercifull

23I

aftere, for they had intelligence of our Lips comming before. For contrary to our mindes wee deliverance. fell with the River of Gandence fome five leagues to the Southward of the Barre of Surat, where Gandence.

The Governour of this Towne of Gandence is a Bannyan, and one of those kind of people, that The Towne of observe the Law of Pythagoras. They hold it a great finne to eate of any thing that hath life or breath, but live of that which the Earth naturally affoordeth of it felfe. They likewise honour the Cow and have her in great estimation among them, and also observe the ancient custome of burning of their dead. It hath like wife in old time beene a great custome among it them, for the women to foone as their Husbands were dead, to burne themselves alive with him: but now of late yeares, they have learned more wit, and doe not vie it to commonly. Yet those women that doe it not, have their haire cut, and ever after are held for no honest women, for that they will not accompany their Husbands into the oher World, as they fay. The seventh day wee departed out of this Towne to travell for Surat, which might bee some fortie miles or thereabout, and the ninth day came thither where William Finch keeping the Faclocke in the afternoone, and then we discourred Land which we made vnto, with all the means we could possibly, indeuouring the best we could to fall with the River of Surat. But note how we were kindly entertayned of the Gouernour of the Towne. Heere wee heard likewife of the comming of our Pinnace into the same River, and of her fetching away by the Portugalls : but

Ctory, met vs : but Captaine Hamkins was gone vp to the King to Agra. This Citie of Agra Agra, is from Surat some thirtie dayes journey: there the King is resident and keepeth his Court. Heere at Swat our Generall with our Company flayed till the latter end of September, and then himselfe with the rest of our Company went from Surat, and tooke their journey vp for the Citie of Agra, so to travell by the way of Persia for England. But I holding no fit course for mee , determined with my selfe to take some other course for the getting into my Countrey. Whilest I was in many determinations, it pleased God of his goodnesse to fend a Father of the Order of Saint Paul being a Portugall, who was come from Cambaya to Su-30 rat by Land, with whom I came acquainted, he promiting me, that if I would commit my felfe into his hands, hee would fend mee home into my Countrey, or at the leaftwife into Portugall, which promife he did accomplish most faithfully. In company of this Father, my selfe and three more of our Company, ( Richard Mellis who dyed in the Caracke in the way homeward bound, Iohn Elmor and one Robert Fox) departed from Surat the fenenth day of October, and came into the strong Towne and Fortrelle of Daman, where once againe I saw our Pinnace the Good Daman, Hope, that wee had built at the Cape of Bona Esperanza: from Daman wee came to Chaul Chaul. from thence to Goa, the eighteenth day of November. The minth day of Ianuary we were im- Goa. barked in a Caracke called Our Ladie of Pittie, beeing the Admirall of the Fleet of foure fayle, and so departed the Coast of India. The eight and twentieth day of Ianuary wee passed the E-40 quinc chill vpon the Coast of India, and the one and twentieth of March we fell with the land in thirtie three degrees and an halfe, some flue leagues Eastward of Cape de Agulas, where wee Cape de Agulas Liy with contrary windes, vntill the second of Aprill, and then wee were incountred with a mightie florme at the West South-west, which blew so vehemently that wee were forced to beare up fixe houres before the Sea, and then it pleased God to send vs faire weather. The fourth day of Aprill we fell with land againe in thirtie foure degrees and fortie minutes. Then we lay driving to and againe in the Sea, with contrary windes, and in fight of the shore, so that wee were twice within three or four leagues of the Cape of Bona Esperanza, yet could not possibly get about. Thus we lay driving to and agains in the Sea, and in right of the shore, vntill the nineteenthday of Apr. Il, and then it pleafed God that we doubled the forefaid Cape of Bona Eipe- the Cape of Bo 10 ranza, to our no little comfort, being in great despayre before, and fearing our wintering at Mo- na Epirana.

Iland of Saint Helena, which standeth in sitteene degrees of Southerly latitude; where we staved vntill the fifteenth of the faid moneth in watering; and then we weighed and directed our course for the passing of the Equincetiall: and the second of Iune we passed the same. The fixe and twentieth of the faid moneth we passed the Tropicke of Cancer with the winde at Northeast, which the Portugalls call the generall wind, and the fixteenth of July we pulled by fumbique, which is a common thing amongst the Portugalls. The seven and twentieth of Aprill

we pailed the Tropicke of Capricorne, and the ninth day of May wee came to an Anchor at the

the Westerly Hands by judgement of the Pilot in the Caracke, beeing in the latitude of fortie degrees and odde minutes to the North-wards, we not feeing any land fince our departure from Saint Helena. So (prayled be God) the third day of August, wee made the Land of Portugal, Angust the being not about two leagues off the Rocke, to our no little comfort. And the same day we came arrued at Life to an Anchor in the Road of Caskalles. I the same day imbarked my selfe in a Boat, and went a- bone, 1610. shore, and so escaped the hands of the Portugalls. I remayned in Lisbone secretly vitill the thirteenth day of the faid moneth, and then I imbarked my felfe in a ship of London, with Master

Steed, which was thither bound. And the same day wee wayed Anchor in the Bay of wayer, there was a Boat full of Portugalls to have taken the ship, and so to have carryed vs ashore, having had intelligence of our departure. But we fetting fayle, put forth to Sea, and escaped the danger. and prayfed be God arrived at our long defired home.

The feuenteenth day of September, Anno 1610. It being two yeares and fix monethes fine our departure out of England.

d. II.

The report of WILLIAM NICOLS a Mariner in the Ascention which travelled from Bramport by Land to Masulipatan, written from his mouth at Bantam by HENRY MORIS, Sept. 12. 1612. The former and greater part is the same in substance with that of T. IONES, and therefore omitted.

The Company divide them-

He Company departed from our Generall, notable to prouide for them, and left the rest to stay by him being very sicke. Some went to one place, and some to another, and some backe againe for Surat. And I my selfe being one of them that were wil. ling to take the best course for my selfe that I could, I told them I would trau: 20 (God-willing) to Masulipatan, for I knew there was an Holland Factorie there, as I had heard at Smat before we came from thence. I could not finde any Christian to travell over Land with me; and inquiring at Bramport; if there were any that would trauell to Masulinatan, I met with company which were trauelling that way : but it was fuch company that few Englishmen would travell with them. For they were three lewes : but necessitie hath no law. After I hadagreed to travell with them, I thought, if I travelled with any money the Dogges would cut my W. Nichols tra- throat. So I made away with all my money, and attyred my felfe in the Habit of a Turke, and uelleth to Ma- tooke my journey with those Dogges, without any peny of money in my Purse: and trauelling with them, foure monethes, had nothing to eate but only such food as the lewer gaue me, and many times, when I was hungry they would give mee no meate, so that I was inforced to 30 eate fuch meate as they game their Camels, and no better, and glad I could get it, nay, sometimes I was infored to be in fee with the Camell Keeper to give mee a little. In this miscrable case I tranelled with these Dogges foure monethes: sometimes they would say, come let vs cut this Dogges throate, and afterwards open his belly, for he hath eaten his Gold: two would have cut my throate, but the third was an honest Dogge, for he would not consent vnto it. So with ma-Hee arriveth at my a weary journey and hungry belly, after a long and dangerous travell we came fafe vnto Ma-Sulipatan, where I presently discharged my felfe from these cruell Dogges, and came vnto the Dutch house where the Captaine vied mee very kindly, and gaue mee clothes, and meate and drinke fine moneths before any shipping came there. At length there came three ships to Mafulipatar, the one called the Hay, the other the Sunne, and the third was a Frigot, which they had 40 taken in the Streights of Malacca, and the Sunne and the Frigot being bound for Bantam. I intreated the Master to grant me passage, and I would labour for my passage, who told meevery kindly, that he would not only give me raffage, but would alto give me wages: for the which I gaue him great thankes, and fo came abourd. Not long after, we fet fayle from thence, and came He arriveth at to Bantam the fixth day of September, 1610, being Thursday, and came presently to the Eng-Bantam the 6. lifb House with joyfull heart. 1610.

is kindly intreated at the Hellanders House,

> In my trauell (with the three Iemes) overland, these faire Townes I passed, which I bare in minde, for I could neyther write nor reade..

First, after I came from Bramport, I came to Ieuaport, from thence to Huidare, from thence to Golacande, and so to Masulipatania.

ð. III.

The unhappie Voyage of the Vice-Admirall, the Union outward bound, till shee arrived at Priaman, reported by a Letter which Master SAMVEL BRAD-SHAW fent from Priaman, by HVMPHRY BIDVLPHE, the eleventh day of March, 1609. written by the faid HENRY MORIS at Bantam, Sept. the fourteenth, 1610.

Ou have alreadie heard of the passage of the two ships (the Ascention and the Union) from England, to the Cape De Bona Esperanza, but after their departure out of the Roade of Saldania, and of their loofing one another in doubling of the Cape, as yet you have not heard. Therefore I thought good to make some relation thereof, as CHAP.9.S.3. Treachery at Zanzibar and Canquomorra. Capt. Rowles.

well as of the other, and that truly, as from other men report I have heard; and thus it was. After they had loft one another by stormy weather, in doubling of the Cape, the Vnion in that storme fprang her Maine-Maft, and in the middeft of the storme they were inforced to fish it againe : by reason whereof, they lost the company of their Admirall, and at last, being without hope either to meete with Ship or Pinnaffe there-abouts, confidering that the ftorme continued; they shaped their course for the Bay of S. Augustine, being vpon Madagascar. Where being arri- They arrived ued, they went ashore, and had good refreshing, and stayed there twenty daies, being in good at the Byos hope to have met our Advirall and the Pinnasse there, but all their hopes were frustrate. Then S. Augnifine in being out of all hope to have their company, they fet tayle from thence, and directed their course Madegastar.

10 for Zanzabar, in hope to meete their Generall there : where being arrived, they went on shoare, The treachers and at first were kindly entertained : but at their next going ashoare, they lay in Ambush, and of the people as foone as they landed, falied out vpon them, and killed the Purfer prefently, and one Mariner, of Zastibe. and tooke one of their Merchants Prisoner; yet by great chance, they gat off their Boate and came aboord. The names of them that were flaine, were Richard Kenn, Purler, the Mariners name I have forgotten, but the Merchants name that was taken Prisoner, was Richard Wicham: they put to Sea about the moneth of February 1 608. with the winds at North-east and Northerly, just against them as they should goe for Socotora.

Now after they had spent much time at Sea, and little or nothing in the way, (and the most part of the men very much troubled with the Scuruy ) the Captaine purposed, and accordingly 20 bare up the Helme for the North part of S. Laurance, determining to goe for the Bay of Anton. They bare gil: but they fell on the Weft fide of the lland, intending to recouer their almost-lost men there, backe spaine; and spend the vinorositable Monsion. Vinon which end of S. Laurance, they fell into a partie, for S. Laurance. and spend the vaprofitable Monson. Vpon which end of S. Laurance, they fell into an exceeding great Bay, which afterwards they understood to be called by the Countrey people Canque. The great Bay morra, a Countrey very fruitfull and pleasant to behold. The very first view thereof, gave great of Canquanton content to all their men in generall : who no fooner arrived in the Bay, but within thort time 12, or Basmard, had conference with the Country people, and at first they profered them great kindnesse, but after it proued to the contrary. Whereupon Master Rowles the Captaine , and Master Richard Rene, chiefe Merchant, and leffrey Carlel, with three others, which were attendant vpon the Captaine, aduentured to goe ashore vnto the King : and that made them the more venterous, because 30 divers times before, all the Merchants had beene ashore at the Kings Palace (in their Skiffe and long Boate ) and spake with the King, who profered them great kindnesse, and came aboord againe, as fafe as if they had beene in their owne Natiue Countrey of England. Samuel Bradiban Samuel Bradhad beene often imployed about businesse vnto the King: yet (it pleased God) at this time, the for Captaine had some other occasion of businesse for him, and so itaid him aboord (a happy turne The Captaine for him :) for they no fooner came ashore, but they were betrayed by the Countrey people: but but the orest Providence of the Alminheite the Boarse standard and professional and providence of the Alminheite the Boarse standard and professional and providence of the Alminheite the Boarse standard and professional and providence of the Alminheite the Boarse standard and professional and the boarse of the Alminheite the Boarse standard and professional and the boarse of the Boarse standard and professional and the boarse of the Boarse standard and professional and the boarse of the Boarse standard and professional and the boarse of the Boarse standard and professional and the Boarse standard and professional and the Boarse standard and the Boa by the great Proudence of the Almightie the Boates escaped, and presently came aboord, and informed them of all that happened : Where they no fooner had made knowne vnto them this dolefull newes, but prefently they saw such abundance of Prawes, and great Boates, comming Abundance of out of the River vnto them, that it was admirable to behold. The Matter spake vnto the Gun. Prawes & great 40 ner to make the Ordnance ready, which was soone effected. This Fleete of Infidels came row- Boates. ing vp vnto their Shippe, as though prefently they would have boorded them : but by the diligence of the Gunner and his Mates, he made them retire, by finking of iome halfe dozen of Sixe Boates of their Boates, and they retired backe againe as fast, as if they had beene Sheepe chased by the theenemies Wolfe. But before we made such massacre amongst them, they came up in the face of our Ord- destroyed. nance, and we thought verily they would have taken vs all : for the fight continued (at least) two houres very dangerous, till we plagued them fo with our Ordnance: and then, he accounted Afght for two himselfe happiest that first could cleere himselfe, and wee continually sent after them, as farre as bourse.

the Ordnance would reach. After they were gone from vs in this first attempt, we stayed in the Bay some sourceene daies, being in good hope to recouer our lost men againe, in which time They stayed 14 50 we loft seuen men more through a suddaine disease, which daunted vs more then the malice of daies longer in thole Infidels. The men which died, were they that wrought fo luftily about the Ordnance in this Bay. the fight, that within two daies they were all throwne ouer-boord. These crosses comming together, and no hope to recouer our lost men, they thought it folly to make any longer stay there, and therefore presently made hast away. And being not throughly watered, they thought good to spend a little time in another place thereby : but before they could dispatch, they attempted against them the second time, with a great multitude of Boates, and many of them great veilels, A second atand so thicke peffered with men, that it was wonderfull: but they liked their fift entertaines ment fo well, that they cared not for comming too neere them the second time, but went all on since the second time, but went all on the second time, but we second time, the second time the second time the second time.

60 tended purpole was, and fearing fome mischiese in the night, they weighed and stood in for the shore (where all the Infidels sate) and gave them a whole broad side for a farewell : which fell among the thickest of them, and in their fight made such lanes among them, that they soone forfooke their places, and gat out of their fight with as much speed as might be : From thence they from S.Lue. tacked and flood off at Sea, leaving behind them foureteene men, feuen betrayed, and feuen that reve.

234

They arrive at

Gr:ffin Mauris

Tney in the U-

from Sumarra

for England.

nian returne

the Master

dird.

died with ficknesse. Then being cleare from these Insidels, they directed their course for Societa butly fome negligence, for want of hulling in betimes, the winds tooke them thort, that they They fell you could not fetch it, but they fell more to the East-ward vpon the Coast of Arabia, which was about the fourth or lune, and the Winter Monfon being come, they could not, nor durft goe for Cambara : Merecuer, vpon that Coast, they could not finde any good place to harbour themselves in, vatill the Winter were past. Wherefore, keeping within fight of the Coast foure daies, forectimes being in danger or the shore, they thought it but folly to neglect the time any longer; and therefore refolued vpon some course to be taken, for the best performance of the Voyage. So the Master calling the best, and most principall men in the shippe, and such as were bell experienced in those affaires, they presently concluded altogether to goe for Achen; and 10 being in hope there, to meete with fome Guzurats, to barter their English Commodities with them, directing their courie for that place, they arrived there the featen and twentieth of Iuly, And within feuen cases after their arrivall, they had admittance to the King, with a Prefent that The Hollanders was given, (which they were infected to doe fomewhat largely) because the Hollanders sought to croffe them, and deberre them from Trade. Their alpring minds could not have any to Trade into India, but themislues; therefore after Mafter Bradhaw had beene with the King, and frent fome time with them at Achen, he fell to Trade with the Guzurats for some of their Commodities, for our English Cloath and Lead, in trucke for Baftas, blacke and white, which is Guzurat Cloath, which they fell in those parts. After they had stayed there some small time, and trucked with the Guzurats for some Commodities, they tooke their leave, and fet sayle from thence, 20 and came vnto Priaman, and had Trade there in thort space, to their hearts content. And although Fortune had croffed them all the Voyage, yet God at length brought them vnto a pleafant Port to make some Trade and benefit of their Voyage. Heere they flaied and tooke in Pepper, and at length laded their shippe, and might 1 ng before, if there stad not beene a mutiny 2mong the Company, for the Saylers would doe as pleased themselves. But Master Bradban vied them with fuch faire words, that (at length) they gat that they came for. Heere Griffin Mauris (the Mafter) dyed : all butineffe being ended, Mafter Bradfham fent Humphrey Biddulph vnto Bantam, and Siluster Smith to beare him company, with some remainder of goods, which they could not fell at Priaman, nor at Tecoo : not long after that he had taken his leave of them, they shaping their courie for Bantam, in a China lunke, he pretently let sayle for England, in the month to of February 1609.

The lamentable successe of the said ship and Voyage, appeareth by the Letters following.

Law Deo in Morlaix, the first of March 1 6 1 1.

BRother Hide, this day is come to our hands a Letter from Odwen, written by one William Bag-get an Irish-man, dwelling in the same Towne, adaising us of most lamentable news of a sippe of London, called the Vnion, which is open this Costs, about two leagues from the faid Oiwen, which to the men of the Towne percenting, fent out two Bostes unto her; and when they came there, they found that it was a shoppe come from the East-India, richty laden with Pepper and other goods, haning in her but onely fure men aline, of which foure men, one is an In van, and other three dead in the shippe : which the foure living men through feebleness, were not able to cast over-boord, nor were scarce able to peake: To the men of the two Boates have brought the Shippe into the Roade of Odwen. And as this Iri h-man wrateth, they of the Towns have unladen the most part of the goods, and having directed his Letter to some English Merchants in this place, to repair thither with all expedition, to fee the ordering of the Ship and goods, as belonging to the Ealt-Indian Company. This Letter, is confirmed by one other Letter written in French by the Bayliffe of Kimper, and directed to one of this Towne, which I have feene : And thereforewe thought it good to fend three Copies of this Irih-mans Letter, by three fenerall Barkes, to the 50 end that the Merchants may be advertised, and give order that their good; and Shippe may be in Safeite, for it is to be doubted that the rude people will make a wracke of her. I thinke it not amiffe therefore, that they fend to the Court of France, to procure the Kings Authoritie, for I feare there will be much tronble about the matter. In the meane time, my felfe, with George Robbins will ride downe to fee in what state all things are, and doe the best we can in the Me chants behalfe, till they fend form one with procuration, good and ample for the following of this businesse, as in their discretion shall see me fitting. The ship is reported to be of three or foure hundred Tunnes, and hath three Deckes, I doubt wee shall finde ber Brewdy rifled when we shall come there. The importunate writing both of the Irish-man and the Barliffe of Kimper, bath caused us to take this journey : And we doe it the rather in consideration of the Company, presuming that they will consider our charge, because we have both emplored friends, and procured Mo- 60 ney in the place, to satisfie such as have taken paines in saving of the shippe and goods if need be. Notwithstanding, I would wish that they send some with expedition by war of Rouen, with other proussion of Money: for that this is no place of Exchange as you know, where Morey may be had at all times. I had rather gine fiftie pound, then take this iourney at this time, because I have much goods upon my hands at

I partly wrote to you many tast. The Masters name of the Shippe is Edmund White, the Masters Mate. Thomas Duckmanton, and the other Samuel Smith, and the Indian. They are in very pittifull taking, and in great want of Money, neither can they be, masters of their goods : therefore let them (end men of good experience about this businesse. And thus being in some bast readie to take Horfe, I commit r. u so the Lords protection, resting your asured friend alwaies to command,

BERNARD COVPER:

Neglect no time in making this knowne to to the Company.

Directed to Master Thomas Hide, Merchant in London.

February 1 6 1 0. touching the Vnion at Andierne.

THE eighth day of February, I came ouer the Pole-head of Bourdeaux, and the elementh of the same I lost my fore-mast, my Botsprit, and my Ruther : the same night I put into Olderyearne, the thirteenth day the French-men brought the Vinon of London upon the Rockes : the fourteeneth day ( went aboord the Vinion with my Boate, and the French-men had beene aboord foure daies; the same time I 20 brough Samuel Smith on Spoare, Thomas Duttoncon, and the Master Elmond White. The fifteenth day I got William Bagget my Merchant, to write me a Letter to Morles: the eighteenth day the Letter was fent, and I paid two Crownes for the carriage : the twentieth, the Indian dyed, and the same day I buried him: the one and twentieth day, the Master died, and I baried him: the two and twentieth came Master Roberts, and Master Couper : the sixe and twentieth, Master Couper and Master Roberts went to Morles. Againe, the fourth day of March, William Coarey, the Hoast of Master Couper and Master Roberts : the fifth, I went aboord with my Boates, and William Coarey, at low water, I went into the shippes hold at ion water, and I brought an Example of the worst Pepper: the sixib day, I came from Olie-yearne ; the eighth, I came to Morles : the fenenteenth, came Maiter Hide to Morles : the one and twentieth, I came from Marles ; the two and twentieth at night , I came into the Ile of Wight : the foure and twentieth, I came to Hampton : the eight and twentieth day, I came to London.

Your louing Friend,

WILLIAM WOTTON.

They fassed after the spoile of the Brittons almost two hundred Tunnes of Pepper, some Beniamin, and some China Silkes, which they bought at Techou in Sumatra, out of a simpe of China. They 40 touched outward bound at Saldania, where they stayed long in festing up a Shallop or Pinnasse, they lost Master Rowles m S. Laurence : they lost more men at Zanzibar : they laded Pepper at Achen, Priaman, Palleman, and Tecou: there they bought Silke of a shippe of China. In their returne, they met with Sir Henry Middleton, having thirtie fixe men in reasonable good state abourd then: they delivered unto him certaine Chests of Silver : They missed the He of S. Helena, most of their men dyed, on this side Cape Verie: ten English, and foure Guzarats, were taken out of her by a Barke of B itol and a Scot. There landing in the Road of Anderne, and other matters are before set downe. The Shippe after the Pepper goods were taken out and dried was found by Master Simonton, a skilfull Ship-wright, sent thither of purpose, to sauc it if it might be, viterly unsermiceable : The Ordnance, Anchors, and other furnitures were faned.

50 Thomas Duckmanton the Mafters Mate, Robert Wilson of Detford, Bullock the Surgeon, Iacob Peterlon, and fine English-men more remaine aline, of seventie fine that went out of England: three or foure Guzarats also came home aline.

ð IIII.

The Voyage of M. Ioseph Salbancke through India, Persia, part of Turkie, the Perfian-Gulfe, and Arabia, 1609. Written unto Sir Thomas Smith.

Andere was the first Towne, where after the wracke and descension of the Ascension, whale Voyage, we arrived, having a very faire haven, and great store of shipping, whereof some are of which being Andew was the nine I ownie, which states, and great flore of shipping, whereof tome are or which we' arrived, having a very faire hauen, and great flore of shipping, whereof tome are or which shipping we' arrived to Sobay, a Village that confined to shipping where is much Calico cotten cloth made.

panion to Bagdat and hach writtena Trea-

* Robert Court

washis com-

From

CHAP. 9. S.4.

From thence we came to Surat, which hath been a Citie of great trade, and hath great store of shipping. Those of the greatest burthen are laded not at the Towne, but are carried ouer the Barre with their ballast onely, and there are laden. At an high water, they have fixteene foot o. uer the Barre.

From Surat we travelled toward Agra, the principall Citie of the Grand Mogal, and came first to Nabon, where Sugar groweth in great abundance, and Cotton-wooll, and all manner of Daylast & Cirie. Graine. Here all kind of victuals are very cheape. Then to a Citie called Daylast, where are Great flore of fold great flore of Drugs, Pintados, and Calico-lawnes. Afterward we came to Netberbers, where is a Market of all Braten wares, thirts of maile, Swords and bucklers, Lances, Armours for Horfes: also Cotton-wools, Cotton yarne, Pintados, Shashes, and all manner of drugges. In this place 14 cloth would be very vendible, because course cloth is there exceeding deare.

From thence we proceeded to a Village called Saylor, where is store of Sugar, and fruites of all forts, We departed thence to Sadife, a Garrison Towne. Here the River Tynde runneth downe to Surat. From Sadife we came to the great Citie Bramport, gouerned by Can Canow. This Citie standeth in eight and twenty degrees, where Muskets, Snaphanles, Pistols, Petronels, and Swords are very faleable. Woollen cloth in this place wil prooue a great commodity, as also cloth of Gold and Silver, Veluets, Broad cloths, and Bayes, because there are there io many Gallants. From thence we came to Caddor, and so to Sambon. Then we travailed to a great Citie, named Cannow, where is much trading for Cloth, Swords, Shashes, Pieces, and Armour, besides colours for Diers of all forts. Here our clothes would fell well: for it beareth somewhat to the North. 20 ward, and is very cold in Ianuary, February, and March.

About a dayes journey from this place, we passed ouer the great River Ganges, which runneth into the Gulfe of Bengala , ill ing out of the North-west, and running directly East into the faid Gulfe. From hence we fet forward toward Agra, & spent eleven dayes travelling through a pleafant Countrey, and abounding with feuerall kinds of Indian commodities, and so arrived at Agra.

Agra is a very great Citie, and populous, built with stone, having faire and large streets, with a faire River running by it, which falleth into the Gulfe of Bengals. It hath a faire Castle, and a strong, entrenched round about with a ditch. Hither is great refort of Merchants from Persia, and out of India, and very much Merchandize of Silkes, and Cloths, and of precious stones, both Rubyes, Diamonds, and Pearles. The Diamonds are found in diverse places, as in Bifragar, in De-Li, and here at Agra. But Rubyes, Saphyres, and Spinels are found in Pegu. In this Citie, without all queftion, our richer Silkes and Veluets, but especially our clothes of light colours will fell Patipore, a citie very well, beeing a place of great trading, being not aboue twelve miles from Fatipore, a Citie as as great as Lon- great as London, and very populous; belides Lahor, and many other important Cities in this King-

At Agra we abode thirteene dayes, and then let forward toward Hiffaon in Persia, by the way of Biani, beeing but two Moneths journey, leaving the way by Lahor, which is foure Moneths journey. From Agra to Biamy, we spent two dayes travell. Biamy is the cheifest place Bamy s. dayes for Indico in all the East India, where are twelve Indico milles. It groweth on small bushes and beareth a feede like a Cabbage feed. Being cut downe, it lyeth on heapes for halfe a yeere to rot, 49 and then by Oxen it is troden out from the stalkes, and afterward is ground very fine, and then is, and the ma- boiled in fornaces, and to forted out into feuerall forts. The best Indico is there worth eight

> From Biamy, we spent eight dayes journey to Merta, passing by many Townes and Villages. In some of them there was store of course Indico, in others Calicoes, and store of Cotton-wools. Also we passed ouer the faire River Paddar, which runneth to Guzeras, and falleth into the Sea to the East-ward of the Persian Gulfe. In Merta there are three Bafars or Markets euery wecke, where is fold great flore of Indico, Cotton-wool, yarne, and Cotton cloths. From Meria or Menta we trauelled five and twentie dayes, through their three chiefe Townes, Renree, Buchar, and Suker. Reuree is a Towne confifting of husbandmen, and painfull people, who deale also in 50 Merchandise, as Cotton cloth, Indico, and other commodities, and are a peaceable people to deale

Bucker stands toward Lahor, where we received kind entertainment of the Gouernour. Swordblades are very good chaffer in this Towne: my felfe hauing experience, who might haue had ten pounds sterling for my Sword, the blade being but worth a Noble in England. Close by this Citie of Bucker runneth the River Damiadee, which within eight dayes journey runneth into the River of Synde, which falleth into the Ocean Sea, between the Countryes of Gnadel and Guzerate. On this River passe Barkes of fortie or fiftie Tunnes, by meanes whereof, there is traffique vinto diuerse parts of India.

Sucker is situated on an Iland in the middle of the River, and consisteth most of Weavers and 69 Diers, which serue the Countrey round about. At Sucker we stayed source and twentie dayes for a fafe convoy to Candahar, and pailed to Candahar in twentie dayes, through many defarts and woods, and with no small difficultie. Candahar is a Citie of importance, which is frequented with Merchants out of Turkie, Perfie, and the parts of India, and is gouerned by a Vice-roy. Here we abode twelue dayes, and from hence fet forward toward Hiftahan in Persia, and trauelled fine dayes till we came to Grees, the first Towne in the Country of Persia, passing ouer the River Grees the first Sabaa, which divideth the Mogol and the Persian. Here we paid a custome for our Cammels.

Grees is a frontier Towne, where the Persian hath a Garrison of a thousand souldiers. From San.

The river Santas Grees, we spent eight dayes to the Citie Parra, passing through a vast countrey, sometimes pas-diudetlithe fing by Villages: one of most note was called Vea. for the store of Felts and Carpets made there, More and and for the plenty of Dates, and all forts of fruits. Parra is a Citie of great traffique, but especi- Persum Domially for raw filke. Here we rested two and twenty dayes onely for a Caranan.

ly for raw filke. Here we refted two and twenty dayes onely for a Caranan.

From Parra we spent eighteene dayes to Iefd, a Citie of Persa, passing through a very defolate. Per a Village.

The Citie of 10 countrey. Not farre from this Towne is Pahanaunis, where is made great flore of raw Silke: as Parta. allo at Godana foure dayes journey off. From lefd we frent feuenteene dayes to Hilpahan, pal- lefda Citie. fing by Gora, a faire Towne, where is store of raw Silkes, Quilts, Silke-carpets, and Turkeshes. Pahanasana. fing by Gora, a tarre I owne, where is note of raw onker, Quine, Since Perfa, where the King Godana And io we arrived at Hiffatham. Haffatham is one of the greatest Cities in Perfa, where the King Goda fire fometimes keepeth his refidencie. The people are industrious and curious in all Sciences, but e- Towne. specially in weating Girdles and Shashes, in making of Veluets, Sattens, Dammasks, very good Hisaheathe Ormuzines, and Persian Carpets of a wonderfull finencise. Here you may buy all manner of chestecistics Drugs, and Spices, and Turkefes, with store of Pearles, Diamonds, and Rubies, as also all fores of Persa. Silkes, as well wrought, as raw. Here might be planted a profitable trade, if our fhips with fafe- Commodities tie might lade in the Persian Gulfe: where sittie in the hundred may bee gained from Ormus to at Hispansa.

20 Historn, and that in eightie dayes trauell; whereof I was throughly informed by diverse Prisoners, and Merchants of the great Towne of Iulpha. These commodities are to bee carried from Commodities England into Persia; Tinne, Copper, Brasil: as also Carties for the Common people: Broad cloths for Persia. for the Merchants and better fort of people, blacke clothes for womens garments, good Chamlets and Veluets died in graine, with purple colours, and fine reds: cloth of Gold and Tiffue, Veluets imbroydered with Gold: fine Holland cloth for the King and Sultans; Dagges, and Piffels, compleat harnesse, targets of steele, shirts of maile, stone bowes, brasse and yron Ordnance. The colours of Cloth muit be Scarlets, Violets in graine, fine Reds, Blacks, browne Blues, London Ruffets, Tawnies, Lyon colours, faire lively Greenes; all which will be vented at Halpahan, Calban, Cashin, and Tauris, and other Cities in Persia. I am perswaded, that Hispahan will vent a thou-30 fand clothes yeerely. At Hift sham I abode thirteene dayes, and spent a moneths iourney to Bagdat; which is a Citic about two English miles in compalle, seated on Tignis: neuerthelesse it is ve. Bagdat.

ry populous, and of great traffique of strangers, being the way to Persia, Turkie, and Arabia. Here I embarqued my selle for Balfara; and was twentie eight dayes in passing downe the River; but it is to be done in eighteene or lesse, if the water be high. Many Ilands are in this River, which I omit to speake of.

Balara is a Citie neere vnto the Persian Gulse, a mile and an halse in circuit. All the buildings, Caftles, and Walls are made of bricke dried in the Sunne. The Turke hath here five hundred lanizaries, besides other souldiers continually in garrison. But his chiefe strength is of his Galies, which are twentie fine or thirty in number, very faire and furnished with goodly Ordnance.

40 To this port of Balfara come Monthly diverte thips of fortie or fiftie tunnes from Ormus, Luden exiffain diewith all forts of Indian Merchandizes. Also there is great flore of Wheate, Rice, and Dates, gre-bia also wing thereabout, with which they ferue Bagdat, and all the Countrey, Ormus, and many Parts Thelle of ra-

From Balfara, I passed by Sea to Catisfa, on the Coast of Arabia Falix, governed by a Turke, but a rebell against the Grand Signior; where is great plenty of fundry fort of truites, as Dates, and Colonor Caothers. And from thence we fayled by many Ilands, but among the reit, to that famous Iland ters. Baharem, fixe dayes tayling from Balfara, and in the midway to Ormus; where they fifth for Shiriff Din. Pearles four moneths in the yeare; to wit, in Iune, Iuly, August, September. And here are the best in White an Pearles, which are round and Origin.

From the Ile of Baharem, we fayled to Calara on the coast of Arabia Falix, and so passed by ned. land with Camels, to Shiriff Din, (with a purpose to have gone to Aman) where one John White Lima a Port an Englishman, which refused my company, was poyfoned) to have given some intelligence to Sir Towne in the Henry Middleton, of our hard viage before in those parts. But hearing that he was traterously mouth of ale taken in the mouth of the Park or and arrival in change in the mouth of the Park or and arrival in change in the mouth of the Park or and arrival in change in the mouth of the Park or and arrival in change in the mouth of the Park or and arrival in change in the mouth of the Park or and arrival in change in the mouth of the Park or and arrival in change in the mouth of the Park or and arrival in the mouth of the park of the taken in Moha, in the mouth of the Red Sea, and carried in chaines up to the Bariba of Simon, Sier or Sier a into the maine land of Arabia, I returned to Lima another Towns on the Persian Gulie, and conft towns in there imbarqued my felfe to have passed to Socotora, an Hand neere the mouth of the Red Sea: P. c. the entrance I was taken by Pirates, and so was driven to land at Snar or Soar, a coast Towne not fatte nom or he P. risas

At Snar, certaine Portugals, whose Barkes were there cast away, informed the Governour 60 that I was a Spie, and prayed him to deliner mee up into their hands; who having obtained their Mafeiteor request, carried me to Azibo, and so to Mascate or Muscat, an Iland, where they have a small dusa Garrifon of some fortie men, besides their gallies, as also one Church, and two Friars. And here Fisher Devices I had abiden for euer, if one Father Drurie, an English Islante, which I found there, had not pro-

237

in Arabia

does, and Calicoes. Netherberi. Sajist a Village Sandife a garri. fon Towne. The river Tynd.

great Citie in 18. degrees. A good vent for cloth. Cadder and Samben. A great Citie called Carnen. Good fale of Englife clothes. great Riuer Ganees. 15. dayes trauell.

They depart from Agra for iourney from Agra. What Indico king thereof. pence a pound. Merta.or Menta. The river Pad. vato Gazerat.

Bucker a citie.

miedee fallerh into the rister of Sinde.

Sucker.

From thence, I was conneied in chaines to Ormus, croffing the mouth of the Persian Gulfe. Ormus is an Island in circuit about thirtie miles; and is the drieft lland in all the world for there is nothing growing in at but falt: for their Water, Wood, Victualls, and other necessaries come out of Perfia, which is about twelue miles from thence. The Poringals have aftrong Caftle here, which standeth neere vnto the Sea, where there is a Captaine set by the King of Spaine, having vnder him a convenient number of fouldiers, whereof fome part remaine in the Cattle, and some in the Towne. In this Towne are Marchants of many Nations, and many Moores and Gentiles. Here is very great trade of all forts of Spices, Drugs, Silkes, cloth of Silke, fine Tapiffries of Persia, great store of Pearles, as also Horses of Persia, which serue for all India. And all ships which palle from hence to Goa, wherein are horses, pay no custome in Goa: but if they bring no horses, then they pay eight in the hundred for their goods.

He was at Sinde, which is an excellent place for our Trade. The best In-

Cloth.

From Ormus they fent me prisoner to Goa. And we failed first to Sinde, which lieth between the Countryes of Guadel and Guzerate, having a great River called Damiade falling into it, which River commeth from Labor, and so to Bucher, and Suchar. In these places is the best Indico fold. You may transport all the goods which the Countrey doth afford, by water to Sinde: where your shippes may ride as lafely as in the River of Thames. The Portugals have no fortin this

Portugals. A good ven t

The place, (by report of the Gouernour, who gaue me a Passe at my first beeing there to beea Sinds from the pledge, that when focuer I should returne with these and these goods, I should bee well entertain ned) doth vent cloth of all forts in reasonable quantitie both fine and course, beeing all light co. lours; Tinne, Lead, Iron, and Elephants teeth, and Spices of all forts, especially Pepper and 20 Cloues. The commodities that the Countrey doth affoord in great plentie, and cheape price, are fine Calicoes of many forts, Pintadoes, Qilts, Carpets, and other Silke in great plentie. Many of these stuffes are very good for the trade at Bantan, and the Moluccos. Besides, there is great flore of Opium, which is a very good commo litie in Bantam, and those parcs. And many other drugs fit for our Countrey. The people are of a good disposition, and defirous of trade: victualls are very good cheape: as tenne hennes for tenne pence, a good theepe a shilling. On the shore the Portugals are fabiect to the Countrey people: and if they doe not behaue themselves well, they are feuerely punished.

Passing this coast of Sinde, we arrived at Din in the Kingdome of Cambaya. And it is the ftrongest Towne that the Portugals have in their parts. It is but little, but well stored with Mer- 10 chandile: for here they lade many great ships with diver e commodities, for Ormu and for the Straight of Meeca, and other places: and there be thips of Moores and Christians. The Moores passe by Passeport from the Poringalls.

From Din we failed fer Goa: which is the principall Citie which the Portugals have in those parts, and it is governed by a Vice-Roy. It standeth in an Iland, which may be thirtie miles about, replenished with Orchards and Gardens, Palme trees, and some Villages. Herebe Marchants of many Nations.

CHAP. X.

The Voyage of M. DAVID MIDLET ON to Jaua, and Banda, extracted out of a Letter written by himselfe to the Company, this being the fifth Voyage (et forth by them.

Their affaires at Bantam, Botun, Bengaia.

Aprill 24. 1600. They arriued at Saldania. They arriued at Bantam.

their debts

E fet fayle in the Downes the foure and twentieth of April, 1609. in the Expedition of London, and got fight of Forceventure, and the Lanfaror, the nineteenth of May, and with such winds as blow (some faire, some fowle) we arrived at Saldania the tenth of August, and watered, and made hast, and set sayle the eighteenth of the fame. We proceeded for Bantam, and arrived there the feuenth of December, missing Captaine Keeling very narrowly that we had not fight of him: for hee passed vs in the night, elle we should have furely feene him. As for our buiness:, I made all the dispatch that 60 By the alteramight be (both by day and night) to get the Iron a shore, and would not stay, to set up my Pintion of State, naffe, and left M. Hensworth in the house, and was driven to give a great many of gifts more then was requifite, if the State of the Countrey had beene as informer time : and left Edward Neelles, would this Gouernour luffer them (as before) themselves to imprison debters, and diffraine. He also exacted vareasonable lumines for rent, whereas the ground had been given, and the houses built at the Companies charge.

and three more of my Company with Mafter Hemsmorth (as his defire wa ) beeing in a strange place, and knew none in the House. So I tooke such Commodities as I thought most vendible in those places whereunto I was to goe; and what hope was of making a Voyage, I trust Captaine Keeling hath long fince made manifelt, yet for all this, I must try their curtefie.

The eighteeth of December I tooke my leave of Master Hemsworth, who was very loath to flay behind me, but I perswaded him to be of good courage, and doubt nothing, seeing I was to take Master Spalding with me for his Language, and had no bodie to lease in the Hosse but him- M. Ansuffine felfe : and told him that if the Gouernour fent for him, hee must tell him plainly that I had left Spalding gooth expresse order in any hand, not to yeeld to any of his former demands, yet hee might take what with him to

To he would, for he must deliver him nothing. Then I let faile that evening for the Maluccas (as I H: departed supposed) and the winds fauouring vs, the seuen and twentieth of the same, wee passed the for the Ma-Streights of Defolam, and being through them, lay becalmed tenne dayes, which was no small luces. griefe tome, in much heate under the Line, being doubtfull of the Westerly Monson, which (if The streight of it (hould faile me) would be the overthrow of my Voyage.

The elighth of Iamary, we came before the Towne of Boun, and fent to know fome newes, the llos Beand there the King was gone to the Warres, and very few people in the Towne. So I anchored not but we through the Streights the fame day. The next day we faw a great company of Caracolles, which we imagined to bee the King of Botunes Armie, which proued to indeed. The King fent a fmall Prow (when we drew neere vnto him) to see what we were. I fent him word who 20 I was, and it proued little wind, and wanting water I demanded whether there were any neere hand, so the prople shewed me where there was great store of good water. Then I stood with the place, and the King and all his Carreolles came under fayle after mee, and came to an Anchor faire by vs, and fent one aboord in his owne name to bid mee welcome, and defired mee to fend Master Spalding with the Messenger to come, and speake with him to heare some newes. The Kings defire was that I would ride all night, and in the morning hee would come, and fee the ship and me, It proved calme, so we ride still, and the next day the King came aboord, and I made him, and all his Nobles a Banquet, and gaue the King a gift worthy fuch a person; and a gale A Banquet ame fitted to be vnder fayle: then the King Wept, and faid I might thinke him but a Differm made to the Her, feeing he had no Merchandize for me, for foure monethes before my comming, hee had his and allhis No. 30 House burned to the ground, where he had prouided of every thing somewhat, both Nuts and bles.

Mace, and Cloues, and great flore of Sander wood an whele house full, and a great Ware-house Commodities full of the cloth of his Countrey, which is very vendible in most part of the Hands thereabout : Prouided by and all the loffe which formerly he received, grieved him not halfe to much, as when I told him the Ku that I came, and had caused the ship to bee fitted of purpose to come and buy his Commodities, that he should prouide for me.

He further faid, that I had kept my promife, and swere by the head of Mahomet, so would he have done, if God had not laid that croffe of fire upon him, having fundry of his Wives and Women burned. But now he was abroad at Warres with his forces, he could not tell the islue of it, and as the cafe flood with him, hee could not spare any of his people, to make any prouision 40 for me : and faid, that if I had not come by the night afore, he had beene in the field against another King his Enemie, whose Towne he shewed me, and requested to shoot at it, as I went by. I faid I was a Stranger, and knew him not, and to procure my felfe Enemies, I had no reason: but if the other King should come and offer him, or any of his Subjects wrong, while I was there, I would doe my best to fend them away : which speeches of mine gaue the King great content. fo the King tooke his leave, and we fet fayle prefently.

The foure and twentieth of Ianuary, we arrived at the Iland of Bangaia, where the King and The Ile of most of his people were sled for feare of some Enemy; and certainly I could not learne the truth. Bangaia. There was a Hollander there that told mee that the King was fied for feare of the King of Ma- fortilying kefar, who (as he thought) would force the King to turne More, for he is a Gentile : but I rather hatfull to the 50 thinke they fled for feare of the Hollanders, who would have built a Fort there, but when they prople. perceined the people were fled , they left it vneffected. This one Hollander bore fuch a fway, The manners that never a man left upon the Iland durst displease him. He hath as many Women as he pleze of an Hollanfeth, two Houses full of the choice of the Countries Daughters, and many Men and Women der. Slaues, and is a pleafant Companion, and will dance and fing all day long, necre-hand naked, as their manner is : and winneth the hearts of the people, and will be drunke two dayes together, amongst the people of the Hand: and is of himselfe, and hath lived long in the Countrey, and will not be commanded by any Hollander, and dwelleth oner against Amboina. If the Gonernour of Amboina would speake with him, hee must fend two or his Merchants to bee kept in pawne till his returne : He taketh up the Kings Duties of Tama: a in all the Ilands thereabouts, 60 and ferueth his owne turne, and fends the King what he may spare. Heere wee had good refreshing for my people, being (I prayle God) in better estate then when I let sayle from England, and health of her haue not had a man ficke to that prefent. There I sheathed my Long Boate, which wee towed people for feare of the Wormes that would have spoyled her, and after set sayle the nine and twentieth of Ianuary. Comming to Sea, we found the windes right as we should goe, so striking (all wee might) to get to wind-wards, but could not, the ffreame carrying vs directly South, and ran fo swift, that we lost fifteene leagues in two dayes. Then I was faine to alter my determination, forgoing for the Moluccos, and bare vp the Helme to goe for Banda, and might goe with a Occurrents at Banna; Contesting with the Dutch : Trade at Puloway. and many perils.

He fifth of February, we got fight of the Ilands of Banda, and made all the fayle wee could, to get neere before night : and drawing neere, I fent my Skiffe to hearesome newes, of some of the Country people, who sent me word that the Hollanders would not fuffer any Sayle to come into the Roade, but they would take all hee brought, (if it were fuch things as they flood in need of ) and make payment at their owne pleafures : Butif any Juncke came and brought Commodities very vendible for the Countrey people, they were not permitted to have any speech with any of the Countrey : but the Hollander would bring them to the backfide of the Castle within Musket shot of their Ordnance, that one must not 20 fet his foot ashore, but they would fend a Bullet at him : They had fifteene great Icnokes, which they kept in that manner. What hope is there to make a Voyage there, seeing they dealt so with all, that came into the Roade, and banished Captaine Keeling, not permitting him to stay to gather in his debts, but gaue him Bils to receive his money at Bantam, as (I hope) from his owne mouth, your Worships have heard at large. Yet for all this, I stood into the Roade with Flagge and Enfigne, and at each Yard Arme a Pendant, in as comely a manner as we could deuise. There came a small Pinnalle of thirtie Tunnes sent from the Gouernour of the Castle, thinking it had beene one of their Countrey ships : but comming neere vs stood into the Reade before me, after they had haled vs, I could have no other speech with them.

As soone as I came thwart of Lauter, I saluted the Towne with Ordnance, and came to an 10 Anchor within shot of their ships : then prefently a Dutch Boate came abourd vs from the Gouernour, to have me come into the Roade, and come ashore to him, and shew him my Commisfion : I made answere, I was but new come, and to shew my Commission to the Gouernour, or to make any man acquainted with these businesses, which belonged to the making of my Voyage, I would not. They further asked, whether I was a Merchant, or a Man of Warre! Ianfwered I would pay for what I take: then they threaned me: who told them I was there, and would ride there, doe as they should please, I hoped I should defend my selfe: so they returned to the Calle in a great rage. The Hollanders no fooner gone, but great ftore of the men of Lauter the Bandaneses came aboord me, and bade me welcome. Then I vinderstood the whole Estate of the Countrey. and the Countrey would be willing to deale with me, if I could procure leave of the Hollanders, in for they are now friends, but Pularay and Polatronu are at War es with them.

Now knowing well, that in troubled waters it is good fishing, there being one of Pulawayamongst them, I had private conference with him, and gave him money in his Purse, to certifie them of the Iland, that I would give them money or Commodities for all their Spice, and that the Hollanders and I were like to be Enemies, and let them not doubt, but that I would get their Spice aboord, one way or other. In the meane feafon, there came another Boate from the Vice-Admirall, and the same Boate from the Castle, with expresse Commandement from the Gouer nour to me to come in. Being dinner time, I caufed them to ftay dinner, and after dinner told them that I would ride there, and stand to the danger of the Roade: For I knew full well, that our Nations were friends in Europe, & for vs to be Enemies amongst the Heathen people, it were 30 not good, being Christians. Whereupon they told me plainly I must not ride there, and if I did, they would fetch me in perforce : I faid I would ride there, till I found the inconvenience of the Roade (as by their speeches it was foule ground) then would I come into the best of the Harbour : for neither of our Princes giveth any fuch authoritie to any of their Subiects, but that euery maninay ride, and goe at their owne perils. They faid that the Countrey was theirs, then may I the more boldly (fay I) ride heere, for we are triends: fo they departed in displeasure.

This Euening, I was about to land Ordnance vpon the fide of an Hill, where wee rid and began to fit the ship to fight with them that should molest mee : and fent out some to see what ground there was round about the ship, and it was all Rockes, so by no meanes the shippe could ride there : fo we left our pretence of landing Ordnance. In the morning I fent my Skiffe with 60 Master Spalding, and the principall of the ship with a Letter to the Gouernout, and bad them say nothing more then I had written, and make no long stay, but bring an answere presently, for we ride very bad : the Copie of which Letter hereafter followeth.

CHAP. 10 S.2. Uncharitable purposes of the Dutch.

Mas is please your tooyling winto patience to consider. That whereas you have dissert enemies sand.

few frends in this place I being a Christian, if your worship sland in used of any thing-that I base, I pray you make bald to demand it, and I will be a readic to performe it to my power. For whereas there is amitte betweene our Princes as home. I fhould be roundling that we their Subjects should be at the mitte here. Further, forusmuch as you command me sockine under the command of the Castle. I book T. have that Friviledge that both Princes allow their Subsetts, to come and goe at their owne pleasures, and stand to the danger of the Roade, at their owne perils. And whereus you demanded to see my Commisfion, I am a Gentleman, and willing to here it upon equall termes, for if you would meete me securely, as I would doe you, appoint our meeting on the water, in our Beares equally manned, or the any other count.

10 nient place, where I may be as neere my force as you are royones. And whereas it is voported, that a comtrait is to be made with the Inhabitants of Lantor, and your Worfhip; my define to, that you would ofeme as an Indian for my money: then should I thinke my felfe much beholding to your Worship, and and more willing to deale with you then with them. Furthermore, for afmuch as you be at emmirie with the I. lands of Puloway, and Polaron; my defire is to bee refolsed, whether I may have their Spice without your hinderance. Thus defiring your answere to these particulars, and the same to be sensured by these. Beavers, I bid you farewell, from abourd my ship, this sounts of February, 1609.

Yours in friendship, DAV ID MIDDETON. All my Companies comming to the Castle were brought to the Governous, where they face in Councell, so they deliuered my Letter: which being openly read they would fend mee no an-20 fwer but by word of mouth, yet detayned my Letter. They had determined by Counfell (hatting three great ships of one thousand tunnes a piece, and three Pinnasses of thirtie tunnes a piece) that one of the shippes (being unferuiceable) called the great Sanne, should clap me abourd; and there fet her felfe a fire : and had for the same purpose swome fundry persons to come and make Duch her fast with chaines, and had put into her thirtie Barrels of Powder for the fame intent which beeing manned out of the Castle with all the ships , and boates, to take up the men when shee should fire, the Great Horne should come and ride within Musket-shot, and batter vpon vs, and the Frigots round about vs, to keepe vs doing on all fides. My folke feeing their fpeed they made to warpe out the Great Sume, made small stay but came away, and told me what preparation was made to haue vs. I thought it fit to goe and speake with the Gournour my felfe, and 30 before wee would try it by Battaile, to see what hee would say to my felfe. And so taking my Commission with mee, I came to the Castle, and was met at my landing by the Go-nernour, and all the principall men, that were in the Castle and ships and was brought through a Guard of small shot of three hundred Souldiers, who gave mee three Vollies of shot, and the Caftle senen Peeces of Ordnance for my welcome : lowee came to the Governours Chamber! where for vs two, there were Chaires let, the reft had formes, and after many Salutations, and Complements of welcome to the Callle, I began, and faid.

I vinderstand by my Company, which was with them before my comming, that they would not be perswaded but that I was a Pirate, and had no Commission: and that it should appeare to the contrary, I came my felfe, and brought my Commission with mee, to manifest that I was no 40 fuch person, but had the Kings Maiesties broad Seale to my Commission, and called to my man for it, and shewed it them, reading the first line vnto enem, and lapped it vp againe. Then they faid, that they would fee it all . I faid, they flouid not while I lived, The Commission was mine; Commission you all apparantly see, and the great Seale at my Commission, and my selfe nominated therein, shewed. and if they would fee more, it is not my Commission they should expect it. Wee would have bin gone aboord, but were willed to fray awhile. So there paffed words betweene vs, some sharpe and some sweet : but at the length they began to be more mild, & called for a Cup of Wine, then the Company roseall vp, dranke a cup of Wine, and went to walke, and view the Castle, the Offices whereof were very neat and very wel furnished with Armor and great store of Munition.

Taking my time, I put in practice to fee what money would doe (which often maketh Wilemen blinde) that fo I might attayne vnto my lading by large proffers. I offered one thousand pound to be fure to have my lading, and to give my chaine from about my necke to one to pro. The might of cure it, offering to pay more then they paid for their Spice. Hauing fet this matter abroach, money. (knowing the ship to ride in danger) I told the Gouernour, now they apparantly faw, I was no man of Warre, I would bring in my ship : hee replyed with the retidue, that all the friendship they could doe me, I should find them willing to pleasure me therein. It drawing late I tooke my leaue to goe aboord, at what time, the Gouernour caufed all the Ordnance in the Caffle to bee shot off, and as I passed by the ships, they and the Frigots shot off, till I came abourd. The next day being the eight of February, I brought my thip into the Roade, and rid betweene their thips and the Caftle, and gaue them all my Ordnance, and was answered from the Caftle, and shippes, and Frigats with great store.

As soone as we came to an Anchor, the Gouerner with all the chiefe of the Castle and Ships came aboord of me : fo I intreated them to dinner, to fuch as we could prouide, which they very kindly accepted: and after dinner the maine point (which was my lading) I could not by gifts, nor any meanes I might deuise, have any grant to buy one pound of Spice. And having prooued fundry meanes to induce them to heare reason, the Gouernour told me plainly, he durst not give me leave to deale for any Spice, vader paine of lose of his head. I feeing no good to bee done in riding at an Anchoramongit them, determined to take in water, and take my Fortune: but they would not fuffer my Boate to goe afhore for water, but they would fend a man with ve; to fee that we had no conterence with any of the Countrey people. After I had water aboom, I fent Mafter Spalding to thew the Governour that I would be gone and that I had fent him to accuraine him therewith : for my telfe would not come out of the thip. The Governour manuelled whither I would goe, the winds being Westerly : Master Spating faid, he know not So I warped till I could get Sea-roome to fet faile. The Governour feat three Pinnaffestogo out with me, and one came in a Boate aboord vs , fent from the Gouernour to command mesthat I should not come neere any of those Ilands : I fent him word I would not be at his commanding, for I was bound to Palomay, as foone as possibly I can, and bade him tend his 10 thips to fend me away for I would quickly fend the Frigots further from me. Hee went abound one of the Erigots , and I caused our men to get up their finall shot , and fit the infelies to fight with their thips which were fitted, and their failes brought to the yard of purpote. I called all my Company to know their mindes, and told them plainly that if they would frend by mee, I meant to fet vp my reft, to make my Voyage at those Ilands, let the Hollander doe whather could ; and promised them, if any man were may med, hee should have maintenance during his life; which (if it pleafed God) I would have performed ; and further promited, that if they would fight it out, to give franckly amongst them, those things that were mine owne, which were in the ship. So with one consent, were were all willing to try what force the Hollander would fend out to drive vsaway. The Pinnaffes feeing my tolke to bring vp their small shot, 20 thought it would be final to their ease to guard me any longer, and therefore bore vp for the Harbour. While we were a warping out, the Admirall had beene twice aboord the Prinailes, and the Vice-Admirall, and the Lieutenant Gouernor of the Cattle also, what they did there I know not,

Dutch crupu-

It fell calme, and the winds Westerly, and a great streame set to the East North-East, and we droue a great pace. So I manned my Boate, and fent Master Spalding away with Money, and my Pursers Mate, and fine more, to goe and certifie them of the land of Pulaway, that we had parted enemies with the Hollanders, and that I had fent him to know their minds, whether they would fell me their Spice, and I would give them Money for it: and would have come my felfe, but would faine see the shippe in some place where she might ride, and then I would come either in the ship, or in a Pinnaste that I had within boord to fet up. While my Boat was absent, 10 there came two Prawes from Lanter, to know why I went away; I told them, the streame set the thip away : I would faine have gone to Pulaway, if the streame had not himsred me, and had fent a Factor thither to buy Spice; they faid, they were glad that I went not away for altogether : then I prayed them to tell them of Lanter, that I would give them Money or Commodities for all their Spice which they had, if they would fell it me before the Hollander, that came to take their Countrey from them. One of them faid, that hee would goe to the Iland and fee my people, and then he would fliew them of Lantor. At Mafter Spaldings comming ashore, the Countrey flocked about him, and bad him welcome, but would make no price with him till I came my felfe: but would deliuer Spice vpon an ac-for one, and they hired him a co. ple, to whom the Countrey gaue twenty Rials, and I must give them as much. So Mafter Spalding fent them aboord, and writ to mee to fend him more Money and Cloath, which I did the lame night, and bare up the Helme for Ceran, and came to a place called Gelagula, being thirtie leagues from Banda, a reasonable good Road : and as soone as posibly we could, we tooke an house, and brought our Pinnasse ashore to set up, having had her within board thus long, and could never have time to fet her vp, because the time of the yeare did to fast slip away, and the Monson was at an end. Labouring all that night to get her dispatched, count, till God fhould fend me thither, to goe through with them my felfe. I bid Mailer Spal- 40 dire hire me a Pilot (if he could) to harbour my thip neere hand; who spake to the Countrey

M. Spaldings

The lle of

The Hope well, being fitted, I named her the Hope-well. The feuen and twentieth of March, we made all things

They lade

readie to fet faile to the Iland of Pulanay, and arrived there the one and thitieth of the same in 10 the night, and could not lade any Spice, till I had agreed with the Countrey people. The Countrey asked many duties, and great gifts; but in fine, I agreed to pay as Captaine Keeling paid : after the chiefe had what they looked for, (for every one must have somewhat, that all must not know ) and a man must euer be giuing, for they never cease begging : and it is not for a mans ease to deny them any reasonable matter, especially, as the case stood with mee. After we had agreed, we laded the Hope well with Mace, and fent her away, the being but nine Tunne, could carry but little of fuch Commodities, which fils prefently : wherefore I was driuen to looke out for more helpe to get ouer the Spice; fo I hired a great Praw, and was to build her, which we laded with Nuts, and fent to the ship, and there builded her higher, and made her one of fine and twentie Tunne. But the made but one Voyage, and then wee heard no newes of her in three moneths, still expecting her comming to Pulaway a long time. The Hope-well making two Voyages, could bring mee no newes of her, fo that I verily thought the had beene funke : for I came in company with her in the Hope-well my felte, and having a great fforme, was perfectly perfwaded, that the Sea had exten her vp, and gaue her for loft, having twelne of the luftiest men in the ship in her. It was no small griefe to mee, to see the time of the yeare to weare away, and could not get my lading ouer to the ship, nor durst bring the ship ouer (for there was no riding for her, and she past the Iland oft ) all hope was past for fixe moneths. I made enquirie for other Veffels, and heard of a lunck that belonged to Lanter, but she was old, and lay neere the Hollanders ships: I went and bought her, and got such helpe as I could to trim her.

The want of my twelue men put me to much trouble, if I had had them with mee all the while, it had beene a great shortning to our Voyage : for most of our men were downe vpon fore Legges, and as foone as one was any thing well, hee must into the Hope-well, and another poore lame man take his roome, having some three times well and downe againe. Thus I was driven to my wits end, not knowing which way to turne me, being enery houre in danger of the Hol-10 lander to come and take the lland, who (as by intelligence from time to time we heard) fought fundry meanes to make me away, by offering large Money for Rogues to effect it, either by poifon, or otherwise. But (I praise God) I had some friends upon the lland, who gave mee secret warnings of fuch men, or to be aware of fuch men-llaues, for they would do me fome mischiefe, and came for the purpose. Whereupon I was faine to get all the llands to draw to an head, and fit their Caracols, and keepe the Hollanders Pinnasses from comming abourd: so the Pinnasses durft not firre, and the Handers landed secretly vpon Nero, and cut off sundry of the Hollanders. that they durft not firre out of the Caffle, except they were many, and well fitted.

Thefe llanders built a Fort vpon the fide of an hill, from whence they fhot into the Caftle, Treacherous which troubled the Hollander much. So we were fure that the Pinnailes could not come out as in offers. 20 former time, to cut vs off as oftentimes they had attempted, making nine Voyages in her my felfe, and never could spare about feuen men to goe in her and but five at Puloway: the rest in a manner lame and ficke, in a most villanous Countrey, where all things were to deere, that one should eat, and not to be had but at fome times, which was a great griefe vinto vs all: with fuch foule weather of raines continually, which was like to have made an end of vs all. The Iunke which I had bought at Lamor, I was faine to get away vntrimmed, for the Hollanders fent me one of their ships, seeing men at worke vpon her, ( when they had fitted her ) to batter her to peeces. So that night the waighed, I got the helpe of two Townes to lanch her, and was to carry her a great way vpon Rowlers. This we did by night, and got her out of fight by day, and brought her to Puloway, and were faine to buy Sayles for her, and all things else, for the had nothing be-30 longing vnto her but the bare Hull. I fet the Countrey Carpenters aworke, which did her little good, as proued afterwards: and had fent to the ship by the Hope-well, that they should bring ouer some rigging for the Junke, and that Master Dawis should come and carry her ouer, fitting her

(as well as I could) with those filly Carpenters which the place affordeth. The Hope-well flayed three weekes, and wee neuer heard any word what was become of her. being doubtfull whether any mischance had befallers for : and wee might stay long before they aboord co. At hire any to come ouer, the Hollanders hauer lo feafed them, that they have taken carrying of victuals to the Bandaneffes. Being reasonable faire weather, having the Shippes Skiffe at Puloway, I determined to goe over my felfe, and make some shift, and not to let the time passe. M. lebalacia. doing nothing. For I could not hire men to carrie ouer the Iuncke, if I would have laded her 40 with Silver. So I put it in practile, feeing the Hope-well came not, and not having a found man with me that could fland on his legges, I hyred three Blackes and put to Sea : being out of fight of Land, there arose a grieuous storme, that I was faine to spoone afore the Sea, to saue our livese yet (God be praised) wee got light of the Land of Ceran, and kept her right afore the Seap cleane from our ship, and comming neere the shoare (the Sea aloft) did breake, and tooke away. The He of all hope of comming fafe ashore. Night being at hand, we strong all we might to keepe her vpon ceran. the Sea till day, the storme increaseth, that no remedie but wee must hazzard all to put into the Sea-perill. Breach, our a ledge of Rockes. Which we did, and no man durft for lake the Boat, for being beaten to pieces against the Rockes. So the next day we set her ashore, being brim-full, and had all things that we had washed ouer-boord : we laid hands on the Boat, and got her out of the Suffe 50 of the Sea, and gaue God thankes for preferring vs from fo apparant danger. Being extreme foule weather, with much raine, wee could not tell what to doe. The Blicker came and told vs, that we must goe to Sea presently, if wee meant to faue our The Countrey lines. I asked one of them the reason; who said, it was the Canibals Countrey, and if they got of the Canibals fight of vs, they would kill vs and eate vs, and nothing would ransome a man if they takehim: or Man-caters, and all Christians that they get, they rost them aline, for wrongs that the Portugals have done them: and therefore if we would not goe to Sea, they would go hide themselves : for the Canbals would be at the water fide as foone as they can look about to defery if they can discouer any Fither-men or Pallengers , that by thealth paffe by in the night. Wee hearing this (and the Moone began to shew the wind to Duller, and a Tyde of floud with vs) we got a-bead a good reasonable 60 pace, and by day we were cleere of their Watches, & keeping the shore close abourd, we expeed a Hal of a Bark, came & rowed neere it, & knew it to be the Diligence, So we came & hayled her, & The Diligence, there were a couple of Englishmen in her, who told me that the lame night (that we had the florme in the Skiffe) the chopped to an Anchor there, and the Cable burt, & the draue alhore, & that M. Herniman was gone to the Towne to get men to have her vp, & faule her. I landed my felfe to goe to the Gouernour of the Towne, to come and bring some helpe to saue her. The Sand was full of people which came of purpose to have pillaged her, & I willed them to make a shot now & then, which flayed them from comming neere them: & comming to the Town, M. Herniman was gone by land to the ship. I offred the Gouernour mony to have help to faue her, who faid, he would gather the Country together within two or three daies, but I told him that if it blew, she would Inhumanity of be loft within an houre. One of Pulomay being there, who knew the Barke, and was earnest with the Handers.

243

the Governour to faue her, plainly told mee, that he gaped only to have her bulged, that hee might have the Planke to build him a Praw.

Then perceiving there was no helpe, but must come from the shippe, I hired Guides to follow Mafter Herniman, and tooke one of myne owne men to keepe me company, and so proceeded by land, being twelue miles from the ship. Being halfe way, we came to a great water, which we must swimme ouer : my man could not swimme, so I fent my clothes back, all but a Scarlet 10 Mandilian, which these Blackes must carrie over for me, who told me, the River was full of ... ligards, and if I faw any, I must fight with him, elie he would kill me : and for that purpose uid carry a great Knife in his mouth. I being weary, not having flept in two nights, tooke the water before the Indians, knowing they would bee ouer before me. The River being broad, and a Swift current, which the great raine (that had fallen) had made, the Indians would have had me turned backe, but being the better halfe way, I wasvery vnwilling : being in the water, one of the Indians that carryed my Mandilion, had got a great Cane (which I knew not of) and ftrooke me on the fide, who feeling the stroke, suspecting it had beene an Aligara, dived vinder water, where the current got fuch hold on mee, that before I could come vp, I was in the Sea, and there the Sea threw mee against the Beech , and bruised my backe and shoulder, till the time that hee 20 came, and gaue me the end of the Cane, whereof I got hold, and he pulled mee out, neere hand d rowned being toffed with the Sea, that every Suffe washed mee into the Sea againe. I prayse God, I escaped this danger and got aboord, after I had rested my selfe a reasonable space, to the amazement of all my Company. So that night, I fent all that were able to crawle, to faue the Bark: which (Godbe prayfed) they did with much toyle of fo small help. The Country would not let any man lay his hand to faue her, expecting we would forfake her, that they might emoy her. The next day after my comming aboord, the Hopewell arrived with her lading of Spice, who

the Hoperell, told me, they had been driven to the East-wards of Banda thirtie leagues, in a most cruell storme. which continued long, and caused them to have a long passage to get to the wind-wards, but arriued the next day after. I went from Puloway in the Boat, and laded presently, and M. Danis 30 was taking in of his lading, making all dispatch that might be, with a poore lame Crewe (the whole being absent as your Worships have heard, about the Diligence) we presently villadedler, and that night fet faile in her my felfe, to fee if I could come before M. Danis came from thence: for they told me, the Luncke was very leaky, and I defired to have the Hope-well come in her company, what foeuer should befall: for the had never a naile in her, but such as we our selves put into her: and having none there of our owne, we cauted the simple Smith that the countrey a Toorded, to make some Iron pinnes, for nayles they can make none; and in most needfull places wee betkowed them. As for my felte in the Hopewell, strining to attaine to Puloway, I was put by it by the streame, in a mighty storme; the more the wind, the stronger the Current: beeing put to Lee-wards, we were long before we cot ldictch the ship, and were faine to seeke to the Ciran shore, or elie had been quite blowne away. Hauing made many Voyages, and still fallen to Leeward of the thip, I caused M. Danis to search the land for some Harbour, that when those prouisions (that we could make to get over the goods) should come over, they might come from Puloway to the ship directly, and not to boult it up to windwards when she was deepe laden, which beeing emptie, having discharged her burden, might betterply it to wind-wards: for beeing light, the would feele her oares, which was effected.

In my long stay from Puloway, and the Ilands of Banda, they had intelligence, that the ship liad weighed anchor, and were periwaded, that I was gone in the ship for feare of the Hollanders, who were determined to come and looke me out, and surprise mee. Whereupon, the countrey people wouldnot deale with my people any more, nor fell them victuals, and beganne to abuse 50 them, and rayle upon them: and faid, that I was gone in the ship, and left them in the Countrey as the Holanders did, and would come with a Fleete, as they have done, and take their Countrey from them. Then they were determined to feize vpon the house, and take the people, and keep them prisoners upon an high Rocke, and tent for the Sabandar, that by whole consent they might come, and take polletion of all the goods. When the Sabandar was come, M. Spalding went vnto him, to show him of the hard wage of the llanders, who began to take things out of the house by tonce. He faid, They would be fure we should not doe as the Holanders had done, and were determined to lay them talk for the ship was gone, and our meaning was not good. All that Master Spalding could doe, would not periwade them, but they were left of purpose.

The next day, being in counted in the Church; they retolued to fend the men vp prisoners to the 60 Rocke. Then there came one and told them, that I was in fight in the Hovemell; whereupon they broke up their deuillih determination. At my comming a thore, M. Spalding told mee of their hard viage of them, and what feare they were in. The Chiefe of all the Hands fate before our doore to stay my comming: I went ynto them, and asked the reason, Why they dealt so with my people in my absence: They told me plainely, that if I had not come my selfe, they would have taken the goods, and kept the men fafe. So I told them the reason of the removuing of the ship, and faid further, No manuell that the Holanders built a Castle to defend themselues, when I beeing in friendship with them, and leaving men amongst them, with Commodities that the conntrey flood in neede of, and made the Holanders mine Enemies, which were their enemies, and fought all the meanes that in me lay to doe all the Hands good, (as they all very well knew) should receive such hard measure at their hands. They said plainly, I must not blame them to be realous of Christians: for many yeeres, the Portugals and Holanders have done as I have Portugals and done; but in the ende they faw apparantly, they would have their Countrey from them: yet now first sul, I was come my selfe, they hoped I would not thinke the worse of them. So wee became good 10 friends, and bought Spice apace: and had bought my wholeships lading. Having an over-plus of Stock left I thought I could not doe your Worthips better ferrice, then in laying out your money, and therefore made shift to send the ships lading away: and laded thirtie Tunnes more in a Iuncke, and bought another Iuncke of fortie Tunnes (and Spice to lade her) which was not then launched, but men at worke upon her: and left M. Spalding to come in her, and M. Chapman, for Master ( a very honest and sufficient man ) with twelve persons in the whole,

è III.

His departure for Bantam, escape from the Hollanders, and returne home.

Fter this, I came and tooke my leaue of all the Countrey, in most louing manner. and gaue them divers gifts for a farwell, intreating them to helpe Maiter Spalding , if hee should stand in need of them : for I beeing gone , hee must rely vpon them. So with many promites of all kindnesse, I tooke my leaue both of Master Spalding, and of his company, and all the Hand. Leaving Master Chapman for Master in the new Iuncke. I was faine to carry ouer the Hopewell my seire, and set faile the feuenth of September from Puloway, with the Luncke Middleton in my Company (having flayed longer in the Countrey, then ever any Englishman did) arrived at the ship the tenth. And there 30 I heard that the ship was not fully laden: for there were seuen Tunnes of the Nuttes spoyled, that Hedeparteth came last from Puloway, and lost. There I laded the ship out of the Hopewel, and the Iuncke, and from Puloway turned off the Hopewel, which had done vs very good feruice, and brought an hundred Tunnes of September. goods aboord; being so wormeaten, that we pumped alwayes in her, being but halfe inch planck, and neuer could fray or have any time to sheath her. After the shippe was wholly laden, wee set faile from Keeling Bay the same day, having never a top-sayle over head: For I had caused Mafier Daus to remoue the ship from whence Heft her, to another Bay, seuen leagues to the Westward, where I faid I would come with the Hopewell; and the Iuncke where I found them: now Keeling bay.

the ship, in remooning had her top-sailes blowne from the yard, having beeneat the yard ener fince we came into the Countrey for feare of Treason, and the Hollanders who would seeke our 40 ouerthrow. The Iuncke going better then we, having no top-failes, I fent for the Mafter of her aboord, and wrote a Letter to Bantam by them: and requested them to make all the speed they could thither, and I hoped I should come after them, and overtake them, when I could make my top-failes, which wee plyed night and day : and made Master Musgraue his Mate : wee in the Thip having our top-failes finished, did overtake the Juncke the fixteenth of the fame, and comming up to them, they could not keepe vs company, except wee should take in our top-failes: and to preffe the luncke with a faile they durft not. I called vnto them, and bade them beare fuch faile, that they doe not wrong her (for feare a leake should breake vpon them) and come to Bantam: for mee to keepe by them, could doe them small pleasure, for wee had long businesse at our comming to Bantam, to trimme the shippe for England. So wee tooke lease of them, They arrive at 30 and bore ahead, and the ninth of October arrived in Bantam Roade, where Mafter Hemsworth Bastam the and Edmird Neetles were both dead, within a short space after my going away from Bantam: so ninthos Octothat all the goods I left at Bantam, were yet there, and not a yard of cloth fold to the Chinefes. ber. At our comming to Bantam, being very weake(for most part of the company had fore legs) I was driven, that all men that had any tores, or were fickly, should remayne aboord by the Surgeon, and manured the Junckes with all my choice men, being all in pertect health. There came a Small ship, that had heene at China, and at Iapan, Tarnata, Makian, Coramandell, Patane, and Ior, and came to Ambojna, and so to Banda to seeke for lading, but could get none, so was faine to go for Bantam to lade Pepper. This ship when she came to Banda, came neere the Iland of Puloway. and let flye all her Ordnance, and a shot came through another mans house, through two Suckles 60 of Mace in our houle, and strooke the Pursers Mate vpon the shinne, yet broke not his legge, but went into a Cheft of fine Pintados, and spoyled many : the poore man lay long upon it (fixe monethes at the least) not able to stand. The Hollanders leeing vs to passe by them at Banda, day by day with Spice ( who after my comming bought not one pound, I wrought fuch meanes to procure my lading first) were starke madde, having two great ships halfe laden before I came into the Countrey: wherefore they de-Hollanders en- termined to come with their ships and Pinnasses, and take the lland, and all the Spice that I had meand insurie there, knowing I had ftore bought, and fitted fuch a time, as that they might eafily have done it. The Bandane fee being fleshed with the slaughter of some of the straggling Hollanders, which they had murthered, tooke all the able men to give allault to the Hollanders Caffles: and determined to fire their thips, at an Ancher, and burne the old Sunne close to the Castle gates. All able men being gone to the Warres, and not passing fortie men left, beside women and children, the two great thips and three Pinnailes came out under faile, with three Boates apiece at their sternes, and the Frigots, two Prowes a piece to land men : They chose such a time, that they might haue come alhore, and taken euery man one, in their armes, and carryed them quite away, for there were no Weapons left in the Iland, but what we had. But it pleafed God to deale bet. 10 ter with vs, for being come out of the Harbour, they could not get in againe, it prooued calme. and the Tyde of Ebbe (being Springing Tyde) did fet the shippes to the Southwards of the Iland, and the Pinnaffes mult follow the flips, for feare the Caricols would have had them. Two dayes they did what they could to come backe, to they were forced to proceed for Bantam to lade Popper : Being long becalmed by the way to Bantam, they deferyed a shippe right to Leewards of them, which they thought could not be any Saile, but wee : wherefore it was agreed by counfell that they should come and fight with mee, and take me, and all the Spice from mee: and what their determination was to have done with the ship and Company, I could not learne. It proved to be the Provincia of Hollard, a great ship that was bound to Banda, to looke for lading, and had beene at the Moluccoes, but could not get one pound of Spice. So those two thips told him, that they came from thence, with halfe their lading, fo all three came to Bantam to lade Pepper: thus the Lord kept me out of their hands. There came eight ships to Bantam for Pepper, and must stay a yeare for it : so the shippes that

Clayborne.

Succadania.

them to Banda and Tarnara, (for their Caffles, and to make Flankers to make themis lies flrong) and were fent away after I came to Bantam. My lame Company being very weake fell ficke, and my Gunner, and one of my Quarter Mafters dyed, and three more presently after them. The Carpenters fitting the ship, and the Westerly Monson come, there was no hope of the Iunckes comming till May : Mafter Danis being ticke, and very hardly escaping with life, Ma-Mafter Thomas fter Clayborne weake and ficke, and my felfe not well with griefe, to fee in what poore estate we 30 were, made all speed that we might to be gone from that contagious Countrey, hoping, that if we were out at Sea, my people would mend. Now feeing the Iuncke came not, which if but one of them had come, I would have remayned in the Countrey, and fitted her to goe for Succadania, (a place where the Hollarders have made great Voyages) but feeing they came not, I thought I should doe your Worships as good service to come home in the ship, (if it should please must stay a yeare for their lading, tooke in plankes and proussion of building, and were sent with God to take Maiter Danis, and Mafter Clayborne away) to bring home the ship and therefore fet vp my rest to come home. Three dayes before we set faile from Bantam, foure Saile of a new Fleet of Hollanders came in (which brought in great store of women, to inhabite those places which they had conquered) and were nine in the whole, and fine remayned behind. Those that came into the Road, were very weake, to that the other ships company that were in the Road, 40 were faine to fetch them in one by one.

the Hollanders taken and one

That same day came a Slupe from Tarnata (sent with Letters to Amboyno, and so to Bantam) Dutch Admiral with newes, that the Hollanders had lot their Admirall, which went to Manilia : for his head was shot oil, and the ship taken and two more, and another (that would not yeeld ) set himselfe Three thirs of a fire: fo they left three thips by fight, and one burned, being all great thippes of one thousand Tunnes apiece. Fo. re dayes before these newes came from Manilia, a Generall of the Hollonburna: Mari- ders, which came into the Indies four e yeares passed, called P. valus Vancarles, who had beene taken by the Spaniards at Tarnata, by Spanish Gallies (within foure monethes after I came from Paulus Vancar- thence the last Voyage) remained a Profoner in the Master of the Campes House at Turnata and all his company were chained in the Gallies. These Pritoners the Hollanders would have ranfomed with money, offering a very great ranfome: which the Spaniard would not accept, but would have them deliner up the Forts, and be gone; fo they would fet their Generall, and the rest at libertie, or otherwise not. The Hollanders would by no meanes withdraw their forces, to the Generall remained Profoner a yeare and a quarter, and then was releafed by the new Gouerneur that came from Manilia, to take the Government of the Moluccoes, who was intercepted, and taken by two ships of the Hollanders, which released their Generall with exchange of man for man. This Generall was the fecond time taken by the Spanil Gallies (after a long fight) and presently sent Prisoner to the Manilia.

Paulus teken the:econd time and fent to Manilia.

God shall send him to Bantam) to determine a Voyage to Succadania in Torneo for Diamonds, I Hee departed tooke my leave of them of Bantam, and let faile the the fixteenth of November and had a very good paffige to the Roade of Saldanha; where I came to an Anchor the one and twentitch of Ianuary, and tooke in water, and made all dispatch that I could for England; and found that my Hauing left Richard Wooddies for Chiefe in the house, and order for Master Spalding (when

Brother Sir Henry Middleton had beene there, and came in the foure and twentieth of July, and departed the tenth of August, and there I found the Copie of a Letter, which my Brother had written to your Worthips, and fent home by a Hollander the next day that hee came into the Road : which if you have not received, you may apparantly fee, that they will iletaine all your Worthips Letters, and you shall have the Copie. Thus have I at large certified your Worthips of all matters in ample manner, which I thought no leffe then my dutie to doe, having made relation of all those places from whence I came. And (I prayle God.) I have aboord one hundred thirtie nine Tunnes, fix Cathayes, one quarterne two pound of Nutmegs, and fixe hundred two and twentie Suckettes of Mace, which maketh thirtie fixe Tunnes, fifteene Cathayes, one quar-10 terne, one and twentie pound , and have left in the Juncke with Master Hern man , foure and twencie Tunnes, feuen Cathayes, two quarternes and eight pound, which col with the charge 25071. Rials, of which fumme I have disburfed fine hundred of mine owne, for Spice which lyeth most vpon the Orlope: and being in bond vnto your Worships, shall remaine vntill I know your pleafures, whether I shall enjoy it.

CHAP. XI.

20 The fixth Voyage, fet forth by the East-Indian Company in three Shippes; the Trades Increase, of one thousand Tunnes, and in her the Generall Sir HENRY MIDDLETON, Admirall; the Pepper-Corne of 100 bundred and fiftie, Vice-Admirall, the Captaine NICHOLAS DOVNTON: and the Darling of ninetie. The Barke Samuel followed as a Victualler of burthen one bundred and eightie: written by Sir H. MIDDLETON.

The proceeding of his Voyage till hee came to Moha in

CHAP.11. S.I.

He first of May 1610. wee came to an Anchor in the Roade of Cape Verde, under Cape Verde. an lland: where wee found a Frenchman of Deepe, that was fetting up a small Pinnaffe vpon the Iland.

The fecond, the Carpenters of all the shippes went in hand with my mayne Mail pulling off the fifthes, we found the Mail exceeding bad, and about the vpper Decke some three foot wrung more then halfe asunder : had wee met with any foule weather, it must needs have gone by the boord. I fent one of my Carpenters a-land to the maine to fearch for Trees, who returned that night, and brought mee word that hee had feene fome which would ferue our turne. The third, we beganne to valade the Samuel, and fent Carpenters a-land to cut downe Trees, The Samuell, having leave of the Aleayda, who came aboord and dined with me , I gave him a piece of Roan cloth, which I bought of the Frenchman, and other Trifles. The fifteenth, we made an end of watering, all our Caske being full : we flowed all our Boats The commenthis night and fitted to be gone the next morning. This place of Cape Verde is the best place dation of Cape

I know for our outward bound thips: for that the Road is excellent good, fit for dispatch of any Verde. bufinelle, and fresh fish to be had in great plentie: resides it is not any thing out of the way. I They arrive in called a Countell of Captaine Dounton and the Masters what course was best to hold till wee Saldanha, came to the Line, fort was concluded South South-well for fixtie leagues : and then South * M. Femellin South-Fast til we grew neere the Line, and then to hale ouer Easterly. We difmissed the Samuel, a Letter which The foureand twentieth of July, we came into the Road of Saldanha, and faluted the Dutch I have written

Admirall with fine Pieces of Ordinance, and hee returned the like, there were also other two montions two Holland ships which came to make traine Oyle of Seales: they had made three hundred Pipes. French ships in This day I went a-land and found out the names of Captaine Keeling, and others bound home like imploy in Ianuary, 1609. And also my Brother Davids name bound out in August the ninth, 1609. And month in he alfo a Letter buried under ground according to agreement made betweene him and mee in Euglye in wait tor land it was so consumed with the dampe of the aire, that I could not reade any part thereof. The different those fixe and twentieth, we fet up a Tent for my ficke men, and then we had them all a land to aire from the look

The fixt of September, latitude twentie three degrees thirtie minutes, the winde all Souther.

The fixt of September, latitude twentie three degrees thirtie minutes, the winde all Souther. The bay of S. Iy a good gale: this day after dinner we faw land, and before night wee came to an anchorin S. Augustine in S. Augustines Bay, where we found the Vnion distressed for lacke of victualls. The seventh day, I went in my Pinnaffe aland to fee if I could get any fresh victualls; but we could not get any ; wee got wood and water aboord, and to returned to our Ships.

The tenth, we steered along st the land with a good gale of wind at South-east, making account we should have gone at least twentie fixe leagues, but we went but twentie two leagues, by reafon the Current letteth to the Southward: her course North two and twentie leagues. The e- 10 leuenth, we fleered from noone till night North North-east along the land, which was North *. a point Eafterly way, and till midnight North North-weft. From midnight till day North by Weft, and so till noone North, all her true way North North-west *. a point, North twentie feuen leagues. We have a great Current against vs: for I made account wee should have gone five and thirtie leagues: I observed, and the latitude was one and twentie degrees five minutes, wind East South-East. The twelfth, we steered betweene the North North-east, and North by East. her true way North Westerly + of a point, latitude nineteene degrees, fortie eight minutes, shee ranne twentie feuen leagues. The Current we find this last foure and twentie houres, fetteth to the North-ward, the wind variable.

The thirteenth, we steered with little wind and calmes for the most part North by East, her 20 true way North 1. part West, the wind as the day before: she went fifteene leagues more then I would have given her; fo that I find the Current fetteth to the North-ward, by my observation, latitude nineteene degrees tenne minutes. The twentieth at noone, her latitude eleuen degrees ten minutes, the wind vering Eafterly, with calmes, variation twelve degrees fortie minutes. This afternoone we faw land, being the Iles of Queriba, which are dangerous low Ilands, environed with rockes and shoales.

Queribain 11. The first of October, 1610. wee steered North-east, her way North-east by North . North degrees tenne minutes, neere twenty feuen leagues, the wind for the most part South-east. The second, we steered North-east, the coaft of 4- her way North-sait by North 1. North fiftie feuen leagues. Note the Current hath carried vs thefe eight and fortie houres to the North-ward, more then by reckoning we could give her by twentie eight leagues, which we found true by our latitude, which was three degrees thirtie minutes 30 South latitude: variation twelve degrees twenty foure minutes, wind South and South-east. The third, we steered North-east by East, her true way North-east 2. North fortie one leagues, which is twelue leagues, carried by the Current to the North-wards: for I should have given her but nine and twentie leagues, latitude two degrees South, the winds variable betweene the South and South-eaft.

The Iles de

The fourth, we steered North-east by East, her true way North-east : point Northerly fortie fine leagues; whereof foureteene leagues carried with the Current, South latitude foureteene minutes, variation thirteene degrees, wind variable, betweene the South-east and South, we crost the line this afternoone. The fifth, we fleered twelue houres North-east by East, and twelue 40 houres East North-east, her true way North-east, little Northerly fortie seuen leagues : shee hath been carried to the North by the Current at the least twenty leagues, latitude North one degree thirtie minutes, the wind for the most part South South-east, with sometimes almost calme. The fixt, we steered East by North, and East North-east: her true way North-east by East little Ea-Herly thirtie eight leagues, helped by the Current to the North-ward eighteene leagues: latitude two degrees thirtie minutes, the wind South South-east, variation foureteene degrees two

The feuenth, we fleered East by North, her true way East North-east : point Northerly, eight and twentie leagues: latitude three degrees fine minutes, wind all Southerly: variation lifteene degrees, by the Current tenne leagues. The eighth, we steered East North-east, her true way 10 North, east by East - point, Northerly fortie leagues: latitude foure degrees twentie feuen minutes, the wind South-west, variation sixteene degrees soure minutes. The ninth, wee steered North-east by East, her true way North-east + a point Northerly twenty seuen leagues, latitude fine degrees, three and twentie minutes, wind South-west, variation sixteene degrees foure mi-

They loofe the

The tenth calme: Latitude in fine degrees, one and twenty minutes. Here we loft the Current that set to the North-ward, and were carried to the South-ward two miles, variation seuenteene degrees tenne minutes. The eleuenth, calme, latitude fiue degrees twentie minutes, loft one mile. The twelfth, calme, latitude fine degrees, loft by being carried to the Southward twentie miles. The thirteenth, we steered two watches North-east, and foure watches 60 North North-east: her true way as I gueft North North-east, by reason the Current counternailes the variation, the ranne feuenteene leagues: latitude fine degrees, fiftie fine minutes , the wind Well by North, variation nineteene degrees tenne minutes.

The foureteenth, we steered North, her way allowing her variation, which is nineteene degrees fortie minutes, should be one point 1, to the West-ward; but the variation daily rising, sheweth we are carried to the East-ward by the Current, more then the variation commeth vnto, A Current, the went this day forty leagues, the wind West South-west, latitude seuen degrees fifteene minutes: her true way North-east, carried to the East tenne leagues. The fifteenth, wee steered North, our latitude eight degrees fifty fiue minutes, her true way North-east fortie fiue leagues, her way should have been North by West, Westerly by the variation, but the Current hath caried her to the East-ward of her courie seuenteene leagues: the variation nineteen degrees siue minutes, the wind West South-west.

S. H. Midleton at Zacotora and Aden. CHAP. 11. S.I.

249

The fixteenth, we steered away North, her way by the Current, North by East thirtie fixe 10 leagues, carried contrary to the variation fue leagues to the East-ward, as I imagine: the wind South South-west, variation nineteene degrees eight minutes. The seuenteenth, wee steered North, and ranne nineteene leagues: in the morning early wee did fee the Duas Irmanas fixe leagues off, bearing North by West of vs: the wind at South-west, variation eighteene degrees fiftie five minutes. The eighteenth at night, we came to an anchor in a landy Bay, in the Ile of Thelleof Ca-Zacotora, whose latitude was twelve degrees twenty five minutes: in the evening we went on coora land with our Sayne, and got great store of fish: wind East.

The one and twentieth, we weighed for to ply for the road of Tamerin, the chiefe towne of Tamerin. the lland, but we found the wind at the East, and East by South, which was right as wee should goe, so that we could not get the place till the fine and twentieth day. The latitude of Tumarin

20 is twelue degrees thirtie minutes, the variation is nineteene degrees eighteene minutes. The Towns standeth at the foote of high ragged hills: the road is all open betweene the East by The coffing a-North, and West North-west. We anchored in ten fathomes water, good ground. The fine and way of the A. twentieth in the afternoon, I fent M. Femel well accompanied afhore, with a prefent to the King, Semien.

which was a vest of cloth, a peice of Plate, and a Sword blade; he promised all kindnesses. The fixe and twentieth, I went on shore with the chiefe Merchants with me, and a good guard

The fixe and twentieth, I went on shore with the chiefe Merchants with me, and a good guard

The King en-

The line and twenteen, I was conducted to the Kings houle, where at his chamber doore he came and intertained me: he brought me into his Chamber, where being let in a chaire by him, there passed Hety Multimany complements, which I omit. I enquired concerning the trade of the Red Sea; and he commended it highly, taying, the people of Aden and Moha were good people, and would bee glad 30 of trade with vs; and that the Afcension had fold all her goods there at good rates, and came so lightly to this place, that they tooke in good flore of Ballail. This newes gaue me good content: I demaunded leave to fet vp my Pinnaffe vpon his liand, but he would not graunt it in this roade; but if I would returne, and doe it at the place where we first anchored, he was content: he feared if we stayed in this roade of Tamerin to let her vp, we would feare all men for comming thither. He had fent all his Alloes to Fartaque to his Father, King of that parc of Arabia Falix: his chiefe Fartaque in 4 Citie is called Chushem, where he is refiednt. Iasked him leaue to wood and water: for the one, raba. which was water, he gaue me free leaue; but for wood I must pay very deare, if I would have any; faying withall, That all other Nations which came thither, payed for their water; but of mee he would not demaund any thing. He confirmed the lofte of the Afcention, and her Pinnafle, which 40 was no little griefe to me to heare. I demaunded if they had left any writing behind them; hee answered me, he had one, but his seruant had lost it; I was very earnest to have seene it; but it could not be found. He animated me to goe for the Red Sea, but difwaded me from feeking trade in the Countrey of Faringue: for that he doubts his Father would not permit vs. I and all my people dined with the King, which beeing done, I tooke my leaue, and went aboord. The fearnth of Nouember, we fleered West by South, and West South-west alongst the Land:

we fawe about tenne of the clocke an high land, which we imagined to be the high land of Aden, it rifeth like Abbadel-Curia, and may be seene a great way off. In the evening about fixe of the clocke, we came to an anchor before the Towne in twenty fathome water, landy ground. The Towne standeth at the foote of a Mountaine in a Vale, and maketh a faire shew: it is incironed

50 with a stone wall, and Forts and Bulwarks in many places, but how they be appoointed we know not. This night there came a small Boat from the Towne to view vs, but came not abound: the wind East South-east we stood in, standing ouer we were carried to the East-ward with the Current at least twentie leagues, contrary to our expectation, who rather thought the Current would have fetto the West-wards...

The eighth, came a small Boat off the Towne aboord, with three Arabums in her: they faid they were tent by the Lieftenant of the Towne, to know what Nation we were, and wherefore we came thither, fending vs word by them, if we were Englishmen, we were heartily welcome, and that the veere before, Captaine Sharpeigh had been there, and from thence went to M.ha, where he made tale of all his goods: I demanded of one of them the name of the Balia, and Captain Shar-60 whether he were a good man; he answered, his name was I effer Balha, and that the Balha that last perit had been was, was very Lad, this a little better; but all the Tinker in generall starke naught. I asked, if Mo-Mo-girthe ba were a good place of trade, they answered, that there was one man in Moba, that would buy yeare 1602. all our goods: Hent my Pinnasse a land, and Iohn Williams one of my Factors in her, who spake the Arabique language, at their comming a shore they were kindly entertained.

The

The ninth in the morning, I fent my Pinnasse ashore for a Pilot for Moha: in the meane while the Boate was ashore, we brought our selves loose, and under sayle: they returned without a Pilot. and would not let vs have any, without three of our chiefe Merchants to be left for pledges : they intreated me not to depart with all our ships, but to leave one for that Port; and that they would buy all the goods in her; we beeing defirous of trade vpon good confideration, thought fit to lease the Pepper-cerne there, and the other two to goe for Meha, whereupon we did what we could to get the Road againe, but could not, beeing carried to Lee-ward with the Current : wee anchored to the South-ward of the Towne: I fent M. Fowler and John Williams aland, to tell them I minded to leave one of the ships there to trade, so that they would let me have a Pilot, They seemed very glad that one of the ships should tarry, and promised me a Pilot the next day.

The Trade and faile for Moba.

high land.

The twelfth, I feeing no hope of any Pilot to be had (which had been often promifed, but not performed) dispatched my businesse with the Pepper-corne: and about noone, I and the Darling set layle for Moba: the wind East South-east, wee steered alongst the land sometimes West South-west, and West by North, in twentie eight and thirtie fathome, we saw a small sayle going before vs, which we followed till we had loft fight of her by night. This coast is highland, with many head-lands.

Arabia going The North straight of the Red Sen. Babelmandel, or the Bab.

Moht The fbippe brought on

Stembola is

The thirteenth, we haled on our course alongst the land, all this night steering betweene the The Headland West by North, and most by South, her true way West. The next day betimes we saw the headon the coaft of land going into the Red Sea, rifing like an Iland; about eleuen of the clocke wee were thwart of the entrance, being but three miles broad: on the North fide is a ragged land like an Iland, and on 20 the other fide is a flat low lland, called Babelmandel: vpon the South of the Iland there feemeth to be a broad channell or entrance. After we had passed this straight of Babelmandel, vponthe North shore in a fandie Bay is a Village, to which place I sent my Pinnasse for a Pilot: they staid not long, but returned with a couple of Arabs, who tooke vpon them to be very skilfull. Our depth in the straights was betweene eight and eleven fathome water (betweene the straight and Aden is thirty leagues ) we steered along st the land North by West, and North North-west, betweene eighteene and twentie fathomes deepe: about foure of the clocke we discried the Towne of Moba: and about fine a clocke in luffing in beeing much wind, we split our maine toppe sayle, and putting abroad our mizen, it split likewise: our Pilots brought our shippe a ground vpon a banke of land, the wind blowing hard, and the Sea somewhat high, which made vs all doubt her 30 comming off. This night came a Boat aboord of vs from the Towne, with a Turke in her, a proper man, fent by the Gouernour of the Towne, to know what we were, and wherefore wee came thither. I told him we were English Merchants, that came to feeke trade : he answered, if Alexander Shar. We were Englishmen we were hartily welcome, and should not faile of that we looke for : for Alexander Sharpeigh had fold all his goods there, and we might doe the like. And for the grounding of the ship, he made nothing of it, laying, It was ordinary for great shipsof India to come a ground, and yet neuer heard that any of them instained any harme thereby; he made hast to goe ashore, to certifie the Aga what we were, with promise in the morning to returne with Boates to lighten our ship. This man, as I afterward understood, is called Lord of the Sea, for that his office is to go aboord all ships that come thither, and to see Lighters sent aboord to discharge the ships, and to 40 fearch that they steale no custome: for which Office, hee hath dinerie duties, which is his onely

The fourteenth in the morning early, he returned with three or foure Tiokes more in his company, whereof two of them ipake Italian, they brought me a small Present from the Aga, which commendations and offer of any thing the Countrey could affoord me, with heartie welcome to his Port, faying, we should have as good and free Trade as wee had in Stambola, Aleppo, or any part of the Turkes Dominions, with many other Complements ; there came with them foure or five Lighters, in which we put any thing that came first to hand, to lighten the ship. Master Femell went a-land in one of them before I was aware thereof, carrying all he had in the ship with of the Turkes. him. Wee fent all our Money, Elephants teeth, and all our fhot about the Darling : wee laid 50 out our Anchors to passe, and in the Euening proued if we could heave her off, but could not make her stirre, which was no small griefe to me.

The fifteenth, we did what we could to lighten our ship, sending some goods a-land and some aboord the Darling, I had a Letter from Master Femell, wherein hee certified mee of kind entertaynment by the Aga, and that he had agreed for Cuftome to pay fine pound the hundred for all we should sell, and that we could not sell to be returned abourd custome free. Likewise the Age fent me a Letter under his hand and Seale, proffering himselfe and any thing the Countrey atfoorded to bee at my disposing, with many other Complements; about five a clocke wee began to heave at our Cap-staynes, and by Gods great mercy shee went off to all our comforts.

The nineteenth, came two Boates from the shore sent by Master Femell for Iron, which I 60 cauled them to fetch from the Darling. I writ to Mafter Femell not to fend for any more goods a-land, for that I would see sale of those he had already before I would depart with any more. I receiued a Letter from Master Femell, if that I minded to have Trade, I must come a land according to the custome of the place, otherwise they would not be perswaded but that wee were men of Warre. Likewife, the Aga fent our Interpreter to me to intreste me to come aland, if I were a Merchant and friend to the great Timbe, and hoped for Trade: Alledging that Captaine Sharpaigh and all the Indian Captaines did the like.

CHAP. 11. S.2.

The twentieth, I went a land, I was received at the water fide by divers chiefe men, and with Mulicke brought to the Agas House; where were affembled all the chiefe men of the Towne: my entertaymment by the Agrand the reft, was with extraordinarie great kindnesse, I was feated close to the ofga, all men elfe Handing, where he held me with Complements, mamy times bidding me welcome, offering himfelfe and the Countrey to be at my ferusce : I delinered his Maiestres Letter with a Present to the Baba; which I defined might be sent him up with 10 all speed. Likewise I gave the Aga a Prefere, which he tooks very kindly, telling me, I and my people should have as good and peaceable Trade, as any of our Nation had in any parts of the Torker Dominions, and that if any man in the Towne offered me or any of my people wrong, he would tee them severely punished; he canted me to stand up, & one of his chiefe men put upon my backe a Veft of Crimion filke and liker, faying, Inceded not to doubt of any enillator that was the Gran Seniors protection. After some few Complements I tooke my leane; I was mounted vpon a Gallant Horse with rich Farmiture, a great man leading my Horse; and so in my new Coate with the Mulicke of the Towne conneiged to the English House : where I stayed Dinner, and presently after went abourd. Much he intreated my flay on shore, which I yeekled to for building my Pinnafe, the daies following being also forced by foule weather.

Turkish ereacherie at Moha and Aden with the English.

Ne day past not, but I had some small present or other sent mee by the Ara , with The Turker commendations from him, to know if I lacked any thing. On the eight and twen- Faftingtieth day twice he tent me commendations, willing me to be merry, and when their time of Fasting was done (which was almost expired) nee would have me ride abroad with him to his Gardens, and other places of pleafure to make merry. This afternoone came Mafter Pemberton a-land for Coco Muts. I caused him to stay Supper with mee , which beeing done, he tooke his leave to goe aboord, but the Tokes would not permit him, faying, it was too late, but in the morning he should goe as timely as he would. I fent to intreate that he might go, but it would not be granted. All this time we suspected no harme, but thought it was ouer-much cariofitiein the Officer, who wee thought had done it without order, of which the next day I thought to have complayned to the Aca.

The Sunnebeing let (according to my wonted order) I caused stooles to bee set at the doore, where my felte, Mafter Fomell, and Matter Pemberton fat to take the fresh aire, if specting nothing of the present ensuing harme that did befall vs. About eight of the clocke, care a lanzary 40 from the Agato deliver forme message to mee, but wee could not vinder land him for lacke of an Interpreter: I fent my man to looke for one of my company that spake the Trokish Tongue, my Interpreter presently came, by whom I vaderstood the effect of the lanzaries message, which was, that the Aga had fent me commendations, willing me to be merry, for that hee had received good newes from the Basha. And as hee was about to fay somewhat else, my man returnes in great feare, telling vs wee were all betrayed : for that the Turker and my people were by the The trea for of eares at the backe of the Houle. The Tarke that fate by, was defirous to know what was the mat- the Tarke, ter, which wee tolde him, hee presently rose up, and willed my man to shew him where Novemb. 18 they were, divers of my Company running after them, to fee what was the matter. 1610. And I my selfe ranne after them, calling upon them as loud as I could, to returne backe and make in fine one so good our House : but whiles I was thus speaking, I was strooke vpon the head downe to the downe dead. ground by one which came behind me; I remained as dead till fuch time as they had bound my hands behind mee, and so firaite that the extreame paine thereof brought mee to my memorie. Affooneas they faw me ftirre they litted me vpon my feet, and led me betweene two of them to the Agas: where I found divers of my Companie in I ke taking as I was my felfe. By the way the Souldiers pillaged mee, and tooke from mee such money as I had about mee, and three gold Rings, whereof one was my Seale, the other had feuen Diamonds which were of good worth, and the third a Gimmall Ring. When all of vs that escaped with life in this bloudie Massacre, were brought together, then beganne they to put vs in Irons : my felfe with feuen more were Sir H. Middlechained by the neckes all together : other fome their feete, other their hands; this being done, they 100, and feuch 60 left two Souldiers to guard vs, the rest departed, these Sculdiers had compassion of vs, and eased more channed vs of our bands, for the most of vs had our hands so straite bound behind vs, that the bloud was by the nacker. readie to burit out at our fingers ends, with pain vnfufferable, but we were bound to endure it. After I had received this ease of my hands an larmes (though still over-charged with griefe of heart)

not only for my owne necessitie (and there with me) but also for the safetie of the ships, which I

CHAP. 11. S.2.

Eight of our men were flayne.

252

The Derling boorded by the Turkes.

greatly doubted, knowing the conetous Turkes would leane no Villanie nor Treason vnattemna tedifor the jurprizing of them, we began to reason among thour selues, what should be the reason or cause of this their villanous vsage of vs; and withall, I demanded how it began, and if any of our Company were flaine. I was certified by those of my Company that did fee it, and hardly escaped smanfelues, that Francis Slanny, John Lanflot, and fixe more were flaine, and that foure. teene of our Company there present were grieuously wounded, and that our House was round begirt with atmed Souldiers, who, at the instant I was strooke downe, lallied out vpon vs vine their mercileffe crueltig towards vs, that had not wherewithall to defend our felues, much leffe to offend them, Now having gone through their first pretence of milchiefe, not being fatisfied with Christian bloud, they ay med ac our thips and goods. For about ten of the clocks, they are med three great Boates, with one hundred and fiftie Souldiers in them to take the Darling, who rode formewhat neere the flore. The Boates put from the flore altogether, the Turker tooks of their white Tuckes, because they would be thought tobe Christians, and all joyntly beerded her. and entred most of their men : it was so sudden, that three of the Declings men were laine before they could get downe : the rest betake them to their close fight. Now it pleased God in mercie to looke upon va, and not to fulfer any more Christian bloud to be shed. For the Captaine of them, which is called Emier-bahare or Lord of the Sea, called to his Souldiers to cut the Tables in the House the Souldiers mut understanding him, many of them leapt into the Boates, and cut the Boate Ropes, and to droug away : by this time our men had gotten them to their Weapons, and to their close fights, the Turker standing very thicke in the waste, hellowing and clanging their 14 Swords vpon the Decke, one of the Company threw a bigge Barrell of Powuer amongst them, and after it a Fire-brand; which tooke to good effect, that it burned divers of them : the reft for their better lafetie (a) they thought) retyred to the halfe Deck and the Poope, where they were fet off with Musket thot, and entertayined with another trayne of Powder, which put themin fuch feare, that they leaped into the Sea, hanging by the ships side, desiring mercy, which was not there to be found, for that our men killed all they could finde, and the rest were drowned, only one man was faued, who hid himfelte till the turie was past, who yee ded and was received to mercie. Thus God of his goodnelle and mercie deliuered our thip and men out of the hands of our Enemies, for which his hely Name be bleffed and prayfed euermore, Amen.

The Turkes all burned, killed, or drowned,

Befides thefe three were with like tresgiuenthemto and fluckles whiles, &c.

Now let vs looke backe to vs imprisoned at Mohe, . The Boats returning brought newes the thip was taken, for which there was great resoycing, The Gouernour, fent off the Boats agains 10 with order to bring the fhip: when they came to farre off as where the ship did ride, they found her gone from thence under faile standing off, so that they returned and told the Aga the ship had escaped and was gone, and that they thought Emeir Babars and his Socidiers were taken Prisoners: which newes was nothing pleasing vnto him. Before day he sent our Interpreter to tell me the small ship was taken : which I did verily beleene to bee true; when it was day I was fent for to come to the Aga, to I and fenen more which were chained by the neckes with mee came before him. He with a frowning (and not his wonted diffembling) countenance, asked mee on convened how I durit be fo bold as to come into this their Port of Moha, so neere their holy Citie of Macbefore the Aga. Ga; I answered, it was not vinknowne vinto him wherefore I came thither, having long before to certified him thereof, and that I came nota-land but at his earnest intreatie with many promises of kind and good viage; he answered in was not lawfull for any Christian to come to neere their holy Citie of Medina, this being the Port or Doore thereof, and that the Bafba had express order from the great Turke, to capticate all Christians that should come into those Seas, although they had his owne paffe. I told him the fault was his, that he had not told mee fo much at the first, but deluted vs with faire promises : he gaue me a Letter to reade of Captaine Dounton that came from Aden, dated long before, the effect whereof was, that two of his Merchants and Purcherie twente fer were detayned afhore, and that they would not be releated without landing of Merchandize, men more be- or paying of fifteene hundred Venetianos for Anchorage, and withall to be admised by me what grayed at Aden, he had best to doe, after I had read it, hee bade mee tell, him the effect thereof : which I did, hee told me fince the writing of this Letter, the ship was comming from this place, and that she was cast away upon a Rocke, and that all the goods and men were lost (this was cold comfort to mee to heare) he willed me to write a Letter abourd, to know how many Turkes were in the small flip. I told him that should not need, for that they had taken the ship, hee answered that shee was once taken and poffeiled by them, but the was refused by the great thip and taken from them againe, and therefore willed me to write to them abound the great shippe, to come all of them aland, and yeeld the ship into his hands, and he would let vs have the small thip to carrie vs home. I faid it was afelly to write any fuch thing : for they that were abourd and had their libertie were no fuch Fooles, as vpon my Lettter to forfake the ship and goods, and come aland and bee flanes. He faid, he knew if I did write a Letter to that offett, they durft not disobey me. I told him & I would write no such Letter, he enquired what store of money was in our shippes. I answered, little, and that was not for Merchandize but to buy Victuals. Hee asked what store of Victuals and Water ! I told him enough for two yeares, which hee would not beleeue. He viged meeagains to write, to will them to come all ashore and yeeld the ship, or he would cut off my head. I bade him the to for therein hee should doe me a great pleasure, for I was weary of my life, but write to that effect I never would.

I was taken out of my Chame and Coller, and a great paire of Fetters clapt vpon my legges, and Mahacles your my hands, and to separated from the rest of my company : they stowed mee allithat day in a dirty Dogges Kennell under a paire of flaires : at night, at the intreatie of Shermell Conffel of the Bandians, I was taken out and placed in a better roome, one more of my. Company which spake Turkib being with me. My lodging was voon the hard ground, and my pillow a florie, my companions to keepe me waking were griefe of heart and multitude of Rats: which if I thanced to fleepe, would awake me with running ouer me. About mid-night came the 10 Lieutenant of the Aga, and our Trugman entreating me very fairely to write my Letter aboord, to know how many Tarker were abourd Prifoners, and what were their names, but in any cafe willed me not to write any thing of the loffe of our men, nor of my owne and my peoples hard viage, but to lay we were detayned in the Aga Houle (where wee lacked not any thing ) till further order came from the Balba. This Letter I did willingly write, and to the fame effect they willed me, but withall willing them to looke well to their ships and Boat, and to have a care to their men, that not any of them came aland for feare of Treason. This Letter they had with them, and examined two or three of my men whether I had fo written.

This Letter was not fent; for that they could not get any man to goe aboord with it, but now they had found a man who was there prefent would undertake to carrie it abourd, fo that I 20 would write they should vie him well and doe him no harme; this man was borne in Tunes in Barbary and spake good Italian. I writ the Letter as they defired; which was perused as was the former, and the next day was fent aboord, and answere returned, the effect was that all the Decemb 1610 Turkes were flame and drowned faue one, whose name was Ruffman, a common Souldier, and that they were glad to heare I was alive : for the Pritoner Turke told them, he thought we were all flaine. We continued in this mifery till the fifteenth of December, not hearing any thing from the ships, nor they from vs. The Aga came divers times to me, fometimes with threats, sometimes with faire meanes, to have me write that all our people should come ashoare and yeeld vp the shippes: I still answered him as I did at the first. Hee was desirous to know what money was in the shippe, and what store of water. I answered him, Money had we little, but 30 victuall had we enough for two yeares. He was in hope for lacke of water and victuals to have the third yeeld vnto him, knowing that we could not have a wind to carrie vs out of the flraight till May: he faid, he maruelled how fo great a charge could be borne with fo fmall a flocke. I an- Decembers. fwered, we had Factories in divers places in India, who had stocke enough in their hands to loade vs if we had brought neuer a peny worth of Commodities with vs , and that stocke wee had was fufficient to lade our ships with Pepper, which in India was good cheape.

They in the thips were very earll to passe riding in an open and wide Roade, the wind blowing continually har lat South South-east, enclosed round with shoales, their water beginning to faile them, for that we had flaued fiftie Tunnes to lighten our thip at our comming a ground: and hearing nothing from vs aland made them at their wits ends, not knowing well what to do:

they being in this perplexitie, an honest tellow in the ship called Iohn Chambers offered them The hardie to goe aftere to fee what was become of vs, and to put his life and libertie in venture rather then part of 10 be fee men liue in this discontent, which he effected; & also this day being the fifteenth of December, Chambers. with a Flagge of Truce was fet upon a small Hand, a little to wind-ward of the Towne, he had one of our Indians with him for his Interpreter: they were brought before the Aga, who asked him how he durst be so bold to come ashore without leave; he answered he came with a Flag of Truce, & was but a Mellenger, which was permitted amongst enemies. He asked what mellage he had to deliuer. He faid, a Letter to me, and likewise if he would gue him leave to see how wee did. They examined him and the Indian very strictly what store of victuall and water was in the ships, they both answered as I formerly had done, that there was enough of all forts of vito chuals for two yeares.

This being done they brought him to my darke Cell; who comming out of the light was a great while before he could fee me, Hee deliuered me the Letter with watery eyes to fee mee fo tettered hands and feet in Irons. I demanded how he came ashore ? He told me after what manner, and how he was examined by the Aga. I told him I thought they would not permithim to returne aboord, for that not few dayes before one of the Pepper-Corne men was come from Aden with a Letter to me, and they kept him Pritoner, and would not permit him to returne, nor giue him leaue to goe abourd our sh ps. He answered he came with that resolution from abourd, to take fuch part as I did, if they would bee so villanously minded to stay him being but a Mes-

The fixteenth, I returned answere of my Letter sent me, and delivered it to Chambers, and contrary to my expectation, they let him and the Indian returne to the Boate, with leave to come agains the next day if they had occasion: the next day Chambers returnes alone, for the Indian was to frighted that he durft not come : my man fent me divers things by him, but the Aga was my Receiver and kept them to his owne vie, thinking them too good for mee; hee returnes

254

aboord, and leaves vs to our wonted miferie, attending daily what should become of vs; looking every houre for the fentence from the Balha, of Death, or perpetual imprisonment or captuitie. Yet God dealt more mercifully with vs, who never faileth them that put their trust in him.

For upon the twentieth of December, came downe from Zenan an Aga, Captaine or Chiefe of the Chanfles, with order to bring vs vp all. At his first lighting he was defirous to see me & my poore Company; there were three Chaires brought into my Roome, wherein Regib Aga, Ifmael (which was the Meilenger from the Balha) and lasfer Agaleated themselues. Regib Aga began to aske me how I durit be so bold as to come into that Countrey so neere their holy Citie, without a Paffe from the Gran Senior? I answered, the King my Master was in league and amitie with the Gran Senior, and that in the Articles of peace, it was allowed vs free Trade in all his Dominions, and this being part of his Dominions there needed no passe. Hee answered, this was the 10 doore of their holy Citie, and therefore not lawfull for any Christian to come hither; Likewife. he asked me, If I did not know the Gran Seniors Sword was long , I answered wee were not taken by the Sword, but by Treaton, and if I and my people were aboord, I cared not for the length of his or all their Swords; he faid it was proudly spoken of me. Also he willed, as former. ly he had done many times, to write a Letter aboord to command all the men out of the ships. and yeeld themselues to the Basha; and received like answer.

I small Aga broke off this idle speech, by telling me he was come from the Basha, with expresse order from him to conduct me and all my people to Zenen, and therefore willed mee to fend aboor I for warme clothes, for that wee should find it very cold in the Mountaine Countrey. I prayed him if it were possible that my poore men might bee fent ab ord, and that I and some 20 few more might be fent vp. Hee faid it was not in him to remedie it, for it was the Bashas order we should all goe vp: Regib Aga said I should have my defire, that I and five more should goe vp with me, and the rest must abide where they are, till further order from the Basha. This was the eighteenth day of December.

This twentieth day, Captaine Dounton in the Pepper-Corne, came into the Road from Aden: Iwrit to him my minde, what I thought fitted to be done.

è. 111.

Sir Henric Midleton, and foure and thirtie others, fent to the Basha at Zenan. Description of the Countrey, and Occurrents till their returne.

Decemb. 22.

Capt. Doubton commeth into the road of

Sir Herry Midieten, and 34. Engl. shreen were tent to The efeape of M. Pemberton.

Mov¶i,

Hamet Ass 2 great friend to The Conful of the Barrions, and Tookebar, their great friendship to vs

Ties a citie four dayes iou-ney from

The two and twentieth of December, our Irons were knockt off all our legges, faue the Carpenters and Smithes, and some sicke men that were not able to travell: the Carpenters and Smithes were kept there to build up the Pinnaffe; and my felfe, and four and thirtie persons more of vs, were appointed to goe vp for Zenan, the chiefe Citie of the Kingdome, where the Basha is resident. About foure of the clocke we set out of Moba, all my

Com, any beeing mounted vpon Ailes, and my felte and M. Femel vpon Horse-backe. About ten 4 of the clocke in the night, being tenne or twelue miles from Moha, Master Pemberton il pt away from vs; we missed him our selues presently, but said not any thing, the best helpe we were able to doe him, he had; which was in befeeching God to fend him fafe aboord, for the attempt was very desperate. About one of the clocke after midnight, we came to our Inne at a Towne called Monfile they told vs all at our comming thither; yet miffed not him that was wanting. We continued in this lodging till foure of the clocke in the afternoone the next day. At our letting out of doore they told vs, and found one miffing: the Aga inquired of me how many we were that fet out of Moha. I told him I could not well tell, but as I thought we were foure and thirty of vs: he faid, we were fine and thirtie, and that one was misting: I faid, it was more then I did know. The chiefest cause that mooued M. Pemberton to take this desperate action in hand, was to see so 50 many of vs carried vp together manacled, with a Captaine, and a guard of Souldiers to conduct vs, which he could imagine to no other end, then death or captiuitie, which was the opinion of vs all. I found a great friend of one Hamet Aga, who tent me divers Prefents, and willed me to be of good comfort, for my cause was good : he sent me and my people prouision of Bread tor out iourney, and withall his letters to the Kaha.

Likewise, the Conful of the Bannians, who came every day to visit me, and never came empty handed, and Tookehar was our great friend all the time we were there prisoners, and every day failed not to fend to each man, being one and fiftie in number, two cakes of white bread, and a quantitie of Dates, or Plantans: he departed from Moha two cayes before vs for Zenan, promifing me at his departure to doe all he could with the Basha for our good; which promite, I thinke, he well performed: for at Zenan I was told by divers, he laboure a hard in our businesse, both with the Basha and his Cayba, which is a verie discreet man, and gouernes the Kingdome.

We arrived at the Citie of Ties (which is foure dayes journey from Moha) vpon Christmas

day: where we were marshalled into the Citie two and two in a ranke, as they doe at " Stam- " Conflavinople bola with captines taken in the warres, our Aga riding in triumph as a great Conquerour, beeing met a mile out of the Towne with the chiefe men of the Citie on Horle-back, multitudes of peo- Great cold in ple standing all the way gazing and wondering at vs: thus were we vsed in all Cities and Townes the mountains. we railed through. A youth of M. Pembertons tell licke in this Towne, and was left with the needfull. Gouernour thereof, for that he was not able to trauell. I kept no Journal from this time forward; Zenan is in fixbut this I remember, we found it very cold all the way from Tyes to Zenan, our lodging being the teendegrees cold ground; I bought most of our men, which were stenderly clothed, furred gownes to keepe fifteen emithem from the cold; otherwise, I thinke, they would have starued. I would not believe at Monutes. 10 bs, when I was told of the cold wee should have ypwards, and that made me goe but thinly clothed my lelfe; but experience taught me otherwaies, withing when it was too late, I had come better prouided. Zenan is from Moba an hundred and eightie miles, or thereabouts, as I judge, North North-west. It is in the latitude of sixteene degrees fifteene minutes, which I observed by an instrument I made there.

Every morning the ground was covered with horie frost: and in Zenan wee had Ice a finger Ice a finger thicke in one night, which I could hardly have believed, had I not feene it. Wee were fifteene thicke in one dayes betweene Moba and Zenan. The fifth of Ianuary two houres before day, we came within night in Zenan. two miles of the Citie, where we lay vpon the ground till it was faire day, being much pinched They were fifby the cold, not beeing able fearce to stand we were so benummed. About a mile from the Towne teenedayes in 20 we were met by the Subbaffie or Sheriffe, with at least two hundred Shot, Drummes, and Trumpets: we were cauled to goe one by one in order, a prety distance one from the other, to make the better shew; our men had their gownes taken from them, and were cauled to march a foote in their thinne and ragged fuites: the fouldiers lead the way, after came our men one by one; our Trumpeters were placed next before me, and commanded by the Aga to found; but I forbad them: after the Trumpets came M. Femel and my felfe on Horle-backe; and lastly came our Aga riding in Triumph, with a spare horterichly furnished led before him. In this order wee were led through the heart of the Citie till we came to the Cafile, all the way beeing to full of peo. The Cafile, ple, we could hardly palle for them. At the first gate, there was a good guard of armed soldiers: the second gate had two great pieces of Ordnance, readie mounted at the entry thereof: after we 30 had passed this gate, we came to a spacious yard, twice the length of the Exchange in London; the fouldiers at the entry of the Gate discharged their shot, and placed themselnes amongst many others that were there before them, some on the one side, and some on the other, and a lane left in the middest. At my first comming in I alighted, and was placed on the one side with my men; where I had not stated long, but I and M. Femel were brought before the Basha: it was their Di- Their commano or Counfell day: at the vpper end of the yard, we mounted vp a paire of flaires fome twelve ming before the Baffa, fteps high: at the head thereof, two great men came and tooke me by the wriftes, and held mee very hard, and so led me to the Basha. The place where he was feated, was a long spacious gallery; at the upper end thereof he was feated alone, many great men standing on each lide of him. and others flood on either fide, from the lower part of the Gallery to the ypper end, which made

40 a good shew: the floore was couered all ouer with Turkie Carpets. When I came within two yards of him, we were flayed; He, with a frowning and angry countenance, demaunded of what Countrey I was, and what I made in those parts? I answered, I was an Englishman, and a Merchant, and friend to the Grand Senior, and came to feeke trade. He faid, It was not lawfull for any Christian to come into that Countrey, and that he had given warning to Captaine Sharpeigh, that no more of our Nation should come thither. I told him, Captaine Sharpeigh was cast away * Stambol or vpon the Coast of India, and came not to England to tell vs so much, which had we knowne, wee stambola or would never have put our felues into that thouble we were in: I told him Regib Aga was the man Siamboli, is a that had abused me, in telling me we were welcome into the Countrey, and that we should have corruption of as free trade as our Nation had in any part of Turkie, with many other faire promites, and that the Greeke 50 concrary to his word he affaulted vs with armed fouldiers, and murthered diners of my men, and words, see that tooke me and the rest prisoners: he said, Regib Aga was but his slaue, and had no such power as about, which

and if it pleated him to let vs returne to our ships, it would bee sufficient warning to our Nation, so the citie, to for euer comming in those parts againe. Hee said, No, hee could not so let vs depart, but that I calling it of should fit there and write my letters to the Amballador at Stambola, and he would likewife write special emito the Gran Senior, to know his pleasure what should become of vs, or whether he would permit ther Cities: as vs trade, or no: he difmift me for that prefent, and bad me goe to my lodging which was appoin- Athensis at this 60 ted for me, and take with me foure or fine more, such as I thought good: I and those I made choise day contracted of, were conveyed to the Keeper of the prilons house, and the rest carried to the common prilon, into Satings where for their welcome they were clapt in waightie Irons; one of our youths at fuch time as I read Page 10 fletome.

to passe his word to me without his leave, and what was befallen to me and my people, was by the Greeks vied his order to Regib Aga; and that he himselfe likewise had such order from the Gran Senior, so to speake of their going chastise all Christians that should come into those parts. It old him we had received great harme, thinker, that is, was brought before the Basha, thinking I was so led to have my head strook off, sel in a found with cost of Fr. 2014.

aboord, and leaves vs to our wonted miferie, attending daily what should become of vs; looking every houre for the sentence from the Basha, of Death, or perpetual imprisonment or captimitie. Yet God dealt more mercifully with vs, who never faileth them that put their trust in him.

For upon the twentieth of December, came downe from Zenan an Aga, Captaine or Chiefe of the Charfes, with order to bring vs vp all. At his first lighting he was defirous to fee me & my poore Company; there were three Chaires brought into my Roome, wherein Regib Aga, Ismael (which was the Mellenger from the Balha) and lasfer Agaleated themselves. Regib Aga began to aske me how I durft be so bold as to come into that Countrey so neere their holy Citie, without a Paffe from the Gran Senior? I answered, the King my Master was in league and amitie with the Gran Senior, and that in the Articles of peace, it was allowed vs free Trade in all his Dominions, and this being part of his Dominions there needed no passe. Hee answered, this was the 10 doore of their holy Citie, and therefore not lawfull for any Christian to come hither; Likewife. he asked me, If I did not know the Gran Seniors Sword was long ; I answered wee were not taken by the Sword, but by Treaton, and if I and my people were aboord, I cared not for the length of his or all their Swords; he faid it was proudly spoken of me. Also he willed, as former. ly he had done many times, to write a Letter aboord to command all the men out of the ships. and yeeld themselves to the Basha; and received like answer.

I small Aga broke off this idle speech, by telling me he was come from the Basha, with expresse order from him to conduct me and all my people to Zenan, and therefore willed mee to fenda-boor! for warme clothes, for that wee should find it very cold in the Mountaine Countrey. I prayed him if it were possible that my poore men might bee fent ab ord, and that I and some 20 few more might be fent vp. Hee faid it was not in him to remedie it, for it was the Bashas order we should all goe vp: Regib Aga faid I should have my defire, that I and five more should goe vp with me, and the rest must abide where they are, till further order from the Basha. This was the eighteenth day of December.

This twentieth day, Captaine Dounton in the Pepper-Corne, came into the Road from Aden: I writ to him my minde, what I thought fitted to be done.

è. III.

Sir Henrie Midleton, and foure and thirtie others, fent to the Basha at Zenan. Description of the Countrey, and Occurrents till their returne.

Decemb. 22.

Capt Dounten

the road of

Sir Herry Midleren, and 34.  $En_{S}L$  fh uen were lent to The ef-ape of great friend to The Conful of the Barrians, and Tookebar, friendship to v

Ties a cirie four daves iou-ney from He two and twentieth of December, our Irons were knockt off all our legges, faue the Carpenters and Smithes, and some sicke men that were not able to trauell the Carpenters and Smithes were kept there to build up the Pinnaffe; and my felfe, and foure and thirtie persons more of vs, were appointed to goe vp for Zenan, the chiefe Citie of the Kingdome, where the Basha is resident. About four eof the clocke we set out of Moba, all my Company beeing mounted upon Ailes, and my felfe and M. Femel upon Horfe-backe. About ten # of the clocke in the night, being tenne or twilue miles from Moha, Master Pemberton slipt away from vs; we miffed him our felues prefently, but faid not any thing, the belt helpe we were able to doe him, he had; which was in befeeching God to fend him fafe aboord, for the attempt was very desperate. About one of the clocke after midnight, we came to our Inne at a Towne called Monfil: they told vs all at our comming thither; yet miffed not him that was wanting. We continued in this lodging till foure of the clocke in the afternoone the next day. At our letting out of doore they told vs, and found one missing: the Aga inquired of me how many we were that fet out of Moba. I told him I could not well tell, but as I thought we were foure and thirty of vs: he faid, we were fine and thirtie, and that one was missing : I faid, it was more then I did know. The chiefest cause that mooued M. Pemberton to take this desperate action in hand, was to see so 50 many of vs carried up together manacled, with a Captaine, and a guard of Souldiers to conduct vs, which he could imagine to no other end, then death or captivitie, which was the opinion of vs all. I found a great friend of one Hamet Aga, who tent me divers Prefents, and willed me to be of good comfort, for my cause was good : he sent me and my people proussion of Bread for out iourney, and withall his letters to the Kaha.

Likewise, the Conful of the Bannians, who came every day to visit me, and never came empty handed, and Tookehar was our great friend all the time we were there prisoners, and every day failed not to fend to each man, being one and fiftie in number, two cakes or white bread, and a quantitie of Dates, or Plantans : he departed from Moba two dayes before vs for Zenan, promifing me at his departure to doe all he could with the Basha for our good: which promite, I thinke, he well performed: for at Zenan I was told by divers, he laboure a hard in our buanefic, both with the Basha and his Cayba, which is a verie discreet man, and gouernes the Kingdome.

We arrived at the Citie of Ties (which is foure dayes journey from Moha) vpon Christmas

day; where we were marshalled into the Citie two and two in a ranke, as they doe at * Stambola with captiues taken in the warres, our Aga riding in triumph as a great Conquerour, beeing met a mile out of the Towne with the chiefe men of the Citie on Horle-back, multitudes of peo- Great cold in ple standing all the way gazing and wondering at vs. thus were we vied in all Cities and Townes the mountains. we pailed through. A youth of M. Pembertons tell ficke in this Towne, and was left with the nordfull. Gouernour thereof, for that he was not able to trauell. I kept no Journal from this time forward; Zenan is in fixbut this I remember, we found it very cold all the way from Tyes to Zenan, our lodging being the trendegrees cold ground; I bought most of our men, which were senderly clothed, furred gownes to keepe fifteenemithem from the cold; otherwise, I thinke, they would have started. I would not believe at Mo-nutes. 10 ha, when I was told of the cold wee should have ypwards, and that made me goe but thinly clothed my lelfe; but experience taught me otherwaies, withing when it was too late. I had come better prouided. Zenan is from Maba an hundred and eightie miles, or thereabouts, as I judge, North North-west. It is in the latitude of fixteene degrees fifteene minutes, which I observed by an inftrument I made there.

CHAP. 11. S. 3.

Every morning the ground was covered with horie frost: and in Zenan wee had Ice a finger Ice a finger thicke in one night, which I could hardly have believed, had I not feene it. Wee were fifteene thicke in one dayes betweene Moha and Zenan. The fifth of January two houres before day, we came within night in Zenan. two miles of the Citie, where we lay vpon the ground till it was faire day, being much pinched. They were fifby the cold, not beeing able fearer to frand we were so benummed. About a mile from the Towne teenedayes in 20 we were met by the Subbaffie or Sheriffe, with at least two hundred Shot, Drummes, and Trumpets: we were caused to goe one by one in order, a prety distance one from the other, to make the better shew; our men had their gownes taken from them, and were caused to march a foote in their thinne and ragged fuites: the fouldiers lead the way, after came our men one by one; our Trumpeters were placed next before me, and commanded by the Aga to found; but I forbad them: after the Trumpets came M. Femei and my ielfe on Horfe-backe; and lastly came our Aga riding in Triumph, with a spare horse richly furnished led before him. In this order wee were led through the heart of the Citie till we came to the Cafile, all the way beeing to full of peo. The Cafile, ple, we could hardly palle for them. At the first gate, there was a good guard of armed foldiers: the second gate had two great pieces of Ordnance, readie mounted at the entry thereof: after we

30 had passed this gate, we came to a spacious yard, twice the length of the Exchange in London; the fouldiers at the entry of the Gate discharged their shot, and placed themselves amongst many others that were there before them, some on the one side, and some on the other, and a lane left in the middest. At my first comming in I alighted, and was placed on the one fide with my men; where I had not staid long, but I and M. Femel were brought before the Basha: it was their Di. Their comnano or Counfell day: at the vpper end of the yard, we mounted vp a paire of flaires fome twelve the Bafia. fleps high: at the head thereof, two great men came and tooke me by the wriftes, and held mee very hard, and so led me to the Basha. The place where he was seated, was a long spacious gallery; at the upper end thereof he was feated alone, many great men standing on each side of him. and others stood on either side, from the lower part of the Gallery to the vpper end, which made

48 a good shew the floore was couered all ouer with Turkie Carpets. When I came within two yards of him, we were flayed; He, with a frowning and angry countenance, demaunded of what Countrey I was, and what I made in those parts ! I answered, I was an Englishman, and a Merchant, and friend to the Grand Senior, and came to feeke trade. He faid, It was not lawfull for any Christian to come into that Countrey, and that he had given warning to Captaine Sharpeigh, that no more of our Nation should come thither. I told him, Captaine Sharpeigh was cast away * Stambol or vpon the Coast of India, and came not to England to tell vs so much, which had we knowne, wee stambola, or would neuer haue put our felues into that trouble we were in: I told him Regib Aga was the man Siamboli, 52 that had abused me, in telling me we were welcome into the Countrey, and that we should have correction and corruption of as free trade as our Nation had in any part of Turkie, with many other faire promites, and that the Greeke

50 contrary to his word he affaulted vs with armed fouldiers, and murthered diners of my men, and words, see That tooke me and the rest prisoners: he said, Regib Aga was but his slave, and had no such power as about, which to passe his word to me without his leave, and what was befallen to me and my people, was by the Greeks vied his order to Regib Aga; and that he himselfe likewise had such order from the Gran Senior, so to speake of their going chastife all Christians that should come into those parts. I told him we had received great harme, thicker, that is. and if it pleased him to let vs returne to our ships, it would bee sufficient warning to our Nation, to the citic, to for euer comming in those parts againe. Hee faid, No, hee could not so let vs depart, but that I calling nof for ener comming in those parts againe. He et aid, 140, nee count not to test a depart, out that fpecialleminould fit there and write my letters to the Ambaliador at Stambola, and he would likewife write fpecialleminone about one eabout one e to the Gran Senior, to know his pleasure what should become of vs, or whether he would permit ther Cities is vs trade, or no: he dismissme for that present, and bad me goe to my lodging which was appoin- Athensis at this

60 ted for me, and take with me foure or fine more, such as I thought good: I and thole I made choise day contracted ted for me, and take with me foure or nue more, nuch as 1 thought good; I and mole I must tunde of one of, were conveyed to the Keper of the prilos houfe, and the refle carried to the common prilos nice. The message of the reflection where for their welcome they were clapt in waightie Irons; one of our youths at fuch time as 1 mm is 3 fluir welcome. The reflection of th was brought before the Basha, thinking I was so led to have my head strook off, fel in a found with cost of Fra ort.

256

very feare, thinking his turne would not bee long after; hee fell ficke vpon it, and shortly after

The fixth of Ianuary, I was fent for to the Basha Caya, or Lieftenant generall of the King. dome, to breake fast with him : after breake-fast I told him enery particular, how treacherously and vilely I was vied by Regib Aga; he bad me be of good cheare, and not thinke of things past. which could not be remedied; and he doubted not but all would be wel in the end, and his best endeauours to do me good should not be wanting. Shermall the Bennian of Moha, had made this man our friend; then I departed with my Keepers to prison, where I was of better comfort then before. The feuenth day, I was fent for to the Caphan garden, where he feafted me and M. Femel, telling me, that fhortly I and my people should have libertie, and be sent to Moha, where I should 10 haue redresse of all my wrongs, promiting me to be my friend, and before many great Personages, Turker and Arabs faid, what kindnesse he did me was onely for Gods fake; but I well knew it was in hope of fome great reward from me. Hamet Aga his letter did vs no small good. This day came to towne a Moore of Carro, an old at quaintance of the Bastones, and one that had lent him day came to towne a proper or carro, an ou a tquantrance of the significant one that had lent him great firmmes of money at his comming from Stambola, when he was but poore: this man was friend. our next neighbour at Moha before, and when we were betrayed, and had a ship in Moha roade. bound for India, which he greatly doubted our ships would have taken, in regard of the wrongs offered vs, but they let her quietly depart, contrary to his expectation, fo that hee became our great friend: he writ his letter in our behalfe to the Basha, and therein did much blame him in v. ting vs fo hardly, faying, he went about to destroy the Countrey and trade, in taking such cour- 20 fes with vs. at his comming before the Basha, he iterated what he had written, and much more willing him to haue a care, the Trade of the Red Sea were not destroyed by his meaner, and therefore counfelled him to returne me all my goods, and to fend me and my people away contented. His letter prevailed much with the Balha: for when he sent for vs vp, it was his purpose to have put vs to death, and to have made flaves of all the reft : none in the Country durft ipeake so boldly as he. Of this which I have written concerning the Moore of Cayro, was I enformed by Sher. mall and Hamet Waddy, who were both present at reading the letter, and likewise heard the conserence betweene the Balha and him. This Hamet Waddy is an Arabian Merchant, very rich dwelling at Zenan, and is called the Bashas Merchant: he stood my friend very much, in perswading the Basha that we might be kindly dealt withall, and suffered to depart. The eighth, I made petition to the Basha, requesting, That whereas at my comming from Moha, I had willed the Commanders of my (hips to forbeare hostilitie for fine and twentie daies, and after to vse their discretions, if in that time they heard not from me; the time beeing almost expired, that the Basha would vouchsate speedily to censure my cause, or give me some comfortable news to write them, to flay them from doing harme, to which they might eafily encline, being without Head or Gouernour. The eleuenth day, I was fent for to the Cayba, who told me that now all things were ended, and that my flay there was for the rest of my company which were comming from Aden, and that presently after their comming up, we should all be sent to Moha.

The feuenteenth, M. Fowler and eighteene more of their Company arrived at Zenan; they were M. tower, and prefently brought before the Basha, and such like questions demanded of them as hee did eighteen more presently brought before the Basha, and such like questions demanded of them as hee did eighteenmoit process. Fowler, John Williams, and Robert Mico were sent to keep me company, and arrived at Zeo of me. Afterward, M. Fowler, John Williams, and Robert Mico were sent to keep me company, and all the reft to the Common prison to the rest of my men, where they were all put in irons, and their allowance from the Basha, browne bread and water, they would have all died with hunger and cold, had not I releised them better then the Basha.

The twentie fifth, I was fent for to the Cahays garden, where we spent some houres in conference: he told me I should presently goe with him to the Bashaes garden, where the Basha would have conference with me: he counfelled me to footh him vp with faire words, and not croffe him in any thing; I asked him what he thought, whether he would furrender me all my goods: he faid, he could not tell: I asked him whether I thould have my Pinnasse againe : he faid likewise 40 he could not tell but in any case he willed me not to speake of it to the Basha, but at my comming to Moba to write my letters to him, and he would folicite the Basha in my behalfe, and doubted not but to obtaine it for me: I told him, I thought it fitter to demand it now, then hereafter; for that I was defirous to know what to trust vnto: he bad me vse my discretion. The chiefest cause that made this man our friend, was for a summe of money which I had promifed to give him: he would not be seene to meddle therein himselfe, but appointed Shermall, Consult of the Bannians, to treat with me concerning the same : he demaunded much, and I was willing to part with nothing. We spent three or soure dayes consulting this businesse, in the ende I was constrained to giue them content, in promiting after my deliuerie to pay him fifteene hundred Venetiannes: which beeing done, the Cayba tooke Horie and rid to the Balhaes garden, and bad our Truchman 60 bring me and M. Femel thither. When we came to the garden doore', wee staied an houre before we were admitted to the Bashaes presence : we found him seated in a Summer-house, in a chaire, his Capha standing at his right hand, and halfe a douzen others at the backe of the Chaire. I was lead by two men, which held me by the cloake till I came within two paces of him; and there they flayed me, M. Femel comming behind me at libertie, without his leaders : he demaunded of me how I did, and bad me be of good cheare, for that shortly I and all my people should have their libertie, and be fent to Moba, where I with twentie nine more should remaine, till all the ships of India were come into Moba, and the rest to be sent aboord; and when all the faid thips were come in, and the winds fetled Westerly, I and the rest of my company should be permitted to go aboord, and proceed on our Voyage to India. I belought him he would not detaine to many of vs : he answered, thirtie haue I spoken, and thirty shall stay : then I demaunded, if our goods should be surrended; he answered, no: for they were all put to the Gran Seniors accompt. Ide-10 maunded my Pinnasse, he said likewise she was put to the same accompt. I told him, divers prousions belonging to the ships were aland at Moha, and defired I might have them surrendered: he faid I should: then I spake to M. Femel, willing him to speake againe that our goods might be surrendered; which he did, and was answered as I was: then I prayd him to affure me of one thing, and that was, whether all my people should be permitted to depart abourd the ships, the time of our abode being expired, he promifed me vpon his word, not any one should be stayed, but be all fent abourd, and all things, had I a Turke to my flane, hee would not detaine him : for which his kindnesse I gaue him thankes : then he beganne to excuse himselse, praying his owne milde nature, in that it was our haps to fall into his hands, he had dealt mercifelly and fauourably with vs, which had it been in the time of any of his Predeceffors, we had all fuffered death for our prethe symmetrian recent the control of the form of the f Bathaes of Carro and Snachen, and the Sheriffe of Mecca, who had certified the Gran Senior at of the Bathas the being here of the Ascension and her Pinnaile, that they had bought all the choice ware of India, of Cairo and whereby his customes were much diminified and would be the country and by T. whereby his cultomes were much diminished, and would be the ouerthrow of the Trade of these gainst the En-Seas, if it were permitted; and therefore wished it might be carefully looked vnto: whereupon sife. the Gran Senior dispatched his letters with a commandement to him, That if any more Englishmen, or any other Christians did come into those parts, to conficate their ships and goods, or to kill or captinate all the men they could get into their power : but he minded not to deale so with me, but more fauourably, in permitting vs without farther harme to returne to our ships, hoping

The first of February, I and M. Femel were sent for to the Cayha, who gaue me counsell to goe February 13 to the Basha, to bid God gine him ioy of his late received Dignitie: which was, the Gran Senior 1610. had made him a Vizir, and fent him letters of great fauour, with a Sword, and rich Robes belon- The Basha ging to a Vizir, which Robes and Sword are a confirmation of him in so high a place and calling. These Presents from the Gran Sensor, were received two daies before with great solemnitie: and the party that brought them, was met by the Basha, and all the chiefe of the Citie, with all the fouldiers, horse and foote, fixe miles without the Towne. Where a Tent was set vp, where the Basha distrobed himselfe, and vested him in those which were sent him by his Master; and so in 40 great pompe came riding through the Citie to his owne house: I and others of my company, by the appointment of the Cayba, had a place appointed vs, where we did fee his comming into the Citie: our Trudgman, by the appointment of the Capha, conducted vs to the Vizirs house, where we stayd not long, but were admitted to his presence: I told him, my comming was onely to see him, and to congratulate his new received honour, and to pray God give him joy : hee gave mee thanks, and had me be merry: for what he had promifed me, he would performe, and be better to me then his promile: he was very pleafant, and tooke this our comming kindly and fo, as a great fauour, Master Femel and I were permitted to kiffe his hand, and dismissed, returning to our lod-

it would be a warning, that neither we nor any other of our Nation, would repaire thither any

Many of our people in the meane while fell ficke and weake through griefe, cold, naughtie Ourmenfet 30 aire, bad diet, euill lodging, and waightie Irons; I neuer ceased foliciting the Capha, till hee arlibertie. had procured their liberty out of that loathfome prifon, to that the eleuenth day they were all free of prison and Irons, and had a house in the Towne, and libertie to walke abroad, and take the fresh aire: also the next day the Casha sent me halfe a dozen of Beefes, to bestow among my men; so that in fewe dayes all of them, I thanke God, recoursed their former health and strength. The Cayba informed me, that Regib Aga had writearneftly to the Balha, that we might all be fent downe to Aden, and there taken into our ships: by which meanes his Towne of Moha, and such fhips of India as should passe the Bab, should be secure from danger or any harme our ships might doe them. This wicked counsell had prevailed with the Basha, had not God raysed the Casha for our good to periwade the contrary.

The feuenteenth in the morning early, the Cayha fent for me, M. Femel, and others, and told me, the next morning I and my people should depart for Moha. After wee had broke fast, hee brought vs to the Basha to take our leaues: he beganne againe to extoll his owne elemencie, and the power of the Gran Senior, faying, he had a long Sword, straightly charging me I came no more . into those Seas: adding, that neither Christian nor Lutheran might come thither, no, though they had the Gran Seniors Passe: for so had he commanded him: then I requested, it any of our Nation came thi her, before I could give adulte to England, that they might not be betrayed, as I was, but Plainely denied Trade, that they might know what to trust to, and to be permitted quietly to depart; which my request he would in no wife grant: then I intreated him to write to Regib Aga, to effect what he had promifed me, otherwise he being my mortall enemy, would wrong me and my people: he answered with great pride, Is not my onely word sufficient to turne a whole Citie vpfide downe? if Reg.b Aga wrong you, I will pull his skin ouer his eares, and give you his head: is he not my flaue? and therewithall appointed the Cayba to write my dispatch. Idemanded answer of his Majesties letter, but he would give me none. This done, I departed. I told the Carba I had neuer a weapon, and therefore I defired leaue I might buy a Sword, and ride downe 10 as I came up like a prisoner: he acquainted the Basha therewith, and he sent mee one of his cash Swords. The Casha also this morning gaue me an hundred perces of gold of fortie Madines the peice: and fiftie pieces had he given me not many dayes before: fo that I received from him in all an hundred and fiftie peices of gold, and from the Basha nothing but his rusty Sword: the Carba is of a liberall disposition, and the Basha exceeding conetous: if any man be knowne to bee nich, he had need to carrie himfelfe v prightly: otherwaies the least occasion will cost him his head, that the Basha may enjoy his goods, as lately befell a rich Aga, whom he caused privately to becraelly murthered, and prefently after seazed vpon all he had.

They depart

The eighteenth, I paid all duties of the Prison, and went to the Cashas Garden, where wee brake our fast, received my dispatch, and a Letter to the Governour of Aden for re-deliverie of 20 the Pepper-Cornes Boate; I requested his Letter to the Gouernour of Tayes for delivery of 2 Youth of Matter Pembersons, which was I ft ticke there, (I was informed hee was inforced to turne Turke, hee writ his Letter and fealed it: the effect I know not) which being done I tooke my leave and departed : my felfe, Master Femell, and Master Fowler were mounted on Horses, and all the rest upon Asses and Camels, we had two (bauses to conduct vs , and a Horseman, the o-

The deferipti-

This Citie is somewhat bigger then Bristoll, of good building of stone and lime, with Churches or Meskits: it is enauroned with a mudde wall full of Battlements and Turrets. On the West-side there is a great deale of spare ground enclosed within the walles, there they have their Gardens, Orchards, and Houses of pleature, it standeth in a barren and stony Valley, with high 30 Hils enclosing it, not being farre off, whereof one which is to the Northward ouer-looketh the Towne, whereon is built a small Castle, to keepe it from the mountaine people, who accustomed from thence to offend the Citie. It hath no water but Wel-water, which they digge deepe for; Wood is very scarce, and fetcht from farre, and very deare; In the Easter-most part is the Caftle inclosed with mudde Walles full of Turrets, in which Turrets every night they place their Watch, which keepe fuch a hollowing one to another all night long, that a man that is not acq ainted which it can hardly fleepe; the Basha and some other principa I men dwell within this Castle Wall, the Keepers Houle wherein I was imprisoned, soyneth to the wall, and at the foote of the Wall is a spacious yard, wherein a great number of people, for the most part Women and Children, are kept Prifoners or Pledges, to keepe their Parents, Husbands, and Allies 40 from Rebellion. The Boyes while they be little goe loofe in the yard, but after they bee come to bignedle they are clapt in Irons and carryed to a firong Tower, where there bee many more kept in like case, there they remayne during the Bashas pleasure, those Women and Children which remayne in the yard line in little Cottages, which they have made of purpole, the Children goe for the most part naked, without it be very cold, and then have they Sheep-skinne Coates to keepe them warme, they be as wilde and rade as if they were brought vp in the Mountaines. This night we arrived at Siam distant from Zenan fixteene miles : which is a small Towne with a Cattle vpon the fide of a Hill, the place and Countrey about it is very barren, and yeeldeth fmall reliefe to Trauellers.

Sion a (mall Towns and Caftle.

About midnight we departed from Zenan, and the next day being the nineteenth, we came to 10 Surage, about ten a clocke in the forenoone: it is likewise a small Village distant from Siam about eighteene miles, the Countrey barren and the people poore, and goe almost naked, faue a cloth about their waftes reaching downe to their knees. We departed from hence at mid-night,

Wee came to Damare the twentieth, about eight of the clocke in the morning; it is a Citie bailt of lime and stone, but separated in fine parts one a prettie distance from the other, so that it seemeth to be so many Villages. It is seated in a spacious Valley or Plaine, having plantie of water and all kind of graine, with all other prouision for sustenance both for themselves and their poore Neighbours, who live in great penurie and want. It is diffant from Surage twentie miles. We tarryed heere two dayes by order of Abdela Chillarby, the Bashas Cayba, who is Gouernour of this Province. The two and twentieth, we departed from Damare about two aclocke after mid-night, and came to Ermin betimes, it being a small Village and diffant from Damare some fifteene miles. The three and twentieth, we arrived at Naqual Samare, being a common Inne for all Travellers. The Turkes call them Cenfors; which are built at the cost of the Gran Signior, for the reliefs of Travellers. There be many of thele Confors betweene Moha and Zenan, this Confor is teated in the middle of a very steepe hill called Nachhi famar, and some few scattering poore houses about it, vpon the top of this hill is a great Catile, wherein the Gouernour of the Prounce winch is an Arabian dwelleth. There craggie Mountaine Countries, are for the most pare governed by the Arabiars, for the people of these Mountaines cannot rooke the proud and infolent Government of the Turkes: no Turke may passe this way, neither vpward nor downeward without a Pasport of the Governour of the Province from whence they come, this Cerfor is diffant from Erwin, fome fourteene miles.

The foureand twentieth wee arrived at Mobader, which is a little Village at the foot of Mobader linde 10 the great hill, being distant from Nacke' Jamar, some thirteene miles. Our (binfes had warrant Village. from the Bafba, to take vp Affes for our men to rice vpon, which accordingly they performed ouer-night; but the next morning the Arabians lay in ambush in the way, and in despight of our Chauses tooke their Asses away, neither of our Guardians daring to give them a foule word. The flue and twentieth, being arrived at Rabattamaine a Cenf r with some Cottages and shops an lance. adioyning thereunto: it is feated on the tide of a hill and is diffant from Mahader fixteene miles, groweth Poppie, whereof they make their Oppum : but it is not good.

The fixe and twentieth, we arrived at a Compbe house in the middle of a Plaine: it is called Merfadin, Merfadine, and diffant from Rabattamaine fixteene miles.

The seuen and twentieth, we arrived at Tayer, being a Citie of halfe the bignesse of Zenan, Tagesa Citie. 20 and walled round with a mud wall : here we stayed all this day and the next, in which time of my abode there, I vied the best meanes I could for recovery of a Youth of Master Pembertons. whom the Governour Hames Asa had forced to turne Turke, and would by no meanes depart with him, B it Walter Talbot having the Turkib Tongue was permitted to speake with him in a Chamber amongst other Boyes and Youthes, who weeping, faid vnto him he was no Turke but was deluded by chem, they telling him that I and all my people were put to death at Zenan, and if he would turne he shoul faue his life, but he would not yeeld vnto them : But afterward fome of the Agaes teruants carrying him to a Hot-house, when they had him naked circumcifed him perforce. When I law I could not get him, I delivered Abde'a Chillare, the Carbos Letters, which was, if that he was not turned he should deliver him me. When the Aga had read this Letter, 30 he told me the effect faying, that Letter was warrant fufficient for keeping of him. I fufp: Red the Letter was to that effect when it was given me, and that made me not deliver it at first. This Citie standeth in a Valley vn er very high hils; and vpon the top of one of the highest hils is a faire and firong Cafile : all kind of victuall is very cheape here, in the Countrey thereabouts is made some Indico, but what quantitie or of what good neile I could not learne. This Citie is very Indicomade pop. lous, and to is all the Countrey and Cities we trauelted through.

The first of March, we departed and came to Enfras about noone, being fixteene miles from Much 1.1610 Tayes; the Country we transiled Mountainous and Honey. The Towne little, feituate on the Enfrat. fide of a hill. About the fift of Ianuary great multi ude of people reforteth hither from farre, where they doe some foolish Ceremonies to one of their Saints and hely men, which lyeth bu-

40 ried there: which being done they goe all in company to Mecca on Pilgrimage. The Governout of this Towne is a Tw ke, and vied mee and my people very kindly at our going vp, and hearing of my comming downe, he fent one fixe miles to a place, where two wayes meete, to bring vs to his Towne, where we were most kindly vied by him.

The second, we departed thence and lodged at a Confor called Assambine, some eleven miles Assambine; from Eufras Here is no Towne but a few poore Cottages.

The third, we went from thence and came to another Confor some thirteene miles off: it is called Accomoth standing in a barren common with a few Cottages by it.

The fourth in the marning, we departed thence and came to Morfe, fruenteene miles from Moufe 2 towns. Accomoth: the Country we transited plaine and barren, and small store of Inhabitants. The 50 Towns of M . fa .s not great, and vinwalled, but very populous. It is feituate in a plaine indiferent frintfull; hereabouts likewife is made fome Indico. Wee departed thence about mid-night.

The fift in the morning about eight of the clocke we came to Moha. We refled two or three Moha houres by the way at a Church or Coughe house called Dabully built by a Dabull Merchant. It we had not stayed here, we had come to Moha before day. A mile without the Towne, we were met by our Carpenters. Smithes, and fuch others as were detayned there, the day before their Irons were taken oil, and they had libertie to walke abroad. The first question I demanded was to know what became of Malter Pember on. They told mee hee lighted upon a Cannoa and got a'boord, wheret I was not a little gladifor I was very doubtful never to have feen him more. At the Townes ends, and all the way to the Agas house, the people flood very thicke, and as wee pas-

60 I.d by bad vs welcome backe, for it was nothing pleating to the people of the Country to heare how treacher only the Turkes had wied vs : we rid till wee came to the Agu house where wee alignte, my leife, Master Femell, Master Fowler, were brought before him, where I delicered my I et ers from Zenan, He received me after his wonted dissembled shew of love and kindnesse, bidding me and the reft welcome, faying, he was glad of our returne fafe, and forrie and ashamed nothing but what his Mafter commanded him. I foothed him vp, but beleeved nothing he faid.

he read the command of the Basha, and faid all things should be performed accordingly. Whereupon he called in for Breaketaft, and cauted us to fit downe with him, bidding mee eate and bee mer ryf: or now he had eate Bread and Salt with me, I need not doubt of any harme. After break-fait, he went to feeke for a House for me, we had a faire large house appointed vs neere the Sea-fide, where we continued two dayes, but afterward wee were removed from thence to a great ftrong House, standing all alone in a spacious Church-yard in the middle of the Towne : and for our Guard a Captaine and his Company were appointed to that charge, who warded all the remooued from our first house, was because it was too neere the water side, they doubting from close by the Sea-fide in a falt, fandy, barren soyle. The Gouernours house is close by the waters

This Towne of Moha is one third part leffe then Tayes, vnwalled, very populous, and feated day, & by night our house was enclosed round with his armed Souldiers. The caule why we were 10

d. IIII.

Indian shipping at Moha; Sir Henry Middletons escape from the Turkes, and enforcing fatisfaction.

Prill the first, 1611. the Darling departed for Affab, with leave every ten dayes to re- Aprill 1.1611. turne, to fee how I did: this his vinlooked for kindnesse I hoped in God would bee a meanes to worke my freedome. The second, came into the roade another ship of Da- Another ship bul, full of people. The Nobuda rid about the Towne in a painted coate, as the manner of Dabul.

is. These robes are but lent them for the present, and afterward returned to the keeper of the Ward-robe, to whom belongs a dutie for lone of them. The thirl, came a lebba from Aden, which brought the Pepper-cornes Boat.

CHAP. 11. S.4.

The fourth day, came an other ship of Dabul, which laded at Achin with Pepper: these three Thethird ship great ships belong all to the Gouernour of Dabul, who is a Persian, and a great Merchant, and of Dabul, hath many ilaues, whereof Melick Amber is one, and is in great credit with him: he had the managing of the goods belonging to these three ships; he is a Negro, borne in Habs fe, and might cost his Master fifteene or twenty royalls of eight, and now neuer goeth out of his doores, but with great troopes of followers, like some great Lord.

The fixth, I fent to the Casha Abdela Chillarby a faire peice, and a small barrell of powder, 20 which I promited to fend him at my comming from Zenan. The feuenth, came from India a small Another small ship laden with cotton. The eleventh, came from India two small barkes Mallabars, of one of the Indian ship. Iles of Maldinia: the chiefe of them came often to visit me, till he was forbidden by the Aga our enemie. The tweltth, there came two Barks from India: for then the wind was Westerly; which continued fo for fine dayes, and afterwards came to the South South-east againe. The fourteenth, came in a small Barke laden with Cotten, for the Bannians. The fifteenth, came another from Baffanor: the Nobuda came to visit me at my house, which the Aga repined at. The seventeenth, came into the Towne a great many Cammels, and divers Merchants, which came from Damasco, Sues, and Mecca, to trade with the Merchants of India. The nineteenth, came in a Merchants of ship and a barke of Cananor, the Captaine of the great ship came to visit mee with great troopes Danasco, Suis, 30 following of him: which the Agaitomaking, fent for him whiles he was talking with mee, and and Mecca. forbad such resort vnto me. The twentieth, came in a ship of Calicus and the Darling. The three and twentieth, came in a small barke of the Kings of Zacotora, which came from Goa.

nd twentieth, came in a imali parket the angine are finded of all our proceedings in those The second of May, 1611. Idispatched Letters for England of all our proceedings in those May, 1611. parts: one Copy to the English Conful at Aleppo, and another to the French Conful at Corre-which letters I deliuered to a Guzerat. The tenth, came in a small barke from the coast of Surebellor Magadoxo, with Slaues, Elephants teeth, Amber: there had wont to come euery yeare hither from thence foure barkes with like lading, but this yeare would come no more, for that their Countrey are in warres, and the Portugals had burned their shipping. These men buy their Negross and Amber at Cancamarra, in S. Laurence, where Captaine Rowles was taken and betrayed; S. Laurence, 40 we enquired of them if they could informe vs of any thing touching him. Also this day about where Captain noone came in the Darling, and according to her wonted order shot off a peice for a Boat; the shot Renks Captof grazed upon the water to the Towne-wards, whereat the Aga was displeased; but gaue leaue I the Union was might fend aboord. I writ my letter, and fent one of my feruants aboord with it, commanding him betraicd. to tarry aboord, and come no more ashore, and withall to tell M. Pemberton, hee should not tend his Boat a land till he heard further from me.

The eleuenth in the morning, at the dawning of the day, the Aga with all the chiefe men of the Towne, were rid abroad in great state to his Garden to be merrie: which I seeing, did not a little glad my heart, and gaue God thanks, which offered me so faire meanes to put that in pra-Etife, which long before I had determined : For Hamet Aga, and others had told mee the Basha

50 would not performe his word, but for feare. I writ my letter to M. Pemberton, wherein I certified him, I minded as this day to make an escape aboord, and that I would convay my selfe into an The Indian emptie But, and so be carried downe to the Boat as an emptie Caske: and therefore willed him thips were the Boat should be sent with all speed, manned with choice men; and withall to send me a bottle come in and of Aquanita, and an other of wine, to make drunke my Keepers; which he accordingly performed: the Torkes before I made M. Femel acquainted with my determination, I made him fweare vnto me to be fecret, and to vie no periwasions with me, to with-draw my mind from that I had resoluted upon: hut many apwhereupon I shewed him what I had written to M. Pemberson; and withall, shewed him how paranceuidea that himselfe and others should walke out of the Towne to the water side, to such a place as hee cess that they well knew, and I appointed, where I would not faile, God fending mee into the Boat, to take never should 60 him and the rest in. Also I acquainted him, that the Carpenters and others I had approinted to Addition to embarque themselves to the South-ward of the Towne, where lay a Boat hard by the shore, with shore has a mast and sayle ready fitted for their purpose; but withall, I had given the Carpenters warning escape. not to embarque themselues, till such time as they saw the shippes Boat put off from the Bridge. All things forting out well to our purpose, the Subasha (which was our guardian, and left thence we might attempt an escape.

The description of Atoba.

The Darling came into the

Roade

fide, and here by the same is the Key or Bridge which shooteth a prettie distance into the Sea: to which Key all Boates belonging to any thipping, are eniouned to land for feare of itealing of Custome. And close adjoying to the Key is a platforme, whereon are planted some doczen of Braile Peeces, at the Wetterne end of the Towne there is a Fort wherein is the like quantitie of Ordinance: this Fort was ruinate at our first comming thither, but since pulled downe to the ground and new builded. This after-noone came the Darling into the Roade, who broughtys 20 newes of the wel-fare of the rest, which was no small comfort to me after so many troubles.

The fixth, Nobuda Melech Ambor, Captaine of a great thip of Dabull, which came into the The Captaine Road two dayes before my arrivall at Moba, came ashore with a great many of Merchants with of a thip of Da him, he with the rest were carryed about the Towne in pompe, and afterwards feasted by the Aga. I likewife was tent for to this Feast and entertayned with all loue and friendship. The Aga in presence of them all called for the Alcoran, kissed it, and voluntarily swere and protested, that he ought me no euill will but wished me all good, and would endeuour himselfe to pleasure me the best he could, his heart being cleere of malice or hatred, and was much grieued for what was past: I returned him thankes, seeming greatly satisfied therewith, although I gave no credit thereto, but was forced to indure with patience what I could not remedie, till it pleafed God 10

The feuenth day, the Aga made a great Feast at his Garden-house for the Dabullians, to which I and Mafter Femell were likewise inuited. The Dabullians were all mounted upon gallant Horses with rich Furniture, and we vpon a couple of tyred lame lades, which wee brought

The eight, wee were all fent for to come before the Aga, my felfe with all the Merchants. Carpenters, Smithes, and others, whom he (to the number of thirtie) thought good, were appointed to flay aland; and the reft which were thirtie fixe, were fent abourd the Darling.

An excellent Roade on the Coast of Ha-

The ninth, had I made an escape, had I not beene more carefull for others, which I should have left behind me, then for my felfe. This day the Darling having taken in thirtie fixe menasa- 40 foresaid, and prouided of some necessaries they lacked, departed towards the other ships on the Coast of Habashe: where they had found out in the time of my absence an excellent Road, for all windes that blow in these Seas, it is called Assab Road, where they had wood and water enough cofting nothing but the fetching, the water is a little brackish, but seemed fresh enough to them that had leved in want thereof, the people of the Countrey bee as blacke as the Negroes of Guinea, they be all Mahometans alongft the Sea-coatt: but up in the Land they bee Christians and Subjects to Prester John, they goe almost naked saue a cloth about their waltes, which reacheth to their knees. They were at first comming of our people very fearefull, but after they were acquainted, and a peace confirmed by oath on both fides, they daily repayred with refreshing, as Brefes, Sheepe and Goates, and fold them for money at reasonable rates. And afterward 50 they defiring course Callico rather then money. I furnished them therewith from Moba: In trucke whereof they fold their Cattle farre better cheape then before for money, dealing faithfully and kindly with our people, notwithstanding the Turkes fought to worke them to the contrary, by meanes of small Barkes which passe to and fro. The King of this Countrey hath his abiding at a Towne lying upon the Sea-coast called Rahaita, some fortie miles to the Southwards neere the Bab, hee fent some of his chiefe men to the Commanders of the shippes with prefents, they returned them the like : who entertayned those which were fent very courteoutly, with promite of any thing his Countrey yeelded. Their vulgar speech is not understood by the Arabians, the better fort of them speake and write the Arabian Language, in which 60 Tongue their Law of Mahomet is written.

Rabaita.

· A. IIII.

CHAP.11. S.4.

in Towns onely to looke to me) fell to drinking hard at a Racky-house and I beeing doubtfull of any good performance from my enemies the Turker, had long bethought me of all the meanes I could deutle from time to time to make an escape, but could not light vpon any proiect. that had not apparent danger, both tomy felfe, and those that should attempt to escape away with me. Onely this denile it pleased God to put into my head, whereby I might bee secretly connected into the boat without beeing discourred for my Keepers and Souldiers eyes were onely vpon me, wherefoeuer I went: all the rest of my company might walke abroad any where by day time without suspition, or any great regard: I neuer went out of doores, but two or three fouldiers attended upon me wherefoeuer I went. The Boat being come, and Keepers all drunke. and all things fitted, about twelve a clocke at noone the Subasha returnes from the Aracke-house, and Ia being in one ende of our house, but a wall betweene vs, where his abiding was, the better to guard vs. I began to put my businesse in execution: and appointed the Carpenters to take others with them, and to go by two and two in the best manner they could to avoid suspition, and shift for themselues in the Boat aforesaid; but in any case not to meddle, before they saw the ships Boat under fayle. To M. Femel, and those that I appointed to take into Lee-ward of the Towne, I gave order likewise, to goe two or three in company along ft the Sea fide, to the place I had appointed them to take them in, and there to tarry my comming. After I had given these directions, I was conneied into my Tub, and fately fet aboord the Boat: which beeing done, I forced out the head of the Caske, and came aboord, causing them to beare vp with the leeward point, where I tooke in John Fowler, Beniamm Greene, Rowland Webbe, Ro. Mico, Ro. Convey William Bownes, John Wright, 28 Arthur Atkinson, Thomas Enans, lohn Wood, and Henry Fortune. M. Femel and other beeing too flacke in comming out of the Towne, were taken before they could come to the boat. The Towne beeing raifed, partly by the vndifcreet running of some of our people, and partly by seeing the Boat beare up to Leeward, contrary to their wonted course, M. Femel and those with him, had likewife escaped, had he come by land to the point, and not taken water, so soone as others which were both ficke and weake did, which were behind him when he tooke the water. I came to an anchor, and brought the Boat a ground in tarrying for them, to the no little danger of vs all: I caused men to leape ouer-board to reskue him, but before they could get a Pikes length from the Boat, he and those with him were all apprehended : M. Femel discharged a Pistoll in the face of one of them that hardly purfued him, and mortally wounded him before he was taken; it booted me not to flay longer, having all the Town in pursuit of me, and a very narrow and should channell to passe betweene a small fandie Iland, and the maine : it pleased God wee lighted vpon the

They in the Darling kept good watch in the tops, which fo foone as they faw the Boat under fayle, let flip and fet faile, bearing vp to Lee-ward, to have releised vs if need had bin: being come aboord, we espied the Boat wherein the Carpenters were comming towards vs: I sent the ship Boat to bring them and their Boat aboord of vs. In this Boat escaped George Collinson, Robert Pinis, Nathaniel Symonds, and John Taylor; but Walter Talbot, who was appointed to come with them, tarried fo long before he came, that the Boat was put off, he thought to fwim aboord, and 40 was drowned. About two houres after our comming aboord, came two poore Arabs in a Canoa, but so fearefull, they durk not come nigh the ship till they were wonne by faire words, and so with much adoe, one of them entered, and delivered me a letter from M. Femel, thewing that they were in great danger of beeing flaine or ipoyled by those that apprehended them, but some of the fouldiers, through former acquaintance, bearing them good will, faued them, and brought them to the Agaes, where they tarried his comming. At the first fight of them, he looked as pale as athes, telling them they should all loofe their heads, asking them how they durft attempt such a thing ? They answered, they came out of England under my command, and did nothing but what I had commanded, which in no wife they durit disobey. He againe threatned them with lose of their heads, and prefently caused them all to be chained by the necks, from which chaine they 50 were quickly released, at the intreaty of Nobuda Melicke Amber, & Nobuda Mahomet of Cananor, and others, and permitted to remaine in our former houle, but with aftronger guard then before. This their kindnes proceeded not of loue, but for feare of their ships in the road, which were then under my command. I returned answer of the letter, and sent the Aga word, that if he did not fend me all my people, with those prouisions of the ships which he detained contrary to the Bashaes fage to the Age. order ( for I minded not to be put off with Farriga) I would fire the ships in the road, and do my best to batter the Towne about his eares: likewise I sent word to the Nohudas, that they should not fend any Boat aboord the ships, without first comming aboord of me, and to acquaint mee right channell, which quickly brought vs into deepe water, and out of danger of our enemies for which his great mercie towards vs, his holy name bee bleffed and prayfed for euermore.

with their businesse, nor to carry any thing out of them aland, without my leaue and order. After my departure, there was no small disturbance in the Towne : the Aga not knowing 60 how to answer the Basha, feared it would cost him his head, the Subbasha which was my keeper at his wits end, and knew not whether he might stay or flee for his life. The Emeryor bahar (or Lord of the Sea as they terme him) in little better taking, beeing accused of consenting to my escape; one of our Porters tooke Sanctuary in one of their Churches, and would not be gotten out from thence till hee had his pardon, and the Nobudas and Merchants in great feare of losse of their thip and goods, most of them fending Presents of victuals, and refreshing to Master Femel and the rest, which before tooke scorne to speake to them. At night I sent the Boat well manned to carrie the newes to our ships, with order for their comming ouer with all speed. I plyed to wind-ward in the Darling, when the Tyde ferued, and rid a little without the great ship, to that I had her and all the rest under the command of our Ordnance.

The twelith, came abourd Nobuda Mahomet of Cananor with Letters, telling me the Aga was forrie I was to departed (which I knew to be true) for that he was determined within few dayes to haue fet mee at libertie, and all my people, to my owne content : and for the prountions to belonging to our ships which were ailiore, see would deliner them, but for my people hee could not deliuer them without order from the Basha, intreating fifteene dayes respite: in which time if I had not all my men in fafetie fent aboord, they defired no fauour. I told him likewife, I must have my Pinnasse surrendred me, for that I would not depart the Road without her; he sayd hee would acquaint the Aga with my demand of the Pinnasse, and doubted not but that I should haue her at the time limited. I yeelded to his request, you his promise that I should haue both men and Pinnalle within the time prefixed, I durst not as yet demand restitution or satisfaction for my goods, till tuch time as I had all our men from the shore. At his comming ashore, hee acquainted the Aga, that he had concluded a peace for fifteene dayes, ypon his promite that I should have my men and Pinnale restored within the same time. The Aga was very angry that I demanded the Pinnasse, and sent for Master Femell and Iohn Williams, and asked what I minded in demanding the Pinnaffe, which was the Bashas by agreement with mee, saying, I might as well demand the goods as the Pinnaffe, both which were put to the account of the Gran Signior: they faid I could not well proceed on my Voyage without the Pinnaffe, but for the goods they affured him I would neuer demand them; In the meane time, the Darlings Cables, Anchors, Pitch, Tarre, and other things being ashore, were brought aboord: And few dayes escaped that I had not one present or other of refreshing from the Aga, Dabbullian, and other, which would scarce take knowledge of me whilest I was ashore, but now glad to stater me. This morning early came a Boat from shore abourd the innermost ship: I caused the Gunner to make two shot at her, which caused them to come aboord mee. I threatned them if they did so any more to hang them, and 30 burne their ships; so that afterward they durst not attempt the like.

The thirteenth, the Increase and Pepper-Corne toward night came to anchor in the fight of the Roade : for they could not fetch in that night, the Lee-ward tyde beeing come against

The fourteenth, they got into the Roade and I went abourd the Increase, where I was receiued with great ioy of all my Company.

The eighteenth, there came into the Roade, a ship of Diu, belonging to Shermall the Shaharder, Aship of Diu, laden with India Commodities, which I did imbarque both people and goods, and caused her to ride hard by me. The next day being the nineteenth, at the intreatie of Shermall, I licensed all the people (faue fome few to looke to the ship) to goe ashore. This day being the twentieth day, 40 I heard nothing from the shore. The one and twentieth, Master Femell writ to me they had bin all chained by the neckes. The fine and twentieth, came aboord Nobuda Mahomet and certified me, that the Basha had giuen order for release of my people and Pinnasse, and promised to bring them abourd on the morrow. I shot off three Peeces at his departure. This day all our people ashore were chained by the neckes, and the next day released. The cause they were so vied they could not learne. The fix and twentieth, Nobuda Mahomet returned, faying, the Pinnaile was lanched, but the Aga would neither deliuer her nor the men, till I had given him a writing firmed by my felfe, and foure or fine more of the principall in our ships with oathes to performe the same, to contayne in effect a perfect peace with the Turker his Subjects and Indians, and not to meddle in so this Sea or elsewhere in reuenge of any thing that had passed, nor to demand restitution or satisfaction for any goods taken from me : I told him, I maruelled hee came every day with new matters, he had the day before promised, as this day to bring me all my men and Pinnasse abourd, which I looked to haue had performed, and for better fecuritie he and those with him should remayne Hostages abound till I had them, and therefore willed him to aduise the Aga: he all dged that he being imployed of his owne voluntary motion in this butinesse, should reape much discredit and be laught at for his forwardnesse, if he should write to that purpose, and therefore hee told me plaine he would not write whatfoeuer betyde him, but promifed, if I would give him such a Writing as he demanded and fend him ashore, he would bring me all my people abourd before night : I feeing I could get him by constraint to yeeld to nothing, thought best to give him 60 fome content, though it were fomewhat that might but carrie the name of what hee defired. I thereupon caused a Writing to be made in English, firmed by my selfe and flue more, contayning a briefe Relation of the treacherous viage of vs in this Countrey and nothing elic, wee fetting to our hands as Witnesses of truth of the same Writing : withall I sent aduice to Master Femell, escapetha-boord.

262

Sir H. Midleton

The rest of our

how he should interpret it vato them . I delivered him the Writing he defired, but sweare I would not, faying, my word should be cruer then a Turkes oath at all times. Ashore her went, leaving some of the better fort of his Company for Pledges, whom he bad hang if he brought me not all my Company aboord that night : comming alhore he handled the matter fo, that a little before night he returned with Mafter Femell, John Williams, Christopher Cuningham, Water Woodmard. John Clarke, Herry Bauldin, Edmund Glouer, Tobie Birch, Alexander James, and Merciline Long. field. Three of them were vetted, to wit, Matter Femell, John Williams, and Cuningham, with paltry Veils of little worth. Another was fent to me, which they faid came from the Balha, the Nobuda would have put it vpon my backe, defiring mee to weare it as a fauour lent me from the Basha : I refused it, telling him, I fcorned to weare any thing that should come from so vnconfcio. 10 nable a Dogge and my Enemie, by whose order I had received so much wrong; he seeing I would not take it, left it with my man and fo departed, carrying with him the Tarke taken in the Darling, which had remay ned aboord the Increase, till that present : hee promited to returne in the morning with our Pinnaffe.

The Pinnaffe

The leuen and twentieth, according to promife the Nobuda came aboord and brought my Pinnasse, and demanded of me if all he had promited were performed. I told hm no, for that I had not all my company, they keeping from me the Boy at Tayer, which they had forced to turne Turke, and him would I have before I would release the ships : he told me he would tell the Aga, and returne me his answere, and so departed. This morning early I called a Councell, wherein I propounded whether I should release the ships according to promise, or detayne them till resti- 20 tution were made me. It was concluded that I should release all the ships which were of India. and our friends; and fet our hopes upon the ship that was to come from Sues. Likewise I deman. ded what courie were best to take for recovery of the youth at Tayes; by some it was thought bootlesse to demand him, but to hope of taking some Prisoners of worth, which might procure his libertie. I was of a contrarie opinion, and thought it fittest to demand him, now when wee should have many to follicite for him, rather then depend upon hopes of taking of Prisoners, which we might faile of, and to it was concluded to demand the Boy presently, and no speech at all to be made of our goods reftoring.

The eight and twentieth, there was a Writing sent me from the Aga, wherein he, Nohuda Mahomet, and Shermall Shebander bound them telues thips and goods, that I thould have within 30 twelve dayes the Boy from Tapes, to that I would release the ships; I gave them leave to value M.Fomell dyed, the ship of Dis, and goe and come to the other ships at their pleasure. This night Master Femell dyed of a Callengura, or rather poyloned by the Turkes, as the opinions of our Chirur-

The first of Iune, were discharged out of the ship, three Boats lading of Cotton. This evening we had a guft with much wind, which came from the shore, which brake our Land Cable. The wind was fo hot we could hardly indure it. I was taine to five to my Cabbin, not being able for heate to stay aloft. I writ a Letter to the Basha in Italian for restitution of my goods, and satis-Exceeding heat faction for damages; I was answered atterwards, the Letter was not understood for lacke of an inthe Red Sea. Interpreter, I againe imbarqued the ship of Die, and would not permit them to valade any 40 more goods out of her, till the Basha had satisfied me to the value of seventie thousand Rials of eight, which I had loft and was damnified by him : I confidered with my felfe, that this was the furest way to attayne to somewhat in liew of our losse, and not foly to relye upon the taking of the ship of Sues, which the Turkes might easily prevent me of, by giving advice by land.

The fecond, came Ally Haskins, my Interpreter at Zenan, aboord, and brought mee commendations from the Basha, saying, he was forrie I was gone after that fort away, for he was minded to fend me away better content, and that he had prepared a rich Vest to be sent me and a Horse: and likewise the Cayba had him commended heartily, and defired mee not to take any violent courses here, but seeke for Instice at Stambola, for if I did any thing which might be displeasing to the Basha, it would cost him his head, that was the chiefe cause of my fending backe to Moha; 50 and told me he had brought the English youth with him from Tayes, by order from the Baiha, which the next day he faid should be fent aboord, conditionally I would permit the ship of Dis, and the rest to discharge. I answered him I would in no wife release the thips, till I had restitution or satisfaction for my goods and damages to the value about-said.

The third, the Aga defired peace for twelue dayes till the Basha had knowledge of my demands. The next day Ally Haskins, Tocour sie a Bannian, and others came aboord, and withall defires I would draw out the particulars of my loffes, that they might confider thereof affiore. I fulfilled their defire, and by writing fet downe my loffe and hinderances to bee feuentic thoufand Rials of eight, and withall fending the Aga word, whereas at firth I was received by him, and came aland at his intreatie, and vpon his word and promise of kind enter aynment and free 60 and peaceable Trade, he like a treacherous Dogge, without any cause or offence given, had cruelly flaine divers of my people, and villanoufly imprifoned my felre and others, and roboed and spoiled all he could feafe upon to the value of feuentie thousand Peffos, beside great charges and losse of time, it therefore he did not presently make mee restitution or satisfaction for the same. About my de-I would doe my belt to batter the Towne about his cares, take all the goods out of the Dischip mands and the into mine owne, and burne all the ships in the Roade, and not depart thence till I were sufficiently reuenged, all which I could doe without breach of promile, the time of Truce being out, and fweres, mellathey not having performed Couenants with me.

This day being the fixt, the Aga fent mee a peremptory answere, demanding who gave mee terspassed beleane to come into those Seas, faying, fith I came without leane I was nully dealt withall; and by day, and at by day, and at touching the goods, and whatfoeuer elfe, he had done nothing but what he had order from the his intreatiel Basha, who himielfe told me to much: and if I were not pleased with what was past, the best granted Truce

10 way were to referre it to the hearing of our Betters at Stambola. And if I shot at the Towne, for twilue he would shoot againe at my ships; and for the ships and goods in the Road they were none of dayes in which his, but if I did either hurtthe Towne or thips in the Road, it would not be pleafing to the Sulfied his Mafter tun, who would be fure to be recompensed for any harme I should doe them. To which I an- of my defwered, to come into this Sea, I needed no leave but Gods and my Kings, but for my comming mand alhore, the Aga had not onely guen mee lease, but much intreated mee. And for my goods I knew nothing I ought the Batha, neither was I his Factor, neither had I at any time received any thing of his or any the least cortesie, neither had I done him or his any wrong, and therefore no way his Debtor wherby he might challenge any of those goods which by his order I was robbed of; wherefore I multand would be paid for them, not at Stambola (where neither the Balha

20 and Aga durft shew their faces to answere such shamefull wrongs, which they had falsly charged the Sultan to have commanded them to doe) but even there where I had beene wronged, would I be righted and if they found themfelies agricued, they might goe to the Court of England to feeke their remedie : for to Stambola I minded not to goe.

The eight, I lent Malter Pemberson to Affab to buy fresh victuals, we having very many men Feare of poy. ficke in our thips: I was attraid to have my promition from Moha, doubting poyfoning, which by foning by the friends I was warned to take heed of. The nineteenth, came aboord Shermall Sabander, Ally Tocorfie, and many others of the chiefe of the Bannians, to make agreement with me, and brought with them Master Pembertons youth decently apparelled in new clothes after the Christian fashion, which the Sabander 30 bestowed upon him. After some kind gratulations passed on either side, the Sabander began to tell me, that he had alwayes loued and fauoured me and my people, and was alwayes readie to doe me what kindnesse he was able, and for the injuries done mee by the Turkes, it did as much grieue him as if it had beene done to his owne people, for which his loue and pittying of me in my miseries, he was like to pay at too deare a rate, without I would now shew my selfe fauourable vnto him, For that the Basha had enjoyned him to give me satisfaction, or had sent order to cut his throat, and feate vpon his goods: and this he protelled was not fained, but the verie truth. I answered, it was the Turker that had robbed me, and done me many injuries, and from them would I looke for fatisfaction, and not from any other : he willed me to leave those talkes, and come to my demands. I told him he knew what I demanded, for that I had fent it ashore in 40 the Arabick Tongue in writing; he faid, if my demands were answerable to that Writing, it were but labour lost to have further conference there abouts. We spent most part of the day in beating the prizes of our loft Commodities: and in conclusion, with much adoe, we came to agreement that all the Lead and Iron should be surrendered, and eighteene thousand Rials of eight in money, within ritteene dayes for fatisfaction of all our goods and loses fuftayned, and thereupon a peace concluded betweene vs and them for two yeares, from the Port of Moba to Cannanor,

Seale, for confirmation of this peace betweene our Nation and theirs, for the time before spe-Seate, for commission or this percentage of the state beganne a generall and most grieuous sicknesse in our Great sicknesse. ships, few or none escaping, it beganne with a great paine in the head and stomacke, bereauing 50 them of fleepe : the best remedie for it was vomiting and bleeding, but some were taken with Feuers withail, who were long before they recourred their healths: the rest that escaped the Feuer quickly reconered, and God be prayfed, few died thereof.

vpon the Coast of India, conditionally, that the Basha give mee a Writing under his hand and

And the second of July, we received the last payment, the Sabander being there himselfe, I luly 2.1616. cleered all reckonings with him, as well for money borrowed of him whiles I was Prifoner, as for money disberted afterwards by him. He demanded of me the money I promifed the Balhas Cayba, which was a thouland Vonetianos: which I would in no wife pay, although hee much viged me with my word and promife, and that he should be forced to pay, for that he had pasfed his word for the fame. I told him the Cayba had not performed what hee promifed mee, in fetting me and my people at libertie. How the Cayba and he will agree, I know not, but I doubt 60 the Cayha will constraine him to pay it. Drawing towards night, the Sabander and the rest tooke their I aue of me to goe a land : and for his farewell, I cauted three Peeces of Ordnance

The third, came againe Tacaroy and Ally, and bought some Vermillion of mee, for which I gaue them credit: they promifing to come ouer to the other fide within fourteene dayes, and make me payment, also to bring me some prouisions of Graine, as I had given them order to buy me at Moba, and a Writing from the Basha for confirmation of peace concluded. In the aftermoone we warped out of the Road, and that night fet faile toward Affab, but could not get this ther till the fift day in the morning.

CHAP.11. S.5.

A∏ab.

The Tarkes poy on the Wels of Affab. th: K. of Affab.

The fixth, I went a land and caused all the Wels to be emptyed and clensed for feare of povfoning, for it was often told mee at Moba, the Turkes practiled with the people of Allab, to poyfon the Wels. From this day till the thirteenth day wee spent in watering and buying re-A Letter from freshing, not any thing in that time happening worth writing.

The thirteenth, the King of this Countrey hearing of my elcape at Moba, and my arrivall in his Countrey, sent three of his chiefe Servants, being attended with thirtie Souldiers, with a 10 Letter, and a Present of refreshing to me. The effect of his Letter was to bid me welcome into his Countrey, with offer of any thing I food in need of, and that his Countrey did affoord: as also not a little reioycing of my escape from my Enemies , with many other Complements. I feasted and rewarded the Messengers, and returned them with a Present to the King their Mafter : which was a Vest of broad-cloth, and a faire looking Glasse.

The seventeenth, came Afelba from Moba, wherein was Tocorcie the Sabanders man, and another Bannias. They brought with them divers provisions, which I left order with them to prouide me; as also the money they ought me, but the Writing from the Basha, for confirmation of peace on his behalfe they could not get, but made excuse the Basha was so busie in the Warres, he could not intend it, fo that it was manifest he intended to keepe no quarter with our Nation. 20

The foure & twentieth, we all let fayle out of Alab Road, to put that in practice which long before I had determined, which was to ply to wind-ward as high as Camaran, & there to abide the comming of a great ship, which yearely commeth about this time richly laden from Suerto Moha: hoping to bee sufficiently revenged for all my loties and difgraces offered mee by the Turker: and the rather did I defire to meete with her, for that I vnderflood the Traytor Ieffor Batha, and his Disciple Regib-Aga, had great adventures in her. From this day till the last of this moneth, wee plyed it to wind-ward, the wind still opposite to vs, wee sayled by day, and commonly anchored by night : we past many and fundry dangers for lacke of a Pilot, and many times were like to haue come a-ground, to the hazard and loffe of all, had not God preferued vs. And yet she escaped vs in the night, as we found in our returne.

Their departure from Surat, and what happened there with the Cambayans and Portugals.

He ninth of August, 1611. in the morning we set sayle, and in the evening about eight

August, 9.1611. They returne They returne for India, The Westerne parts of the Tarees and Im-of the clocke we anchored three leagues thort of the Bab-mandell. The tenth, the Darling and Release appointed to goe out at the Wester channell, which they found to be three leagues over, from the Mayne of Habefre to the Hand Bab-mandell; one third of mandell, three way ouer from the lland they had no ground at forty fathoms, the channell cleere without dan- 40 leagues broad. gers, & not as all the Turkes & Indians reported, to be full of sholes and Rocks, and not natingable for thipping. This their falle report was to make vs beleeve there was no other passage in and out into that Sea, but at the Easter channell, which may be so fortified that no shipping can passe that way, but shall be in danger of their Ordnance, for it is not passing one mile & halfe over between foureimiles from the Arabian shore, we steered all this night our course along st the Land. From the twelfth day, till the feuen and twentieth, much wind with calmes and contrarie A greater curwinds with a great current, letting South-west about four miles an houre: for looke in all this 50 rent ferting time what we got when we had a fauourable gale, we lost that and more when it fell calme, be-Wefterly. ing carryed backe by the current.

The feuen and twentieh, we had a gale of wind to carrie vs off. Wee had fight of Mount Falive a head-land to the West-ward of Cape Guardafui, at fixe a clocke this night, This hill bore South halfe West: about ten at night it fell calme with a great Sea, out of the South-east. At mid-night came vp a gale at South South-east, and South, hinding still as we failed this great Sea which was a manifest signe wee brought our selves open of Cape Guardasas : for so long as the land was in the wind of vs we felt none of this Sea.

the Arabian shore, and the Ile, and upon the Mayn lyeth sholes a good distance off; we in the Increase and Pepper-Corne passed out at the narrow channell where we came in. About foure aclock in the afternoone we all met without the straights, and were in nineteene fathome, being some

The thirtieth, we plyed into the Roade of Delifta, and about noone came to an Anchor in the Roade, wee found there riding a great ship of Diss, and two small ships, one of Naggina, 60 the other the Kings, both ships of India, both bound for the Red Sea, taken short with the Monion. The Captaine of the ship of Din came abourd mee with diversothers, who certified mee our people at Smat were well, and very well intreated, and were daily expecting shipping from England: and that Captaine Hambins was at Court with the King, where hee was made a great Lord, and had great allowance from the King by the yeare. And for Captaine Sharpeigh, the King had given him money to build a ship, which then was almost readic at Surat to bee lanched, this and many other things he told me, which I doubted were too good to be true.

The Monfon was farre ipent, and therefore I defired the Nobuda of Din, to helpe mee with his Boates and people to ballast and water, which hee with the others most wilkingly granted, profering me all the water in their ship; so willing were they to have mee gone from them. I had all the water out of his ship, and imployed his people to fetch some from the shore.

I was often in hand with the King to fell mee his Alloes: I could not of long time bring him to aske reason for it. In the end, with much adoe, I bargained with him for all, paying dearer 10 for it, then Captaine Keeling did for his. I thinke the Indians were in hand with him for it, and that was the cause he held it io deare. I left Letters with the King, which hee promifed to deliner to the first English ship that should come there.

The third of September, having finished my businesse, I made haste to bee gone. I had with Sept 3.1612. much adoe a simple fellow out of the ship of Dia, to pilot me vpon the Coast of India, who took vpon him to be a good Coafter, in the afternoone about two a clocke wee weighed Anchor and plyed out of the Roade.

The fix and twentieth, betweene nine and ten of clocke wee weighed, having a gale of wind, Twentie which brought vs into the Roade of Surat, we ridde by the three Indian thips in feuen fathom, A Manth, or mile from vs, ridde feuen fayle of Portugall Frigats or men of Warre: there were thirteene more of them which were within the River of Surat; the Portugalls long before our comming thither, had intelligence that we were in the Red Sea, and bound for this place, fo that their Frigars were purposely sent to keepe vs from Trade at Surat, or else-where, vpon that Coast. The Captaine Maior of them is called Don Francisco de Soto Maior, is intitled Captaine Maior of the North, he reapeth great benefit to himfelfe by giving Cartaffes or Pasports to all ships and Frigats, which trade upon that Coast. Any ship or Frigat which hath not the same Passe, are confiscate or loft. This night I difcharged my Pilots, paying them well for their paines : I fent by them Letters to such of our people as they should find at Surat, for I could not learne how many (or who they were) that were there refident. The nine and twentieth, there came a small Portugall Frigat from the Admirall of the Arma- Answere from 30 da, (as they terme them) wherein was one Portugall and his Boy, who brought mee answere of the Portugall. my Letter fent the day before from the Captaine Major, wherein hee vied some complements, certifying me that he was glad to heare I belonged to a King a Friend, and that he and his would be readie to doe mee service in any thing hee might, provided I brought a Letter or Order from the King of Spaine, or the Vice-Roy, for my trading in these parts, which if I could shew him, he would willingly obey: if otherwite, he must guard the Port he had in charge, where the King his Matter had his Factorie. I returned answere by word of mouth by the same Poringall, that I had neyther Letter from the King of Spaine or Vice-Roy, neyther had I need thereof, for that I was fent by the Kings Maiestie of England, with Letters and rich Presents to the Great Mogoll, and to establish the Trade begunne in those parts : and for the Factorie they had there, I 40 I came not to harme the same, but that they might continue in the same estate they were: and for our Factorie or Trade, I fee no reason why the Portugals should oppose themselves against vs, for that it was a free Countrey for all Nations, and the Great Mogoll nor his people any way in Vassaliage to the Portugals. And therefore willed him to tell his Captaine, he should in friendly manner permit those English which were at Surat to come abourd, and conferre with me concerning our Affaires, and that he would not vrge me to vie force, for by the one meanes or the other, I must and would have them : many other speeches past which were here too tedious to write, I bestowed a Vest of broad-cloth vpon the Messenger, and so dispatched him away, hee

promiting the next day to returne. We feeing it was not possible without Pilot to goe ouer the Barre, set faile from the Barre 50 foot (where I had beene to discouer in the Darling) and in the evening came to an anchor in the Roade. I went abourd the Increase, where I found Letters from the shoare: they came from Surat from Nicholas Bangham, formerly a Joyner in the Hellor, wherein I was certified that wee Nicholas Panghad no Factorie there, and that he was fent from Captaine Hambins from Agra, to ecouser fome Debts that were owing there and likewise hee had a treet from Captaine Hambins from the flore, fome Debts that were owing there , and likewife hee had Letters from Captaine Hambier, but durst not fend them aboord, lest they should be intercepted by the Portugals. What was become of the Factors and goods he mentioned not: I wrote to him, to fend mee those Letters and other particulars concerning our bufinefie. The third of October, Hoia Nasan the Gouernour of Surat, and the Gouernours brother of Hoia Nasan Cambaya, fent a Mogoll vinto me with a prefent of refreshing, and in their names offered to doe Giner or ef 60 me all the kindnesse they could, but the Fortugals, hee laid, were the cause they could not doe Surat. what they would, but for their part they defined to trade with vs, which they fee no way poffible to effect, so long as we should ride there, and the Portugall Armado by vs, and therefore they would counsell me to goe for Goea, a better place, where wee should ride nearer the shore with our ships, where the Armado could not hinder our landing; and likewife it was nearer Cambana,

A !---crof :ein Haw-

258

restrom A-

where there were more Merchants, and greater and better store of merchandize for our turnes : having to this effect delivered his meffage, hee was defirous to know what I determined to doe, whether I would stay heere, or goe thither: I answered, as yet I had received no answer from the shore, saue a letter of small import, and till I knew what was become of our country-men and goods formerly left in the Countrey, I could not retolue him; and therefore I defined him to be a meanes, that some one of our people might come abord to conferre with me, and Pilets to conduct vs thither, and then would I quickely resolue them what I would doe: in the meane while I could say nothing, I gaue him and his Interpreter a small reward, and different The fift, a Brammey, or Priest of the Bannians, which came with the Mogolifer an Interpre- 19

ter, came in a Boate of the Towne with a letter from Nicholas Bangham, and Captaine Hambing letter from Agra, dated in Aprill last, relating the manner of his fauouring and dil-fauouring by the Great Mogoll, his ficklenesse in granting vs Trade, and afterward distillowing the same, giuing t'e Porrugals Firmaes against vs, contradicting thereby what formerly he had granted to vs Aletter of vil and our Nation. By the same Meffenger came two letters of a latter cate from William Forch. han Fine trem from Labor, the one to the Commanders of any English thipping arriving at Surat, the other to the Company in England, relating his proceedings, and intent to goe home over Land, the vnconstancie of the King and people of the Countrey, the practice of the Portuga's, and many o. ther circumstances, adulting me in any wife not to land any goods, ner hope for Trade in those parts: for that the people were all fickle and vnconftant like the King, and durft not offend the 20 Portugals. I having penuled these letters, grew hopelelle of any Trade in that place, yet reld. ued to trie the vetermost what might be done before I would depart : I vnderstood by Nicholas Banghams 1-tters, that Captaine Sharpeigh, Iohn Iordayne and others, were comming from Cambaya to Surat, to goe along with me; and although I could have no Trade, yet would I endeauour my felfe in all I might to get them all aboord, and not leave them behind me. The Indian shippes which rid by me had given over their Voyage to the Southward; for that the Monfon for the Southward was past. The Braminey defired my leave that they might carry their ships into the River, which in no wife I would grant, willing him to tell the Governoor and the rest of the Owners, that their ships should not depart thence, till I had all the Englishmen at Cambaya and Surat aboord of me ; if I had permitted them to have gone, I shoul have frustrated my selfe of 10 either fending too, or hearing from our people ashore: The Portugals intercepting both letters and men as much as they could.

The two and twentith, the Portugals had laid them in amoush to cut off some of my men sent on shore: which when they saw their best time of adjantage brake out, and came in great heapes, confuledly running toward our men and boates; they discharged their that at vs, and we answe red them againe with ours, both from thole my men a shore, and also from my Frigat, which rid close to the Land, all my men retired in safetie to my bears and Frigat, and the Portugals after fome hurt received, returned behind the hills out of thot, and so in worse case then they came, went backe to their Frigats. There were of them feuen En ignes, and might be in number about three hundred men; at this inflant when they came vpon vs by Land, fine of their greatest Fri- 40 gats which rid a little way off to the Northward, came running upon vs, and fhot at vs, being nothing neare within shot. We went with our Frigat and boats abourd our ships to dinner, little hoping of any newes, as at that day, from our people ashore: the Portugall Frigats rowed to the Northward, and anchored where they rid before : I ad if d with ( aptaine Dounton, Master Iourdayne and others, what course were best to take, and it was thought fit to abide no longer there, but to returne to the roade of Surat, where rid the Increase, and there to determine what we had best to doe.

16:1. An hundred failes of Parts gall Friguts.

The eight of November, Nicholas Bangham came from Sarat, and brought with him fome 16freshing, which with himselfe were very welcome : the newes held of the comming of Markrib Can. The Vice-royes sonne came into the River with an hundred faile of Frigats, the greatest 50 part of them being Merchants bound for Cambaya: I caufed this night our thips which rid within to come off and anchor by me, left the enemies, whose strength I knew not, might attempt ought against them.

The ninth, The ships riding without the Sand, Hoia Nasjan came downe to the Sea-side: I went to him with my Frigat and boats, and had conference with him; he promifed mee (not to faile) two dayes or three at the furthest, hee would returne and bring goods with him to Trade with me; I told him I had been heere a great while, and co. ld get no refreshing of victuals for my money, and therefore defired him to give order the coun rey people might bring me fome, which he promifed to doe, and vpon the fame tooke his leave and departed.

The eighteenth, I received a letter from Nucholas Bangham, wherein he wrote that there was 60 little or no hope of trade to be expected.

This last letter of Nicholas Bangham, together with the breach of promise of Hoia Nasan, brought me out of hope of Trade, thinking all their former promifes to be nothing but inventions to delude and weary me, and in the end to turne me going without Trade, which they durit not let me have for feare of offending the Portugals, and yet loath to offend mee with absolute deniall. These things considered, I determined to be gone, and therefore had often writ to Nicholas Bangham to come away, but Hoia Nasjan would not permit him : he seeing he could not get leave to come, he stole secretly out of Towne, and as this day arrived heere. Anone after Hosa Nassan missing him (as it seemeth) and doubting at his comming that being hopelesse of Trade I would be gone, fent laddam the Broaker presently after him with a letter from himselfe, and another from Mockrib Can, promifing speedily to come both vnto me. To which, in regard of his former promise breach, I could hardly give credit, yet I resolved to spend some few dayes more to see the euent thereof. The Portugals lying all in the River, not daring to come nigh vs

10 by Sea, thought to entrappe vs by Land, and therefore a great number of them ambushed themfelues behind a row of fand hills, not farre from our landing place, where they kept close, but God be thanked they failed of their expectation, all our people without hurt recourring the boate. In the meane featon they in the fhips were not idle, but let flye apace at them, both with great shot and small: the Portugals thinking to find vs vnprepared to bid them thus welcome, presently betooke them to their heeles, and fled behinde the hilles, where they lay lurking a while, not daring to shew their heads: they left one lying upon the Strand being mortally wounded in the head, which our people brought aboord.

The foure and twentith being Sunday, Jaddaw the Broaker came aboord, and brought me word Mockrib Can was comming, and would be with me before night. After dinner I went to the 20 shore lide with my Frigat, where I found Hois Nassan, who tent me word Mockrib Can was comming, and would be prefently there. I returned abourd and made choyce of a good Prefent to give him; which being effected, being well accompanied, I went directly aland, where I found Mockrib Can, Hoia Nassan, with great troupes of men abiding my comming, at our meeting we em- The enterview braced each other; our ships at the same time discharging some Ordnance to bid him welcome, of Mother & Can, which he seemed to take kindly. After I had deliuered him a good Present, we sate downe vp. Gouernour of on Carpets fored upon the ground, where passed some conference betweene vs: being neare

Sim for Lentrested him he would be useful to go about my thin and there are he him to sir Hom. Mid-Sum-set, I entreated him he would be pleased to go aboord my ship, and there take his lodging for distant that night, which he presently granted, carrying with him his owne sonne, Hoia Nassans sonne, and divers others his chiefe Followers, but Hoia Nassan would not goe: it pleased mee well to 30 see him so consident, and made mee conceine better hopes then before, he having all this part of the Countrey vnder his command. I gaue him the best entertainment I could, setting before him fuch Cates as upon fuch a fudden I could prouide, which he, and those with him fel roundly to. After they had done eating, Ideliucred him our Kings Maiesties Letter directed to him, and told him the effect thereof. He scemed to be very much pleased that his Maiestie would vouchfafe to write vnto him, and promifed me to doe vs all the good he could, not onely for our prefent Trade, but also to give vs any place or harbour I would appoint or name, where wee might fortifie our felues, if we so pleased. In fine, I not demanded any thing, but I found him as ready to grant, as I was to aske : growing late, I left him to his rest and departed.

The five and twenttieth in the morning, Meckrib Can busied himselfe in buying of Knives. 40 Glasses, or any other toyes he found amongst my Company: I went with him and shewed him the ship aloft and below: any thing he liked belonging to the ship, he carryed with him away gratis, besides many toyes of my Companyes, which he liked, I bought and gaue him, endeuouring in all things I might to give him content: after he had been fore and after, he returned to my Cabbin, where he would needs fee all my Chefts, Trunckes, and Lockers opened and fearched. What somer he saw there of mine that he tooke liking to, I gaue him for nothing. By this time victualls being readie, he went to dinner, which being done, hee was defirous to be gone to fee the other ships, and there behaued himselfe in like fort.

The thirtieth and one and thirtieth, Hent Mafter Fowler, John Jordayne, and other our Merchants to see the goods: they returned and brought Mustrels and the prices: we set downe what 50 we would give for each fort, defiring them to doe the like by ours, that so we might come to agreement for both: they held me off with delayes, posting me off from day to day, but concluding nothing, they would neither offer for our commodities, nor abate in theirs. And whereas I The delusions had fold Mockrib Can all our Sword-blades the cheaper, because he should take the one with the of the Gaza other, they had chosen out the best of them, and returned me backe the worst, being the better halfe, and no speech when we should be paid for them : which done, they removed their goods to bee gone for Surat. And upon the same made Proclaimation upon great penalties, that no victuall or other thing should be brought vs ; leaving me without cause thus abused.

The eighth of December in the morning, came Mockrib Can with all his crew upon the Decembs. ftrand, and about some fortie packs of their goods; I came a land with a good guard of shot and 1511. 60 halberds. I went to him to his tent, where after friendly falutation and complements path, wee fell to treat of businesse: and agreed for prices of all our Lead, Quick-filter, and Vermilion, and for their goods likewife in liew thereof. It is to be noted, that all these goods did not belong to these two great men, but also to the Shabander, and divers other Merchants; yet for the most part, the butinesse were carried soly by Hoia Nassan, no mandaring either to buy or sell with vs,

CHAP. 11. S.6.

without his preuention and leaue, by that meanes advancing the prices of their goods, and abafing ours, to their great advantage, and our great hinderance and loffe. The ninth in the morning, we began to land our Lead, and to receive some of their goods: as alfo to be in good forwardnesse to make price for the rest, when a Letter came to Mockrib Con Mozulls letter, from his King, which dashed all his mirth and our proceedings for that present. Hee was very pleasant before he receiued and perused it; but afterwards became very sad: hee sate a good pretie while musing, and vpon a sudden rifeth vp, & so goeth his way, without once looking towards, or speaking to me, I being seated hard by him. Before he tooke horse, he better bethought himselfe, and fent for me: when I came to him, he embraced me, telling me hee was my Brother, praying me to excule this his fudden departure, for that he had earnest builnesse, and must be gone; but he Io would leave Hoia Nasan with me, to receive and deliver those goods already bargained for, and to bargaine with me for more: hortly after, we heard he was put out of his government of Cambaya, Hosa Nassan being lately put out of his government of Swrat (and others put in their places)this afterward we judged to be the effect of the Kings letter, and the cause of his discontent. Moetris Can being of late Gouernour of Cambaya, and all the Sea-coast thereabouts, hath now nothing left him in this Countrey , but the place of the Customer of Surat.

The tenth, the new Gouernour of Surat, and Assan Ally came aboord the Pepper-corne to mee to see the ships. After they had been there a while, we went to the Trades-increase, the Factors being ashore to see the weight of the Lead, which with no little trouble was neere-hand alllanded, and embarqued ready to bee fent a shore: they intreated Hoia Nassan that he would be plea- 20 fed to goe in hand therewith, for that it would aske a great time in doing: the Factors would have weighed with our English weights, which he would in no wife agree vnto: the Weigher of Surat was there with the we ghts of the Towne, and with that weight would be hane it weighed. In the end, feeing no other remedie, they gade him way, and began to weigh with the countrey beame. After some fewe drafts, they defired they might understand the beame before they proceeded any further, to know whether the Weigher told them the truth what it weighed for he knowing it, and they not, he might give them what weight he lift: likewise they made triall of those they had weighed by his Beame, by ours, and found very great difference, in fine Pigges tenne or eleuen Maunds, each maund being three and thirtie pound English weight. Hee feeing he might not have the Lead at what weight he lifted, began to cauill, faying, he would have halfe money, halfe goods for his commodities, otherwise we should not have them, rayling and ra- 30 uing like a mad-man, calling for the Carmen to drawe away the goods, faying, he would none of our Lead, nor other goods, but instantly be gone: I being aboord the Increase with the Gouernour and Sabandar, the Factors which were a shore sent one aboord a purpose, to adulse me of their proceedings, and how that Hoia Nasjan was causing the Carmen to yoake their Oxen, to draw away all the goods they had brought, and if I did not take some speedie course for preuenting the same, he would goe from his bargaine, and returne all our goods vpon our hands againe: I thought hee Rude custome was apt enough to doe fo, by that little experience I had of him, as also a custome they have in this Countrey (and by report in most parts of India) that what bargaine soeuer is made betweene Merchant and Merchant may be rouoked, fo it be done within the compasse of twentie foure houres, yea although he have given earnest, and carried away the goods bought, yet hee may returne them, and haue backe his earnest. I vinderstood this bad custome before I landed any of my Lead, and doubting to have fuch a tricke put vpon me, I did purposely send vnto Hoia Nasjan, lom Fowler and others, to know whether he would fland to his bargaine, before I landed any Lead, which would put vs to much troul le to land it, and therefore I would be at a certaintie with him: he before many witnesses, promited them to take it all, and be as good as his word, and that with all speed they should land it. And now comming to the point of performance, hee flies from all he had formerly promifed: I aduited with such as were about me what we had best doe, and it was thought the furest way, to keepe those men which were aboord me for pledges, till they had performed with vs, and if we could get Hoia Nasan into our possession, to keepe him, and free 30 those: whereupon I detained the Gouernour and Sabandar, telling them how Hoia Nasjanhad dealt with me, going about to delude me as formerly, and therefore there was no other remedie, but to keepe them for pledges for performance of the bargaine. The Gouernour counselled mee to goe a shore, and fetch the man himselfe, which I did, guing the Gouernour a good Present, I let him depart, keeping Hota Nasjan and the Sabandar for pledges aboord the Pepper-corne.

keptaboord as Pledges.

The nineteenth, Hoia Affan Ally the Sabandar came from Surat: he shewed mee a couple of Letters, which were fent from the Vice-roy from Goz, one of them directed to humfelte, the other to the Captaine Major of Din: I opened and perufed them both. The effect of the letter to the Captaine Maior was, that he had received his letter, whereby hee vinderstood the especiall good feruice done against the English, in patting the English Captaine and his people to swim to 60 his Boates for their satetie, otherwise he hadtaken them pritoners or slaine them: for the which he highly commended him, having done the part of a valuant Captaine, and worthy fouldiour; which good feruice done to his King and Countrey, would redound to his great honour: for the which hee gaue him as many thanks, as if hee had taken the English Captaine pritoner : and partly to gratific him, he bestowed those Frigates, which hee lately before had taken from the Mallabers vpon him, certifying him he had fent his fonne in the Armie, which was young, praying him to affift him with his countell, whereby he might gaine a great name. Thus was the Vice-Roy and my felte abused, by the false reports of a lying Braggard. The other letter to the Sabandar, was to thanke him that he would not permit the English Nation to trade at Surat, willing him to continue in that mind, and he should doe the King of Portugal great service, for the which he should not loose his reward. This day came divers Carts laden with provisions for the thips from Surat, bought by Nicholas Bauggam.

The foure and twentieth, the accompts on both fides were cleered, and businesse finished, the 10 pledges on either part released, they promised vs to deale with vs for the rest of our Commodities: they tarried till the fixe and twentieth day, but did nothing worth noting. The feuen and twentieth, came a Iew aboord me, which brought me a letter from Maffulipatan, dated the eighth of September, from one Peter Floris a Dantifcan, employed by the Company, shewing his setting Alener of Pe-out in February, his speedie and safe passage and arriving there in the beginning of September.

A letter of the l The second of Ianuary, 1611. I wrote to Captaine Hambins, from whom I had received a let- Ianuar, 2,1612 ter the eight and twentieth of December: and ient Captaine Sharpeigh, Hugh Frame, and Hugh Greet, to let the minde of Captaine Hawkins in some better course, then he seemed to aime at in his last letter to me. As also to buy some Indicoes, and other commodities, if they might be had at reasonable rates.

The fixe and twentieth, Captaine Hankins and Captaine Sharpeigh came to the water fide: Capt. Hankins they had left their carriage behind them fine miles off: I landed with two hundred armed men, commerba and went to meet them, to faf-gard them and their goods from the Portugals, which I doubted boordour would doe their best to intercept them; we met them about some three miles off, and brought all ships. in fafetie aboord our flips, not feeing any Portugals.

The feuen and twentieth, I lent Iohn Williams and one of our Factors to Surat vpon bufineffe. This day Mochrib Can came to Towne; he had been to meet a great Commander, which was comming from the warres of Decan, and was to paffe by Surat. Before his going out of the Towne, he lent for M. Iourdaine, and willed him to commend him to me, and to certifie me that he was to goe out of the Towne, but would not tarry out about three dayes, and at his returne 30 he would be as good as his word, for what he had promited concerning our Factory. Now at his returne, he fends for him againe, and with a frowning countenance, contrary to his expectation, demands of him what he did there, and why were we not all gone: he answered, that hee staied vpon his word and promife that we should leave a Factory, otherwise he had not been there:he faid againe, we should have no Factory there, and that the long staying of our shippes there, had hindered him in his Customes tenne hundred thousand manuveys, and therefore in the Kings name charged them to be gone with speed out of the Towne: for neither tradenor Factorie was there to be had for vs. Iohn Williams returned this morning, and two carts with provisions came from Surat. The nine and twentieth, I ient for the Factors at Surat to dee as Mockrib Can commanded, to haft and come away, for that I would be gone.

ð. V I.

His going to Dabul And thence to the Red Sea, and enforced trade with the Guzerates.

He ninth of February in the morning, beeing calme, we warped ouer the fand with February 9. the Increase: had we not got over this tide, we had lost the whole Spring. This road of Smally standeth in the latitude of twentie degrees fifty feuen minutes: variation fixteene degrees thirty minutes. The eleuenth in the morning, we fet fayle for the road of Surat, and anchored there in the afternoone, by a new ship of Surat lately launched, and The road of came cut of the River, the was bound for the Red Sea. The latitude of this roade is twenty de- smally is in grees fortie two minutes.

The twelrth, we weighed and drone to the South-ward, & anchored two leagues from the road min. Variation by a thip of Callient bound for Surat, out of which thip I tooke a Pilot for Dabul. The thirteenth, fixeendegrees we weighed & droue down; at noon came a gale Northerly: at the comming of the wind we had thirty minutes. feuenteene fathome: we halled oif West by South, in twelue and foureteene fathome: after steeted South West by West till four a clocke; betweene which time wee had from four eteene to twentie fathome: vpon a fudden we came to eight fathome, and then to fixe, being then in my o-60 pinion from the ship that rid in the road of Swar tenne leagues: then we haled in East, and East by South three quarters of a mile, and found from fixe fathome to twentie againe: then wee steered South-west by South, till one a clockeafter midnight, being for the most part against the tide. At that time the water shoaled in two casts from twentie to sitteene fathome, having run in nine houres some seuen leagues and a halfe; then we haled off three houres (being little wind) till we came to twentie fathome: then we steered South South-west, at which time we see the land, with two hammocks thereon, bearing East South-east some eight leagues off: which wee judged to be Damon. At fixe in the evening, we haled in South South-east, the wind Northerly: it fuddenly fell calme, and so continued till past midnight. This morning our latitude nine. teene degrees fifteene minutes, hauing steered all night South by West, and our depths between twelue and fourteene fathome, fine leagues off the shore, in the morning little wind, at noone came a gale; we fleered South, the winde West North-west. In the evening being betweene foure and five leagues from the shore, we had thirteene fathome; at Sun-set we judged our selves thwart of Chaul. We steered South all night with a faire gale of wind.

Chan's

He arriverb at there bath Trade.

The fixteenth, weefteered alongst the coast South and by East, till fix a clocke in the evening, 10 keeping for the most part in ten fathome or there about, at which time we arrived in the Road of Dabull, which standeth in the latitude of seuenteene degrees, two and fortie minutes, variation fixteene degrees and thirtie minutes.

The feuenteenth, the Pilot which I had out of the Mallabar, I fent ashore in a Fisher-boate with a letter which I had at my being at Moha, from Mollich Abor, Captaine or Nobuda of a great shippe of this place. The letter was to the Gouernour, to intreat him to vie me kindly, and to Trade with me. In the afternoone, the Gouernour and Mellick Amber, each of them fent me a small present of retreshing, and many complements, offering me any thing the Country did afford; and if I pleased to fend ashore, he would deale with me for our commodities: I sent a couple of Merchants ashore with a good Present, who were bid kindly welcome, and well 20 entertained whiles they were there.

The eighteenth, nineteenth and twentith (Boats passing each day betweene the shippes and shore) were spent about the sale of some goods, the particulars with each dayes businesse, I referre to the account of the Merchants, holding it not fit here to be expressed. By the three and twentith, we had delivered all our goods we had bargained for, and no hope of further fales in this place; I determined with all speed to be gone from hence.

The foure and twentith, I called a Councell to aduise what we had best to do: I propounded whether it were better to goe from hence directly for Priaman, Bantam, &c. or to returne to the Red-fea, there to meete with such Indian shippes as should be bound thither, and for that they would not deale with vs at their owne doores, wee having come fo farre with commodities fit- 30 ting their Countrie, no where elie in India vendable: I thought wee should doe our selves some right, and them no wrong, to cause them barter with vs, wee to take their Indicoes and other goods of theirs, as they were worth, and they to take ours in liew thereof. All mens opinions were for the Red-lea, for divers reations. As first, the putting off our English goods, and having others in place thereof fitting our Countrey. Secondly, to take some revenge of the great and vnfufferable wrongs and insuries done me by the Turkes there. And the third and laft, but not the least, to faue that ship, men and goods (which by way of Massuipatan) wee heard was bound for those parts; which we held vnpossible to escape betraying. These things considered, we concluded to goe backe for the Red-sea: from this day to the seuen and twentith, wee fpent in getting fresh water aboord: they had bought all my Red-lead, and it was carried ashore and delivered, but afterwards dilliking it, they returned it backe. In the evening we faw a ship in the Offing, two or three Mallabars which rid by vs, told vs fine was a Portugall ship of Cochin bound for Chaul : I fent the Pepper-corne, Darling and Frigat to fetch her in to me. The eight and twentith, my men in the Frigat had pillate them, which I tooke from them and returned to their owners : her lading was Coco-nuts, having little elle in her. This day we ipent in romaging the Portugals ship, I could find no bills of lading in her; some small matter I tooke from her, in regard of former injuries offered me by the Captaine Major Don Francisco de Sotomaior at the barre of Surat, as namely, taking my goods, and hindering my Trade. In that I sustained no surther harme by them, it was not for lack of good will, but lacke of meanes, as manifefly appeared by letters of the Vice-roy and others, which came to my hands by chance; 50 what I had from them, I have vnder the hands of the chiefe men in her. The foure and twentith of March wee had fight of the Iland Zacotora, and at foure in the March 24. Anno 1612.

Currents,

afternoone, the point of Dellasham bore South South-west six leagues off, variation nineteene degrees. From the foure and twentith at noone till this day at noone, wee steered North-west and by West, and West North-west, and West all night, thinking by day-light to have beene neare the Westermost part of the Hand; but contrary to our expectation, wee found wee had gone little a head, hauing had a faire gale, which shewes we have had a great currant against vs. From noone till foure in the next morning, wee fleered alongst the land with little wind, and then it fell calme, the currant carrying vs directly voon a rocke, which lyeth foure or fine leagues from the wester part of Loccatra: we were forced to ancher till we had a gale to carry vs from 60 it; about two houres after came the wind Easterly, wee weighed and stood to the Westward, and at noone we were foure leagues from the Rocke, here wee found a currant fetting to the

The feuen and twentiet h, we steered West South-west, we met with a great current setting to the Northward; in the morning we were thwart of Abba de: Ouria, and before night had fight Abba del Curia. of Cape Guada fui, being some seuen leagues off: from yester ay moone till this day night, our courfe West South-west, we might go in that time eight and twentie leagues our true way West little Southerly : we flood in till midnight, and then haled close of a wind to the Southward. and fo fpent the night till day.

CHAP. 11. $6. Diners paffages betweene the 100 in as and English.

The eight and twentith, by eight of the clock we were faire by the shore, mid-way between Capede Guarda the two Capes of Guardafui & Felux.

The fecond of Aprill, Mafter Pemberson came aboord of me, and told mee that he had been at Aprill 2, 1612. Soccatora, and the King shewed him a writing left there by Captaine John Saris (who was Ge- Captaine John 10 nerall of three ships) wherein he related what time he came out of England, his places of retresh- Saria. ing by the way, and his arrivall there; as also his proceeding to the Red-lea to leeke Trade; thecifying likewise that he had perused a writing left there by mee, wherein were alledged many realons to diffwade him from going thither; yet having the Gran Signiors Paffe, he hoped of better entertainment then I had. Hearing this vnexpected newes, I called a Councell to aduife what we had best doe; whereabout we spent but small time, for that we were quickly resoluted to proceed as formerly we had determined, having now no other way lift: for backe we could not returne till the Westerly wind were come, which could not be before midde May. Whereupon I presently dispeeded Captaine Nicholas Dounton, and left him in the Pepper-corne to tarrie there abouts till the fifth of this moneth, for the keeping of the Port of Aden. And I with the 20 Trades-Increase and Darling to keepe the two-fold entrance of Babbe mandell. We steered from Aden in two lace thence with the head of Aden, being about feuen leagues off: about four in the euening wee degrees, feuen were thwart of Aden: this evening variation thirteene degrees and fortie minutes latitude of and fortie mi-Aden, twelue degrees and fortie feuen minutes.

The third, from foure a clocke the second day, till this day morning little wind, wee steered alongit the Channell West by North, and West North-west, towards the heat of the day it began to blow, we continued our course as before. About San-set we anchored in twentie fathome foure leagues short of the Bab, where we rid till the next morning.

The fourth, in the morning about eight a clocke we weighed and fet faile, and about ten in the forenoone wee anchored within Bab-mandell in eight fathome water. Faire by the Channell 30 which wee came in at, is halte a league ouer betweene the maine of Arabia and the lland.

Prefently at our comming to an anchor, there came a Boat from the shore abourd of me, wherein was a Turke and three or toure Arrabian fouldiers. This Turke was chiefe of the place, fent by the Aga of Moba to guard it. He promifed that if I would have a letter fent, he would prefently dispatch a foot-poste away, who should returne within three dayes with answere, whereupon I writ a letter to Captaine Saris at Moha, wherein I certified him the cause of my comming. and what I determined to doe.

The fixth, came in a Ialba of Zela, a place without the Bab, vpon the Habashe shoare, bound for Moha: her loding was Mats. I bought of her twelve sheepe, and so permitted them to depart. This day much raine.

The seventh, came in a ship of Basenor, in the morning early before day, which I caused to A ship of Basenor. come to anchor by me, one of Captaine Saris Merchants called Richard Wickam, came this morning with Letters from his Captaine, the effect thereof I omit to write here. I returned him an- Letters from fwere thereof, by a Turke which came in his company, but Wickam I stayed with me, for that I Captain Sais. doubted they of Moha would have kept him Prifoner, for that I imbarqued the India ships. The eight, in the after-noone came in a ship of Diss. (bound for Mobs) I fent off my Frigat to A ship of Dis.

fetch her in, who brought her to an Anchor by me. This was the same ship I detayned the last yeare in Mohe Roade. This day we romaged thefe two fore-faid ships, and tooke out of them fuch goods as were for our purpose, which were brought aboord me. The ninth, came in a small Frigat of Shaber, laden with course Ollibarum, wee bought some Shaber, 50 part thereof, and paid them Rials for it to their content: we continued romaging the India ships A Barke of for more goods. The eleventh, I flayed a small Barke of Sinde. Note that ever fince our comming into the Bab till this twelfth day, the wind kept fill vpon Note.

the South-east quarter; but now at North-west, and likely to blow hard : the last yeare the same day the wind came up at North-west, and continued so for three dayes. This course the wind holds every yeare: the rest of the day, and the next we spent in moring of our ship, as also the Indian ships which were readie to drive ashore, had not we layd out moring for them, the wind blowing hard at North-west.

The fourteenth, came Captaine Saris into the Road about eight in the morning, and anchored Captaine Saris by me with his three shippes. They faluted me with their Ordnance, and I them; Captaine Sa. and his Fleete 60 ris, Captaine Towerfon, and Master Cox (their chiefe Merchant) came abourd of me, where we of three ships spent all that day in friendly communication : I acquainted him with my great lacke of Cables, which he promised to imply. At night they departed to their ships, Captaine Sarai inuiting me and others the next day to dinner with him.

The fifteenth, I went abourd the Close, where I and those which came with me were kindly

The Gran Sig-This Paffe I haue of Gap. taine Sarus his A fhip of Ca. lient. A thip of carapatike. Athip of Cananor The Haffain of Sigat. Another shippe of Surat. A thip of Din. A ship of Dabal. A (mall thip of Calicut. A Frigat of Sheher. A great thip of The Rhenry a great ship of * Pienrie of Pilgrime Merchants, which ir feemes the Iefuites haue learned in these parts of the Saracens, which in all the Indies aduance the Affaires of State and Merchandise to their Countrey, & wealth to their Companies, vnder ching the Go-(pell; as this many Witnefentertayned, he showed me the Gran Signiors Passe, and read it to me. Many words passed betwixt vs, he promiting to himfelfe much good Trade at Moba if I had not come, which my experience found to the contrarie. At last wee agreed and sealed it in Writings interchangeable, that he should have one third part of what should be taken, paying for the same as I did, for the ferunce of his three ships in the Action : leaving the disposing of the ships afterward to me, who had fuftayned the wrongs. The fixteenth, came in two ships, I fent my Frigat and brought them to anchor by mee, the one was of Callicut, laden with Rice, bound for Moba . the other was of Carapatan, laden with Pepper, which ship came from Achen, and was bound for Aden, but by Captaine Dounton being Pepper, which thip came trom zerom, and was counted to goe for Moha. This Carapatan is a place chaired to Lee-ward of the place, they determined to goe for Moha. This Carapatan is a place neere Dabull, they being fubicets to the same King. The eighteenth, came in a ship of Cananor bound for Moba, she came from Achen, her lading for the most part Pepper.

The nineteenth, came in two ships of Surat, the one called the Hassay, belonging to Abdelafan, hound for Zidda, the other a small ship of my old friend Hoia Nasjan, bound for Moha. I caufed them to anchor by me, taking their Sayles from their yards, and kept some of the chiefe men abourd of me; by them we understood the Great Mogols Mothers ship, called the Rhemie, was shorely to come.

The twentieth, came in a ship of Din, laden with India Commodities, bound for Moha, and presently after came in a ship of Dabull : shee passed by vs, I sent my Pinnasse after her, which caused them to come to an Anchor.

The one and twentieth, I fent away Passengers out of the Swrat ships : about noone came ina small thip of Callicut, bound for Moba, which thip we stayd.

The two and twentieth, came in a Frigat of Shehor, which came from Goa, bound for Zidda. laden with groffe Olibanum: and prefently after came in fight a great shippe which passed the great Channell, and was chaled by the Darling, who caused her to anchor by the Hellor, the was of Din, bound for Smaken, laden with Ind a Commodities.

The three and twentieth, came in the Rhemy of Swat, the Queene Mothers ship laden with India Commodities bound for Zidda; the was flayed with the reft. In this thip were fifteene inundred perions. In the after-noone, I made figne to the Darling to come to mee, which prefently the perceived and came; I delivered each thip their Sayles, and willed them in the mor- 30 ning betimes to be ready to faile with me, for that I would go to Lee-ward to the Road of Allah.

The foure and twentieth, we weighed and fet faile from the Bab, and all the India ships with vs: leating the Thomas and Darling, to ply up to the Bab, and went for the Roade of Affab: we arrived at Crab Iland about fine aclocke, and came to an Anchor with all the Fleet, in twelve fathome water; where we rid all night, the wind at South South-west.

The fine and twentieth, in the morning wee weighed and all the Fleet, and flood in for the Road of Allab, and about one of the clock we came to an Anchor in feuen and a half of fathoms. The feuen and twentieth, we fetched good flore of Indicos out of the ships of Surat and Dia, the Clone being in the cfing in fight, plying to and fro, and not feeing vs, I caused the Gunner to shoot off a Peece of Ordnance: which they hearing, answered mee with another, and presently 40 The Roade of bore vp for the Road.

CHAP. XII.

NICHOLAS DOVNTON Captaine of the Pepper-Corne, a Ship of two hundred and fiftie Tunnes, and Lieutenant in the fixth Voyage to the East-Indies, fet forth by the faid Company, his lournall, or certaine Extracts thereof.

ð. I.

Their comming to Saldania and thence to Socatora.

He two and twentiethof July, at foure in the after-noone, wee had fight of the Table and point of Saldania, bearing East, diffant twelve leagues, but by reason 60 of calmes and vincertaine winds, it was the foure and twentieth day before wee were mored in the Roade, where we found three Hollanders, one whereof was bound for Bantam, and in her Peter But Generall of thirteene Saile outwards bound, who having spent his maine Mast, and lost company of his Fleet, put inCHAP. 12. S.1. The people, and commodities of Saldania.

to the Road for to refresh his sicke men. The other two having made traine of Seales at Pengwin I Land bound home.

Saldania is a Bay some fourteene leagues North North-east, from the Cape Bona Speranza, Bay of Saldania and North by Welt ten leagues from Cape Falfo, which is East-ward of the former, and may both be feene in the faid Bay : thefe two Capes are also divided by another great Bay, the diflance betweene thefe two Bayes, is some three leagues being low marshie ground, extending South and North, which on either fide is incironed with Mountaines. In this Bay of Saldania, when you have brought the Norther point thereof, West North-west, North-west and by

West, for a small ship North-west, thwart of the ledge of rockes ( or watering place ) neere the to shore, which will be laid (as it were ) in the swampe betweene the high Mountaines, called the Table and the Sugar-loafe, in fixe, five, or fourefathome according to the draught of your shippe, in cleane ground, and good anchor-hold you may fately ride. Pengwin Iland with his ledge diflant three leagues off, bearing North North-west halfe West, and stretching to the North and by West of you in the road. The maine land also, though it be thirteene leagues distant, trendeth a way to the West and by West, so that there is little about three points open to let in the North-west Sea, which is the greatest stormes. Saldania having in former time been com- Provisionore fortable to all our Nation travelling this way, both outwards and home-wards, yeelding them a- fearce at Saldes bundance of flesh, as Sheepe and Beeues brought downe by the Saluage Inhabitants, and sold for misthen in trifles, as a Beife for a piece of an Iron hoope of foureteene inches long, and a Sheepe for a leiler timespaß, and 20 piece, whereby weake ficke men in former Voyages have been eafily recovered and made strong:

wby. now contrariwife, whether our Trade here were spoyled by the Dutchmen we here found, who vie to ipoyleall places where they come (onely respecting their owne present occasions) by their ouer-much liberalitie; or whether the Cattell in former times to abundantly brought downe, were preyes taken by warres from one another, or other differences which might make them greedy of yron, to make heads for their Launces or Darts, which now by peace or reconciliation they have little need of; the true cause, for want of vnderstanding in their language, I know not. But well I found, that all the deniles we could vie by bribes or otherwise to them, which daily came downe to our tents in faire weather, would procure nothing from them for our ficke mens reliefe, but foure Cowes, and those foure Cowes which we did buy, were to old 30 and leane, that there was but little goodnesse in the field; for which they would take no yron, but thin pieces of Copper of fixe inches square, and some seven sheep at peice three inches square of copper, cut out of a Kettle, whereof they make rings by fixe or eight together, which they weare on their armes, which being bright and smooth, vnto them seemeth very braue.

These people are the filthiest for the viage of their bodies, that ever I have seene or heard of: Filthy people for belides the naturall vncleannelle (as by Iweat or otherwife) whereto all people are subject, and loathfome which the most by washing cleare themselves of, contrariwise this people doe augment, by anointing their bodies with a filthy fubitance, which I suppose to be the juice of herbes which on their body sheweth like Cow-dung, and on their wool of their heads is so baked, like a scurfe of greene herbes. For apparrell, they weare before their prinities the taile of a Cat, or some other 40 imall beait, and a cloake made of a sheeps-skin, reaching downe to the middle of their thighs; and according to the weather, they turne some time the hairy side, and sometimes the drest side to their bodies. Their Sheep haue no wooll, but haire, and are partie-coloured like Calues; their legges are Saldanis theep. longer, and their bodies larger then our sheepe in England, but not so fat. The Principall of these Iewels and Ore people weare about the bight of their armes, a thin flat ring of Ivory, beeing very smooth, and naments. wrought compasse neere fixteene inches wide, and on their wrifts some fixe, eight, tenne, or twelue rings of Copper, bright and smooth, all either fastned together, or wrought in one. Other toyes also, as Bracelets of blue glasse, and pearle shels, which are either presented them, or by idle people given them for Estridge egshels, for quils of Porcupines, which without restraint 50 the Dutebmen did ordinarily buy, also an other most strange and filthy wearing, to what purpose I know not, as the guts of Cattell about their neckes, which makes them smell like a Butchers slaughter-house. In their hands they carrie a small Lance or Dart, that hath a small yron head, and a few Estridges feathers as a fan to keepe away the flies: they have also Bowes and arrowes, but when they came downe to vs, they would leave them in some hole or bush by the way. They are straight made people, and nimble of foote, it seemeth that their habitation is mooueable, to places of best pasture for their Cattell, as in the Valley betweene the Mountaines, whose tops (farre vp into the Countrey) were coursed with fnow at this time, but these neere the Sea-side are cleare thereof, notwithstanding they are very high. Wild beafts there are of divers forts, but these we have seene, Fallow-deare, Antilopes, Por-Wild Beafts, 60 cupines, land Tortesses, Baboones, (also the Dutchmen told vs of Lyons, but wee law none) Snakes, and Adders.

Fewles also abundance, to wit, Wild-geefe, Duckes, Pellicans, Passea, Flemincos, and Crowes, Fowletwhich haue in their neckes, as it were, a white band, and finall birds greene coloured, and diuers other forts vnknowne. Also Sea-fowles, to wit Penguins, Guls, Pentados, which are spotted blacke and white; also a grey fowle, the Pinions whereof are blacke, which the Portugals call Alcatrasses, and Shags or Cormorants at the lland in great abundance, and an other kind of fowle like Moore-hennes.

276

Greatnumbers Fishes there are of divers forts, but these following have I seene, to wit, in faire weather there of imal Whales are a small fort of Whales in great rembers; at the Iland Seales in great abundance. With the Saine, we tooke fish like Millets, being as large as a Trought, Smelts, Thomebackes, and Doggs; and on the Rockes, Limpets, and M. H. Is abundance. In the fresh water the Vnions men caught with a Saine, abundance of Millets, as when we met with them they told vs. It is a very wholwith a Saine, abundance or Miles, as which with a Saine, abundance or Miles in fome aire, and aboundeth with good fresh water, both for filling in the roade, and for trauellers in the land, which in small streames descendeth from the Mountaines. One morning by my infligation, my Generall and I, accompanied with thirteene men more whereof four were small shot, went to see if we could find place where we might cut wood, and beeing gone fome three miles, and finding none but fmall greene wood, whereof we in the Paper-corne, by reason of our great want, were forced to cut : my Generall desirous to get refresh. ing for our weake ficke men, determined to walke about the Table, to see if wee could see any Cattell, that we might by any meanes buy for our reliefe, not thinking it would have beene fo long a journey, where we past through a most vneasie, vnequall, stony, vnheaten (and as it were) ouergrowne wildernesse, wherein often we were to descend and ascend, through many deep and hollow water-courses, ouer growne with trees from fide to fide, which were made with the raines swift descent from the hill called the Table and after a while found a beaten path (wher- 20 in we part, seeing many pens wherein Cattell had been kept) which for that it lead from-wards our ship, we were forced to leave, and againe had a most vile tiresome travell for a while, till we hit into another path, which led along the Mountaines towards the roade, and having past a while betweene the Mountaines, as neere as they would give vs leave, ftill following the beaten path which was our best guide, at length we passed ouer in the Swamp, betweene the Southermost Sugar-loafe, and the Table, at which time we had fight of the Sea side, along t which wee went ouer the fides of the Cliffes, which at length we forfooke, going by judgement East towards the Swamp, between the Norther-most Sugar-loafe and Table, where in the morning (after we had refted our felues a little by a fire) we made hafte, and past ouer the aforesaid Swampes and before breake of day we came to our Tents, where we found all our men that could be spared, 10 diffurbedly in armes, divided into two Companies, the one halfe under M. Thernton, the other vnder M. Pemberton, determining at day light to separate themselies, and againe to meete on the other fide of the Table, to goe and feeke vs, which intent our approach did preuent, refreshing our felues with what our friends had prepared for their intended journey. All the day we kept the Table on our right hand, and the Marsh on our left hand, which neere the Mountaines is much peftered with rockes, which have fallen from the top of the Mountaine. It is moift ground, and feemeth to be good pasture for Cattell. In divers places scatteringly wee sawe some trees of small stature, somewhat broad topped, bearing a fruit in bignesse and proportion like a Pineaple; but the huske not so hard, and ipungie, the feed whereof were deuoured by the birds, and the husks remaining on the trees, the leaves whereof were in forme of our Housleeke in England, but 40

At this time was their Spring, both Trees and Herbes blowing ouer the earth. It much repenteth me that I came unprounded of all forts of Garden-feeds, which might be helpefull or necesfary for reliefe of any Christians, which hereafter might come hither, which though the Saluages should somewhat spoyle, yet every Christian Captaine would seeke to augment, and re-edifie the same. Also Acornes, which in time may doe good to posteritie, for trees are not here so long in growing, as in our cold Countreys. I will not contrad: Et all fach as will efteeme it more idlenelle in me, to wish to sow where it is many to one I shall never reape; yet for my selfe I efreeme it more idlenesse in me, that I had not bin so provident as to have sought means in England to have performed the same. And I would to God I could or had meanes, to leave a profitable re- 50 membrance for Christian Trauellers vnto the ende of the world, in any place where I shall

Now having to our vtmost endeauours here finished all our necessary businesses, to wit, water ring, and somewhat relieued our weake sicke men with what refreshing wee could get, which was principally Mustels, we prepared our ships to set saile the ninth of August, which by contrary winds was croffed, vn till the thirteenth day following.

The thirteenth of August at forre in the morning, we fet faile from the roade of Saldania, hauing the wind faire at South South-east: and at fixe a clocke in the afternoone, the Cape Bona Speranza bore South-east, distant sixteene leag :es.

The fixteenth in the morning, Cape Bona Speranza bore North-west and by West, distant 60 twelue leagues, and by foure a clocke in the afternoone, wee had brought the Cape Aguilhu North-east ixteen leagues distant, our course being South-east. The eighteenth day, little wind, but an high Sea flowering on the top like a breach in should water. The nineteenth, we had a very strong gale of wind.

The fixth of September, at three of the clocke, wee difcried the Hand of Madagascar, or S. Madagasca or Learence, in the latitude of twentie three degrees, thirtie eight minutes, and at fixe a clocke we S. Learence, in anchored in twelue fathome water in the bay of S. Angustine, where we found the Union of London, the Vice-Admirall of the fourth Voyage (whose people was distressed, wanting victualls to minutes. carry them home) who related vnto my Generall, their infortunate loofing company with their Admirall and Pinnafie betweene Saldania, and the Cape Bona Speranza, and neuer fince heard of them, how they put into this bay, outward bound to feeke them, followed also after them, and put into Zancibar, ( an Iland bordering on the Abaxin coaft ) where the Portugals made shewes Three of the of fauour and trade, inticing them to land with their boat, where they betrayed and tooke three viions menbes 10 of their men; the reft feeing the danger, fled with the boat vinto the ship, who proceeded on their trayed by the icurney, till with contrary winds, before they could recover any fit Port, for want of water they Portugalizat were forced to return towards the bay of Antongil on the East South-east fide of Madagafcar, but Zarabar. the wind or the course not suiting with their determination, they put into a good Harbor or Bay of Imgomar, on the North-west corner of Madagascar, where they were a while fed with good Or Vinganora. words, and faire promises, and kind entertainement by the King; that in short time the Cape of the Vaison Merchant, in hope of trade for Ambergreece and other things, grew fo conceited of this heathen with the Cape

Kings plaine meaning, that at the Kings request went not alone to him, but perswaded his Cap- Merchantand taine and other Merchants to accompanie him, who being brought to the Kings presence, hee othersbetraifent also for the Chirurgion, Trumpet, and Drum, who refusing to goe to him presently, there ed at lungomer in Madagester. fallied out of the woods a great number of people, which attempted to force the boat and men in her, with Darts, Arrowes and Lances, who perceiuing themselues preuented by the good care and endeauours of them in the Boat, they purfued the Boat with armed Canoas out of the riuer, vntill by many shot from the ship she was rescued. And few dayes after while they lingred in hope of some good newes from their Captaine and Merchants, they attempted the ship with They attempt a demy army of some hundred Canoas, which came in order and forme of an halfe Moone, which the taking of to preuent brought themselves water faile, and shooke them off, and departed on their journey. It the Unit feemed that they could not fetch Socatra, or the Master vnwilling to go to the Red Sea, or Surat, with an armie to Priaman to lade Pepper: where the Merchant made bargaine to receive it at Teccon, an Iland Canada three leagues distant from Priaman, at fitteene, foureteene, and thirteene Ryals and an halfe of eight by the Bahar of Pepper, every Bahar is three hundred and twelve there. This ship the Generall plentifully supplyed with victuals, for whose reliefe he made the longer stay he also vnited them in love one vnto another, who at our comming in were divided, to wit, Samuel Bradfor his fober, difcreet, and prouident carriage in the Companies busines much enuied by their factious Master, and his adherents; whom wee left in the said Bay, as seeming louers and The Prior lefe

In this Bay we continued scuentie houres; it is for the most part all deepe water, and vncer- Septemb.9. taine, no ground in divers places (by divers reports) in two hundred fathome; by vs further ex- 1610. bound amining of deeps had beene in vaine, but we found all the South shore in a manner, from the for England. Wester point to the high cliffe-land, all stat rockie, whose ledges are to be seene dry at the low water. At the Easter end of the rockes neere the cliffe, wee anchored in twelue fathome, and might have rid neerer the shore in seven fathome: we came in out of the Sea with a strong gale at South South-west, but comming neere vn:o the land, the wind grew duller, yet blew reasonable fresh in the day, but in the night ordinarily calme the time we were there; but that beeing the newe Moone, which makes the fewlest weather in the Countryes, I cannot say of other times. On the land it seemes alwaies to be very hot, especially when the Sunne is to the South-wards

In this place are two trees of divers kinds, some so full of fat sappe, that fire beeing put to it Strange trees. as it standeth greene, of it selfe it will runne vp, blazing in the leases and branches: the Timber so is foft, and the leanes and boughes yeelds a yellow fap. An other fort also of trees, whose timber is neere as hard as Lignum vita, and of colour white, with a small brown heart, whether any kind of white Saunders I know not: that wood which we cut off for fire-word in the Peppercome, which was the most plentifull of any fort there, did all hang trased with cods of greene fruit (as big as a Bean-cod in England) called Tamerim: it hath a very fowre tast, and by the Apothecaries is held good against the Scurule; our Admiralls men who had more leafure gathered lome as it was greene, for their particular vies. Here is also plentie of an herbe (which for his forme is scarce to be discerned from a Semperuine) whereof the Alloes, called Alloes Socatrina is Semperuina made of all forts, but I know not whether these faluage people have either the knowledge or the

The people, by what occasion I know not, forbore to come to vs, so that wee gat no kind of 60 The people, by what occasion 1 know not, roisone to come to Cattell for refreshing, neither beife nor mutton, whereof others heretofore have been offered for a Ryall of eight an Oxe; but now it is faid, that for want of government in the Vnion, when any was brought downe, what the Factor did prouidently forbeare to keepe downe the price, dif-

but went to Achin, and there deale for some fit commodities with the Guzerates, & from thence of 100, armed ordered fellowes for their owne particular, gaue what the faluages demanded, ic that now they battering hurt- can scarce get any for tenne shillings a piece. It seemes, that in all places of this lland, men must stand upon their guard, for the people are treacherous. Yet by report, stout and valiant, and not ignorant in ordering of their people inbattell array, as it feemed by their order at Gungemar, when they affaulted the Vnion. Their weapons are Bowes and arrower. Lances, and small Darts which they carry in bundles.

D.fordered Note.

Now having performed all our necessary businesses, as wooding and watering, and relieved our Countrey-men to the vemost of our powers, we set faile out of the said Bay. The ninth day of September, at foure a clocke after-noone, we fet faile out of the Bay of S.

Seprember, Note.

Augustice, leaving the Vnion there as arore-faid. The one and twentieth, the wind beeing at Fast South-East, and the Current by my indgement setting South-west, wee were intangled with a Lee-shore, which we called the Caribas, which are divers small llands, or which also lieth divers ledges of Rockes that are by the breach of the Sea onely differned; and ipent fixe dayes before we could quit our felues of them.

beeing betweene tenne and eleuen degrees South latitude. This Coast lieth neerest North-easterly, and South-westerly, and the wind all these size daies betweene the East North-east, and East South-east; so that against our wills wee were still forced to Lee-ward, though by towing with our Boates, and otherwise, we endeauoured to get off. This place by my judgement may be to the North-ward of Mozambique, for ewhat more then seuentie leagues: by night for the most part we were neerest those dangers, which were 10 alwaies betweene vs and the shore, that wee could never discover neere the maine, nor give any good judgement of the distances betweene Hand and Hand, neither fet them downe their

The greatest danger is in the strength of the Current setting on, and no place to anchor in, beeing deepe water close aboord the Rockes; and though somewhat neere these Rockes you haue ground, yet it is so deepe and foule ground, that there is no anchoring; and on the Norther part hereof, though by my elimation wee were little more then two leagues from the shore, yet wee had no ground in an hundred and fiftie fathome. These are sandy Ilands, and (for the most part) were full of Trees. After it grewe darke every night, wee might fee the fires on shore made by the Countrey-people, but wee had no list to spend so much time as to goe on shore to speake with them. After it pleased God that we had once 10 got cleare of these dangers, wee to our great admiration, found the Current to carry vs to the North-wards, as much more as by our judgement the shippe went : as when by our judgement wee might goe some fifteene leagues, we went thirty leagues. The second of October we had much raine.

Current.

The ninth, we found the Current to cease, except it set to the East-wards, which we could not discerne. The tenth, eleventh, and tweittin, we found our telues to loofe every day, more and more by the Current.

The feuententh at Sun-rifing, wee descried two Ilands, which for their likelihood are called the Duas Irmanas (or the two fifters) which he one from the other West by South, 4 and East by North, and are distant from the West point of Zacotora some seaten leagues and an halie; we steering North North-east with the West point of Zocotora, had these depths, twentie three, twenty fo ire, and twentie fixe fathome, distant from the faid point some three leagues and an halfe. After wee had got about the Wester point, wee found the wind to shorten, so that it would not permit vs to leade it alongst the coast, but by the helpe of a Current we were put off, the Admirall and the Darling anchored in twelve fathome, while I in the Pepper-corne, through calmes, and a gale of the land, could not get into shoald water to anchor in, till the ninth day at noone, what time wee anchored in twelve fathome, neere to a Towne called Gallanzee, and toward the coole of the evening ,I went with the Pinnasse and Saine, vinto a low landie point, thwart the Admirall and to Darling, a league to the East-ward or our Shippe, to trie to get Fish for refreshing of our people; hoping in the coole of the Euening there to meete with my Generall, which fell out accordingly to my defire, God bleffing vs with abundance of Fish, which ferued all the whole Fleete two meales, and much longer if it would have kept. Heere my Generall informed mee, how that the people with whom in the Morning hee had spoken, had confirmed that which hee greatly doubted; which to our griefe would prolong our Voyage: which was, that the Easterly Monfon was alreadie come, and all our hopes of getting to Cambaya were frustrate for this nine Moneths, of which wee expe-Sted to bee better informed by the King at Tamerin, the place of his refidence.

The twentieth day being Saterday, we anchored at a point neare fix leagues short of Tama- 60 rin, and fine leagues from the point of Galanzee, which we did by the helpe of a Sea-turne, which continued long that night, but not contented by gaining and holding that place, till we could by day bee better aduited, by reason of an edy tide by the shore on the West-side; by the shore where wee rode, on the West-side thereof, which forced our sternes to wind-ward, and a little flattering gale of the land, wee weighed, and were forced off into the Current : So that the one and twentieth day wee were carried backe thwart of the Towne of Galanza, and farre off in

CHAP. 12. S.1. Long drought in Socatora. The Kings entertainment.

The two and twentieth, we in the Pepper-Corne were like to have bin put cleane off the Hand, but the Admirall and Darling got into shoald water, and there anchored, and about two a clock I also anchored in the Bay Weltward of Gallanza in fix fathom, & presently went on store with Gallanza my Pinnafle, carrying Barricos to feeke fresh water; going with a flagge of truce, to fee if any of the Inhabitants would come to mee, for I carnellly defired to speake with some of them, in to hope to have procured some Goates, or other refreshing for our people, but none, as it seemeth, durft come to vs, for feare of the Kings displeasure, who will have nothing sold to any stranger, but from himsel e; it seemeth he would have none of his people have to doe with any strangers, but that all intelligences, allowances, for fresh victuals and prites, must come from himselfee, as afterwards I found, though now I wondered to fee the people stand afarre off in troupes, and came not neare vs, which made me thinke they had spies attending on them by the Kings order to be the cause. So at night having filled thirteene Barricos of water, I returned abourd : this night being a high water at nine of the clocke, at a full Moone, I esteemed it slowed vpright, betweene ten and eleuen foote; all the time of flowing the ilreame lets to the Northward, I meane close by the shore and with the ebbe and a small gale of the shore, we set saile, and stretcht to it along it the shore some foure or fine mile, thwart of the sandy Bay of our fishing, and neare our Admirall, and finding the Currant there to let off to the Westward, we anchored till the next Currant.

helpe of the tide or wind.

The fine and twentieth being Thuriday, as the wind ferued we fet faile, and about eleuen of the clocke we anchored in eight fathome, a mile from the land, right against the Towne of Tama. Tamarin. rin, where the Kings house is North from the Castle, on the top of the hill about the Towne; at our anchoring the Generall shot off fine pieces of Ordnance, I three, and the Darling one. The Generall fent Matter Femell on land, handfornely attended with the Pinnaffe, fitted with a red Crimfon tilt, prefenting the King with a Prefent, which was from the Generall, a faire gift Cup of ten ounces, a Sword-blade, and three yards of Stammell broadcloath. The King to re-to ceine them, had by the water-fide in readinesse fitted, an Orrange-tawny coloured Tent, where he fate attended on by the principall of his Countrey-men, the Arabs and a guard of small shot; they continued conference more then an houre : hee thankfully received the Generalls Present. bade him welcome, shewing defire to fee him on land, promifing him water free, and what else the lland did afford, at reason, according to the drought of the lland, which continued two yeeres without raine; for Alloes not a pound to be had, his owne Frigat being gone to fell it in the Red-lea. For the Afterfion, he faith, came first hither in the moneth of February, and finding a Gazerat ship here, within eight dayes shee departed in her company towards the Redfea, and eight dayes after came in her Pinnaffe, who made no ftay, but followed her Admirall, and in Iuly, both the Ascension and Pinnasse returned out of the Red-lea to Zacotora, where they The Ascension 40 hastened to take in water: and soone after departed towards Cambaya. Further hee faith, that and Pinnasse his Frigat being at the Port of Bazain, neere Damon in India, they were informed by the Por- caftaway vpon tugals, that the faid shippe and Pinnasse arriving on the Coast too Soone, before the Winter and the Coast of foole weather was past, were both cast away, but the men faued. The King fent the Generall India. a Present of twelue Goates.

The fix and twentieth being Friday, my Generall went well attended on, and with a guard The King visito visit the King; our ships gaue him, as before, five, three and one peeces of Ordnance, and hee ted. was received on land by the Kings order, with ten great flot, & otherwise he was received by the King, in orderly and civill fort, and had both for him and his followers fo good cheere provided, as the place could prefer ly afford but the King thewed no willingnes that we should here make

50 any longer abode, for he would not yeeld that wee should fet up our Pinnasse heere; his excuse was this that neither his own ship, nor any other, as the Guzerat, which he hath great profit by, dare not come into this place while we are heere: and further, I suppose the time we stay heere is very chargeable to him in this respect; for to shew the strength of his Towne, he hath drawne downe the Arabs and others from all parts of the Land, and while they flay heere, they line on his charge, which I thinke is the only occasion he would have our absence : this day wee filde a great part of our water. Saterday, we almost made an end of watering out of a pond, fed by fprings descending from the hilles. Sunday our people went on land to recreate themselves and

This King of Zacotora is called Mulli Amore Benfaide, and now is here but Vice-roy under his King of Fatte. 60 father, who is King of Farter in Arabia not far from Aden, and comes into the fea at Camricam. or Canacayon. Hee faith, that his father holds warre against the Turker of Aden, in his owne defence, for hee denied vs a letter to the Gouernour of Aden, faying, hee would not doe vs to much wrong. The people that he vieth for his Honor and strength in Zoccaira, are the Arabs, the rest

CHAP.12. S.2.

that live in most feruile slavery, are the old Inhabitants of the Hand, which have been banished

Sanguis Draco-

280

There is for Merchandize growing upon Zoccatra, Alloes Soccatrina, which they make about August, of an herbe like vnto Semper-vina, which we have in Spaine, but no great quantitie, not passing a Tunne in a yeare; there is a small quantitie of Sanguis Draconis, or Dragons blood, a little whereof our Factors bought at twelve pence a pound. And Dates which serve them for bread, which the King fells at five Rialls of eight by the hundred. Cattell for mans fullenance these, Bulls and Cowes at twelve Rialls of eight a piece, Grats at one Riall a piece, Sheepe at halfe a Riall a piece, and Hennes at halfe a Riall a piece; all exceeding small, according to the drie rockie barrennelle of the Iland : wood at twelue pence a mans burthen; euere particular is a 10 very deare penny worth : and what else this lland may yeeld, I am yet to be informed of, but of rockes and stones, drie and bare, it seemes the whole Iland is composed.

II.

His day all our important businesse being done, wee set saile, directing our course to Aden-wards in the Red-sea, taking sease of the King with three shot out of the #### of Abba del Curia, Arabia Fœlix, Aden and Moha, and the treacherous dealing of both places.

Admirall, one out of the Pepper-Corne, and one out of the little Darling. Our course, after wee gate off the land, alongst by Abba del Curia, to Cape Guardafui, which is the Eastermost point of Abax, was nearest West, distant fours and thirtie leagues, to wit from are fome halfe a mile in length; thefe rockes are not white of themselves, but made white with point of Zacotora, and at two a clocke, the white rocke, called Saboyna, wee left North on our

Star-boord fide, which beareth North-well and by West, foure leagues of the most Wester point of Zacotora; and at three aclocke after-noone, we descried the two highest Mountaines of Abba del (wia, leaving it on our Larboord fide, two leagues and a halte off, and the two Rockes on our Star-boord fide diffant halfe a league; at noone wee were in North latitude twelue degrees

we descried the Cape Guard sfui, but it was night before we came neare it; so that we past it by

The first of November, being Thursday, at Sun-rising we were thwart of the middle of Ab-and seuenteene minutes, the variation seuenteene degrees and sine and thirtie minutes: this 40

The one and thirtieth, being Wednesday, at eleuen a clocke we were thwart of the Wester

They depart for Aden.

the Wester point of Zacotora, to the East end of Abba del Curia, is fourteene leagues. And Abba del Curia. Abba del Curia a long narrow ragged lland, may be in length Eaft and West, some five leagues; from the West end of Abba del Curia, to Cape Guardafui, is sisteene leagues; on this lland, Abba del Curia, the King of Zoccatra hath some people and Goats; North from the middle white Rockes, thereof, neare three leagues, are two great white rockes, neare adjoyning one to the other, and to espede Gurda. after-noone we met with a currant, which fet vs to the South-ward. At one in the after-noone, night, without any true discouery thereof. The fecond, being Friday, in the morning wee were thwart of an high Mountaine, nine leagues Westward from the Cape Guardafui, and betweene that point, and another high point, fine leagues distant West southerly by the Compasse, there is a low sandie point, lying one league and a quarter oil, into the Sea; and some three leagues more Westerly, we anchored, and went on land with all our Boats for to cut wood; wheref we in the Pepper-Corne had great need; heere we met with some of the Inhabitants, who informed vs that the last Mount we past, is called Feluck, or by the Portugals, Falix: but so some as they knew we were Christians, they fled from vs.

ba del Caria, bearing West South-west distant ten leagues.

the filing of Birds.

The third day, being Saturday, we landed againe, and cut more wood; and after-noone we fet faile, standing on our way Westward towards the Red-sea, continuing our course till the fifth day ten a clocke, at which time we deficied the Coast of Arabia Falix, bearing North Northweft, and North by East, being distant from the nearest land, some twelve leagues; at noone I found my selfe in thirteene degrees eight and twentie minutes North latitude : at Sun-let wee were diffant from the land some twelve leagues; the Mountaines within the Land all high, very rough, without shew of grasse, wood, or any other fruits linesse: wee now directing our course West and by South, as the Coast lyeth, soone expecting to see the Citie of Aden, for that with my first fall with the land, I esteemed my selfe not about four and twentie leagues there to the Eastward thereof : but whereas I esteemed the ships made their way North-west by North, ouer the Gulfe, by reason of the Currant, we finde they have made a little better then North; and that at our fall with the land, we were little leffe then threefcore leagues fhort of Aden, we coneinued our course alongst the Coast with a good faile all day, and a short faile all night, to the end

not to ouer-shoote Aden all the way, for the most part in fine and twentie, twentie, fifteene, twelue, ten and eight fathoms. Wednesday at Sun-setting, below the Mountaine, being very neare it, on the sudden we deferied Aden, which is fituate viner the foote of an infruitfull mountaine, a place where I should A description scarce have looked for a Towne, but it is set there for strength, where it is very defencible, and of the southern not by any enemie cafily to be wonne, if the defendants within be men of relolation, and fo that of the Citic of it be formerly victualled, and provided of munition; and to Sea-ward, though it be in a man-Alexin Arabia ner drie at low-water, there stands an high Rocke somewhat larger then the Tower of London, which is not by enemies to be in haft aften led, by reafon it is so iteepe, and that but one way by to parrow steps to get vp, where foure men may keepe downe a multitude: this Rocke is so walled, flankered, and furnished with Ordnance, as it feetheth to me, it may command both the Towne and Roade: yet who will avoid it, may ride in nine fathome water without their command, or within their command, from nine fathome downward. Also a lit le diffunce to the Northwards of the forefail Rocke, is another rocke, being low, al noft even with the water, which is of small compasse, whereon is a Fort built and well furnished with Ordnance, the fouldiers visually continuing in this Garrison of Aden I could never vinderstand, but according as occasions are, they are drawne down from other Iuland Townes. The low countrie adioyning within it, doth Jupy ly it with provision, and partly with their Carkes, which raffe in Trade from Aden to Barbora, a Towne right over on the Abevin fide, from whence they bring Cattell, and much fruit, and prouision, with Mitth and Incense, and what else I must conceale till f reher information gotten. The latitude of This Towne standeth in the Latitude of twelve degrees, and five and thirtie minut s, the varia- zeen 1, degre tion Westerly, is twelve degrees and fortie minutes; it floweth, by estimation, vpr ght between 35, min the fix and seven foote water on the change day: a South-east by East, or North-west by West winton We-Moone, maketh a full Sea: this mountaine, at whose foots the Towne standeth, is a Periosula feetly 12. degre pointing out into the S:a, and toward the maine is first a narrow necke of fandie ground, and 40, mm. within of the like, a larger marth-like ground firstching up to the Mountaines, which may be from the Towne lixteene or twentie mile. At or refrit an horing, the Gouernour in the darke of the evening fent an Arab in a Canoa to view our ships, who retufed to come abourd, though he

Thursday morning, the same Arab came abound the Admirall from the Mir or Gouernour, to understand what we were: if friends, we should be welcome to land: this while was a Present Thersenda making ready to fend the Gouernour, which was a graded Turkie-fashioned Peece, and a principall fword blade, fent to land by John Williams, and one M. Walter, Linguists, with other Fa- Gonetnour of ctors to accompany them. The Thrkes not permitting them to come into the Towne, entertain Aden. ned them without the Gate, neare the water, fide, yet with great shew of joy, pretending much kindneffe to our Nation, with whom they fay they have had much familiaritie in Stambola, Aleppo, and other places, but vied not one work of any trading with vs, but framed their ipsech to make vs vnderstand, that they curry day expected the comming of thirtie thousand fouldiers: which to vs feemed very strange, that so barren a Countrey as that seemed to bee, could yeeld 40 prouision for so many people. But understanding their speeches proceeded of feare, it was signified, that our Generall's request vnto the Gouernour was, that for his money he would give him a Pilot, to carrie his ships to Moha: then he told them that he was but Deputy to the Mir or Governour, which was out of the Towne, and the next morning would be returned; and then the Generall should be thereof informed. He fent the Generall a Prefent, which was two Barbora theep, with broad rumps and small tailes, some Plantans, and other fruits, wherewith our people returned.

Friday, the Generall fent agains betimes in the morning, to require a Pilot for Moha; then they were brought into the Mirs house, and fill continued with faire words; but the Mir was not yet returned; but when the Deputie-gouernour heard our ships were vider sayle bound a-50 way, he fent no Pilot, but a request that if the Generall would not flay and trade with all his Turkihurich ships, yet that he would stay one there for their supply, demaunding the prises of divers of our Commodities, which gaue prefent flow of content, if performance might follow accordingly, with glozing flowes of Indico, Ollibanum, Mirh, and divers others things there fit for vs, but before the Mellenger came to give knowledge to the Generall, our thips were to farre about the point, that by reason of the Current, we could not againe get about the Easter side o. the point in fight of the Towne, but anchored thwart of a Bay on the South fide of the Towne: The Generall feeing divers people fishing in the Bay, and great store of people of fashion on the hil, went to the thore fide in his Pinnalle, to enquire of them when the Carrent might change, and that we might get about. The Deputie governour shewed himselfe angry, pretending our comming 60 was to difcouer their firength, and with no good intent, in fo much that lohn Williams was in doubt they would have flated him : but the Mir now prefent being lately come to Towne, fee- Miris Lord med not fo rigorous, but diffembled the matter, giving good words, granting a Pilot for Moha; yet delired that one of our thips might flay for their supply, faying, that that Towne by former Governours ill viage of strangers was growne out of Trade, which he did endeacour to fet on

CHAP. 12. S. 2.

greachery of

foote againe, hoping by vs to make a beginning: and further, that as he was a Gouernour, fo had he a Balha was superiour ouer him, from whom if all our ships departed without trading at his Towne, he should have blame, in that it would be imputed to his ill vsage of vs, to drive vs a. way. And for that we understood by others, that the former part of his speech was true, our Generall and we thought the latter part to be true also ( which was meerely to deludevs) which the Generall by the Messenger did in a manner grant, so we could find fafe riding for our ships, the dangerous Easterly Monton on this shore, which he made slight or little regard of, wishing our ruine, and no fafetie.

Munday morning early, John Williams was againe fent to the Gouernour for his Pilot, according to the last nights promise, and had now answer from the Gouernour, that the Pilots wife would not permit he should goe, valesse we left foure of the principallest men in the shippes in pawne till his fafe returne; which bred in vs a generall diflike of their inconstancie, yet the Generall, for performance of his former promise, determined to leave me behind in the Pepper-corne. but altered his determination in my direction; for whereas before I was directed not to carry a. boue a quarter part of our goods on land at one time; now we were to carry none at all: for lince they will not trust vs with one of their rascall people, but on such disgracefull tearmes, therefore he thought fit not to trust them with any of our goods; but if they had need of any of our commodities, as they pretended to have, they should buy and pay for it abourd the ship; and in case they miltrust any cuill dealing, we thould exchange pledges; so that for so many as for doing their businesse they should need to have aboord, we should deliver on land so many of the netrest 20 like in qualities if not liking of this, that we may follow our Admirall to Moha. The fameday about noone, all things being determined of, the Generall with his owne ship and Darling, departed towards Moha, and as they prepared to let faile, they discried a faile in the Offing, which of 90, tunnes. they supposed to be a Guzerat bound to Moha, out of which the Generall had hope to procure a Pilot, itood off with her a little while, till perceiving it to be a smaller sayle then before they expected, gaue ouer their chafe, and stood on their course towards Babe!-mandel.

Tuelday, we laboured with long warps to get vp, both against wind and Current, whereby we got well vp (as men ftriuing to halten their owne harmes) beeing thwart of the fishing Bay. The Mir of Aden fent a Boat and a Messenger abourd, to defire to speake with the Merchants, to know whether they purposed to trade with them or no : whereupon M. Fowler, John Williams, and the Purfer ( for other butinesse) went on land, the Merchants declaring to the Mir in what 10 manner we had direction to trade with them. The Mir not liking of that way, in no wife accepted of fuch trading: this feemed a contradict to his purpose and policie; therefore least after their returne aboord, I should depart for Moha, as they said, he thought best to detaine those three men, thereby to procure him fome thing, though he pretended that he staied them for anchorage, and other duties, amounting to fifteene hundred Venetianoes of gold, every one at one Ryall and an halfe of eight.

Before this Towne of Aden, I made my unprofitable aboad untill the fixteenth of December, liuing in continuall danger, if any storme had happened, which is there euer very doubtfull on this Monfon, or time of the yeare: by romaging I omitted no meanes for bringing our goods in 49 readineffe, if fort should happen that in the end we find sale or trade with them : for notwithstanding by the varietie of tricks, whereby from day to day they fallly deluded our people in their hand, as to fend Messenger after Messenger to my Generall to Moha, to obtaine license to bring our goods into their Towne, and then the Merchants would refert out of all places in the Countrey neere-hand, to buy the same, which might be said, least we had discourred the vnlikelihood of any Merchants in that Towne, likely to doe the fame; yet could I never conceit hope of trade or honeit dealing among it them.

Mir,or Amir,

or Emir, figni-

Three of our men staied on fieth Lord.

All the time I lay there for the most part, I sent my Pinnasse every two or three daies to land, to know how my Factors did, with fome one or two men befides the Cocks gings, which whatfocuer they had to doe, they were curteously dealt withall, the fouldiers frequenting their com- 50 pany, giving them drinke; and if any man Iew or Bannian had over reckoned them in the price of any thing, they would ever be readie to do them right: all which I make account was done by the Gouernours direction, the better to abuse vs, by drawing our people to conceit well of them, and trust their flatterie and lyes, wherein they excell : and on the refort of any extraordinary people into the Towne, they would tell our men, that they were Merchants, come to see if we had landed any of our goods for the to buy, when they were fouldiers called in out of some other necre adjoyning Inland Townes, upon some plot in their head newly denifed. And likewise our Factors in person were most times kindly vsed, and were reforted vnto by such as the Gouernour appointed, and that should tel his tale: whereas he had so prouided, that not any, not so much as an Arab fisher-man nor other, were permitted to come neere vnto me, least they should tell me the truth, 60 to his disaduantage. By my people in the Pinnasse I sent of purpose to discouer, by whom I am informed, this Citie in times palt hath been great and populous, but at this time, the houses both thepresentate great and small are greatly ruinated and sunke in everie part of the Towne, shops of merchandise there are none of any account, Merchants none to be differred worthy of that calling for money feemeth to be very feant amongst them, which appeared when our men offered to change a peece of eight for Aspers, they vie to take it from hand to hand, gazing as at a strange thing; an ill signe in a place where a ships lading of merchandize is brought to fell.

This present Gouernour time growing neere out that he must be gone, and therefore before his departure, would have been glad to have feene vs to foolish as to land fome of our goods by any deuse, would often commend Captaine Sharpeighs confidence in them, who was here in the Ascension fixteene moneths before vs, and how at first he brought goods on land without miftruft, and fold it, and his men came boldly on land like Merchant men, of which fince wee did not the like; he made doubt whether we were so or not, and that he tooke delight to heare his 10 Trumpets found on his walls; all which I tooke to be no other then hooking deuifes, and vntrue delutions, for I cannot thinke, but that if at the first, like harmelesse men they trusted much, they repented it before they went away. Captaine Sharpeigh was the first of our Nation that came Capt Sharpeigh here, and perchance might passe away in some reasonable fort: but since then they have had the fift of our time to aduise themselves how to doe more villanie,) which they have, nothing else to plead. Nation at Assa My conceit is, that atour first comming they made account to buy our goods without moeney, and that their plot in defiring first one shippe to stay, was two-fold. First, it was more likely for them to worke their wills on one shippe, then on three. Secondly, in procuring the stay of this heere, the other two were the better to bee dealt withall at Moha, fince what villanie could be wrought on them at both places, was for the femice-20 and benefit of our Basha: And they knowing that we were ignorant, that this winter time now enfuing was so tempestious, and writt for any such businesse of Commerce, and that no ship could long stay there without their fauour and friendship, as in the case of fresh water to drinke onely, if there were no wind or Sea to be dreaded, which are both often most vehement, and at Aden is low shoare, nothing to hinder the mayne Suffe and violence of the mounting billowes, whereby they might with good judgement thinke, that in little time we might bee forced from our Read at nine fathome, into fine fathome neere to the Towne, in some shelter of the Iland, and vinder command of their Ordnance. From whence without their leave, we could not have carryed her out againe, or if this faile, he might thinke by coloured kindnesse, or some other deuice for our owne pleatures, or by want of water, sometime to draw some store of our people, and that of 30 the better fort on land to them, which alreadie he hath : whereby to force them to procure the rest to bring in the ship, but indeed hee had ill counsell. For his haste spoyled his Market at the first, by staying our three men, doubting our ship would be gone : which made me very suspicious and warie in fending but few men on land at once.

Saturday, I fent my first Letters to the Generall to Moha, by a Souldier of Aden, fitted for the Gouernours turne, whose returne was so ordere l, that he neuer came neere any of vs with an answere: he pretended that the Governour of Moha promised delivery of the same, but prefently fent him backe with a Letter to Aden.

Thursday, the Gouernour rid out of Towne, who remayned absent till the first of Decem- Capt. District. ber, in the meane time our people in Prison were more hardly vied, paying in a manner as much Leuers to Sir 40 to the Mellenger for fetching their victuals, as it coll besides having little countenance or faucur H. Middleton any way shewed them: and it was told them that the Mir was gone, and a new was to come in suppressed. his flead, but it proued not fo for that time.

Saturday, about mid-day, the same Mir returned againe into the Towne, and came to our men in Prilon, speaking kindly vnto them, and causing good proution to bee made for them, at his owne cost, whereby he guld vs by pretended friendship, promiting nothing but kindnesse and good dealing, to foone as we should begin to trade, and then they shall have their full libertie without payment of the aforelaid fifteene hundred Venetianos for merly demanded; the cuflome fine in the hundred, all other charges reasonably, and readie Gold for what wee fold, and therefore withing that as before we had fent a Foole of our Message, that now we should fend a 50 man of our owne, with a guide of his, whom wee might be fare would bring true answere from our Generall. This day I made shew to bee preparing to bee gone with the ship : aboord came a Letter from John Fowler to impart to mee this joyfull newes, vrging mee againe to write to the Generall, to know his pleafure herein for landing of our goods, wherein I was not fo streightly tyed, but I might haur done it my selfe, if I had seene any signe or likelihood of good dealing: which feeing no cause of encouragement I kept to my selfe, to the end not to bee viged by the importunitie of others to doe any thing vnaduifedly, which might either prejudice my friends or wrong my felte; now feeing the time was before me till May, to goe to Moba (for follong the Easterly Monion lasteth) at such time as rigorous weather, or being wholy frustrate of trade, should drive me hence, and being once gone, I cannot come hither agains till the firt of May or 60 lune, what soeuer thereby were to bee gotten, wherefore, for divers respects, I defired to heare

Munday, I dispatched away the Messenger with a Letter to my Generall (which prooued an after-griefe to me) and eight dayes after we had nothing, but shewes of kindnesse and good quarter, thinking long till our Mellenger returned, that we might beginne our good Markets.

Saturday, my Boat-fwaine informed mee of his great wants of small Cordage, for divers purpoles, withing that he and fome others might goe afhore, to lay fome on the frand by the Towne wall, now while we had leifure, before our greater businesse came in hand, for which I fent to land to intreate the Gouernour that our people might doe such a businesse in factie vnder his wall : which was promifed with great fauour, in the best and conuenientest place they could find, with a house at night to put up their things till the next day. In the meane-time the Gouernour fet Smithes to making of thackles for our people, and some of them were by signes told of it, which suspecting nothing, tooke it as a merry lest, which afterwards they found in earnest. Wednesday, after-noone, my men were all betrayed that went on shoare, bound, shackled, and pinioned, and some put in the Stockes : all tortured and grieuously abused, stript of their money 10 and all elfe they had : my Pinnaffe loft, the gings gone among it the Rope layers. So there was two Merchants, a Purfer, and one to attend on them, a gadding Apothecarie, my Chirurgion, and Master (aulker (who carryed n:y Letter to Moba as aforelaid) my Boat-Iwaine, and one of his mates, two quarter Matters, the Cocper, Carpenter and Gunners mate, and my Cock-swaine. and fine more of the Cockes ging, which in all are twentie persons, some few for their pleasures, the rest to worke, faw the ging who were most of them appointed to keepe the Pinnalle, but being out of my fight, they did what they lift, and the Boat-swaine seemed to want their helpe Munday, I fet faile out of the Southermost Road of Aden, directing my course towards Moba (through the streight of Babel-mandell, in the entrance of the Redde Sea, being distant from 20 Aden (West by South) thirtie two leagues. The Arabs both here and in all other places of A. rabia, of all degrees, are in great feruitude to the Turkes.

Twentie more of our men be-

284

An Eclipfe of the Moone.

Thursday, at foure in the morning, the Moone was eclipfed, and at one in the after-noone, I past the 2.3, or streight being halfe a league over, having in the midst ten fathome water, and to a ards both tides eight, fixe or foure fathome depth, as one lift to borrow to, and may be some two miles through which fets a good firong tyde, both ebbe and floud. Heft on my flar-boord fide, a Mountaine and Rockie Peninfula, extending from the Mayne, beeing all neere low-land, with a low narrow necke of fand, and on the lar-board fide, I left a low Iland of fome fiue miles long Eatl and West, being also Rockie; betweene the West end thereof, and the Abaxin Coast, for ought I can differne is a cleere channell of three or neere foure leagues broad, but I thinke not 30 much yield by the thips, for that the water is deepe, and not for anchoring, befides the other is the neerer way. We being past the Bab, were ignorant what dangers lay in our way, or how farre within the streight the Towne of Moba stood, whether in a River or Bay, or how else we knew not, but discouering we kept by our lead betweene nine and teuen fathomes, all alongst the Arab Coaft, and as the day light ended we anchored in eight fathome, nine leagues within the Bab, against a little Mount standing alone by the Sea-side. Friday, at fixe a-clocke in the morning we fet fayle, flanding alongst North, and North by

West, as our depths directed vs, first betweene nine and seuen fathomes, and lastly, betweene fixe and foure fathemes, when wee came to have the shoales without vs; but as wee came neere to Moba eighteen Moba, which is seituated eightene leagues within the Bab: on the verge of a low findy barren 49 ground. Our Admirall we taw rid alone (and no Darling) some source mile into the Sea, in fixe fathome, and riding with two shot ahead, by reason of the vehemencie of the weather, which erit I suspected not : My present ca es were somewhat in this vnknowne passage, for the safetie of the thip, which without great vigilancie and regard to our depths, might have beene fet fast to our further famine: but the neerer I came, the more my griefe gnawing at my heart, as one while reuiuing my griefe for the lose of so many of my men, and then casting doubts, what might befall my friends here; their Pinnaffe mand, I fee lye along by the ships fide wherein was Master Thornton the Master, but durst not put off till wee were thwart of them, for feare they should not recouer their owne ship againe, being once put off by reason of the wind and current. I being fomewhat neere, as a fignall of heavie newes, they puld downe their Flagge, whereby I 50 understood some misfortue was befallen my Generall, I beeing anchored, hee with the Pinname aboord; where after the blasts of passion and griefe (by the defects and frailtic of the fleih) somewhat blowne ouer, he began by degrees to informe me of all things that had happened fince wee parted at Aden: as first of their quicke passage from Aden to the Bab, where they tooke in a Pilot to bring them to Moha, where the fourteenth of Nouember they arrived, that was from Aden in thirtie houres, yet their misfortune was such, that against the Towne and very neere the Road, whether by mif-vnderstanding, or the Pilots neglect to the depths, or be-Nouc. 14.1610, ing not acquainted with the working of our shippes, it is not materiall to examine, but on the fands the shippe came aground, and so stucke fast that her bilged stood on the shoallest of the 60 bankes; fo as notwithstanding the great Sea by force of the wind, the head and sterne being in deeper water, did heave and fet without any painful striking, but to get her oil without lightning they could not, wherefore they could not be precise in trusting themselves without pledges in the hands of the Tinkes, who omitted nothing to preuent our doubt of being welcom, with great varietie of friendly promites in every thing we demanded, and request once made, they were plyed with Barkes to lighten the thip, wherein they vied great expedition, we landing as well our Wheat-meale, Vineger, Sea-coales, Pitch and Tarre, with our vinbuilt Pinnaffe, and other proudions which came next hand, or in the way, as well Tinne, Lead, Iron, and other merchandize to be fould, and staued neare all our water. And of all others, Master Laurence Femell feemed most fearefull, for that in a private Boate he speedily carryed all his things on land, leaung nothing that he regarded aboord of the ship of his owne.

houres , with great traugile to lighten and shift The Trades The thip now having laine a ground the ship, they got her affoat. 10 It is also to be vinderstood, that this part of Arabia, from Eastward of A- affort. den, and up the Red-sea to Cameran, which is threescore and ten leagues within Bab-mandell, and I know not how farre within the Land, is called the Land of Teoman, and now governed or Ayanan.

by one leffor Basha, whose residence is in the Citie of Zenan, which they account to bee by moderate travaile fifteene dayes journey; by poste, I thinke they goe and come in that time, And the Gouernours of Aden and Moha, which is the better place, in that it is of more refort of thips; and these Governours are yeerely placed by him; as at this present in Moha is one Regib Aga by his place or office, who was his fertile flate attending on him, and he was preferred to Aden, where he commanded the other yeere, when Captaine Sharpeigh was there, and for that he was a beneficiall Knaue to his Master , he was preferred to Moha, a better place.

Now at our first arrivall, he sent to give knowledge vnto his Master, with what informations best pleased him, and was to stay for directions from his Master how to deale with vs; wee truthed them as men of humane feeling, being ignorant of what was against vs. Now while the messenger went to know the Bashas pleasure how to dispose of vs: The Aga was laying the ground of his Treason, and drawing enery thing toward readinesse, for the effecting of his desired haruest, omitting nothing which might further his villanous purpose, Also by drawing into the Towne from the nearest neighbour Hand Townes and Countrey adioyning, such and so many foul liers as might fit his turne, whose rigour and malice against vs hee neglected not to pronoke, by scandalous reproches, as might best serie for his purpose, as that wee were Pirats and Christians, (which they account as bad enemies to their holy Prophet Mahomet and his Lawes)

30 and that our comming was to discouer how to ruinate and destroy the holy houses of their god, as Meca and Medina, and what feruice they should doe to God and their Country in destroying et vs; as also informed them that wee had so much money and goods, as if they would behaue themselves valiantly when time served, will make them and their Countrey happie, with so many other deluding deuices, as feemed fit for fuch an action; meane while our innocent distrustlesse men hired and fitted their houle, and preparing against the returne of the Basha his answere, for present sale of their commodities, by the aboundant shewes and promises of fauour to them. The Aga ener viging, by wondering at our small quantitie of goods in the ship of so great burthen, and euer were Boats lent for goods, after the shippe was affoat, and that there was no more, till further occasion to be landen; his greedineste feemed to be fuch, as the poore Arab Barque-men 40 shewed feare to returne without lading; but when he perceived there was no more at present to be had, he went another way to worke; which was, he informed our Merchants, that all ships that came to this Towne in Trade, their Captaine, for their better assurance, as a pledge of good dealing, received the Gran Segniors Vest for their better securitie, which being once inuested in the view of the people, no man after durit offer them any wrong; as all the principall officers of enery ship had signes of curtesies, the which vnlesse our Captaine doe come on land and accept of, he should never thinke him the great Turkes friend, nor beleeve his meaning was good, as hee pretended, and therefore should doubt to give him Trade, lest hee being a Man of warre should turne them to further mischiefe; which valeffe he receive such right, according to the welcome and custome of the place, he could not but thinke his end not for their good.

The ship now mored in a place, from whence within seuen or eight months was no returning, the vehemencie of the stormes to great, the vnknowne dangers in these Seas such, no place of more comfort knowne, and no mail permitted to come neare vs, that either could or would better informe vs of the contagious weather enfuing, the dangers there to bee expected, or more comfort ellewhere to be found, but as it were, mult fland at the Turkes mercy, whether they will giue vs life, or restraine water or other reliefe to maintaine the same; our house hired, our Factors and goods on land in readinelle and prefent fales after answere brought excepted . And now this vnexpected doubt calt, whether we be true men or cheeues : And no waylett to approve the former, or to shunne the latter; but the comming on land of our Generall, on whose safetie depended the carriage and estate of the whole voyage, which could not but crosse their minds and con-

60 ceit, fince they knew his determination was otherwise. Master Femell gaue the Generall knowledge of the Aga his words, and further gave him to understand, that the Companies businesse, without his prefence on land, could take no effect, but must rest without doing any thing, Which once knowne, Sir Henry Middleton, notwithstanding the little trust he had in the faith and honefty of the Turkes in their forren places, and the infinite regard and care he had to follow and pursue the plot and benefit of this his journey, as well here, as in India, and places of more hope, now being viged that his absence was likely to proue prejudiciall to the Company; answered that all his endeauours during the Voyage, were wholly intended for the benefit, and not preiudice of the company and were it not for the fafetie of the ships, and good of the Voyage, he could take delight to recreate himfelte on land, as well as others : wherefore, now fince his company there might further the businesse, and not be imputed vnto him for his pleasure, he would not be niggardly of his presence amongst them. Therefore he prepared himselfe to land, to put them out of doubt, and to receive that Vest of the great Turke, as the badge or assurance of fatetie to such, as with like folemnitie had it put on their backes. And before his going came Mafter Femell 2. boord to informe the Generall of what he thought fit to prepare him in, against his landing: But 10 at the instant, when Sir Henry Middleton was to enter the Boat, whether by any suspicious whispering among it the Turkes, or whether he felt any guilt of conscience for being the occasion to haken the Generals landing, to stand before him in any danger that might happen, or some finder finder apprehension of seare (as in faint-hearted people neuer wants) of any violent course by the Turkes to be attempted, the first day of the Generalls landing, or what else I know not, but at the Generalls going to land, hee being Cape-Merchant, and Iwaying the buying and felling. would have stayed aboord, but could not in such a case bee spared, being so great an actor in the bufinelle.

286

Sir Herry Mid. The Generall being come to land, was met by the Governour and principall of the Towne. ditten goeth on was carried to the Governours house, where he had a rich Vest of Cloath of Gold put on his back, 20 a horse very richly furnished for him to mount vpon, the Gouernor holding the horse while the Generall gat vp, all which was reason Sir Henry Middleton should accept of, being, as they pre tended, the Badge of their friendship.

The communication, after the folemnitie was ended, was fuch, and fo folemnely, and with fuch protestation and shewes of kindnesse and friendship, as might deceine any honest man, or which is not a decemer himselfe. Sir Henry Middleton in short time after seeing the varieties of kind shewes by the Gouernour toward him, and in regard of the long time he had to stay there, defired leave of the Governour, that he might there fet up his Pinnaffe, which he brought ready framed out of England; the Gouernours answere was, That the Countrey was before him to doe whatfoeuer pleated him, as if he were in his owne Countrey; feeming glad that he would com- 30 mand him any thing which might content him : for which, forthwith Sir Herry Middleton caused presently all things to be trought to land, which need to be vied in the faid worke, with all his Carpenters, Smithes, or other that might further that worke in hand, and to that endall hast possible might bee vied for dispatch of the same. Sir Henry Middleton, with his attendance and furniture, kept house on land, by his continuall presence to further the faid worke, which alto caused many more to refore on land, for their fenerall ends, then otherwise would have done. The eight and twentieth of November, Fegib Agahis plot growing to ripeneffe, and receining strength by the directions of his Mailer leffor Ballia, fent the Generall word in the afternoone, that he had received to good newes from the Balha concerning our bulineffe, that he could not altogether conceale the lame, but the gut good, for his content, to fend him a tafte thereof, till 40 his better leafure ferued him to remeale the particulers; this feemed to be done, to make Sir Henry Middleton more fecure, whole vpright thoughts gave him no cause to suspect any such mischiefe, as as prefent was prepared for him and his. But in the euening, instead of good newes from the Balha, he effected his predeterminate trecherie with iron maces, knocking downe the Generall, Mafter Pemberton, and the Merchants, with all the reft that at that time were on shore, where they also murthered eight of our men, who by reason of their former fauours and shewes of kindnesse, not deeming any such treason to be intended towards them, were naked without weapons to relift fuch vnexpected murtherers. Thus they without mercy, not only in chaines kept prisoners, both by the necke, hands and feete, the Generall with eight and fortie of his company, and Mafter Pemberson with nine of his company, but also with three great Boats full 50 of fouldiers attempted to surprise the Darling, who rided nearer the Towne then the Trades-Inmile, who (not knowing of the betraying of their Masters Boat and men) seeing a Boat comming aboord, esteemed it to be their own boat, but presently descrying two Boats more, and all full of people, began to militust faile measure. But the Turkes comming aboord, and feeing no man flirring, thought themselves furely possest of her, murthering the Trumpetter, whom they found alort alleepe; but in the end our mescifull God turned their pretended mischiefe toward vs, vpon their owne pates, and made them tall into the pit that they had made for vs, for in repelling these vnexpected enemies, though to the left of two more of their uen and twentis, whereof the Admirall of the Townes, who was their Leader, was allo one: 60

thus having cleared themselves of them quite, they cut their Calle, and set faile, and stood off and anchored by the Trade, who as yet knewnot of the berraying of the Gouernour, neither of their attempting the Darling, till they of the Darling had informed them thereof, by which meanes they presented another mischiefe, for that the Trades Boat, with a third more of her seven and rwente Turker owne men, who were flaine in the conflict) were flaine and crowned of the Turker in hight, fe-on the Arab file in eight fathome, some three leagues to the wind-wards of Moha, and some foure mile from the shoare. The third, in the morning, the tyde of ebbe in hand, we fet fayle working to wind-ward, as before in the afternoone, the wind so increasing that I in the Pepper-Corne ipent my two topfayles and constrayned to bring other two new ones to the yard, before which was effected, the the night approched, and wee more then halfe Seas over towards the Abaxin Coast, where in regard of the foule weather we formerly had at Moha for two respects. I must desire to stop; first, the next morning if the weather were faire, to have the Darling Company to proceed on our former purpose; secondly, the weather vnfit, by the place and fight of the Darling to finde 60 easier Roade to anchor in this day betweene eight and nine at night, so soone as we could get into fixteene fathome water by our founding lead in fast feeming ground wee anchored, the Trade fomewhat to the North-ward, or Lee-wards of the Pepper-Corne, and as towards morning the wind increased with a churlish Sea, with cloudie darke weather, in which weelest fight of the Trades Increase, but by reason of the darke weather doubted nothing, at which time sheehad formed me of.

Chambers Aduenture. Pembertons escape. CHAP. 12. S.2.

men, some to fill water, and others for pleasure were going on shore: also this morning in the Darling, on her gallery, they found one of the Turker louddiers, who had escaped with life, but their Boars gone was left behind : him they carryed prisoner abourd the Trades-Increa fe. From this eight and twentieth of Nouember, till the fourteenth of December, by reason of the continual I flormes, they heard no newes from the Generall. But the fifteenth day, John Chambers one of the Trades quarter Masters, with a Flagge of Truce went on shore, where he found the Generall, and the rest in Chaines as afore-said, in most inhumane manner so that one could not goe aside to ease himselfe, but the rest in a row must goe with him, to their great annoyance; yet at his returne brought hopefull newes of the inlargement of all faue the Generall and Mafter Fe-10 mell, who were to goe up to Zenan, the place of the Bashas residence, there to answere to such matters as should be objected against them. Also the seuenteenthday, the same Messenger went againe on shoare (in manner afore-said) carrying with him certaine prouisions and other necesfaries for the Generals reliefe, and the rest there with him, who returned with varietie of newes, but none good. Thus much Master Thorneton at his comming aboard me, as afore-said in-

The one and twentieth day in the afternoone, by the same Meffenger I sent a Letter to the Decembar, Generall, to give him knowledge of my mil-fortunes at Aden, who returning brought me a letter from my Generall, in briefe informing me of the businesse before repeated, as willing me if by any meanes I could get out of this Sea, and to flay at Aden, till I had heard what would be-

20 come of them: also he had sent the Darling to ply our towards Aden, to give mee information of his betraying, and to preuent my comming to Moha; also that he and fixe more of his compapanie were the next day to take their journey towards Zenan, the Bashas Court, as afore-faid.

The two and twentieth, the Generall with all his company, except the Carpenters, who wrought still in Chaines vpon our Pinnaste for the Basha, and vnable hurt men, who remayned still in Chaines at Moha, let forth in their journey, attended on by a strong Guard of Souldiers, left any of them should escape: yet the same evening, notwithstanding their narrow looking to our men, M. Pemberton flipt afide among the buffes with fo much hafte, as his M. Pemberton weak fick bodie was able, made to the waters fide, where, although tyred with running, it pleasescape. fed God that he found a Canoa having in her a paddle wherewith to rowe in her, hee put off to

30 Sea, committing himselfe to the danger thereof, rather then to stand to the Turker mercie, and through rowing, his faint wearinelle increased so, that in the morning his inabilitie forced him to give over rowing, having nothing to refresh himselfe but his owne water, it so pleased God that the same morning aboard the Trades Increase, was descryed a Canoa in the offing, which seemed to crize, vnto which being reasonable faire weather, the Trade sent off her P:nnasse, who brought both Mafter Pemberton and his Canon aboard their own ship, being scarce able to speake

From this day to the seuen and twentieth day, the weather continued for the most part boyflerous and flormy. Also this seuen and twentieth day, the Darling through foule weather, hauing loft Anchor and Cable, and not able to performe what the Generall (as afore-faid) had fent 40 them about, returned vnto Moha Roade: where I, whom they were fent vnto, in the Pepper-

The fecond of Ianuary with all three ships we fet faile out of Moha Road, intending to ply Ianuary a. vp towards Bab-mandell, for three ref pects. First, for ease of our ground tackle, being through long boysterous weather much decayed : and secondly, to seeke place to fill water for our people to drinke, by want whereof wee were very much diffressed; and thirdly, and lastly, there to stop the passage of all the Indian ships entring this Sea, whereby to draw the Turkes to release our Generall, people and goods, our great necessitie constrayned this our present attempt in this faire feeming weather; at our first fetting sayle, we stood ouer to the Abaxin Coast, where wee They passed left the Darling to looke her Anchor and Cable formerly loft, we with the Trades and Pepper- tree Cook 50 Corne plying vp to wind-ward, but having fearce any aboard, the better in the evening anchored bann Coaft.

A good wate-

broke an Anchor and droue, and let fall another Anchor, which afterward driving from fixteene to fixe fathome, they were forced to cut a way to flat the ships head to the offwards to preuene

The fourth of Ianuarie, day light approching, wee preparing to weigh our Anchor suddenly. the ship droue from fixteene to eighteene fathome, and before wee could flat our ships head to the oftwards, we had leffe then fixe fathome : which foone after increased to eight, ten, &c. We then feeing the Trade: (to my disturbance) standing ouer towards Moba, and feeing William Pemberton in the Darling, riding in an easie Roade, to whom I would gladly have gone, both for quiet to my minde, and ease to my ground takle, but that I knew not what need the Trades Increase might have of my Carpenters, in case of any casualties whatsoever I know not of, in my haltening after her the weather rigorous, wee iplit both our new top-layles, the night before 10 brought to the yard. They being lowed with rotten twine, as all our layles for the most p re hath beene, through which meanes it became night, by what time I got into the Road, where prefently to my griefe I vnderstood of the Trades : misfortune to lole two Anchors and Cables as afore-faid, wherefore I fent my Carpenters aboard to stocke some other Anchors, from this to the eighteenth day with little eafe, we continued a wearilome Road, to the spoyling of our Cables, as afore-faid.

From the fixth day, to the eleventh day, every day came Canous from the Towne, bringing Letter from the Carpenters with varietie of forged newes, informed them by the Aga, who permitted their fending the rather for that most commonly it was to get wine or beere, wherewith they pleasured the Turkes, and sometimes sent some little fresh victuals, according as they 20 had wherewithall to buy or were permitted to fend aboard. The twelfth, the Darling returned into Moha Road to vs, faluting me with three Peeces of Ordnance, as a figne of good newes, and by Master Pembertons instant comming aboard of me, to my great comfort confirmed; for that hee had found a good watering place, and a very easie Roade for our ships, and his Anchor and Cable that he went to feeke, which as aforefaid: they in his absence were forced to let slip.

The eighteenth, in the morning there came certaine from Moha to vs, bringing two Bullockes, two Goates, certaine Hennes Egges, and fome truits, but no newes from our Generall; This day at one in the afternoone we let faile, standing ouer towards the Abaxin Coast (where Matter Pemberson found the fate Roade and wattring place, and at night wee anchored three 10 leagues short of it, under an Hand (which for the abundance of great Crabs, thereon wee called Crab Iland.)

The nineteenth, we weighed againe, and stood neerer into the Bay, and anchored under another leffer Hand. The twentieth, we weighed againe, and stood further into the Bay, and anchored right against the watering place, some halfe a mile from the shoare, in eight fathome water. I fent George leff before in the Pinnasse to feke out the River, and to see if hee could speake with any of the Countrey people, who no fooner landed, but by and by there did prefent them selues vnto our mens light, at least an hundred of the Countrey people armed with Lances, whereof one came to our people being of a bolder spirit then the rest, who not onely 40 spake with them, but also desired to goe aboard with them, who at his comming aboard informed mee by an Interpreter , how that the Turker had fent word vnto them , how they had betrayed and murthered divers of our men, and wishing them also to doe the like to as many of our men as they could lay hand on. This yong-man was a principall mans fonne, and was very kind vnto vs all the time we were in this Bay: he this night did lye aboard the Trades

Increase, where he was very kindly vied to his great content. The one and twentieth, I with all our Boats, and most part of our men went on shoare, setting some to digging of Wels, some to fetching of ballast, others to filling of some little water out of a little Well wee there found made reasie to our hand, and the rest being armed to guard them that wrought, and soone after our landing came downe vnto me the Priest, the father and 50 brethren of the young man afore mentioned (who as yet was not gone from vs) whom at his comming a hoare they very joyfully received, prefenting me with a Goat, I also gave vnto them foure of the Trades: thirts pat in by the Merchants for the Companie, which they very kindly received; promiting to bring downe the next day fome Goates, to fell vnto vs for our money, which they very honeftly performed, as by the fequell may appeare. The two and twentieth, I having continued ashoare all night with a good Guard, to see that there should no harme be done to our water, I appointed our men to their businesse as the day before, but by reason of the boysterous weather, none of the Country people came downe to vs: the cause of my present continuance on shoare, was for that I see such ill vsage of my Generall, 60 and his people betrayed both at Aden and Moba, although they had made such faire shewes and promises, I having no affirance of the honesty of this people to vs, bred in mee suspicion what harme might be attempted against vs here by the Turkes, or by their persivasion to this Country people, eyther by poyloning our water or other wayes; therefore further then needs must I

CHAP. 12. S.2. trufted none, to also I continued this night ashoare with a good strong Watch.

The three and twentieth, having feeled our Company to every particular businesse, there came downe to vs the fame men, who the other day had beene with me, and after them followed some others, driving before them divers Goates to fell to vs according as they had promifed. I very kindly entertayned them, and caused the Purser to buy their Cattle, and in the evening they departed very well fazisfied, promiting enery day to bring downe more, of which they made good performance. This day we made an end of watering.

From the foure and twentieth to the fix and twentieth day, they brought downe every day both Goates and Sheepe, whereof we bought according to our occasions and spending, they re-to turning well fatisfied. The nine and twentieth, the wind at North North-west we set saile, I determined to get vp to the Bab with all our three thips, there to make flay of all the Indian thippes, that this yeare should enter this Sea, by them to force the Turkes to re-deliuer my General, and the rest of his Company our goods and Pinnasse, as aforesaid: but being thwart of Crab Hand it fell calme, the tyde letting right on the Iland, of this time I made the best vse I might, for so soone as we had anchored, I accompanyed with Master Thorneson and Master Pemberton, went on sheare with all our Boates, and most part of our men whom I appointed to cutting of wood, both for dreffing our victuals and other needfull vies. This after-noone wee descryed comming ouer from Moha, two lelb.u, one whereof came directly abound the Trade, bringing me a Letter from my Gene-20 rall, dated the ffteenth of Ianuary, informing me of his fafe arrivall at Zenan, with all his companie, faue Richard Phillips, Master Pembertons youth, whom hee left very ficke at a place called Tyes, who defired to be informed of Mafter Pemberton, whether he were fafely escaped abourd or no, for that he doubted the Arabs attending on their Affes, to have murthered him for his Affe he rid en, of the varietie of hopefull feeming promifes of his inlargement, beeing onely delufions; this Letter being kept till the feuenteenth of the fame, also mentioneth of the fafe arrivall of Matter Fowler, and the rest of my Company (betrayed at Aden) at Zenan; how God had raife thin friends among the middest of his enemies, to wit, the Raha, who is next in degree to the Basha, with divers other that favoureth his iust cause; contradicteth my present determination of staving the Indian ships, for that as yet they have no just cause to object against him, it 30 might proue prejudiciall, not only to him and his Company, but also to our Nation trading in the Mediterranian Sea, but that the Basha had cleared Regib Aga of the betraying and murthering of him and his Company, taking it vpon himfelfe, as that it was done by his warrant and command. To this my Generalls letter by the fame mellenger, I returned an answere; first giving him to vinderstand of Master Pembertons safetie: our infortunate looking and spoyling our ground The Road on tackl: of my prefent determination intercepted by his letter; my opinion of their faire feeming, the Abasis yet deluding promifes and laftly of our fafe Road and watring place on the Abasis Coaft, right countries and laftly of our fafe Road and watring place on the Abasis Coaft, right countries and lattly of our fafe road and watring place on the Abasis Coaft, right countries and the Abasis Coaft, right countries are considered to the Abasis Coaft, right c opposite to Moha, being some 13. leagues distant, where we have refreshing reasonable cheape. from Moha. The fewenth of February, the Trade returned to me in the Roude of Affab, Mafter Thorneton February 17.

bringing me my Generalli letter, dated the fine and twentieth of February, therein defiring me The Road of 40 as yet to forbeare reuenge on them which have wronged him : also informing me of the present Affab. hopefull estate of his businesse, also that fine dayes after the date hereof, he with all his Company are to take their journey downe to Moha, willing mee, till his arrivall at Moha, to expect no more letters from him; also giveth me knowledge of the death of Iohn Baker, one of my Quarter Masters, and Richard Elmesmere, one of the Trades Company. To this my Generals letter, for want of conueyance, I wrote no answere.

The first of March, I fent the Pinnasse to the Towne, and in her the Purser, and the faid Alle, March 1. who in their going, found a place of better water descending from the mountaines, by reason of The Towns. the raines within the land (whereof we aiterwards filled some water; but the raines once ended it was dried up.) They having bought some few Goats and sheepe returned; and in the evening 50 we descried a Boat comming over from Moha to vs-ward.

The fecond, the faid Boat came aboord the Trade, bringing me a letter from my Generall, wherein he gaue me to understand of the cause of his delay of his journey, partly by reason of a great following feaft of the Turkes approaching, but principally to have the Sabander of Moha his company, for the more life tranell; allo witheth the Carpenters forbeare to proceed any further in building the Pinnaffe, for that the Basha intendeth her for his owne vse, and not for vs; alfo willing me to forl eare revenge.

The firth, I ent the Darling over to Moha, to expect newes from my Generall, where thee The Mahamet found in the Rad a great hip of Dabull, called the Mahomet. This day the Generall with all of Dabull. his Commany arrived at Moha.

The elementh, I do inted left any cuill had befullen the Darling, by reason of her so long abfence, fet fulc with the Trade and Pepper-Corne, standing over towards Moha: but before I was to farre off as Crab And, I faw the Darling comming over, and for that the wind shortned upon vs, in iwo not able to detch the Road, I fent Mofter Thorneton in the Pinnaffe, to vnderstand what newes, but I in the Pepper-Corne With the Trades Increase, returned into the Road againe : in the euening Master Pemberton with Master Thorneton, and two and twentie of the Trades Company, and fourteene of the Pepper-cornes Company betrayed at Moba and Aden, came ouer the point of the lland, bringing mea letter from my general, wherin he gaue me to understand of his a lurnd hopes of inlargement, so soone as the Indian ships of this years were all come in, and the Westerly winds come. Also that the Turkes had seduced the aforesaid Richard Thilips, whom in his journey vowards he left ficke at Ties, him by threatning they had forced to turne Tirke, and therefore came not downe to Moha with him, he rejoyceth to heare of Mafter Pembertons fafety, also informeth me that none of the letters I had fent him were delivered to him; also defined my opinion, whether best for him to make an escape abourd, if he can, or to remaine at the Turkes denotion; also wisheth that the Pepper-Corne be the next that comes to Moba.

CHAP.12. S.2.

The eighteenth, I with the Pepper-Corne fet faile, standing ouer to Moha, but being neare ouer, it fell calme, and a lee-ward tide, whereby I was forced to anchor in twentie fathom water, on a banke which we there found three leagues from Moha : and in the evening there came off a Canon vnto me, to know what we were, decraing me to be an Indian ship, for that by region of the hazie weather, they could not well difeerne vs.

The nineteenth in the morning, I fet faile, the wind at South standing into the Road, whereas yet was only the faid great Dabal man: but before I came to an anchor, my General fent his man abourd me with a letter, that fruitrated my prefent hopes, wherein he gaue me to understand that he must be forced to dispeed me away very suddenly, for that my presence caused feare in the Dabullians, and discontent to the Aga. Notwithstanding this my Generalle letter, I fent George 20 Leffe in the Pinnasse on shoare, by whom I sent two letters, the one briefely to give to vnder. fiand of our wants, also my opinion of the Twikes performance, who through cultome of falle-hood, their true performance is not to be expected, but only to feed Sir Henry Middleton with faire promifes, to ferue their owne turnes; and then we having no matter to worke upon, face the emptieships, which the Turker having their goods on land, would nothing regard, and then my General to remaine at the Turks denotion, whether to be fent aboord according to the Basha his inforced agreement, or to be ranfomed at their pleafures, or fent back agains to Zenam, and fo to Stambola. The other, if he should think good to shew the Aga, therin making thew, that so long as he was detained unioner, his power extended not to command vs that were free & at liberty, and therefore could not keep vs from the Road of Moha, nor in any other thing further then we to fee good our felues. To thefe my letters the General writ an answer, the copy wherof followeth.

Sir Henry Middleto as letter to Captaine

Aptaine Dounton, your ouermuch care may worke your owne harmes, and doe me and my company uno good, and therefore take nothing to heart more then is cause, for I have had, and still have my full [have thereof: and whereas you alledge you are loath to depart this Road without me, I am more loath to tarry behind, if there were any remedie: I made a forced agreement with the Balha at Zenan, that the ships should ablent themselves out of this Roade, till all the Indian ships were come in, and then at the first comming of the Westerly winds, both I and all my Company shall be set free : if they faile to performe with mee, then I would have you shew your endeavours ; in the meane time you must have patience, as well as my selfe; I would be loath the agreement should be self broken on our side, without any cause ginen by 40 them. For the provision that should have been sent in the Ielva, it was my fault it was not sent, in that I did not verge it to the Aga. After your departure to morrow, as I desire you to see performed, I will goe in hard with the lading of the goods in the lelea, which (hall not bee about three dayes abfert from you: I have promifed the flips shall not come in the Roade till the Westerly wind; be come, which will be a moneth bence at the firthest, in the meane time you shall beare from me by lelbas or Boats, which I will send of purpose: I doubt not but there will be good performance made with me by the Turkes, in that my agreement was made with the Baha, and not with Regib Aga. If I doubted any new stratageme, I would have attempted to have escaped away before this time: I have had, and still have meanes for my escape were it not to lease my people in danger of their lines ; doubt not, if they performe not with me, when the Westerly winds come, but I shall have good oper tunitie. I had laid a plot to have escaped, if I could have per swa- 50 ded Master Fernell but he will by no meases be drawne to any thing, till he see whether the Turkes will performe or no, he makes no doubt but to be fent abourd with the first of the Westerl; winds, when you shall come to demaund vs ; you may ride in your quiet road-stead on the other side, with all your bips, fill God fend us that long wishedfor Westerly wind, unlesse you get a slatch of wind to carry one of your ships to the Bab, to see if all be well there, and so returne backe to you. Iknow that all forts of presussions wastes apace in all the ships, which God sending me absord, I hope quicity to renew.

The feuen and twentieth, according to my Generalls requests, I fent the Darling ouer to Moha, for effecting the forelaid bulineffe.

The twentie ninth and thirtieth, the Budwees brought downe both Goats and sheepe to sell. 60 The first, second and third of Aprill, the Budmees brought downe either Bullockes, Goates or fheepe, to fell vnto vs.

The fourth, the Darling returning from Moha, but the wind taking her short, shee was forced to anchor to the Northwards or lee-wards of the Road, till the wind should come more large.

The fixt, the Darling came into the Roade of Affab, and anchored neare the watering place, neare the Trade, to deliver the victuals and other provisions, which had been to long detained by the Turkes, and also brought me a very kind letter from my Generall.

The leventh, the Darling plied up to an Iland neare the Pepper, there to be Carreind (this I- crare Iland. land we called Crane-Hand, for that on it we killed most Cranes) from this day to the twelfth day, the Darling did land her goods and victuals, and vnrigged their shippe, and certaine of the Trades Company were gathering of Breming.

The one and twentieth, the King of Raheta fent me a Present (by a kinsman of his) being a The King of fat Cow and a Slaue, he continued aboord the Trades-Increase all night.

The thirtieth, the Trades-Increase was heilded and trimmed on both fides, so farre as conveniently might be : this day we filled all our emptie Caske with water, being nine and twentie Tunnes, the water being faire.

The fourth and fift day of May, wee trimmed all our Boats, being reasonable faire weather, May. the wind at South South-east. The feuenth and ninth day, the Budwees brought downe good flore of sheepe and Goates, but through want of cloath, we bought very few, onely three Bullocks, which we gave money for.

The eleventh, my Generall made his most happie escape abourd the Darling, with fifteene Sir Herry Mid-more of his Company. ore of his Company.

The tweltth, my Generall fent the Pinnasse over from Moha, and by her a letter, giving me more, the manmore, the manknowledge of his escape, as aforesaid; also desiring me, upon the sight of this letter, to repayre nervousing ouer to Moba, with the Trades-Increase and Popper-Corne; which direction I pretently put in in his owne execution, making the ships in readinesse to set laile: but before my comming, hee so behaued lournall. himselfe in the Darling, to the terrour of his enemies the Turker, that neither Boat from the theare durft go abourd any of the Indian thips, neither from the thips to the thore, without asking his leave, and making knowne their bulinelles; fo that now Rogib Aga of Miha, began to fine a new fong, and infinuate with Sir Henry Middleton by divers meffengers, as by Nobuda Mabumet and others of the Generalls belt friends there, with Presents, now fearing what harmes might happen vnto them, in recompence of his treachery towards him, and therefore defired to have peace with the Generall: for Matter Femell, before his returne aboord, in more especiall favour, was by the Againuited to his house, whereto he was vrged, and there too soone yeelded to eate and drinke with him; whereupon some former speeches given out by Master Femell, that he would make complaint of his wrongs in Stambola, which now heremembring at his departure, with a smiling countenance told him they might meete together at Stambola. This night being come abourd he seemed ouer-ioyed; but three dayes after, about two of the clocke in the morning he ended his life, as we all thought, by poyfon; the Chirurgions opened him, and this was their conceit : whereupon the Generall embarged all his ships.

The nine and twentieth, at two of the clocke in the morning, as aforefaid, Master Femell, Cape The death of

The first day of Iune in the evening, we had a very strong gust of wind, being so hotte, that Iune 1. it was able to take away our breathes; it also draue the fand of the shore in such fort, we could fcarce looke to wind-ward.

The second, came abourd the Admirall, Alle the sonne of Portugall parents, being a Captaine, turned Turke, who, for that he had been the Generals Trudgman, or Interpreter at Zenan, and fo had fome acquaintance with him, and therefore was fent downe to capitulate with him of a Peace: he informed the Generall that Master Pembertons said Boy was alreadie brought downer to Mohe, and promifed the next day he should be brought aboord. This Alle and Tuccacce a Bannean, came to know the Generalls demand, which was an hundred thousand Rialls of eight.

The eight in the morning, the Generall fent the Darling to Belowle, a place on the Abexin Belowle, a place Coast, being ten leagues to the Northward of Affab, to fetch water, and buy some Goals for on the Affab 10 reliefe of our men, who began to fall licke of a faint difease; the best remediefor which as we Coast. found, was letting blood, and purging of the body; this difeafe went away in byles and feables, and this difeafe no man escaped cleare of.

The nineteenth, Shermall Sabander of Moha. accompanied with many of the chiefest Merchants of the Towns, and the Alle Haskie and Tacaccee a Bannian, came in state with divers forts of mulicke, from the Aga to the Generall (about the Trades-Increase) to capitulate of the fore-faid fumme by him demanded, for fatisfaction for our faid goods, which then, in regard the Generall, and all we faw at the prefent no more to be gotten, and that which should be agreed vpon, to come out of the faid Sabander of the Bannsans our friend his purie, who daily relieued our men in their mifery with bread and other fullenance, not fo much as our dogge but also had 60 daily allowance from him; so that alwayes his presence administred comfort to our distressed people: therefore it was concluded, wee to receive our iron and lead againe, and for the reft of our goods not to be had (wherein was concluded all Vests and other presents the General! had giuen) the summe at present agreed vpon, was eighteene thousand Rials of eight, and for that at present they had not money to defray so great a summe, they defired the Generall to take out of the fail thip of Din, fo much goods as he should esteeme a fit pawne for io great a summe (which Richard Philips, they would daily redeeme as they could raife moneyes) and then the ship to goe in presently to M ftr Pember- land and make tale of the rest of her goods: the vtmost time limitted for the last payment, was tou Boy, refto- fourteene dayes. The Sabander brought abourd with him, according to promife, Master Pembertons Boy , being clad in apparell of the English fa hion.

29 T

292

δ. I I I.

Their departure from Moha to Allab, and after that, higher into the Red-fea, thence to the Socatora, and after to Surat.

Iuly 3.

He third of July, having reasonably provided the ships with Rice and other graine (for that our English prouision consumed apace) the Generall with all three ships and Pinnasse let faile, and standing ouer to the Bay of Affab, there by getting daily re-Pinnaffe let taite, and transang out to the 2013 freshing, to recour our weake faint ficke men; where we arrived the fourth day, at freshing, to recour our weaker faint ficke menth, eight and minth dayes, the Budgett eleven of the clocke afore noone. The fift, fixt, fewenth, eight and ninth dayes, the Budgees euery day brought downe either Bullocks, sheepe, or Geats.

The thirteenth, we made an end of watering. The King of Rabeta fent the Generall three 20 fat Bullockes for a Present, by one Abdella, his fifters some, the Generall very kindly entertained him, and accepted of the Kings Present, presenting him agains with a Vest of Broad-cloth; the Generall also gaue the King heartie thankes, for all the kindnesse and good dealing received from his subjects, at this his Port. The said Abdella then desired the Generall to come with his ships nearer the Bab, being by their report a good harbour, and is neare the Kings Towne, and more plentifull of refreshing, where he might better shew his love vinto the Generall. This day the General featled him aboord the Trades-Increase, and in the evening caused a banquet of sweet meats and wine to be prepared on thore against their landing, whereof he having both eaten and drunke, very thankfully tooke leave of the Generall, and departed to the King againe.

Their endenor to take a rich Turese thippe, Which came

The foure and twentieth, we let faile from Affab, directing our course towards Cameran, an Hand on the Abaxia Coast, some fortie leagues to the Northward of Moha, in fifteene degrees 30 North latitude, in which is a Towne and fortresse, to which place they thought they were come or neare comming to flay for directions, by reason of our being neare, to the the Northwards it is feldome feene that any will attempt going, while the Westerly Monton lasteth, which in the Red-fea bloweth most all Northerly, till the last of July. We turned up all day, and anchored at night, in which we were pettered with a dangerous thoale, to which wee vnawares came to nearest ist we had oftentimes enough to doe to quit our felues of them, when we had little more water then we needed : this continuing two dayes, having no Pilot, nor other meanes (and the Cirrints vicertaine) readily to find it : And the weather doubtfull, being in vicertaine places to rid; in open water, if the weather in the night should proue aduerle, the Generall with griefe 40 being often moved to give our the businesse of feeking the Turkie ship of Sues; himselfe concluded that it was nt for him to prouide for the lafetie of his owne thips, which are to him certaine, then with too much hazard to purfue things vncertaine, and perchance might miffe finding her when he came there; fo wee bore vp with the Hand of Iuball Succor, which is bigge and high, and another great Hand to the Southwards of it, being all high, called Iuball Arree; thefe two neighbour Hands are inuironed with divers other smaller llands to the Southwards, and indiuers places ledges of funken rockes, being differend only by the breaches on them : those Ilands as they lye South and North, by supposition may be in length some ten leagues, they lye North North-well from Moba, where in cleare weather they may plainly be feene, which happeneth very feldome: from the Wester part of Inball to Beloula, the course is South-west by South diftant some twelue leagues; little wide of which course lyeth two sunken rockes knowne by the breach, they are neare adioyning to the faid Ilands South by West: from the Wester part of Inball Arree are two Ilands and a Rocke; and from these towards the Coast of Africa South-well lye foure other small flat rockes, lying distant from the former some foure myles and an hal e: there is no danger in going neare them, for we found deepe water close abourd the South Westermostor them, being the nearest to the Africke Coast.

Two Ilands

The fixt of August, at foure of the clocke in the morning, we let faile from our good harbour of Assa, and before fixe at night we anchored in the Roade of M. ha, seeing neare the Towne wall mored and valaden the faid Gallion which came from Sues, which we had gone to leeke and milt vs, as we were intangled among it the shoales, and was come into Moba fine dayes before, al- 60 fo there was come in one Gally, and three more every day expected.

The fewenth, the Generall went in with the Pepper-Corne and Darling (for dispatch of his bufinesse) so neare as the ships could well ride, and also, if need required, to command all the ships in the Roade : and about ten of the clocke, our old friend Taccacce and Sabrage, the Sabanaers man, came abourd with a Present from Shermal the Sabander: to these the Generall gaue notice of his butinesse, and dispeeded them away. The tenth about cleuen of the clocke before noone, wee past thorow the Easter Channell of Bab mandel sai-Bab-mandell, finding in the middest nine or ten fathom, and toward either fide, seuen, fix or fine led on both fathom, according as we edged in or off; the Darling and Release put out through the greater or fides. South-wester Channell, which may be some foure leagues ouer, all seeming very cleare of danger, the Release going farre by the shore, on the South-west side of the Bland of Bab-mandell in twelve fathom; the Easter Channell is not aboue a mile and a halfe ouer.

The eleuenth at noone, the high land of Aden bore North North-west, distant some eleuen 10 leagues, and by estimation East by South halfe a degree some sixe and thirtie leagues. Note also that from this day vnto the end, I reckon the dayes from noone to noone, for that by every daies observation of latitude, I rectifie my traverse, as now from noone the eleventh day, to noone the twelfth day, I reckon upon the twelfth day onely in my discourses, I reckon according to the true day, as from midnight to midnight, &c.

The one and twentieth, from noone to fix at night East, some four leagues before Sun-rising, we descried Mount Falix, bearing East by North eleven leagues distant (by which we certainly perceined how the Currant had abused vs ) from Tuesday the twentieth day after-noone, to Munday the fix and twentieth day, notwithflanding fome while of the land, and other while fea turnes, betweene calmes oftentimes a prettie gale continuing sometime foure, fixe or seuen 20 houres together, yet by reason of the Currant we could never get a head; but by the said six and twentieth day in the morning, we were fallen to the Westward some foure leagues, the fix and twentieth day at nine of the clock in the morning (hauing continued under a theepe high whitith cliffe all the forefaid time) it pleafed God to fend vs a small gale of wind off the shore, with which wee came off North North-east into the Sea, in hope there to finde the wind more

The feuen and twentieth, by judgement we might runne East North-east fourteene leagues. This day at foure after-noone, Mount Falix bore South by East some nine leagues distant; this Mount, by my estimation, may bee sixteene leagues Westward of Cape Guardafus: this night care de Guarda. when it was calme, as alto when the wind blew, we met with a potching fea, which well infor- field 30 med me, that we grew neare the length of the Head-land, and began to bring the Southerne fea open of the Cape, or the point of the land : the nine and twentieth we descried Socatora. Note that in this trauerie from Aden to Socatora is no certaintie, by reason we were so much deluded by the Currant, wherein by the water oftentimes wee feemed to get, yet by the Currant we loft, or were driven backe. Now having effected all our butinesses, as watering and gotting some ballast, and bought all the Alloes here to bee had, and left letters of aduice with the King of Socatora, for fuch of our nation, as in like manner might come to Trade in the Red-sea, both to preuent their losse of time and further trouble. The fourth of September, at two in the after-noone, we fet faile from the Roade of Dellisha, September 4.

40 the wind prefently grew calme, so that we did little good all the night.

The three and twentieth, at fixe in the morning, being neare the end of an ebbe, we fet faile and flood away North and North North-east two howres, some two leagues, the wind at South, our depths from ten to fixteene tathom, and prefently as against a wall, seuen, fixe and fiue fathoms. About eight of the clocke, we had fight of the trees of India, which standeth both in South and North Swally, which bere East by North from vs (by a meridian Compasse distantifix leagues) we runne in East North-east and North-east by East with the floud, still railing the land to the Northward, till neere two of the clocke; our depths vncertaine, sometimes more, and fometimes leffe, shunning diu solus picious riplings, keeping betweene eight and fifteene fathom, we anchored in fort Oze, and by my observation it floweth East North-east one quarter North, so and West by South one quarter South by the Moone, and by this time the floud runneth five houres, and the ebbe feuen houres, by reason of the Winter freshes by the aboundant raines are not yet fully expelled, and therefore doth ouercome or shorten the sloud-streames; but at other times, though the Spring-streames goe alwayes strong, yet the floud and ebbe are equally fixe houres a piece. In the Winter-streames, which is lune, Iuly and August, my coniecture is that Cables and Anchors, nor Ships bowes can be made of force to refift the ilreames. The Coast lyeth heere neare North and South; this day being come to an anchor, my Generall fent of his Pinnasse to fetch a Boat which failed neare vs, who came from Surat, and was bound to Goga, Aboat of loaden with Rice, who informed him we were ouer-shot Surat a great way toward Cambaia, Surat. and that we must return feuen or eight leagues, if wee would goe to the Barre of Surat : this

60 Boat the Generall kept with him, because they would vie the Master of her for a Pilot. The foure and twentieth, there came another Boat voluntarily aboord the Admirall, and also continued with good content with vs for Pilots: the former informed the Generall, that there were flaying for vs at the Barre of Surat, fifteene armed Fortugall Frigats, to intercept what we should there intend; so at full sea, which was at two after-noone, we set faile with a little wind at South, flanding off West into the deeper Channell, turning downe the ebbe while day light would permit, and then anchored in foure and twentie fathome in a vehement fireame, where no ding till morning day-light, when the ebbe being spent and we not able to weigh our anchors till the tide broake, to that we made a small tides worke; yet this fine and twentieth day night at feuen of the clocke, wee anchored some league short of the Roade, Southward of the Barre. where we law riding at anchor three Indian ships.

The fix and twentieth in the morning, with the tide of floud wee fet faile, standing into the Roade, where we anchored by the faid three thirs of Surar, which were intended to be laden for to goe to Sumaira, but partly by reason of our approach, and partly for that the Portugals would come to no reasonable composition with them for their Cultome and Carras (or Palle) their Voy- 10 age was given ouer, according to our Pilots former information. We here found eighteeue fayle of Portugall Frigats, whereof fometime more, and fometime leffe, according as they fee occasion appeared in our view, al being under the charge or conduct of Don Francisco de Soto Maior, Captaine Major of the forces of Damon and Chaull, accompanyed also with the Captaine Major and forces of Din: who for a long time together without intermission, so pestred the streames about vs, that none could neither out of the River, nor any other way come neere vs, but they would narrowly fearch and fee that they had neither Letters nor other prouisions, that might comfort or reliefe our necessities, whereby they often tooke occasion to rob divers of fundry things, with threatnings that they were bringing them vnto vs their Enemies; and therefore conficeted: by this meanes our men grew to great weaknesse, and every day more and more of our men 20 fell downe with the fouruie, wanting to refresh or comfort them; at last by our Neighbours the ships Boat of Surat, we received a lame advice from one Nicholas Bangham, left by the Heller to attend on the Merchants there. Yet after many dayes, was gotten from him (which for the purpose was lying by him) both a Letter from Captaine Hawkins remayning in Agra (which is the place of the great Mogull his relidence) and another from William Finch at Labor which was ded to returne into England by going home-wards over land by the way of Persia, by which the Generall understood the little the way of Per- hope they conceived of any good for our Nation in this Country people without faith. After fome time there was knowledge given by the faid Nicholas Bongham, that Captaine Sharpeigh, Toba lourdaine, and others were every day expected in Surar, being comming from Agraby the way of Cambaya, which gave some content to Sir Henry Middleton,

The thirtieth, by the Generals direction, I with the Pepper-Corne, Darling, and Releafe, fet faile, endeuouring to finde the pallage ouer the Barre into the River of Surat : but partly by the Portugals diligent attendance to cut off from vs our Boats which founded before the thips, if they exceeded the command of our Ordnance, and partly the vncertaine and dangerous fudden shoaldings we in each thip found, did cheefly trustrate our present endeuours.

ð. IIII.

Many proud affronts of the Portugals. Difgusts from the Indians.

Infolence of

294

gall Frigats.

He first of October, we all set sayle backe againe towards the Road, where our Admirall rid, but the wind thertening vpon vs, and the tyde of ebbe growing also firong, we could not fetch the Road, but were put off some foure miles Westwards of the Roade, wherefore it was Wednefday before the wind and tyde fo much faucured vs as to get into the Read. Sir Henry Middleton wrote vnto the Portugall Captaine Maior, requiring him that if he could not permit him to Trade here, yet, that he might take in the Merchants and others his Countrymen which were heere on thoare in this Country, and then hee would be gone from this place; but the Portugall Captaines answere (to this) was No, for hee would so carrie them to Goa, and from thence, they should be fent home : also it feemed that Iohn Iourdaine, had beene flat tering with the fathers both at Agra and Cambaya, and had obtayned some commendations to the Vice-Roy, or request or hope of conduction into Portugall, knowing at present no better meanes to get into his Countrey : by which Sir Henry Middleton could never imagine nor expect any lafetie to luch as continue firme to our State and Countrey. And neere the time of this Letter from Sir Henry Middleton, Captaine Sharpeigh by fome principall Portugall then on land in Surat, made motion either by Letter or otherwise, to the Captaine Maior to give him his Segure (or late conduct) for his late passage aboard the English ships; whereupon the Captaine Maior, in Scoffe wrote vnto the English Captaine and his Companions, his Segure for their fafe comming aboard his Galliote, without addition for his departure thence, the thing 60 which he required. And further to flew the base account he made of our Nation, added, that it they would take their pallage along with him to Goa, he would vie him and his Company with as much fauour, as he would doe to Turkes, Moores, or other Nations that vie there Seas; and all other Nations (a few Persians excepted) are leves, Bannians, and Gentiles, which thought were in him an unpleasing and vile speech, yet I like well his plainenesse, in shewing them what to trust to before (not thinking they could have escaped his hands) otherwise it is likely, that fome of them would have beene perswaded, that their vsage should have beene better then is

CHAP. 12. S.4. The Portugals distinulation with the English.

Sir Henry Middleton being very zealous in procuring the libertie of our Countrymen, though both by Captaine Hawkins and William Finch his Letters, and by all elfe we could understand of the Countrey, all hope of good here to be done for the Company, eyther for present or to come was wholly quenched; he writ to have them come by land and meete him at Daball, but that journey was thought too tedious, and by reason of the Warres in Decanie, dangerous. The time 10 thus loft feemed very tedious; wherein our water and other prouifions taft walted, our people daily for want of comfortable refreshing, fell generally into ficknesse, which made our estate doubtfull, not knowing where or by what meanes to get refreshing, we being so garded by these our Enemies, that none could come to vs, neither could we goe from our thips: And Captaine Sharpeigh made promision for vs at the Towne, though without hope that it could escape the Portugall, who lay in continual waite for it. It being prouided, it was in vaine to fell it againe, but order being ginen to fend it howfoeuer, it was immediately fent towards vs.

The eleventh, Sir Henry Middleton, much diffurbed in minde at our prefent doubtfull estate, and our great loffe of time, and that to fo little purpose, and therefore leaving the Trades Increase in the mayne Road, he with the Pepper-Corne, and Darling, and Release, put in practice to disco-20 ner along it the Coast to the North-ward, to find out some place where our shippes might safely ride to neere the shoare, as to command the place of landing and frustrate the Portugally attempts for taking our Boates and people: but the day neere ipent, wee anchored neere the North point, thwart of the barre at the enterance of the River of Surat. This day Allonfo Granfidso dyed.

The twelfth, early in the morning, the Portugalls tooke the Boate which was comming to- Vogracious wards vs with our prouisions : in Losfe the Captaine Maior presently sent thankes to Captaine gratitude. Sharpeigh, for his care of him in fending him victuals for his supply. This said morning at the first of the floud we set sayle standing with the point to the Northwards, and by reason of the quicknelle of the streame, and our suspition in this vinknowne place, wee ever put that shippe imallest of drust head-most, and before the imallest we sent our rowing Boates, making no more 30 haste with our Sayles, then that our Boates might keepe head with their Oares. And yet further to preuent what perill by these strong Tydes might happen, wee had our Anchors alwayes in readinesse to let drop when seuer by their signes ahead, wee should understand of any sulden shoalding. The Armie of the Portugals likewise weighed and followed keeping a brest betweene the Pepper-Corne and the shore, they all rowing in order of Battell with their Colours displayed. oftentimes making great shoutes as in some great attempt; the Captaine Maior in a small Frigat, going from Frigat to Frigat throughout his Fleet incouraging them at length the Darlings Boat a good distance of betweene the ship & the land by occasion of a suspicious ripling & where shee was founding, prefently by the Captaine Maiors direction one of their finaller swiftest Frigats (being ouer-bold through our long fufferance) rew forth with great fwiftneffe to cut off from vs 40 the Darlings Boat, being seconded by another of the same kind. The Master of the Darling seeing his Boat and men in tuch danger, could no longer forbeare, but for her relicue he began to shoot at them, the former Frigat gat cleere ahead. But the fecond feeing our shoote flye so fast at her with feare put on shoare, the men abandoning her ranne away in the mulde; the Armie now comming up for her refere perceiving our thot came amongst them so fast should a sterneleauing that Frigat to our denotion wee perceiving them to to leave her, and for that the was fit to ferue our turnes, bestowed the fetching of her. In this Frigat wee found some small quantity of Indico, Cinamon, Comin-feed, Cotton Yarne, Mirabolans (dry for Philick)& one small ballet of A Portuge & Frie Cardehins mill, & very courfe, all of smal value, these things had the Portugals lately taken from a gittaken. poore Bannian. By this occasion we anchored here in seuen fathome water, thwart of the North point in the mouth of the River of Surat, within Musket shot of the shoare at low water, here wee rid till the next day,

The thirteenth, in the morning we weighed and flood fomewhat neerer into the shorewards, and anchored in fixe fathome, prefently we deferyed divers men on land, wherefore the Generall tent Mafter Ieffe, and Matthew Brigge afhore with a Flagge of Truce : but they being Portsgals, and perceiving them landed, retyred flourithing their Swords as though they had atchieued Iome worthy exploit : this day about nine a clocke in the fore-noone, the Generall fent a way the Darling into the maine Road, where the Trades Increase rid, she made no stay there, but prefently againe returned bringing with her one of the Indian thip Boates, and feuenteene of their men whom the Generall at times lent away with Letters to the Towne to Captaine Sharpeigh 60 whom before their going the Generall royally rewarded, also promising them better satisfaction on at their returne : fine of them were this eneming fent away with Letters, who promifed to returne againe to vs with Letters, but according to their accultomed practice of lying and deceit, they onely spake to give present content and meant the contrary, so that there is no hold in their words. This day there came formwhat neer vsa great Indian Boat laden with Paddy, the General made flay of her, and for our present supply, bought of her one Candie, & fixe Maunds of Paddy, which the next day we tooke into the Pepper-corne, and they having fatisfaction to their content, being difmilled, departed.

The fixtuenth, we feeing two Frigats riding a good distance to the North-ward of vs, which the Generall had a defire to fee what they were, and to know the cause of their riding there: which being Portugals, and feeing vs rowing along it the coast towards them, they fet faile, flanding awhile along it the coatt, and then to the Offing; but finding our selues further and further afterne gaue them ouer, and flood in with the River, and point of South Swally; we landed, determining with our net to fish, but the depth of the water not feruing, the General was going vpthe River in his Galliot to fish, at which instant there came a good gale of wind off the sea, wher with 10 againe came in the two former Frigats, accompanied with two other Frigats, newly come from the bar-foot of Surat. In which wasthelate Captaine of our little Frigats; who lately hazarded his life by running away in the deep mud, supposed now by worthy valour to recouer her againe, (as foon after we were informed) to whose attempt the wind was as fauourable, as aduerse to vs. who had farre to row to wind-ward ouer a broad shoale, whereon we alwaies had between three and foure foot water; but we somewhat gotten off to set faile, and the Release not farre off to second vs: and contrary to their expectations, in flead of flying fee all our endeauours bent to halten the meeting with them, and feeing our Musket shot fell but little short of them, which immediately was like to reach them: but as feemed, their former refolution found fome contradict for they all at once exchanged their steerne for their prowes, giving vs some wast base shoti ntheir 20 running away; we purfued long, fince we lost not much, we were ever in hope to get ground of them, but the wind increasing, and what betweene our people tired at the oare, and our too small faile to our little Frigat, put them cleane from vs, and so we returned to the Pepper-corne, leaving the Darling.

The twentieth in the morning, Thomas Glembarn in the Pinnasse went on shoare to attend the comming downe of any of the Countrey people, either with messages or prouisions to sell, all giving direction, if any came to give him knowledge by shooting off three Muskets together, that the Generall in the Frigat would then goe on shoare the Pinnasse comming on shoare, one man onely for a Centinell went on shoare, who no sooner came to the top of a small hill neere the water-fide, but prefently seeing a troupe of Portugals rush out of their ambush towards them, 10 retyred to the Pinnaffe, who rowed a little from the shoare and anchored; the Portugals comming to the water fide, discharged their smal shot at our Pinnasse, who so well repayd them with their Muskets, that prefently they ran away, foone after they faw one of the Inhabitants on Horse-back, whose comming down (as they suppose) the present sight of the Portugals hindered, and therefore shot off three Muskets together, which the Generals hearing, presently went on the shoare with the Frigat, but contrary to our expectation the faid Indian came not downe to them, neither any Message nor Letter, neither from the General nor Captaine Sharpeigh. In the evening some of the poore Inhabitants brought downe some few fruits to sel, which the General caused to be bought, and as our men repayred to the Frigat to come aboord, there came downe vnto them three men out of the Portugall Armie, who for fome difguilt there given them, fled to 40 vs for fuccour, the one of them a Dutchman borne in Lisbone, called Lorenzo de Campo, the other two were Portugals, the principall of them called Frances Confalues.

The one and twentieth in the morning, the Generall in the Frigat went on shoare, where hee no fooner landed, but presently an Indian brought him a Letter from Captaine Sharpeigh, certifying Sir Henry Middleson that the next day he would come downe with all his goods guarded by an hundred Horfemen; this day a Mallabar Boy called Antonio, who had beene five or fixe yeares Captine to a Poringall Souldier in this Armie, now finding good oportunitie to his defire, fled vnto vs for fuccour.

The two and twentieth, early in the morning, the Generall went on shoare in the Frigat, attended by the Release, to expect the comming downe of Captaine Sharpeigh, according to his in- 50 formation in his Letter: now approaching neere the shoare, the Frigat anchored, and presently landed thirty men with small shot, the Generall appointing one of them for Centinell, to stay on the top of a small hill neere the water side; the rest also to be neere the water side, for the better avoiding any fudden attempt, but all to looke about, to fee if they could discouer any bodie comming downe from Surat-wards: the Centinell in short time faw two Bannians comming from the North-wards, whereof he instantly gaue knowledge: these Bannians brought downer fome Tobacco, and other trifling things to fell; they beeing come aboord the Frigat, certified Threehundred the Generall that the last night fine Englishmen came from Suras, to a village some foure miles Portugals affault from this place; and that this morning they came from them, and that this afternoone they would come downe to vs, prefently there fallied out of a valley betweene two hils on a fudden, 60 feuen troopes of Portugals, with their colours displayed, whom our men feeing made a stand, the Portugals also made a stand, as having no list to come within the reach of our thot, although there were neere three hundred of them. The Generall commanded our men to retire, and to imbarque themselves: which being done accordingly, the Portugals then made pursuit after them, and with fine or fixe Baffes (by them brought for that purpose) and other small shot, they began to shoot at our Boates and men, but did them no harme, who failed not to answer them against with the like, whereby (as att.r.war is wee were informed ) they went away with the worlt. Now after longer stay, and our people not comming according to our expectation, the Generall returned abourd the Pepper-corne, determining this afternoon with the ebbe to be gone from this place to the Tradif-increase; but as we wire letting faile, a company of men were descried comming from the North-ward, wherefore we again anchored, and the General went on thore in the Frigat, where prefently came downe to them three of our Country-men, of the Afcenfionscompany, to wit, Thomas Mufgrane, Bartholmew Dauis, and William Morgan, who with them brought Captain Sharpeigh, and John Iordaines cleaths and prouisions. On Thursday came downe Contine Est 10 to them Captaine Sha perih, with an hundred horiemen for his guard, all armed with Bowes and iffinen ome a

Sir Henry Middleton kindly entertained.

arrowes and Swords : with him came aboord Iaddow, the Broaker, and a Braman (or Bannian

Prietly and an other triding, Captaine Storpeigh insternant.

The fine and twentieth, Sir Henry Middletor in the Frigat, went on shore (accompanied by physiconaeth Captaine Sharpeigh, and John Iordaine) where Coia Nassan at the water side promised to meete aboord. him, who was there in readinesse according to his promise. The Frigat comming to the water Our General fide, the Generall was fetcht on shore on a Pallankin, borne on foure mens shoulders, and there goeth on land, kindly entertained by Coia Nassan, and according to the Countrey fashion, a Carpet was spread whereon they fate to conferre of our prefent butineile. It was by them in a manner concluded, our ships to goe to Goga, a place on the Wester side of the Gul. e neerer to Cambaya, and to have 20 Pilots from the there for our more late conduct; but a fudden (and at this time of the yeere vnviuali) showre of rame happening, they brake up their conference, promising the next day there to meet againe, fully to determine of our faid bufineffe.

CHAP. 12. S.4.

The fixe and twentieth, according to mutuall promife, the Generall in manner aforefaid went on shore in the Frigat, who anchoring neere the shore side, Coia Nassan in one of our boats fent off laddow with a Prefent of tenne tine Ballas, and fiftie Bushels of Wheate to the Generall, and two Pilots for our fife conduct to Goga: the Generall very kindly accepted thereof, and with the Pinnaile went to the shorefide, where on a Pallankin in manner aforefaid, hee was received and entertained on shore, where they preceded on their former conference; but the Pilots hauing discouered the manner of the place, whose vnfitnesse gaue no content, and therefore their

30 determination therein foone altered, and it was concluded and agreed upon, that our ships should for the space of ixe dayes be gone off to Sea, which the Portugals perceiting, they suppose would all be gone, and then we againe to returne, and fundenly to dispatch our businesse. This Eueming we let faile, standing to the South-wards to the Tradef-increase, but the wind shortned upon vs, to that we anchored fome mile West-ward of the reade. This day in the morning, Thomas

The feuen and twentieth in the morning, the Generall departed abourd the Tradef-increase, and isone after fene his Pinnaffe for Captaine Sharpeigh and my felfe, to confeire about our pre- Odober. fent butinelle, (also he ient men to fetch away the Frigat and Portugals from the Pepter-corne;) after a Counfell held, the Generall fent a letter to Don Francisco de Soto, Captaine Maior of the 40 Portugall army, therein repeating the manifell difcurtefies by him shewed towards vs : First, not onely hindering our landing, but also the passage of our letters, kept vs from all reliefe for our ficke men, and what at great charge was prouided, he had taken from vs, and kept vs from our people on those, which if we could have gotten, we had been gone long fince; and also his endeanours the twelfth of this Moneth, to cut from vs our boats foun ling a head our ships, what time we tooke one of their Frigats, which we now having done our butmeffe, if hee would fend for her, we would freely bestow her on him againe. Also the Generall released the Indian Shippes, whom for conneiance of letters betweene Captaine Sharpeich and him, herestrained from going into the River, who now being difmist, they presently departed towards Swat: also wee made really our thips to be gone off to Sea.

The nine and twentieth, we fet faile to fea-wards, the Portugall Frigats still fellowing vs in their accustomed manner. This day we met with a beat bound to Cambaya, laden with Coco nuts, of whom the Generall bought feuenteene thouland, which he diffributed among it our people, and the Indian boat was prefently dif nult this day was M. Mullenex the fecond time poet into the Popper-corne. The one and thirtieth, S. Henry Middleton feeing that the Portugals till followed vs, determined to fland off no further, but against o returns to doe our bufinelle to farre as conveniently we could, in despite of them.

The first of November, according to the Generals predetermination, we returned to the North-wards as the winds and tides permitted. Saterday in the morning, we anchored thwart November. 1. of South Smilly, where the General in the Frigat went on thore, but heard no news from Swat.

60 This night the Portugals in the river that off divers preces, which they told the Indians was for ioy they had received ridings of the comming of two great Gallies, and twentie Frigats more for their affiffance, whereby they abused themselves, in thinking with their lyes to terrifie vs, who were now armed to withstand all their villainous practiles, viurping authority in an other Kings Dominion, where they have no more to doe then in Denmarke.

CHAP. 12. S.4.

An excellent

The fifth, Sir Henry Middleton fent William Pemberton Mafter of the Darling (in whose endean nours he had firme confidence ) with his thip the Release and Frigat againe, to discouer to the North-wards as afore-faid; who there found a bard place, wherein not onely our smaller thing might at high water goe, but also the Tradef-increase, being a little lightned, might also goe late. ly ouer the Barre, and there ride within Calieuer shot of the shoare.

The fixth in the morning, with the first of the floud, we all set faile, standing to the Northwards , and anchored thwart of the place discouered: at high water wee with the Pepper-corne, Darling and Release, went in ouer the Barre, whereon the least depth wee found was three fathome and a foote, but at low water three foot. Beeing in, we all anchored within Caliener thore of the shoare, as aforesaid in eight fathome, and right a head or to the North-ward of vs, anchored twelve Portugall Frigats, somewhat without the reach of our Ordnance. This afternoone the 10 Generall and my felfe, with a guard of fortie small shot, went on shoare to seeke out some place where we might relieue our wants of fresh water: in the falt marshes we found a place of brakish water, whereof till better could be gotten, we were forced to make vie. Here the Inhabitants brought downe to fell five or fixe goats and sheepe, and some fruits, which for reliefe of our outtired weake people were all bought.

The feuenth, we filled fome water, bought fome small prouisions as the people brought down: we haled the Release a ground, in hope to stop her leaks, beeing as it were in a manner denoured with wormes, for the fafetie of her and her people: we erected a Tent, in which I continued. keeping a Court of Guard and Centinels aboard, to preuent the practife of the Portugals our enemies to prejudice vs. The eighth, all our Carpenters vsed their best endeauours to trie the stop. 20 ping of the Pinnasse her leaks: this day Nicholas Bangham came downe, bringing provisions such as by the Generals directions he had prouided, as Limes for our difeafed people, bread, lamp-oyle, and candles, and his owne prouisions. This evening, some of our inhabiting neighbours of the neerest Villages, informed the Generall, that in the River was arrived two Gallies, and eightie Frigats; ypon which newes the Generall altered his determination, and for the better fecuritie thought good to bring all our forces together, the better to frustrate any practifes that might be intended against vs; wherefore at his first departure abourd his ship, which rid in the Offing, gaue me directions to guard the faid Barke upon the shoare, and as soon as the tide served, to heave her a float by my fhip, or the Darling, which about midnight was performed; when prefently we let faile ouer the Barre, and rid by the Admirall.

The ninth in the morning, Coia Nassan came downe, the Generall beeing then on shoare; hee certified the Generall, that to loone as all our thips were come into the roade, hee would bring downe goods and trade with vs; in the meane time a Market should be kept vpon the fea frand, of all necessary proussions; also informed the Generall, that the Frigats last come into the River, was a Caphala or fleete of Partugall Merchant Frigats, bound to Cambaya: at his departure Nicholas Bangham went up to Suras with him.

& Market at

The twelfth, beeing in the road, we had a Market there kept vpon the strand of divers forts of prouisions, to wit, Meale, Bread, Bullocks, Goats, Sheepe, Hennes, Butter and Cheefe, Sugar and Sugar-Candie, Limes, Plantans, Water-Mellons, Goards, Onions, Radishes . Pallingemies, Cucumbers, Milke, a kind of Peafcod which they call Paupery, and Gindus, a small fruit 49 as big as a little Crab, beeing in taste betweene sweet and sowre, and in the midst thereof hath a small round stone, Sugar-canes, and Tobacco, also Salt-fish dryed, and Praunes, and Palmita wine, which they call Taddy. All these afore-named things were at reasonable cheaperates.

A fecond Portugals.

The one and twentieth, my Centinell vpon the Mount, faw ouer the top of an other hill neere adioyning, the heads of some of the Portugals, who there lay in ambush to the number of fine hundred men: he had no fooner given the Alarum, but prefently they feeing themselves difcovered, they all with their colours advanced, with great celeritie ranne downe, to cut off our people from the Boat; but having a little tafted of our shot, both out of great and small Peeces, and seeing some of their fellowes tumbling in the mud, they made as great hast backe out of the reach of them: divers of them that fell downe, afterwards came to themselves, and made means 50 to crawle away, onely Antonio de Somfo, a Gentleman of Chaul, having a deadly wound in the head, lay still. We seeing the neglect of compassion by his friends, in commissration fetcht him aboord; whose wound beeing incurable, he died within two houres after, and we buried him on the shoare. Sir Henry Middleton in his ship in the Offing, hearing our peeces, and doubting of some difgust, hastned with his Frigat full of people vnto vs, yet notwithstanding we gaue the enemie leave to take hispleasure on the shoare, without landing to trie any further fortunes with them: going on shoare we found divers of their reliques, as showes and socks, which for their more expedition away, they left behind: afterwards we were informed by the Muccadam or Conflable of Smally, that the Portugals had kild and hurt in this attempt, eight of their people.

The arrinall of

The foure and twentieth afternoone, came downe Macrib Chan, with one hundred horsemen, and many more footmen, fiue Elephants, with divers Camels, Carts and Oxen, for transportation of his prouisions, wherein he shewed his greatnesse. Furthermore, he had divers Carts to earrie his Leopards, wherewith at his pleasure he vieth to hunt. Hee was there met by Sir

Henry Middleton, at whose landing was discharged a Volley of an hundred and threescore small shot, and at the instant of their falutation each ship in order shot, to wit, the Darling three, the Pepper-come fine, and the Tradef-increase nine peeces of Ordnance, then was delinered voto him the King of Englands Letter and Prefent vnto himselfe, whereof with all shewes of kindnesse he accepted; and Macrib Chan with fixteene Moguls and Moores, fich as he made choice of (leauing the rest of his followers a shoare with Hota Nassan, and Cois Arsan Alle, and other Merchants, where was erected as it were a little Towne of tents ) boldly accompanied S. Henrie Middleton aboord the Trades, Increase, where in the best manner the ship affoorded, he was enter- Marie Chan tained, and continued all night, and part of the next day. Sir Henry Middleton often viged him same about to concerning our maine bufineffe, which he still put of with delaies till an other time. But all his the Trades Inbooking was, both himselfe and by divers infir iments to find out, and buy all such fantasticall crise.

toyes, that might fit his turne to pleafe the toyish humour of the great King his Master, and for ought that we could gather, further then ferued his owne turne, he little respected our felling or buying of our principall Merchandize brought for that place; having fatisfied himfelfe in th. tihn by his wittiest inquisition, defired in like manner to see the other ships, where he ranne the like course abourd the Pepper-corne: he bought all our Chests of Sword-blades, whereof he seemed to be so greedy, as he would not trust vs to fend them after him, but would see them all sent a shoare before his departure, which in few dayes after, having felected out all the crooked ones, and fuch as liked him, fent backe the reft carelelly, and ill conditioned, as their accultomed manner is to 20 doe all things whatfoeuer they have bought, when by all the view they can have they diflike the fame. Which businesse being ended, they haltened a shoare accompanied by S. Herry Middleton, my selfe, Captaine Sharpeigh, and John Lordaine. He beeing landed, carried vs to his Tent, where being all fet vpon Carpets, with many of his friends, Sir Henry Middleton againe mooued speech concerning our businesse, as aforesaid: which he againe put off till to morrow. When wee saw nothing to be done, and the night approaching, we tooke leave, departing abourd to spend the night in confultation of our next dayes bulinelle or a faires.

The fixe and twentieth in the morning, Sir Henry M. ddleton hastened ashoare, thinking to doe much businesse: being come he was informed that Macrib Chan was gone, and yet the better to pacifie him, they told him he was gone to the Portugals to make friendship betweene vs, 30 which the Generall well knew was not to, but rather suspected that his going to the Portugals was, having received alreadie from vs in prefents all hee could get, that hee would now alto fee what he could get from the Portugals to doe ill Offices against vs. Wherefore, laden with difcontent, he againe departed aboard his ship in the offing, Hoia Nasjan yet staying, pretending of purpose to buy our Commodities, whereaf the Generall set downe the particular prizes, but this day being farre spent, it was referred till the day following. The fenen and twentieth in the morning Macr. b Chan fent one of his chiefe Gentlemen and his Broker with a Letter to the Generall : which I supposing to be of import and behoofe of our Base Vanitie, Common-wealthes bulinesse, presently in my Boat sent the Messenger aboard the Admiral, the effect whereof was foone found to be no other then to beg his perfumed Ierkin and his Spaniell

40 Dogge, which was denyed him the day before when he begged his Bener Hat: also hee defired our workmen and Smith to make him the modell of a chaine pumpe, also this morning Captaine Sharpeigh and Master Iourdaine went asnoare to Hoia Nassan, to conferre with him of the prizes of our Commodities.

The eight and twentieth, Hoia Nassar departed to Sweat , carrying with him the Generals Ierkin and Dogge, which Macrib Chan had formerly begged, and that we should the lesse doubt; he left behind him in his Tent Hoia tellardin his fonne-in-law, pretending he should stay till his returne. Hosa Naffan being once gone, he fet flight, being careleffe of our businesse, and the next night he diffolized his Tent and departed, to no small disturbance to vs, seeing none left to rectifie any businesse. This day Bartholmen Dan's one of our Carpenters was sent to Surat, to make 50 prouision of plankes and boards for re-edifying of the Releafe, wee thereanto incouraged by their fauounble promife, in which is very imall hold, for he once there, found nothing but delufions or delayes, for wherefoeuer he found Timber, either he could not find any to fell it, or not to faw it; fo all his bufineffe was not onely frustrace, but he also in despaire of libertie to returne. This day Mafter Tourdaine, Mifter Frain, and others went up to a Village neere adjoyning to view some packes of Indian Cloth, which How Nassin had brought downe thither to barter with vs for some of our Commodities: they returning brought downe the Mustraes of cuerie fort, and the prizes de manded for them per Corge : the Generall vpon fuch as he liked fet downe what prizes he would give for them, requiring them to doe the like by his Commodities, and to have answere the next day : but they held them at high rates, and offered weakly for our Com-

60 modities, which they effeemed of necessitie, we must be forced to fell them how focuer. The first of December, they perceiving that Sir Henry Middleton would not give them their December. demand for their Commodities, nor fell them his at their owne rates, to flew their carelefnelle, or to try his temper, did not onely speedily send for their Mustraes of clothes, but also carryed backe to Surat, all fuch packes as they had formerly brought downe to Damka, a Village three mile from vs. Also the poore Inhabitants were restrayned from bringing downe promsions to fell vs, as formerly by permittion they did.

The fixth, the Generall was informed the Mock rib Chan, and Hoia Nassan were comming downe, and in the euening we fee as it were a Village of Tents pitcht fomewhat more then a mile within the land, to the East-ward of the Road, but whether they came in peace or no, we

Barbarous in-

290

The feuenth, laddow & Narran Brokers came downe, certifying the General that Mockrib (ban and Hoia Naffan were comming downe, and were now at the Tents, and to morrow would bee heere with him. They translated our Kings Letter, and then departed, but yet their extraordinary fadnesse, as men fent by constraint, gaue vs no hope of good towards vs , the rather for 10 that they had formerly reftrayned as prisoner our man sent to the Towne about businesse, as also their feueritie in proclayming the lesse of their noses, to any that should bring downeany prouifion to vs, whereby they shewed their defire to force vs away by Famine. This day the Darling was againe haled oif to her moring.

Chiefe Com-

The eighth, Mockrib Chan and Hoia Nassan, came downe with a great traine to the water. fide, and at the same time, to put icalousie of their ill dealing from vs, brought downe some fortie or fiftie packes of Indian Clothes, and so increasing to the number of a hundred and eight packes, yet the light thereof could not mooue all of vs to believe, they meant faithfully to deale with vs: but they having extraordinary delire to our Quick-filuer, and Vermilion , and Mockrib Char to our Veluet, though they made imallest flew thereof. Yet for that it could not be had by 20 it felfe, without our Lead and other Commodities, by which meanes they condefcended to deale at present for our Lead also, deferring all the rest till some other time, but would not deale with vs otherwise, but so as they would gaine liftie in the hundred at their owne doores without further aduenture, and ours which we have brought fo farre, wee could not draw them but to fuch poore rates, as will beare but a small part of our fraight hither. The ninth in the morning, Sir Henry Middleton went on shoare, not having any fure cons-dence in their performance, where in words they continued firme. Wherefore the Trades Inercase began to land her Lead; somewhat before noone was brought vnto Mockrib Chan,a Letter from the great Mogull, whereat he was so dampe, that scarce any words was to be gotten from him, but presently after dinner he departed, but Hoia Nasjan, and others continued, as they pretended, to effect the bulinelle: this night before the Generall went abourd, being fill in sufpition of inconstant dealing, and seeing the great paines and toile in landing our Lead, and what intollerable difgust or discontent would arise among our people, if by shrinking from their words we be forst againe to imbarque the same, sent some of our Factors with the Brokers to Hold Naffan to fignifie the same, and before farther trouble to know his full resolution: who returned him answere, he should not need to doubt, for they would have it all: whereby without further do bt, the greatest expedition was vied for landing thereof. This day in the evening, Williams John for Sailer of the Darling, and John Conerdale Trumpetter of the Admirall, ran away to the Portugall Armie, and John Pattifon to Surat.

The tenth, there came aboor a to fee our thips the Gouernour of Surat, and Coia Arfan Alle, 40 being departed from the Pepper-Corne with the Generall aboard the Admirall, in the cfing this fudden diffurbance happened, which croft the content on all fides, for Iohn Iourdaine came ipecdily from the shoare to informe the Generall, how that Hoia Nassan having alreadie the Veluet and some other things which he most defired, was now in a great fit of wrangling, so that hee though: no good for vs would be done : for he had both made them give over weighing the lead; and also sent for his Oxen to draw away the Carts with the packes of Indian Clothes : whereat the Generall grew to impatient, that he prefently made flay (to inforce performance) both of the Gouernour and Coia Arfan Ally, to their great trouble cf minde, but after some little paule, the Generall caused them to be imbarqued with himselfe in the Frigat, and came in calling vpon me in the Pepper-Corne, to impart what he had done, wishing my opinion, who seeing him in the 50 right way, faw no cause to counsell him to reuoke the same, but rather for securitie of our busnelle to perseuere : from me he departed to the shoare with a reasonable Guard, and gave Hoia Nassan knowledge, what his cross-dealing had forced him vnto, and that since the Governour of Surat came in curtefie, and the businesse concernes him not; wisht himselfe to come aboard and take his place, and he would difmiffe the Gouernour; who feeing no other remedie, with a grimme looke and fowre countenance came into the Frigat, and the Gouernour to his great content was difmit, and they were brought to remayne with me in the Pepper-Corne.

The elementh, we continued landing of our Lead, and had to light ned the Admirall, that at high-water the night following to our great content, we brought her in ouer the larre, alio hauing now all our strength together where our bufinesse lay.

The twelfth in the morning, Sir Henry Middleton fent for the Gentlemen Prisoners to bee brought aboard his greater ship; which Hoia Nassan for long time obstinately refused, till I had order to find him perforce : hee being there, in regard of the haftening of our businesse it was thought fit to inlarge them both, leauing other pledges in their places, as fer Coia Naffan was Coia Illardin his fonne in law, and one of his fonnes : and for Hoia Arfan Alle, two Perfian Merchants. And for pledges on our fide to remayne with them in their Tents, were lobn Williams and Henry Boothby: this night were opened, counted, forted and agreed for fortie packes of Irdian Clothes.

English Voyages to the East-Indies.

The fifteenth, there came to vs two Portugall youthes from the Armie, one of them beeing Portugall Futhe Captaine Maior his Page.

301

The fixteenth, in the morning wee faw to the Southward fine Portugall Colours displayed ; whereof the Generall understanding presently by his command, were landed some two hundred armed men with Shot and Pikes to meet them : which they perceining retyred, in which pur-10 fuit being neere vnto our Swally, wee met with Hoia Naffen and all his troupes, who was com- Portugalisticaming downe with some twentie packes more of Indian Clothes: he informed the Generall that very and flight.

the Portugals were alreadie gotten ouer the muddie Creekes, and were neere vnto their Frigats, wherefore the Generall gaue ouer his pursuite, and returned aboord. The nineteenth, Peter Rosemary (a Portugall whom wee brought out of England) a Sailer of the Trade, being appointed as Guardian to attend on (or looke to) Francisco Confaines, they both ran away to the Armie.

The feuen and twentieth, there came from Serat Hoia Nasan, to fee if hee could buy any of our Clothes and other Commodities : but not agreeing upon the proies , hee againe departed. This day by a lem from Masulipatan, the Generall received a Letter from one Peter Floris (2 Dutchman imployed by the Company of Merchants of London trading to East-India, who had there setled a Factorie) certifying the Generall of three ships, which were comming out of England, whereof one was to goe into Red-Sea: which was very unpleasing to the Generall and vs all, in regard of the danger we suspected they should fall into.

The thirtieth, Master lourdaine and Master Fraine were sent to Surat, to agree for some more Indian Clothes, as also to vrge the putting off of some of our Commodities. The same day the Generall received a Letter from Captaine Haukins at Cambaya, fignifying that his determination was with all his houshold to take his pallage to Goa, and from thence to England; But Sir Henry Middleton conceiting, if hee once get to Goa, his goods would flop his passage to England, if not shorten his life, by the same Messenger did most earnestly and friendly aduise him 30 to the contrarie, and inuited him to take his pallage with vs into Engl and also our people at Surat informed the Generall that Mockrib Chan made shew to bee willing that wee should leaue a Factorie for venting of the remayne of our Commodities : which kept vs sometime in hope, but afterwards vanisht by inconstancie.

The eight of Ianuarie, Nicholas Uphlet came downe from Cambaya, with Letters from Ianuary 8. Captaine Haukins to the Generall, certifying him that by reason of his former Letter, hee determined to come downe to our shippes, and take his passage with vs.

The fixe and twentieth, Captaine Sharpesp , Malter Fraine, Captaine Hankins with Capt. Haritas. all his goods and Family, and the rest (Nicholas Uphles excepted) came downe, whom the Generall with a Treupe of some two hundred men , went some three mile vp into 40 the Land to meete and guard them from the Portugalls, whose Armie was not fare off.

The feven and twentieth, the Generall fent Iohn Williams to Surat, to know their resolutions for leauing a Factory there.

The nine and twentieth, Iohn Williams returned with an absolute denyall of having any further dealing with our Nation, but were all commanded to bee gone out of Surat, not permitting them to flay to receive Debts there owing them: wherefore they fent to know the Generals pleasure, whether they should presently come downe, or vie meanes to delay the time, to see whether their determination therein would alter.

The thirtieth, Sir Henry Middleton writ to our people at Surat, speedily to repaire downe to

The one and thirtieth, according to the Generals direction, all our people came downe from Surat with all their goods.

The fixth of February, there passed by towards Cambaya, a great Caphala, or Fleet of neere February, 6. fine hundred faile of Portugall Frigats.

The ninth in the morning, vpon the top of a high water, the Admirall warped out ouer the Barre, and anchored in the Offing. This day about noone came downe from Cambaya, Nicholas Upblet, Captaine Hankins servant, whom they had left behind in pawne as afore-said, for whom we stayed fince the last of Ianuarie, what time our Merchants were expelled Smat. This day in the euening we set faile, and went out ouer the Barre, and anchored in eight fathome, some mile in the Offing thereof, neere vnto the Admirall.

Their departure to Dabull, Socatora, the Red-sea, and Acts there.

E departed the ninth, having continued heere the space of an hundred and thirtie eight dayes, in which we fullayned many and fundry abuses by delayes, breach of promition for the feet of th a few Commodities at very hard and unprofitable Rates, which holding further trade.

dilappointing vs of fetling a Factorie, which holding some debts formerly, and commanding our Merchants out of their Towne, and our ships to be gone. The cause mouing them to hasten vs away (as we afterwards vnderftood) grew thus at the inflant of their conference, whether fit for them to permit vs to leaue a Factorie, to vent the reft of our goods brought for that place there or no; was deliuered into the hands of Mockrib Chan a Letter from Dangie , a Bannian in Cambaya, by the infligation of the Isluites there; admining them, that if they gave place to the English in Surat, the Portugals would come with force, and burne all their Sea Townes, and make spoile of all the ships they should fend abroad, the contents whereof was applauded of most all agreeing it to be their best course, and thereupon dismist our people, as aforelaid.

This Road of Smally within the Bar lyeth in twentie degrees, fiftie fine minutes North latitude. the variation in fixteene degrees and fortie minutes Westerly, wee found the water highed more on the full Moone spring then on the change, by soure foot : the one beeing foure and twentie foot, the other twentie, the night tydes higher then the day tyde by three foot, according as the wind blew, the Coast or Strand within the Barre lyeth neerest South and North by the Compalle, which the variation allowed is North by East, and halfe East, and South by West halfe West, also at West South-west halfe South, and East North-east halfe North, the Moone makes

The tenth, the Generall stayd to dispatch his businesse with Iaddon and Narran the Brokers: also we tooke out of a Frigat bound to the Rehemy at Goga, certaine Candies of Rice and Pitch, 10 giving them Bils to be paid at Surat by two men, who were indebted to Captaine Hambus ac-

They depart from Surat.

The threat-

mings of the

Observations

of the Tides,

&c. at Swally.

Portugalis.

The eleventh, in the morning at fixe a clocke at high water wee fet faile, and at two in the afternoone we anchored in the South Road at the Barre foot of Surat , by a new thin called the Haffany, bound with the Rehemy vnto the Red-Sea: also we tooke out of another Frigat certains Charcole, affigning them to be paid at Surat in manner aforesaid.

The fourteenth, at one of the clocke in the morning we met with a Banke, whereon weehad from fixteene to thirteene fathomes, and fuddenly agains to twentie and twenty two fathomes, after which we haled up by a wind West by South some three leagues : from fixe a clocke in the morning to noone South South-east some nine leagues, the wind at North, our depths twentie, nineteene, feuenteene, and fixteene fathomes, what time wee were some 40 tenne leagues off the Land West-wards in North latitude, nineteene degrees, thirtie seuen minutes. At one a clocke we past by three Mallaber ships bound for Surat , laden with Cayro (or stuffe to make Ropes)& Coco Nuts, who there rid in fourteene fathome, nine leagues off from the land to spend the ebbe, and South-east from seuen other ships neere in towards the mountaines, from noone to mid-night, we went South South-east some fine leagues, the most part of this

The fifteenth to noone South South-east fixe leagues, the wind Northerly a very easie gale: this night we heard divers great Ordnance shoot off ashoare: this night our passage hath beene in fifteene, thirteene, and twelge fathome, this land is mountainous mixt with divers 50 Vallies like harbours or entries. Our latitude at noone was nineteene degrees, foure minutes. At Sunne-let, wee were three leagues off the thore, our passage in betweene twelue and fixe fathome. From noone to mid-night our course was South by East eleuen leagues, the winde

The fixteenth to noone South by East twelve hours, eleven leagues, the wind Northerly, the land high and full of harbor like Bayes all alongst in fine shoulding in fine fathome, and foure miles of the land, and nine fathome three leagues of our latitude eighteene degrees, one minute. This day at Sun-letting we anchored in seuen fathome thwart of the Barre of Dabull, to which Towns the General went in hope to fel some of his English Commodities, or (as it were) to shoot another Arrow after divers formerly loft.

The feuenteenth, in the morning, the Generall in the Frigat went in necre the Barre to dif- 60 court the depths and so abourd againe, which was fine fathome very neere the South point of the entrance, but very little further North-wards towards the middle of the entrance but two Latitude,17.34 fathome: the latitude of this South point is feuenteene degrees, thirtie foure minutes, the varia-Variation 15.34 tion is fifteene degrees thirtie foure minutes.

CH A.P. 12. S. 5. Unrubneffe of men when prep is to be bad.

This day about noone came off two Boates from the Gouernour, the one with a prefent, which was three Bullockes, certaine Sheepe, Plantans, Bread, and water Millions : in the other Boate came the Messengers, which were sent to know what we were, and our businesse, though they before did imagine who we were, partly by our acquaintance with them at Mobs, as also their hearing of our being at Surat. The Mellage, according to the Indian manner, was delivered with many complements and promite of all friendship, and further that they would buy our goods for money, and gine vs Indico, Cloth and Pepper for the fame, (which was more then we could expect, or they had order to great) for what Indico they had with Cloth and Pepper was presently to be imployed in their owne ships now bound for the Red Sea ; vpon these kind pro-10 miles the Generall fent Merchants afhoare both with a prefent to the Governous, and with Mufires of English Clothes, and other of our Commodities: but of all, except fome little Broadcloth and Kersies of our best colours, as Stantmels, Poppiniay greene, and other light colours, and lead in barres, we could tell none : for our Red Lead, the Gouernour bought and fent it a- Diball double board againe : and somewhat after the manner we found at Surat, the Gonernour dealt double dialing. with vs; granting free leaue to fell, yet under-hand had men in waite to refrayne or heate away fuch as came to buy; so that no man buying made his owne price, for what hee defired to buy;

for Corne and other prouision and water to be brought aboard for money, wee had with all fanour, and at last we had a Cable of eighteene inches, and minetie fixe fathome of the Countrey stuffe, worth eight pound sterling, for one of the Darlings Anchors. Now, whether such kind-20 neffe as we received were out of their good disposition to strangers, or not, it is hard to indge, they having presently blowne abroad and intermed at Moba, that we endeaucur to right what wrongs any should impose upon vs, and therefore might seeme to make the best showes

The fixe and twentieth, in the after-noone, befides duiers Mallaber Merchants ships which portugal thip. anchored by vs, we faw also in the Offing a great Ship and Frigat, to whom, two houres before night the Generall fent off the Doling to bring in the faid thip: but doubting the milling of her by night, as also the smalnesse of his force to command her, when night came sent off mee also in the Pepper-Corne, with his Frigat well manned to attend upon mee in regard of the Frigat in her companie. About mid-night, shough very darke, I get fight of her riding at Anchor, fen-

30 ding our Frigat to the other running away, and the great thip getting fight of vs, was come to faile, but being commanded to strike faile, did it, also their Captaine and Principals to come aboard me, he ient a Souldier and two more in a Canon, who excused the Captaine to be aged and vinweldie, and that their great Boat was so perfered with lading, that they could not row her; wherefore, though vnwillingly, I was forced to feint my owne Pinnaffe for fome of the principall Merchants and Souldiers, but with fuch freight dyection to my Cock-swaine, that vpon paine of great punishment he should permit none to goe into her, to the end to prevent spoyle. Intended Sir Henry Middleton shoul be the first Englishman should enter her : meane-while our Frigat with the other which they had taken, returned to vs, and to my griefe gaue knowledge that they killed one of the Portugals in flying. Now having divers of their men aboard 40 me, I gave direction to stand in for Dabull : but by reason of their ill sterage, which we imputed to be done of purpose, and for that with all our sayles wee could not fetch them up beeing gotten a little a-head vs, and fearing they might mend their fayling, and get from vs, I caused them to be called vnto to take in their layles, and anchored till day, which directions given and our Anchors readie to let fall, I departed into my Cabin to examine some of the Portugals, what their ship was laden withall : meane-while my Master pretended to doubt whether the shippe were anchored or no, without any order or knowledge fent my Pinnaffe aboard, wherein went ship, but there fell to rifling, who though often called made no haste away, till his owne pleafure was fulfilled. Against whose comming aboard, I cauled Thomas Glenham , John Staughten, 50 George Cockam and Robert Mico the Purser, to bee readie at the Ladder with a Lanthorne and Candle to fearch them one by one (in the Portugals fight aboard our ship) and turned them out of the Boate: which being done, and the things throwne into the Boats iterne by Thomas Glerbam, John Stanghten, and Robert Mico, I fent againe aboard the Portugall ships, willing the Purset to tel them aboard if there were any thing else wanting, they that had been aboard without my direction should make it good : but by reason that Thomas Lone, George leff and Matthew Bragge, three Masters Mates of the Admirall lately dead, the Fright was now commanded by one Terrie a servant to Giles Thornton, who before our Boat gataboard againe, notwithstanding they were commanded to the contrarie, went aboard with our Frigat, whereas, like difgouerned pilfering people, they runne all into the ship, not forbearing to breake open Chests, timble into the Fri-60 gat, and make spoyle of all things that liked them, forbearing no ill language to such as I had one of his mates, more greedie of pray then carefull of credit, who did not onely goe into the

fent to reflraine them. But the cuill being done, it was too late to vinoue it; and though it every vinibilities in me much trouble and prefent discontentives! I vied the best meanes! I had left to cure the fame. Vinibilities when it me much trouble and prefent discontentives! I visibilities when the discontentive is a market by the discontentive in the discontent fent to restraine them. But the enill being done, it was too late to vidoe it: and though it bred which was, I delired William Pemberton who with the Darling came newly to vs., to make the Prey is premore halte into the Road, and to informe the Generall of our peoples misbehaniour, to the end fent, before they fould have meanes to come yaway or remove the fame care, might be taken for bringing off, all things to light, which the Generall no lboner vnderfrood, but at one aclothe when we all anchored by hun, commanded both the Frigars wherein our people were, to an chor of and non- of them to come aboard him; and Sir Hong, Middleton and my felft with the Captaine, and Merchants of the Portugal thip, went first to our owne Frigat, and then to the Frigat newly taken whereour people were, and had every one narrowly fearcht, and all things taken from them, and they turned one by one out, as they were learche, of all what was found belonging to the Frigat was there left, and then our small Frigat was by our Pinnaffe towed a. board the Portugall thip, where all the reft was delivered for the vie of fuch to whom it belonged This ship belonged to Cabbin, called the Saint Niebolas, of burthen some three hundred tunnes, the Captaines mame . . . . being bound to Chank, their lading confest, was principally 10 dryed Coco Nuts, fome Tinne, blacke Sugar, and Racka Nuts, ten Fats of China Diffies, ctrtaine Bags of Allome, and some small quantitie of China Dishes, and some Carro, or balt Ropes. We made all inquificion possible for their bits of lading; but none they would bee knownecf which puries to great trouble so find out, the little we had from them, which were certaine bals of China raw blke, fome small quantitie of Cloues, and some few Cannastres, and three Chess of Cinamon, and iome Waxe to make vs Candles all which was as it were but a mite in comparison of the dammages done vs by the Fortugalls. The Frigat belonged to Chaull and bound to O men, of burthen fixtie tunnes, her lading Rice and Tamarin, out of whom we tooke bagges of Ride for our prouition; this buildefle continued vs in doing every day formewhat till the first of March. By this Frigat the Generalidif. 20 patcht away all such Portugalls as came to him from the Armie at Surar, to wit Lorenzo de Campo, and his confort, he fillow taken in the Frigat and the two Boyes, that came away from their Mafters, gining them money in their Puries, according to their feuerall qualitie, belides, the apparell for needs made for either of them vnto the Merchant, that ought the most part of the Silke, the Generall gaue a fine Broad-cloth, and to the Captaine of the Frigat, from whom wee tooke the Rice, a fine Kerfie. Also this day the Governour fent to gi e the Generall knowledge, that the next day or night following the great Caphala, which patt by vs the fixth of February afore-faid, towards Cambaja, would either the next day or might following againe pafe by towards Gos: which howformer they patterther by night or day we faw them not.

This

304

tunnes taken.

Confulration

The fourth, the fore-faid bunnelle being effected, the Generall called vs all to confidention 10 what was belt so be done, thewing his delacting to the Barre of Goe, there to demand of the Vice-Roy restitution of our wrongs done to vs and our Nation by the Portugalis, to the end if that he refused to doe it, we might the better have warrant, to right our selves up in any Portugalls, which by our endenours wee might meete withall; which demand of the most was thought reasonable, but not fit in regard of the shortneste of time and varietie of delayes, and treacherous plots we were to expect, to our further abusing; wherefore it was concluded and agreed vpon, for that the time not yet ferring to go to the South-wards about the Cape Comment, Againe, to returne to the Red-Sea in this vacant time to feet if we can get away these goods lying vponour hands in a manner holden for lott, to recover lome of our former loffes from the fubiects of the great Mogollias alto to creffe the Tarker at Moha and Aden, for the mischiefe 40 they have formerly done vs and principally for to referre, defend or recover that thip fent out by the Companie, the neareafter nurrumming out, which wee heard of from Ma fulipatan, which we have great doubt of left the befullen into like mithap as we did in the Red-Sea, but for that this day the wind ferued not to tet faile, we deferred it to the fift day in the morning. The fifth, at sixe a clocke in the morning, we all fet faile from Dabull standing away North

They depart from Dabull cd sea

North-west along it the Coast, the Generall wishing to see the shippe of Cochin, neere vinto her Harbor of Chault, cleere of danger by the Mallabars their enemies, and at Sun-fet we anchored in fenen fathome, forme league drillant from the land , dultant from Dabull forme fixe leagues, and flort of Chault formerine leagues, the wind at South, and fo veering to the West-wards.

From the Coast of India to Socatora, wee this time daily found our ship further to the South- 50 wards, then by our courfe we could expect, and especially when we were thwart of the Gulfe, or entrance of Sinus Perficus, which I imagined to be some current setting thence to the South-

The twentieth of March the Generall despeeded away William Pemberton (in the Darling) before to Socatora, to inquire of our thip bound for the Red-Sea and India, which wee heard of

The foure and twentieth, at tenne a clocke m the morning wee descryed land bearing West The Easterend South-west, some eight leagues distant, being the Father end of Socatora, being high land, hauing foure white cliffes or faild hils; the Norther part whereof by reason of the hazinesse 60 could not discerne.

The fine and twentieth of March, at Sunne-fetting, the point of Delifos bore South-east foure

The lixe and twentieth at fues clocke in the morning it fell calme, and the current fetting

North ward vpon the rocke, whereby we were forced to anchor in four and twentie fathome water, on the South South-east fide of the rocke (which is Saboyna) some halfe a mile distant; at Therocke Sathis rocke is great flore of fish. Betweene nine and ten a clocke, we againe let faile, flanding away benna. Wellwards of Cape Guardafui, the wind being at South.

The feuen and twentieth, about foure a clocke in the morning, the rockes Northwards of Abbadel Caria, thence distant some three leagues and a halfe, bore North of vs some halfe a mile off. which is by estimation twentie leagues West by South, from the Wester point of Socatora : our depthes we there found was fixteene, feuenteene and eighteene fathome; day being come, wee faw the Hand of Abba del Curia. 10 The eight and twentieth in the morning, at fixe a clocke, the Cape Guardafui bore South-east Marche feuen leagues diffant, and Mount Fælix West halfe a point Southerly nine leagues : wee came within foure mile of the land, and the depthes fortie, nine and thirtie; thirtie, feuen and twentie, three and twentie, one and twentie, eighteene and fifteene fathome, and about three afternoone, in a fret of wind at East North-east, wee anchored in rough ground in seuen fathome a mile and halfe Westwards from Mount Falix; all which Coast the Generall coasted along in his Frigat; and tooke in, and brought along three of the Countrie people, which he gave letters vnto. to be dehuered vnto the Darling, if thee came heere after our departure, and so put them a shoare: they informed the Generall, that foure dayes fince there passed by towards the Red-fea foure

The nine and twentieth in the morning, the Generall fent letters to other people on land, to Frants. The be deliuered to the Darling: the countrie people brought downe to our men to fell, some store of Westerne Chrisheepe, small Goats, with some small trailes of Olibanum and gumme Arabick, all which they slians in the had at reasonable rates; the people still taking vs to be Mahumetans, and not Christians, or (as Easterne world they call them) Franges, whom they favour not, to the Boat returning abourd about noone, the arefince that Generall thought good no longer to ftay for the Darling; wherefore we fet faile, ftanding away Godfren of Bule towards Aden in Arabia Falix. At foure a clocke in the after-noone Mount Falix bore East by len called South halfe a degree South, fome eight leagues distant.

From moone the thirtieth day, to one a clocke in the morning, the one and thirtieth day, thir cause the printeene houres, North-west eighteen leagues, the wind at North North-east; this day after-noone cipall of that 30 we descried the land of Arabia Falix.

The one and thirtieth in the morning, at one a clocke, being neare the land, we cast about to onor original. the Southwards, to spend time till day; at fine a clocke in the morning, wee cast about againe North-west to landwards : from fixe a clocke in the morning to fixe after-noone twelve houres, we flood alongst the Coast West by South, and West South-west thirteene leagues, al wayes keeping within fine mile of the land, in depthes betweene eighteene and thirtie fathom, from fixe a clocke to midnight, fixe houres West South-west fixe leagues.

The frit of Aprill, from midnight till fixe a clocke, West by South, halfe South five Aprill 1: leagues, at which time, by estimation, we were eighteene leagues short of Aden: This day the Generall fent for me, Mafter Lawfe and Mafter Fowler, to conferre of our separation : at length it

40 was concluded, that I in the Pepper-Corne should continue neare, or before the Towne of Aden. to keepe that no Indian thip thould arrive or flay there, but to put them by towards the Red-lea. and to that end I received a direction or commission from my Generall, who was with all expedition with the Trades-Increase to repaire to the Bab, or doore of the Red-fea, both for fafetie of the Companies ship, whereof we had intelligence from Masulpatan, to be following our tract, both to the Red-fea and India, even into the mouthes of the Welves, which by Gods mercy we have escaped, as also there at once to take revenge, both of the Turkes, and subjects of the great Mogoll, for the wrongs done to our King and Countrie.

The fecond, from midnight to fixe a clocke, West South-west three leagues, little wind at East; about eight a clocke in the morning, what time we should have been separated, some eight 50 leagues Eastward of Aden, we found at an anchor the Darling, who had got before vs, by reason of our lingering for her foure dayes, who had done their butinesse at Socatora, and were againe departed thence, before we past it, and gate aday before vs, by the Saboyna, Abba del Curia, and Mount Falix, where we lingered for them : they brought from thence the copie of a letter left with the King, by Captaine John Saris, Commander of the ships of our Indian Company, to wit, Generall Saris, the Clove, the Hellor, and the Thomas, fignifying, that notwithstanding by Sir Henry Middletons letter, he vinderstood of the villanies there done to vs, he with his faid ships was gone into the Red-fea. Immediatly the Generall with the Trades-Increase and Darling, departed towards the Bab, leaving me in the Pepper-Corne at an anchor, some eight leagues Eastwards of Aden, according to former determination.

The third at one a clocke in the morning, we fet faile, and stood to the Southwards, the better to discouer, and so all the day under saile, we kept up to windwards of Aden: in the morning we faw three faile bound for Aden, but flood away from vs, that wee could not come neare them all night, for that it blew hard, we did not anchor, but lay a hull to trie our drift, which I found in ten houres to be three leagues, fo running further in ; and the fourth day morning , about feuen a clocke, I anchored in twelue fathome, some league or foure mile from the Towne

Frankes, be-French in Natio

306

The twelfth in the morning, a little after midnight, we fet faile to crosse her, and at day-light we deferred her riding at an anchor fome three mile Southward of vs, with whom presently we trimmed our failes to stand withall, and shee presently was under faile, and stood in with Aden. Betweene nine and ten a clocke, by shooting off a Peece at them, they came roome, and snicke. their top-failes, and fent in their Boat to vs: they told vs they were of Callicut, and bound to A-Aship of Callie den, and their ship bekenged to the Samorin, or King of Calliem, from whence they had been fortie dayes in comming, they came neare Socatora, and toucht at Mount Falix, where they faw the Generals letter left there for the Darling, where also they saw a ship of Daball, which came 10 from Achin. The Nobuda of this ship is called Abraham Abba Zeinda, their ships Cargazon, ac. cording to their information was as followeth: Tamerick three tunnes, Rice three and Itwentie hundred kintals, Jagara or bowne Sugar forty bahars, Cardaminus feuen bahars, Ginger drie foure kintals and an halfe, Pepper a tun and a halfe, Cotton one and thirtie packs, each pack containing five or fix maunds; thee had in her threefore and fifteene perfons, for the vies following : twentie to bale water, and other businesse below, eight for the Helme, foure for top and yard, and other businelle aloft; twentie Boyes for dreffing seuerall mens victuals; the rest Merchants and Pilgrims: this ship was of burthen an hundred and fortie tunnes: thus having to the vtmost examined them, and they being of a place, whose Inhabitants neuer wronged our Nation; therefore without diminishing any part of their goods, but only, with their good wills, two tunner 10 of water for our need, and io I difmift them; though to the great difturbance of their mindes. when by no meanes I would permit them to goe into Aden to make fale of their commodities; which if they did once attempt, I threatned them I would finke their ship, and leave only their Boat to faue their lives; yet their vnwillingnelle to depart made mee adde many more threatnings, that if they hastened not away before I fee any other faile to give chase vnto, I must then be forced to finke their ship, to be sure to keepe them from the Turkes our enemies; whereby they put themselues to faile, and stood somewhat off the land, but to lee-wards; so to our disturbance, wee all day and night kept off and on under faile, for feare left in the night they should

Note that any ship wee heere saw, before wee could come to speake with them, there hath been adule fent from the Governor of the Towne to informe them of vs; and when we had the Mallabar vnder command, the Gouerner fent a Boat aboord with divers Arabs, and two Turkes fouldiers of the Towne, which had formerly been instruments to Abdraheman Aga, to bind and corture our men then in their hands, which now feeing the men they vied ill, brought them in no small doubt what their viage now should be, as their guiltie conscience pricked them, whom I suppose came as spies to see what wee did, brought some fruit to sell: at the first fight of our men, whom they knew, they would faine have put off their Boat and been gone, but I would not permit them; causing them to be put in mind of their behaviour formerly towards our people in their hand, and when without any euill speech given them, I thought them sufficiently by their own minds terrified, I caused to be told them, that they should see how far our Nation dif-40 fereth from the rigour of injurious Turkes, which most cruelly handled our men without offence, whom by all faire promites they betrayed; and that I yet knowing them to have exercised their forces in abuling my men, yet notwithstanding I would without discurtese or harme, dismisse or fend them away; who prefently departed, with many promifes the next day to bring vs more refreshing: the next morning they fent vs a boat with good fish, and promiting to come anon with better provisions, which they were providing: but by reason of my setting saile, and standing off, to put the Malabar to lee-ward towards the Red-lea, I was too farre for them to row vnto me, which ship, if shee had stayed, might have been occasion that the Aga might have permitted them to performe their promiles to vs.

Aprill.

The fourteenth in the morning, the wind at East, wee discried another ship of like burthen, bound also for Aden, which about ten a clocke we forced to anchor : I fent aboord to fearch her, and to bring away some of her men, while I caused my Boat to bee hoysed out; vnderstanding they were of Pormean, a Towne not farre from Cutts-nagone, being tributaries to the great Mogoll, who despised our King, and abused our Nation; the Nobuda being a Bannian, I with this ship being at an anchor fome two miles from Aden, our enemies, and finding by the Mallabars working the day before, that if any other faile, of neuer fo much importance, should approach this place, before I could finish my businesse with this, I must either leave the one or the other to their owne will, for which respect I was more carefull to fend to fearch what shee had in her, by my Our men vn- owne people, then to examine them belonging to her, what was in her. So with great labour in lade this thip. romaging before the darknesse of the night ouer-tooke vs, we had out of her fourteene packes of 60 course Duttie, of fixe corges a packe; and fixe and thirtie Ballets, containing fome fix and thirtie corges of Dutties course; one small Ballet of Candekins mill (or small blew pieces of Callico) with some thirtie or more Bastas white, a little Butter and Lamp-oyle, which was all fit for vs. yet discouered the rest of her loading, being packes of Cotton-wooll, as we tearme it, which the next day we thought further to examine. This day Maharim Aga of Aden, fent me a prefent of Henne-egges, Limes and Plantans, which I would not looke at, as to receive as a Prefent, but by the meffinger I fent the Asaword, that the varitie of injuries done vnto my friends and Natron heere the laft yeere, hat it constrained my present approach, to do my Nation and my selfe white right I may, to the diffurbance of the Turker. And as my comming hither was not to de-Terue any fautour from them; fo my meaning was to forbeare to receive any of their diffembling curtefies for fince they cut our throats when we came to them in friendfhip, what may we expect from them now, when we come in late and dispiglit of the Torkes of all these parts; but in regard it was fent, my people should give them for their owne vie, so much as the things were 10 worth; allo there came abourd a fisher-boat; bringing good flore of fresh-fish, which I caused to Feare of poy-be bought for our suppers, alwayes making the bringer to the part of what hee brought. The nixe and twentieth in the morning, we discried a faile to the Southwards of Aden, plying to the Eastwards, to whom in the after-nigone I fent my Pinnaste, which brought her in neate vnto vs, thee being a lelba of Shaber bound home; laden with Graine and other commedities, as

CH AP. 12. 8.5. Diffembling of the Turkes with the English.

Opium and others, also diviers Pilgrims from Mecca were pattengers in her bound home. The feuen and twentieth in the morning, we faw a lelba plying to the Eastwards betweene vs and the shoare, wherefore I lent my Pinnaile to fetch her of, whom I found to bee the same Ielba of Shaher, that had pailed by vs the fenenteenth and two and twentieth of this prefent, as aforefaid : of them for a triall we bought nine pound and a halfe of Opium, and fo againe dif-

The eight and twentieth in the morning, we fet faile, plying off and on to windwards of Aden, with the wind at East. The nine and twentieth, fall vnder faile, as aforefaid in the after- Bander Zeedez noone, we discried two failes flan ling towards Aden, vinto whom in the evening I fent off my place on the Primafie well mand, to bring them in neare verto the flip, which by foure a clocke the thirtieth Abaxia Goaft. day was effected; they both belonged to a place on the Abaxin Coaft, called Bander Zeada, the one of them laden only with Mats; the other with tome Mats, and threefcore and eight sheepe with great runpes, which we bought of them, and to difmift them, who prefently let faile and went in vitto Aden, the wind at East South-east, East and North-east.

The eighth, with an easie gale of wind at North-east by East, we continued, plying towards May. 30 the Bab: At tenne a clocke, we discried the land on the Abaxin Coast side, which at first shewed like an Iland, but approaching a little neerer, we plainly perceived it to be the maine land : from thence we fleered away North-west towards the Bab, which by estimation was some tenne leagues distant, which at neere foure in the afternoone we discried, where wee lay lingering off and on to fpend the night. Day light appearing, we flood in towards the Bab, where in the entrance of the Bab, we differied a fm Il faile a sterne of vs, comming into the straight; wherefore I strucke my top-failes to stay for her, and sent of my Pinnasse to her, who comming up with vs againe, brought the Nobuds and Malim aboord, whom I examined, and found them to bee fubicits to the great Mogol, they belonged to a place called Larree, fituate at the mouth of the flanding at the River of Zinde: with them I luft vp into a bay on the East fide, and anchored in feuen fathome; I mouth of the 40 fending my Merchants to fearch what the was laden with, who found divers packs and fardels of river of Zinde. cloath, packs and fardels of feedes of divers forts, leather, iarres of Butter, and oyle (whereof tome they eate, and fome they burne in lamps) a great quantitie: and fince for want of water, the having many Pallengers. I could not fitly keepe her with me, being vncertaine of wind I refolued to take out of her the like helt packs of Indian Cloath to ferue for our turnes, with some Butterand Oyle for our needfull vies, as by the Purfers and Factors notes appeare, and fo dispeeded them to Mohr. Into which businesse before we could well make an entrie, about three a clocke in the afternoone, I diferied opening the East land of the straights, a ship of two hundred A ship of soo Tunnes; and immediately following her an huge faile, whole maine yard was fortie three yards Tunnes. long. At fight of which thip ( they being very neere before the land permitted me to fee them)

30 by what time I had gotten my people aboord, fine onely excepted, which Heft armed to keepe the ship of Larree, had gotten vp my anchor, and was come to faile; but the great shippe though short of me, yet beeing in a good streame, and a fresh gale, and I in a Bay had a eddy and faint gale, the got an end, & had fomewhat over-reacht me before I could come to crosse them, so that I was brought to a sterne chase, and being come neere her, by her masts and tops wee knew her to be the Mahamady of Daball our friend, which we could expect no good by; yet knowing the pride of the Captaine, I would very gladly have commanded over him, for that he would never, of Dabul. neither formerly in the Road of Moha, nor yet at Dabul come to vifit Sir Henry Middleton , but I found he reache from me, wherefore I gaue them one shot and stood with the other ship, who feeing ws stand with the great shippe strucke a Hall thinking to lose vs by the darknesse of the 60 night now approaching: I tooke her to be a ship of Dis, but when we came to them, they told vs they were of Cuts-nagone, a place not farre from the river of Zinde, her lading Cotton-wool, A this of Cutsfome few packs of Indian cloth, some Butter and Oyle: having gotten some of her principal men zagane a place

aboord me, I caused them to edge up with me into shoale water on the Arab Coast, where by not farre from lights I endeanoured to find out my fine men in the Larree ship; and at midnight we anchored in Ziede.

twelue fathome, four leagues within the Bab; where the next two dayes we tooke out of the Larree (hip, fixtie fixe fardels of Indian Cloath ( which for that we were otherwise furnished for all our English Commodities, and needed it not, was redeliuered to them againg, with part of the Butter and Oyle; onely eight Corges of Bastas, for which they had content.) These things beeing taken out, I put into them the Paffengers and Pilgrims of the Cotton ship, they ving their best diligence as the wind would permit them to halten to Moha, I fending by them a letter to Sir Henry Middleton, if they should finde him in the Roade ; but before they departed, we feeing a Lelba comming from the Bab, and for that the wind was not good, they fent away their Canoa, rowing before, and hastning to vs, who informed me, his lelba belonged to Bender Zeada, a Towne on the Abaxin Coalt, halfe a dayes journey West-ward from Bender Cassim, who Io was bound to Moha with his Boat full of Mats, who going a land as he passed the Bab, was told by one that had a letter for me, that my Countrey-men whom I looked for were gone to Affab, with eight or nine Indian ships, but he that had the letter would not send it by him, expecting a reward, if by the wind I should be put backe to the Bab. I now knowing where my Generall was, this afternoone fet faile; but the wind not fauouring me we anchored againe.

Their barter with the Indian Ships, and departure to Sumatra. He next day in the morning, S. Henry Middleton fent Giles Thorneton his Master, to

thip of 1500.

certifie me how glad he was of my comming; and to let me know that he had at command all the debred ships of India, as the Reberry of burthen fifteene hundred tunnes, the Hassary of fixe hundred, the Mahumady of one hundred and fiftie tunnes of Sura. the Sallamite of foure hundred and fiftie tunnes, the Cadree of two hundred tunnes, the Azum Cany, the Sabandar of Moba his ship of two hundred tunnes all of Din, besides three Mallabar thips; the Cabre of Dabul of four hundred tunnes, and a great thip of Cananor. He further informed me, that before I could get into the Road, the Generall with all the pride of his people, and Captaine Sarie with his people, would be gone on shoare to receive the King of Rabita, who was come with his Nobilitie and Guard, to see and visit the Generall, and new come Generall. 30 Captaine Sais The day beeing neere fpent, S. Henry Middleton and Captain Saris left the King in his Tent, and went aboord the Tradef-increase to supper, where I vinderstood of a contract made betweene them first at the Bab, wherein it was agreed, here to put off all our English goods, for such Indian wares, as by mutuall confent of certaine of the Merchants of both fides should be thought fit.

Neere about that time, as I was also informed, there came from the Gouernour of Moha to Sir Henry Middleton, to capitulate of peace, Manny Captaine of the Gallies, and others, who demanded what was the fumme that in fatisfaction he required : Sir Henry Middleton neere the proportion of the last yeares demand, required one hundred thousand Rialls of eight; which knowne, they defired respite to send to Zenan, to know the pleasure and resolution of leffer Bathat herein; and then he should heare from them againe, and to tooke their leaue. By SimHenry 40 Middletons direction, the Darling was in preparing with a small Cargazon of Indian cloaths to be

The nineteenth, the Darling departed towards Tecoa, Alfo Captaine Saris prepared the Thomas to follow the Darling to Tecos; who also departed the three and twentieth day. This day allo Sir Henry Middleton dismissed a ship of Diu (called the Azumcany ) helonging to Shermall

The thirtieth, a generall meeting was abourd the Tradef-increase at dinner, where Captaine Saris and Captaine Towerfon were inuited, for the further conference of our present businelle. At noone there came ouer from Moha the Sabander of Moha, Mammy Captaine of the Gallies, and an Aga, they all appointed by the Basha, to conferre with Sir Henrie Middleton about an agree- 50 ment, for fatisfaction of our former abuses, the summe whereof they demaunded of Sir Hemie Middleton, who as formerly required one hundred thousand Ryals of eight, and seeing nothing to be abated thereof, they defired leaue to have conference with the Nobudus, or Captaines of the Indian thips, and other principall Merchants ( which was graunted :) which as it feemed was to trie what customes they could augment upon the Indian goods, towards payment of the faid fumme: so they departed on shoare, where they had prepared for them a faire Tent : but divers of the Nobulus, in regard of former injuries, either forbore conference, or with flood their augmentation, which feeing by no meanes to be accomplished, they tooke leaue of Sir Hemy Middleton, promifing so soone as they had answer from the Basha, they would give him knowledge thereof, and what therein they may doe: and so againe the ninth of Iune they departed toward 60 Moba. All this time our people were employed in romaging, opening, packing, and repacking of Indian cloaths fit for our turnes, giving them of our English commodities in liew thereof. The eleuenth, Sir Henry Middleton with the Tradef-increase, and Captain Saris with the Cloue and Hellor, departed the road of Allab, carrying with them in company towards Moh. all the Indian thips. But I with the Pepper-corne remained in the roade, with a small thippe called the Timgo, into Whom Fre-delivered all the goods that I had formerly taken out of her, the ninth and A [mail thip tenth of May.

The twelfth, at three of the clocke in the morning, we both fet faile, following our Admirall and the refit towards Mobas but the wind being aduerie, together with a lee-tide, we were forced and the morning, the wind did for switch factor and the Road. The thirteenth at nine of the clocke in the morning, the wind did for switch factor and level weighed and flood on with the Roade, where about foure of the clocke in the afternoone we anchored.

The nineteenth, Sif Henry Middleton perceiving that the Turker intended nothing but deto lates, further to abule vs. who now in our owne view laboured in wilading of a flup of Con-na-gone, laden with Cotton, which Sir Hopp Middleson determined to higher; till fuch time as the Turker should have made agreement with him for his wrongs suffaired, and therefore, came aboord the Pepper-corne, by whole direction I warped in neerer vato them. , discharging at them divers peeces of Ordnance, till they cealed their labour. Also all this weeke following they kept vs in hand with delayes, but made no agreement at all.

The fixe and twentieth, Sir Henry Middleton, and Captaine Saris appointed a meeting aboord the Mahumody of Dabul, where all the Nohudas of the Indian thips being fent for, S. Henry Middleton (as often times before) related vinto them the wrongs and damages full sined from the Turkes, with whom (till he received fatisfaction from them for the fame) her could in no wife permit them to trade. But notwithflanding he had already quited himfelfe for the injuries fullained in India; yet must also now be forced to carrie out of this Sea with him, all the Indian flips, that this yeere by them the Turkes may receive no benefit. But the Indians seeing that by reason of the Turkes abuses and delayes, it was likely to prooze vinto them an unprofitable Monfon, though their departure would be much prejudicial to the Turke without trading with them, by reason of the lose of their Cultomes; yet rither then to carry backe againe their Indian Commodities, they defired to make a compolition with Sir Henry Middleton and Captaine Surie, every fhip feuerally to pay a certaine fumme of money, and we to forbeare to hinder their quest trade. Vpon this proffer made by the Indians, Sir Henry Middleton after good confideration, having no meanes to force fatisfaction from the Turkes, without further presidicing of the Indians, and therefore at present determined to accept of their offer, Bill leaving the satisfaction due from the Turkes, till future time. And to begin withall, composition was this day made with Meere Mabumet Tackey, Nobuda of the Rebemy, for lifteene thouland Rials of eight, the being in value neere equall to the other foure thips. The fixth of August, composition being nade with all the Indian ships, and their severall August. fummes in part receiued, Captaine Saris dispeeded away his Vice-Admirall, Captaine Towerfor Captain Tow in the Hellor, who this day departed the Red Sea. The thirteenth, Captaine Serie having re- er for departed ceiued all moneyes due to him by composition from the Indians, departed the Red Sea.

The fixteenth, at eight of the clocke in the morning, we fet faile with the Tradef-increase, and Generalls with Pepper-corne, and about nine a clocke at night, we anchored eight leagues short of the Bab, in departed from 40 feuen fathome water. The feuenteenth, at fine of the clocke in the morning, wee fet faile with the Red Sea. little wind; and at two of the clocke afternoone, we againe passed the streight of Bab mandel; They leave the and from thence at fixe of the clocke, we were East South-east feuen leagues : from fixe a clocke Red Sea and to tenne a clocke the eighteenth day, we lay becalmed, so that her way was not to be regarded: East india, from tenne a clocke to Sun-set, East-wards some three leagues, and before senen a clocke, we an-passe by Cape chored in one and twentie fathome, two miles from the Coast of Arabia, thwart of the East Comorin, Zian, end of the great Mountaine, and seventeene leagues from the Bab.

The nineteenth, at sun-setting, the said Mountaine bore North-West by West, some eight. Matra. leagues distant. All this night, and the twentieth after noone, the winds so variable, that wee were alwaies trimming of our failes from tacke to tacke: fo that betweene the disadvantage of the winds, and the Current together, we were let so farre backe west-wards, as brought the said Mountaine North North-well of vs againe. At elemen a clocke, the wind came at Well a fresh gale, and at Sunne-fet the high land of Aden bore North-east by East eight leagues off. All this night following, we had very little wind and variable, to that the one and twentieth at Sun-rifing, we perceived our felies loft, at least two leagues west-ward. From Sun-rising till noone, we had a small gale of wind, increasing stronger and stronger at South-west, and South-westby South: fo that I efteemed to have gone East South-east some nine leagues. At Sun-let, Aden bore North-North-east seuen leagues of, by a meridian Compasse. All this night was in a manner calme, from four eaclocke in the morning to Sun-fet, being four eand twentiehoures, I eftimate to have gone some infreene leagues, at which time Adea bore North-west halfe North diflant Fue leagues, being cleare weather.

The three and twentieth, we deferred the Abazin Coast beeing fifteene leagues distant, and Force of cleare weather. The fixe and twentieth, we found fuch a Current, that though we do up North- Current. east by East, North-east or North North-east, we made our way all Easterly, being carried to the South-ward by force of the Current. The nine and twentieth, we againe deteried land, which

$81 no 111.

Iune.

September.

Snakes fwimming on the top of the water, a figne of being neere

for the highnesse we at first effeemed to be the land of Cape Guardafus, but the clouds clearing vp from the tops of the hils, we plainely perceived it to be the fame land feene yesterday, wherehe we the better vnderstood how the Current had abused vs, which by my estimate setteth nearest South-welt.

From the thirtieth in the morning, to the one and thirtieth at noone, wee found that the Current had fet vs to the North-ward of our course from the last day at noone, what time our latitude was twelue degrees and thirtie fire minutes, to the first of September at noone, the wind at South East-wards, and not to have runne aboue twelve leagues, and by our latitude being thirteene degrees thirty minutes, we find our felues almost a degree differing to the North-wards. and alfo to have loft to the West-wards, as by the variation appeareth, beeing lelle by fiftie five 10 minutes, by reason whereof I estimate the Current there to let neerest North-East.

The fecond, third, fourth, fifth, fixth, feuenth, eighth, and ninth dayes, wee had all for the most part close weather. The tenth and eleventh cloudy weather, with often showers of raine. The twelfth, we faw divers fnakes swimming on the toppe of the water, which in boysterous weather fildome appeare, yet an apparent figne of beeing neere the coast of India. The thirteenth we also faw more inakes. This day we had founding from fiftie fine to fortie fathome.

The four eteenth in the morning, at Sun-riling we distrived high land, bearing East by North some sixteene leagues, we flood in East by South till foure a clocke afternoone, till the neerest fea-coast land betweene vs and the high land, bore East eight leagues off, what time we directed our course South alongst the Coast of India, wee found the water for the most part maddy and 20 thicke, and fome firlden spots of cleere : our depth while we stood in East and by South were from thirtie to twentie fathome; and in our South courle edging into fixteene fathome, and foto five and twentie fathome.

The fifteenth, we still kept at the like depths, having a gentle gale at North North-west, and cleere water, but no fnakes appeared. The fixeteenth, running alongst the Coast of India or Mallabar, betweene twentie and fixteene fathome; about one a clocke we were West from an high hill of especiall note, which stretcheth out like a point into the Sea, having all low land to Seawards; on the North-fide, the land fell away to the East-wards, and on the South-fide maketh a Bay; the highest of this Sea-coast Mountaine, standeth neerest in twelue degrees ten minutes, which should be the land of Magicilan.

The seventeenth, the wind came opposite to vs at South-west, at two a clocke in the 10 morning, with thicke weather, and much raine, continuing till day-light, wee on a Leeshoare, and an vnknowne Coast, what time the wind veered up to the North-wards, and weedged off into deeper water. In this gustie time, we lost company of our Admirall, but at daylight the weather clearing vp, we came together, directing our course agains to the South-ward, being edged off from the land.

The eighteenth, the land beeing all foggie, was hardly to be differred, the most part of our way this day, beeing by the helpe of the Current, our depths all this day were betweene fue and twentie, and nine and twentie fathom, all Ozie ground. The nineteenth, we were some foureteene leagues diffant from the Coaft, the wind at South-welt, faire weather, with some little 40 drilling raine, till nine a clocke at night, no ground at fortie fathome. From nine to eleven a clocke at night, we had a very vehement showre of raine, and the wind very little Northerly, and after the raine East North-east, our depth at midnight was fortie foure fathome, beeing by estimation some tenne leagues off the land of Mallabar. The twentieth, we had faire weather, the wind very variable, our depths fortie foure and fortie fine fathome all day, beeing Ozie ground. The one and twentieth, we had very little wind, variable till three a clocke afternoone, when fell abundance of raine, with the wind at North North-west, thicke weather, and fortie five fathome water. The two and twentieth in the morning at nine a clocke, we discreed the Cape Commerin : and by my neerest estimation the Coast here lieth away South-east alongst ynto the Cape.

The three and twentieth, we had faire weather, and the wind at South-west by West, discrying the high land to the East-wards of the Cape Commerm, at necre five a clocke afternoone, hearing North North-west, distant eighteene leagues. The soure and twentieth, we had a very stiffe gale of wind between the South South-west and West, and much raine, clouds and sogge, and our course East South-east, by a reformed Compasse, at five a clocke after noon, we had fight of Zeilan through the fogge, riling all full of Humocks, and bearing from the North-east by East, to the South-east by South, some fixe leagues distant. The five and twentieth, from breake of day till noone, we were pestered with varietie of gutts and showers of raine, the wind being large, but the weather clearing vp about noone, we discried the Souther-most point of Zeiland, called the Cape de Galle, bearing North North-east distant five leagues, finding the latitude thereof tobee 60 fine degrees fortie minutes.

The fixe and twentieth, seuen and twentieth, and eight and twentieth, wee had faire weather, with some fewe droppings of raine, and the wind between the South-west and West South-west. The nine and twentieth and thirtjeth, we continued our course East South-east.

the wind conftant betweene the South-west and West South-west, with very much raine, and vehement fudden guits of thore continuance, and followed with an easie steering gale. The thirtieth, in our bread roome we found much harme done to our wheat by wet; also all our course Dutties or browne Callicoes of Pormean (for failes) put there for most fecuritie, wee found twentie

CHAP. 12. S.6. Guill warres a binderance to English trade.

The nineteenth, at three a clocke after noone, we anchored in the road of Tecoa, where wee October. found the Darling, who had continued there from July (vnto our comming in) in a great part of Teogin Suna the raines, which are not yet ended, they having before our comming buried three Merchants, traand three Sailors, to wit, John Fowler, Francis Glanfield, and William Speed. Also they had most of to their men ficke, and had gotten but little Pepper, which remaineth on the Iland, and little more is here to be had, vntill the next feafon, which will be Aprill and May; but the civill warres is a hinderance to our trade. Here also we found the Thomas, a ship of the eighth Voyage, beeing Civill warres newly come from Priaman, where they had as slender successe as our Darling here. Here wee to our Trade. heard of the fafe returne and prosperous successe of Captaine David Middleton his Voyage; also of the foure ships of the ninth Voyage, whereof two were alreadie arrived at Bantam; also of Captaine Caffleton his man of warre, who having been here lately informed of fifteene faile of Captaine Car Hollanders alreadie come, or neere hand, all laden with munition, and of two ships of New-hauen fluion. in France come also to trade, all which quell the life of the prefent hopes of our out-tired, croft, and decayed Vovage. The two and twentieth, Sir Henry Middleton finding fo cold comfort at this place, departed Sir Henry Midthe night following in the Pepper-corne towards Bantam, leaving me in the Tradef-nereafe to re- detonia the maine till the fixteenth of the next Moneth.

The second of November, all the men of all forts in Tecoa, went with Raia Bomesoo to the warres, till whose returne we can expect no butinesse to be done on the maine. This day in ta- Nourmber, king up the wine, by the rottennesse of the Caske, there prooned great leakeage.

The twentieth, we fetcht the remaine of the Pepper weighed the day before, in which by the gooth to the people we found much deceit; in some bags were small bags of Paddy, in some Rice, and in some Great deceir great Hones; also rotten & wet Pepper put into new drie facks, to our farther abusing, yet know- of the Naturals ing it, we have no remedie. Having gotten all things in, and our men aboord, we fitted our things 30 to haften away, and neere midnight in the Moone-shine, the wind at North-east of the shoare, we fet faile; we wrought not onely to avoid the two knowne Rockes , three leagues from the Iland of Tecoa, the one South by West, the other South by East, having fixe and twentie fathome between them, Ozie ground: But for the better fecuritie, we directed our course so neere as wee could, the fame way we came in; yet as we flood off, the wind fomething thrunke on vs; yet we lay first West, then West by South, and West South-west, and last of all South-west and by West, and the Current fet vs fomewhat South-ward, our depths proportional from foureteene to fluen and twentie fathome, all Ozie ground; the next cast four fathome, and the ship fast on a rocke, a sterne foure fathome, and on the Star-boord mid-ship a quarter Telle then three fathomes, and under the head three fathomes, a thips length fue fathome, a thips length on the Lar-boord bow 40 fixe foot, in the Lar-boord mid-ship fixteene foote, under the Lar-boord gallery twenty foote. The ship fast and round about within a Cables length deepe water: the remained on the rocke from a little after three vntill fine a clocke: the mercifull God fo provided, that the wind grew calme, and the fea smooth, and in our feeling, the set or motion of the ship, the place considered, was very easie; yet the water did so increase, that both our chaine Pumps with painefull labour, could not in long time free the same. But our generall endeauour, with most expedition possible, was to get out a sterne anchor, which was let full in fixe and twentie fathome right afterne, and two thirds of a Cable out, to heave her off right afterne: wherein the gracious Lord fo bleffed our endeauours, that before we could with the Capitaine heave the Cable taught, the ship was of her own accord fet into deepe water, which no fooner done, but we had a Wefferly gult, which put vs off the crocke or fome mile from the rocke, where we anchored for our Boat, which brought our Cadger after vs. and it being cleare day, we could not differne where the rocke flood : also a principall reason we anchored was, our exceeding defires and hafte for Bantam, that without necessitie enforced I wished not to put backe againe, and wast more time, hoping our leake would easily be ouer-come at an anchor. I pait the day till two a clocke, confulting and adulting with fuch as with their belt counsell are appointed to affilt me, what was best to be done, our present estate considered, which we find divers wayes to reft dangerous: First, in regard of the leakenesse of our ship, which continually imployes many people at once to keepe downe the water. Secondly, in a manner no proution of Iron-work for the chaines, but that the Pumps prefently employed, which eften break, or for weakenes flip to our great discomfort: for if they should be any long while in menning, and 60 the water so increase, that we cannot reach wider the Pumpe to ceue the chaines, our worke will foone draw neere an end. Thirdly, the desperate carelesnesse of many of our people, in the greatest neede considered, their taint weakenesse and inabilitie to hold out labour (by course diet as they pretend.) Fourthly, to remember what is certaine in the ship, which requires care to preferue it. Fiftly, Captaine Sharpeighs mil-fortunes, and the lewd demeanours of his people, hafteth to Ban-

LIB,III

312 They returne

in like case of greatest need, too late to bee forgotten. The dangers in proceeding dinersly cast vp (notwithstanding, at the first, divers of our men did vrge the same) by counsell reasonable for the fafegard of all, I made choice to returne within the Iland of Tecos, there by Gods helpe to endeauour the flopping of such a part of our leake, as we found to be in the fashioning pieces in the iterne. At Sun-fet we anchored in the place, which for our turnes we defired. This day long time we kept both our chaine pumps going to free the water, which ever increased when the chaines happened to breake, which happened often; the two pumpes employes at once twelve men, which labour indeed is fo extreame, that it can but little while, without fhifting of feells be continued; but the water once brought low, and the chaine holding one pumpe at once. hath euer discharged it, and yet it tires all our people by often shifting : in which businesse. I found it required more then ordinary meanes to appeale their discontented clamours and murmu. Io rings, if the place might have affoorded.

The two and twentieth, three and twentieth, and foure and twentieth, we laboured to land Indico, Cinamom and other things, still making way to lighten the sterne of the ship, where we know the leake is, but we cannot come to it.

December.

Vntill the eight of December, we were thus employed in the amending of our leakes : which done, we let faile from Tecoa, and with our Boats a head, we gate ouer the Barre, having foure fathome at a low water, and being without the Iland, by the helpe of a fine breach at North North-east, North North-west and North-west, as the Sunne grew high, both dullerd and shrunk vpon vs; fo that wee lay but South South-west, and South by West, and by estimation came neare the rocke we had formerly fate vpon, we vied great diligence with Boats a head, but could 20 differne no shew of it, the sea being smooth; we stood away to the Southwards, South by West and South, from Sun-fet, to Sun-riting the ninth day, with a small gale, at North-west by West, we flood away South-west by South ten leagues, and the wind at West North-west and West. at which instant we discried some part of a great Hand bearing South Westerly, at which time we fleered away South; this night we had much rame in gufts, with thunder and lightning, the wind very fickle, shrinking to the South-west, and South South-west, which stayed not long; then to the South-east, East South-east and East, and againe to the South-east; in which time to Sun-rifing we had failed about some eight leagues. Also that part of the Iland, the last night feene, now beareth South-east distant eight leagues, also Eastward wee see the high land of the maine of Sumatra, neare twentie leagues, at noone in two degrees and eleuen minutes South la- 30 titude; and the Northermost part of these Ilands are from the sound we came through, between the Wester lles South-east distant nine leagues : it was the twentieth day before they arrived at

The Pepper-corne being fitted there, Sir Henry Middleton called a Councelli to aduife, touching the late harmes which the Trades-Increase, had received vpon the rocke : by which Councell it was refolued, that shee must of necessitie bee new strengthened and careend, before shee could well returne home; which requiring long time, whereby thee could not goe home this yeere, it was concluded that the Pepper-Corne should immediatly be dispatched for England, to gine fome latisfaction vnto the Aduenturers, vntill the Trades-Increase might follow. The Pepper-Corne being laden on the fourth of February, fet faile from thence for England, leauing Sir 40 Henry Middleton with the Trades-Increase behind. We arrived on the tenth of May in the Road of Saldanie, where I hoped to haue found all the shippes formerly departed homewards : but comming into the Road, I only found the Hector and Thomas, two thips of the eight Voyage, and Captaine Newport in the Expedition of the twelfth Voyage. Heere we continued but foure dayes; where, with the helpe of Captaine Newport his men and Coopers, wee had taken in all our water, and the fourteenth day at night ended our labour therein.

The Road of Hellar and Captaise

The fifteenth, having watered (but no whit refreshed our weak people yet, to keep company with the Heltor and Thomas homewards) at nine a clocke in the morning we fet faile with the wind all Southerly but being out, we were much peffered with opposite wind, wherby we were driven to the Southwards. This night we kept company with the Hestor and Thomas (the Ex-50 pedition being gotten about the Cape Bona Speranza, determining their course towards the confines of Persia, to some place where they might in safetie land Sir Robert Sherly and his Persian Lady, and Sir Thomas Powell with his English Ladie, who were bound into Perfia, ) Also the next day we were all in company together; but toward evening the Thomas became farre a sterne, but the Hellor with loftie faile bore away. This night, by what meanes I know not, they loft our company, which by all meanes we againe endeauoured to get : and for that by flanding to the Southwards, we knew they could not run vs out of fight; yet we thought against all reason to stand in vpon a lee-shoare, stood into the land-wards to seek to discouer them, but not seeing them, we lingred in for them vntill the nineteenth day Sun-rifing, in which time we were employed in repairing our weake and decayed failes. This day at Sun-riling, Saldania bore Southeast halfe a degree East distant seventeene leagues, the weather being cloudie and darke. The twentieth, one and twentieth and two and twentieth daies cloudie, dark, and ouercast weather.

The fixt of Iune, as we came about the North-east point, opening the Road, and being lufted in having our anchors readie to let fall, we differied two Carrickes in the Roade, whole neigh. Two Carricks bourhood was not to my content, neither durit I trust to anchor by them, in regard of their accustomed freachery: I flood off agains by a wind, a while to deliberate what to doe, and thusking to frand in againe, to trie whether they would be gone, which if they were readie, I fi ppofed they would thinke we had more company neare-hand : but we found the Current fet vs fo fail to the lee-ward, that we could hardly recouer the Road at two a clocke in the after-moone : feeing no other remedie, wee bore vp the helme, and flood on our course for England, our hopes being frustrated both of refreshing our weake sicke people, and also of further staying to regaine They Grosse the company of the Hector and Thomas. The fifteenth and fixteenth, we had duers showers of the Equinoctiraine. The eighteenth, we croft the Equinoctial line. The tenth of September, we had a very ftrong gale of wind and an hollow fea, and not able Septembe to get any part of the South-coast of England, were stood on our course North-east, in hope o fetch Milford-Hauen in Wales, the looner to fend letters to the Company.

The eleventh, at five a clocke in the after-noone, we difcried the Coast of Wales to windward, and the Coast of Ireland lee-wards, being an high hill betweene Waxford and Waterford. This night we fpent with our head to the Southwards; and in the morning we flood in towards the Irib Coast: resoluing now, the winds being constantly adverse, and impessible to setch Milford-Hauen, and our meanes alowing no longer deliberation, I determined to goe into Waterford rather then into any other harbour.

20 The thirteenth in the morning, we discried the Tower of Whooke, the only marke for the riuer of Waterford, being some three leavegues distant from it: at eight a clocke we discried a small Boat comming forth of the river of Waterford, vinto whom we made a waft, which they perceiuing, presently came vnto vs, being a Frenchman bound to Waxford, whom I hired to goe againe into the river, before to give knowledge of our comming vnto the Lieutenant of the Fort of Don Canon, to preuent our stopping there, for that by reason of the narrownesse of Channell, it might endanger the ship in winding vp at an anchor there; and at noone wee gate vp into the ruer to waterford in high as the passage. Heere we found Master Stephen Bonner of Lime, with his Barque, come hither Ireland. a fifthing, who putting apart his owne businesse, with great diligence endeauoured the best for the eafe and reliefe of our weake and ficke people.

The eighteenth, I dispeeded away Master Bonner towards London with letters to the Company, to give knowledge of our arrivall, and of our wants, wherein I defired to be supplied.

The one and twentieth, Doctor Lancaster, Bishop of Waterford, very kindly visited me, bringing downe with him his good cheere, and made a Sermon aboord the shippe, and offered mee the Communion; but thereto being unprepared I refused; yet heartily thanking him for his

The tenth, Captaine Iohn Burrell came vnto me to visite me, promising me money to supply my wants, if I would fend fome man with him to Corcke for it. The eleventh day, I differeded away Mailer Mullineux with Captaine Burrell to Coreke for the money, which he promised to tupply me withall.

The twelfth, Anthony Stratford Lieutenant of the Fort of Don Canon, having hired a villanous fellow (whom for his mildemeanour I had caused to be kept in the prison of Waterford) to fay what might befit his present practise, to bring vs within the compasse of Piracie, having obtained a warrant from the Earle of Ormond, came to the passage, where hee sent to defire mee to fend my Boat well manned, to fetch himfelfe and diners other Gentlemen abourd to fee my thip: but my Boat, according to his defire, being come to land, hee as prehended my men, and prefently came abound, where he arrested me and my ship for Piracie, and so committed mee to the Fort of Don Canon to prison, giving extraordinary straite charge over me, that none should come at me, but whom he lift without warrant from him; and fuch as by his permiffion came to me, he would have put to their oathes to declare what conference they had with me; my man so fworne to bring no letters from me to any one, neither from any to me : also divers of my people they this night examined upon their oathes, omitting no meanes to draw them to accuse me, fol continued in prison till the fixteenth day morning what time the said Stratford brought me a letter from Sir Laurence Esmond his Captaine, inuiting me to meet him at the pallage, with whom when I came up to the passage, I there met with Sr Lawrence Esmond, accompanied with the Bishop of Waterford, come from the Earle of Ormand, to replace mee in my charge againe, which by their great intreatie and per wation I againe undertooke.

The three and twentieth, Mafter Mulleneux having fent my letters to the Company, to give knowledge of the afore mentioned troublesome businesse, returned from Corke with money to Supply my wants.

The fine and twentieth, Malter Beniamin loseph, in a small ship of Bristoll, came vnto me, bringing with him both men, money, and prouifions for my supply, which with all speed wee tooke in, hallening to be gone.

The fixt of October, wee departed the River of Waterford towards our long defired Ochober,

CH AP. 13.

The twelfth in the morning, we were thwart of Beachy, and at eight a clocke at night, wee anchored in Douer Road.

The thirteenth in the morning, we fet faile out of Douer Road, and at ten a clocke wee anchore in the Downes, neare vnto the Affarance (the Kings ship) faluting her with flue preces of Ordnance; immediatly came aboord or me, Master Cocket, the Master of her, who againe made flay of my fhip, till further order from the Lord Admirall : vpon this I prefently fent away Mafter Mullineux to London, with letters to certifie the Company hereof.

The scuenteenth, came downe from the Company, Master Adersy, bringing me a letter from the Company, a release for the ship; and Master Punniat a Pilot, to bring her about. The ciehteenth in the morning, wee let faile, and at fixe a clocke at night, wee anchored in the Road of Gorend. The nineteenth in the morning, at fixe a clocke we fet faile, and at night we anchored at 10 Tilbury. The twentieth in the morning, we fet faile, and at ten a clocke wee anchored at Black. wall: where in the afternoone came downe Master Deputy, and divers of the Committies, vinto whom I deliuered vp my charge. And io concluded this our tedious and out-tyring journey.

CHAP. XIII.

The fewenth Voyage; made in the Globe into East-India, fet out under the Command of Capitaine Anthont Hippon, observed and written by NATHANIEL MARTEN, Masters Mate in the faid Shippe.

Ee weighed from the Black-wall, in the good shippe called the Globe, being bound for the East-Indies, the third of Ianuary 1610. and about fine of the clocke we anchored at Grauef-end.

They arrived at Soldania, the one and twentieth of May 1611. and thence fet faile the fixt of June following. They failed not farre from Mofambique, and Comoro, and Pemba: and on the last of July passed before Punta de Galle, vpon Ceilon (all which 30 as being a meere maine relation, and the like course oft runne by others, is omitted.)

The fourth of August in the morning, I observed the variation, and made it to bee thirteene degrees, feuen minutes, and at noone we were in the latitude of nine degrees fifteene minutes, and the land was about fixe leagues off, and as much as wee could fee it on the poope, the wind veered North by Weit, and the North North-west, and we stood in three hours, and then somded, being about three leagues off the shoare, and had nine fatheme, and the land then bore West North-west to the Northwards, and South the other way, and we judged the land to lye Northwelt, or North-welt by North. At three of the clocke wee cast about, and stood to the Northward, and the wind veered to the West, and West South-west, and we lay as neare as we could till fine of the clocke. The fixt, we kept our felues in eight and twentie and thirtie fathome, and 40 then the wind feanted and veered to the West North-west, so the water deepned presently.

. The fixt in the morning, we perceined our felues to be in a great Current by the rippling, and we fent off our Pinnasse to come to an anchor, and we found the Current to set North by West, and we made our way from foure of the clocke in the after-noone, the fift till noone, the fixt North North-west, and ran seuenteene leagues, and then we were in the latitude of ten degrees, and one and thirtie minates, and from noone till two of the clocke wee steered away Northwest; and then we saw divers Fisher-men hard by, so we looked out at top-mast head, and saw land West North-west and North-west, and so we ran in, and then we were in twenty fathom about eight leagues off; and as we ranne in, the water shoulded easily, and at three of the clocke wee faw a Tower or Pagod, and a ship that bore North-west of vs, and then the great 50 Pagod of Neg. patar and the ship, were one in another, and then wee ran in, till we came into eight fathom North-west, and then we were about two leagues off the ship, and three leagues off

From fixe of the clocke at night the fixt, till feuen at noone, we steered away Northby East, and fo kept alwayes betweene twelue and fourteene fathom, and ran fixteene leagues, and were in the latitude of eleven degrees, feven and liftie minutes.

From the feuenth till the eight at noone, wee fleered away North by East, and ranne about twentie leagues by judgement, and then we were thwart of the high land, vp in the Countrey, that rose in hammocks. This day we tooke the Boat of S. Thome. The ninth at noone, the Towne 50 of Maisapor bore North-West two leagues off, and the marke to know the Towne, is the high hill up in the countrey. There is a shoale about two leagues to the Southward of Paleacate, which lyeth about a mile or more from the shoare, and the North-east end of it lyeth off about a league: we ran ouer the very end in three fathom, but if you keepe in ten or twelue fathome,

August 4.

314

Netapatan.

Paleacate:

you shall not need to feare any part of it. The ninth at foure a clocke, we anchored against the Towne, and it bore Well by North off vs; there is a croffe to the Northward of the Town, which if you be betweene two or three miles of the sheare you see it, but you cannot see the Towne.

The tenth in the morning, we weighed and flood further to the Northward, and anchored in eight rathom (we not liking our former Read) and then the Creffe bore West by South of vs, when the Westermost point bore West by North, and the Northermost point bore North-west. The tenth at noone, Mafter Browne and Mafter Floris went ashoare (there comming a Boat from the Gouernour for them) but they went in our Skiffe, and as they were going ouer the Barre, Pal acute flanthe Skiffe was finke, but neuer a man drowned, God be bleffed : Paleacate flan leth in thirteene den in thir 10 degrees and thirtie minutes.

te ne degrees

The thirteenth, I observed the variation, and made it to bee one degree and fifteene minutes, woon the semicircle: The fifteenth, Master Anthony Hippon, our Captaine, went ashoare to speake with the Gouernesse. The fixteenth, the Captaine and all the Merchants came aboor d, because they could get no trade.

The fixteenth at ten of the clocke, we fet faile for Petepoly, and from ten till the feuenteenth Petepoly. at noone, we ran about thirteene leagues, and were in the latitude of fourteene degrees and 1.tteene minutes, and made our way North by Eaft. From the feuenteenth to the eighteenth, we ran, by my judgement, about three and twentie leagues, and made the way North, but it was fad weather, and we could not oblerue. About feuen of the clocke in the morning the eighteenth we 20 spied a Galliot, riding in seven fathom, some for remiles off the shoare, and shee road till wee were al nost within Sacker hot of her, and then shee weighed and ran into shoale water into the fhoare, but we flood not after her, because the water shoalded, and at that time we few a breach, fome two leagues off the shoare to my judgement, and whereas we steered away, North Northeast, wee steered away East North-east, and East by North, but had no deepe water till wee brought the breach, North North-west of vs, & when we saw it first, it bore North by East of vs. From the eighteenth at noone, till fine of the clocke in the after-noone, weefteered away

North-east by East, partly because wee would runne into deeper water, and partly because the land grew out more Easterly, and at five of the clocke we made a tuft of trees that is neare Petepoly, and it bore North-east by East of vs fixe leagues off, and then is the high land to the North-30 westward of the Towne, which did then beare North by West off vs. and at leaen of the clocke we anchored in nine fathom, the trees bearing North-east and by East of vs fine leagues off, and the wind Westerly.

The nineteenth in the morning, by fine of the clocke, we weighed and stood with the trees, and about nine of the clocke we anchored about two leagues thort of them in fine fathom, and the treeshore East North-east of vs. and then prefently there came abound two Gingathas or Boats : our Merchants fent them alhoare with a letter; and about two of the clocke there came They land as another, and a mellenger from the Subandar, who the twentieth day did fend aboord two Boats Peteody. for our Merchants, and brought a Prefent, and then went ashoare Master Floris, Master Lucas, Ma 'er Essington , and Adam Dounton, and the Purfers Mate, and Lemon.

The one and twentieth about eight of the clocke, there came a Gingatha from the shoare, and brought a letter from our Merchan's, who did let vs under and that they were kindly entertained, and prefently we weighed with the wind at North North-west, and ran oif an anchored al nost thwart of the Rivers mouth, and about three of the clocke in the after-noone, wee weighed and anchored in the Road, where the tuske of trees hore North-east by East East erly; and we did anchor in nine fathom and a halfe: the marke to goe in ouer the barre, is a Pal nito tree, on the bancke, upon the Northermost end of the high cliffe, it is but a little tree. I observed the variation, and made it to be twelve degrees, feuen and twentie minutes.

The eight and twentieth, Ma fer Floris came aboutl, and Simon Euans, about twelve of the clocke; and about four of the clocke, we weighed for Masulparan, with the wind at South-50 west, and wee steered off into eight and nine fathon South South-east, and then wee bore vp South-east, and South-east by East, and kept our felues in nine and ten fathom till leuen of the clocke at night, and then the wind veered to the East, and East South-east; so wee anchored in nine fathom, till fine of the clocke in the morning.

The nine and twentieth in the morning, about fine of the clocke, we weighed with the wind at South South-west, and steered away East South-east, and East North-east, and Northeast; and at noone the ottermost part of the land bore North of vs : fo by my indgement, the land Eastward from Petepoly Iyeth East and by South, and West by North: and at noone wee came into white water of the point, and it shoulded a lit. le before wee came into it halfe a fathom, but when we were in it, we had the fame depth fixe fathom three leagues off: about two 60 of the clocke in the after-noone, the wind veered Northerly, fo wee came to an anchor in feuen fathom : about fine of the clocke, we weighed, and flood in North North-well, and North-well by North, till seuen of the clocke, and being calme, wee anchored in fine fathom, the Wettermo? land bore West North-west Westerly, and we saw two ships which bore North Westerly and North-west, and the Norther-most land bore North.

Mafulipatan.

The thirtieth, about one of the clocke wee weighed, and flood in for the Road Masulparan, which bore North of vs, and we neuer had aboue fine, and foure and a halfe all the way: fo an bout fine of the clocke, we anchored in three fathom and a foote; and the great tree which is the marke for the Road, bore West by North Westerly of vs, and the Southermost land bore South and by West Southerly of vs, and the Northermost bore North-east Easterly of vs.

The one and thirtieth, Mafter Floris, Mafter Heffington, Simon Euans, Cuthbert Whitfield and

Arthur Smith, went a shoare to stay there in our Skiffe. The eight and twentieth of December, I observed the variation, and made it to be twelve de-

Decemb.38. grees, two and twentie minutes.

The point of Masulioatan is in 15.degrees,

The thirtieth, we weighed from Masulparan about seuen of the clocke in the morning, with 10 the wind at North-east by East, and we halde it off South-east and South-east by South, till we came into eighteene fathom. At noone the point that bore Southby West Southerly off vs, was West and by North, by the Compasse, and then I observed, and made it to be in fifteene degrees feuen and fiftie minutes, and at eight of the clocke at night wee anchored in fixe fathome and

Ianuary 4.

The fourth of January, I observed at noone, and made the Roade to be in fifteene degrees fixe and thirtie minutes:

The fine and twentieth and the fixe and twentieth, wee observed the Sunne and certaine Starres, by the Sunne we made the Towne of Petepoli to be in fifteene degrees, nine and fortie minutes : the Starre called the Ships-flerne, we had in one and twenty degrees, nine and twenty 20 minutes: the foot of the Crofiers twelve degrees, foure and fiftie minutes, and the flanke of the Centaur, in hitteene degrees, two and thirty minutes, the foot in fourteene degrees, one and fortie minutes, the wind at South-east, and South South-east.

February 7.

The feuenth of February, the Merchants came abourd and carryed all the luggage quiteaway, the wind at South South-east night and day.

of Petepoli.

The eleventh of February, we weighed out of Petepoly Roade, having the wind at North out of the road North-west about fixe of the clocke in the morning, and stood off South South-east, but verie little wind, and the current fet to the North-east, and we anchored in fine fathom and an halfe it being calme, we having runne off about a mile and an halfe, and the wind came off the Sea all

The twelfth, about nine of the clocke in the morning, we weighed with the wind at South east, and South-east and by East, and we haled off South South-west, and South by West, and South-west as the wind would give vs leave, till three of the clocke in the after-noone, and then They finke . we anchord in nine fathome water, with the wind at South and South and by East, and made uer from Pete- our way South-west and by South, fixe leagues out of the Road by my judgement, and the high land bore West halfe a point Southerly : in the Road it bore West halfe a point Northerly, peli to Bantam

The fourteenth, about foure of the clock in the morning, we weighed with the wind at South South-well, and flood away South-east, and South-east and by South, as the wind would give vs leaue : At noone the Palmito Trees bore North halfe a point Eafterly, about fixe leagues off, or feuen, and we ranne in ten fathome.

March 12.

From the twentieth of March, at noone till the one and twentieth, we had very little wind Eafterly and calme : we made our way South South-west by my judgement, and ranne seuen leagues, and at noone were in the latitude of two degrees, fixe and twentie minutes, at night we observed the variation, and had it in thirteene degrees, fiftie feuen minutes on the Semicircle, and the amplitude was foure degrees, twentie feuen minutes, which being fubtracted to thirteen degrees, fiftie feuen minutes, makes the variation to be nine degrees, twentie fiue minutes.

From the one and twentieth at noone, till the two and twentieth at noone we had the wind all Northerly, we steered away South and ran fifteene leagues by the logge, and then wee were in the latitude of one degree, thirtie foure minutes: at night, I observed the variation and made it to be ten degrees ten minutes, which did proue a great current to the West-ward.

A grear current to the West-ward.

From the two and twentieth, to the three and twentieth at noone, wee had the wind variable betweene the North and the West, we had little wind and gustie weather, we steered South by East, and ran eight leagues : and at noone we observed the latitude of fiftie seven minutes, at night I observed the variation, and made it to bee ten degrees. The Magneticall Azimuthis fifteene degrees fifteene minutes; the Amplitude is fiue degrees, thirteene minutes. From the three and twentieth at noone till the foure and twentieth at noone, we had the wind betweene the West and South-west, we steered away South by East, and ranne three and twentie leagues by the logge, and then we were vnder the Line by our observation.

The Equino-

From the foure and twentieth at noone, till the flue and twentieth at noone we had the wind betweene the North North-west, and the South South-west, and we steered away South South- 60 east, we ran by the logge one and twentie leagues, and then we were in the latitude of fiftie feuen minutes to the Southward of the Line. At night I observed the variation, and made the Magnetical Azimuth to be fifteene degrees, fortie minutes. The Amplitude fixe degrees, no minutes, which made the variation to be nine degrees fortie minutes.

From the fine and twentieth at noone, till the fixe and twentieth at noone wee had the wind variable betweene the North North-weft, and the West South-west; wee steered South Southeast, we ranne fifteene leagues by the logge, and then wee were in the latitude of one degree, thirtie minutes at night. I observed the variation, and the Magnetical Azimuth, was fifteene degrees five minutes. The Amplitude was fixed grees, one and twentie minutes, which made the variation eight degrees, fiftie foure minutes.

CHAP.13.

From the one and thirtieth at noone, till the first of Aprill at noone we had the wind Souther- Aprill 1611. ly and very little, and made our way East South-east twelue leagues, and at hoone we were in the latitude of foure degrees, one minute. From the first at noone to the second at noone, wee had 10 the wind betweene the West North-west, and South South-west, variable and gustre, wee seered away South-east by East, halve a point Easterly : wee ranne by the logge one and twentie leagues and two thirds, and then we were in the latitude of foure degrees, twentie foure minutes, we made our way twelue leagues East South-east, and ten leagues South and by East by judgement : which did agree with my Observation. In the morning they observed the variation, and had the Almicanter and Magneticall Azimuth, one degree thirtie minutes, the Amplitude eight degrees, fortie feuen minutes, which made the variation to be feuen degrees, twentie feuen minutes. About two of the clocke in the morning, Adam Duglas departed this life. From the fecond at noone till the third, we had the wind betweene the North-west, and the West Southwest, we steered away betweene the East South-east, and the South-east by East, but because of our latches to the South-ward, I judge that the made her way East South-east, we ranne thirtie two leagues by the logge, and then was I just with the Wester most part of the lie of Engano, The lie of by my reckoning.

The fixe and twentieth of Aprill, about foure of the clocke in the af er-noone, through the They arrive in Almighties good affiliance, we came to an Anchor in Bantam Road, in three and a halie, where the Road of Puloponian bore North the bodie, and Pulotundo bore North-west by North, and Puloduo East Bantan. South-eaft, and the Welter-mott point thwart of Pulorange, bor: North-well by North Northerly : the vttermost point bore East by North Northerly, and the Eastermost Hand Pulo Lima, was even joyning to the Westermost point of lana, and presently after we were at an Anchor, came abourd Master Spalding with two others, and two of them lay abourd.

The one and thirtieth of May, in the after-noone about fo re of the clocke, our Merchants They dipart came aboord, and about nine of the clocke we fet faile : wee fleered away North North-east, from Ba-tam

The first of June in the morning, the wird veered to the East-ward and so to the North-June. ward, very foule and guile weather. Wee bore vp and anchored vnier Pulotando in nine-teene fathomes, halfe a league from the sheare. About five and fixe of the clocke in the morning, we weighed with the wind at South-east, and within a heave or two we had but five fathome, and fo shoulded till wee had but foure fathome, fleering away North North-weft, the nearest land beeing South-weft is a leagues off, A long woodwhich was a long woodie Iland, some foure miles long, of which we looked for a ledge of rockes die land.

40 or fand. From fixe till noone we made our way North by West seuen leagues. About eight of the clocke in the morning, I elpyed Lucapara at top-mait head, about eight leagues off. The fewenth in the morning, about fixe of the clocke, we weighed the wind South-west, and betweene fixe and noone we made our way North-weit fruen leagues, and about tenne of the clocke, we raifed Monogne North-east e ght leagues off at least; and after we raifed this hill, we had neuer leffe then ten fatheme, keeping the shoalding of Sumatra.

The minth in the morning, about hie of the clock, we weighted with the wind at South-east by South, and steered away North-west by North, & & Northerly as the Coast did lye : but we usuer came never the point of Monpine, then three leagues and an halfe, or four leagues, because of a ledge of rockes that lyeth two leagues of the Eaf er-mof point of Sumatra, being the feuenth point of the Straights : and there ledge of rockes beare East and West one of another. We had no fooner weighed, but the water deepened to eight, nine, tenne, and so to foureteene fathomes. When you have Memprie South-east of you, then are you cleere of the rockes. At noone I observed with my quadrant, and made her to be in one degree, thirtie nine minutes, and then Mompine bore South-east Easterly of vs.

The tenth, about three of the clocke in the morning, we espyed an Iland that bore North Northwest three leagues.

From moone till une of the clocke at night, we made our way North halfe a point Easterly They passe the fixe leagues: and from fixe till noone the eleuenth, wee made our way North eighteene Equinociail leagues, and wee were in the latitude of one degree to the Northward, having two Hands, the North. 60 Scuthermost bore South-west by West of vs seuen leagues off, and the Northermost bore Westward South-west seven leagues off, and then wee had five and twentie fathomes: all the night This Is of long, we had from twentie to fine and twentie fathomes. I elpyed land at top-mait head, West Bistories by North tweltee leagues off, which was the high land of Bintam. From noone till fixe of the clocke at night, we made our way West by North seuen leagues, we had five and twentie fathome water, and then the high-land of Bintam bore West Southwell fixe leagues off, and there are three little Hands at the South-east end of Bintam.

The twelth, we made our way North by East Easterly fine leagues, and then we were in the latitule of one degree thirtie fine minutes, having twentie fixe fathome, and the Northermon part of Bistam, West North-west tenne leagues: when foure glasses were running after noone, I espied at top-mast head an Hand that bore North-west Northerly nine leagues off.

From fixe of the clocke at night the thirteenth, till the foureteenth at noone, we to my judgment, made our way North-welt by North, in regard of the Current mine leagues : tenne glaffes in the night we had it calme, and droue North North-west, and we should have it deeper, and floald a fathome at a cast, till we had but eleven fathome, and then deeper till it came to hitteene to or fixteene fathome. From fixe at night, till the fifteenth at noone, we made our way by judgement North North east, Northerly tenne leagues; but at noone we made her to bee in foure degrees fortie eight minutes, and then we had thirtie fathome: at eight of the clocke we had an I. land bore North by West of vs, fine leagues off the maine, being foure miles off, and then wee had twentie fixe fathome.

This great Hand, and the Rocks, beare North by West, and South by East one of another, and are foure miles in length, we perceived in the night, being calme, to have a great Current fetting to the North-wards, and I judged this lland toftand in foure degrees thirtie fine minutes. From noone til the fixth at night, we made our way North North-well halfe Northerly eight leagues. our founding was thirtie and twentie aue tathome, and then we had an other Hand bore Well 20 by North of vs, not vnlike the former: we had fine and twentie fathome at fixe of the clocke, five or fixe leagues off the maine: the Hand lieth about one league from the maine.

From the fixteenth at moone, till the feuenteenth at moone, we made our way North North-A sunkearock, well twelve leagues; but as we were almost in the narrowest, we spied a funken rocke in the faire way; so we fearing the worst, having eleven fathome & one league of the maine, we haled it of North-East, and North-east by East, to get cleere of two little Hands that are to the Eastward, and fo we went to the East-ward of all. At noone we observed, and made the ship to be in five degrees fiftie foure minutes. From the feuenteenth at noone, till the eighteenth at noone, we made our way North-west,

Westerly eight leagues. From the nineteenth at noone till the twentieth, wee made our way 10 Alittlerocke. North-well Northerly eight leagues: in the morning about seuen of the clocke, I saw a little Rocke, about three leagues off at the top-mail head, and as we came vp with it about noone, I went with the Skiffe to found about it, and we had twelve fathome a flones throw off it: and when our Skiffs head was a shoare we had fixe fathomes and an halfe, up and downe by the rock: it lieth betweene three or foure leagues of the Westermost point of the land, and beareth South-East Southerly alittle; and about two leagues and a halfe from the Souther-most land, or three, we had little wind Westerly, and variable, but for the most part Northerly.

From noone the twentieth, till the one and twentieth at noone, wee made our way Northwest Northerly fixeleagues, with the wind Westerly and Northerly; we were faint to anchor twice in the night, because it was calme, and the Carrent fetting to the South-ward, wee had 40 very faire thouldings off, into foureteene and into feuen or eight. From the one and twentieth at noone, till the two and twentieth at noone, we turned it alongst the shoare, with the wind Westerly, and then we had the low sandie point South of vs two leagues off.

August- 4. They depart from Palane

The fourth of August at night, we weighed out of Pataneroad, about nine of the clocks, with the wind at South South-well, and we steered away North-well, and North-well by West, North-west by North: but by my judgement, from nine till noone wee made our way Northwest, halfe a point Northerly tenne leagues, and then the high land bone South-west of vs in the Roade. Our depths from three, to feuen, eight and, tenne fathome. From noone till fixed clocke at night, we had tenne leagues, little wind at North-west and North and North-saft, but we made our way North North-east one league; and from fixe till fixe in the morning, we made 30 our way North North-west halfe a point Northerly eight leagues, with the wind variable and Westerly; and then we espied land, that bore West North-west of vstenne leagues of. From fixe of the clocke in the morning, till noone the fixt day, wee made our way North

Latitude 8 de- North-west five leagues to our judgement, and we observed, and made the ship to be in eight degrees feuen minutes, and then the high land bore West and North tenne leagues off, and then we had secuenteen fathome. From the fixt at noone till the secuenth at noone, we had little wind and calme, we made our way North North-well, to my indgement wee could not junious above fixeleagies, but we made it to be in eight degrees three minutes. From the feuenth at moone, till the eight, we had little wind, and variable round about, wee made our way North North-Latitude 9.de. west eight leagues or tenne, our depths eighteene and nineteene fathome. From the eighth, to 60 grees 40. min. the ninth at noone, wee had little wind, and variable round about, and then we made the thippe tobe in nine degrees fortie minutes; and then the Northermost great Hand bore West Scata-

west, and the Souther-most bore South-west. In the morning we saw two Hands. From the ninth to the tenth at noone, we had it calme, and went little or nothing the win!

Northerly, our depth one and twentie and two and twentie fathome. From the tenth to the eleuenth at noone, we had little or no wind, and went two leagues North North-weft, we had it Northerly and Westerly, and our depths twenty and twentie one fathomes. From the depenth at noone to the twelfth, we had the wind variable and gufty round about, and we ran about eight, leagues North by West, and the depth twenty sixe and twenty five fathome. From the twelith at moone till the thirteenth, we made our way North by East twentie foure leagues. with the wind at South, and South South-well, and South-well, our depth twentie fixe and twentie eight fathom, feuen or eight leagues off the shoare. From the thirteenth to the foureteenth, we made our way North by West fixteene leagues. 10 the wind South-west, our depths two and twentie; and fine and twentie fathomes, fine or fixe leagues from the shoare. From the foureteenth to the fiftrenth, wee made our way fixteene leagues North by West, with the wind Westerly, our depth ninetrene, & twentie fathomes, fixe leagues off. From the offeenth to the fixteenth at noone, we made our way North and by West tenne leagues, we had eight, nine, and tenne fathome, alongst the low land foure leagues oil, then we bore up to the East, and East South-east till midnight, and for an houre wee steered away East North-east, till we came into foure fathome, and then tooke in our failes as fast as wee could, but prefently we had but three fathome and a foote, before we could get in our failes, fo we anchored in three and a foot till the next day, and the water fell thirteene foot, and more, fo They arrive at that we had but fixe fathome and an halfe at low water, and then we laid out a warpe, and when Syen. 20 she fleeted we warped into deepe water. The eighteenth we let faile, and haled it off into fine fathome, where we anchored, having the Souther-most Hand South by East of vs, and the Ea- Novembersia stermost East and by South, and the Rivers mouth North of vs Westerly. The third of November, about one of the clocke in the afternoone we weighed out of the bay, from span.

CHAP. 14. S.1. Indian Ports traversed. S. Helena ill graduated.

where we left our men, and graued our thip, and haled it off from the West to the South South-East, to goe cleare of the Hand, and so steered away.

The fourth at noone I made the ship to be in twelve degrees thirtie three minutes, having run in these three and twentie houres, but fine and twenty leagues, and to my judgement had made her way, one thing with an other counted, South by Welt, the wind Northerly.

On the eleuenth, we arrived at Patane. He was after this at Syam againe, and againe at Pa-30 tane: and made a second Voyage from Masulipatan to Bantam, 1614. and thence to England; 1615. But his Journall is fo large, that I dare not expresse it. Note that he faith, that the Ile of S. Helena is an hundred leagues more to the West-ward, then is laid downe in Plats.

The twentieth of August 1615, they came before the Lizard. They spent in this whole Voyage foure yeares and about eight Moneths. Their actions and exploits in this Voyage are delinered more fully by M. Florie, out of whole Ioarnall I have taken the most remarkeable. For I thinke, these meere marine relations, are (though to some profitable) to the most tedious. For which cause I have abridged this, to make way to the next, written by a Merchaut of long India an experience, and full of pleafant varietie.

CHAP. XIIII.

Extracts of PETER WILLIAMSON FLORIS bis lournall, for the seventh Voyage, (in which he went Cape Merchant) translated out of Dutch. He arrived in England 1615. and died two Moneths after in London.

The Voyage to Paleacatte, Petapoli, Masulipatan, Bantam, Patania, and Siam.

Auing couenanted and agreed with the Right Worshipfull the Gouernour and Deputy of the East-Indian Societie, we embarqued our felues in the Globe, the fitt of January 1610. Stylo Anglia, and fet faile for Granefend: the fift of February we fet faile from the Downes. The one and twentieth of May 1611. wee came into Saldinia Bay, where wee found three thips, and two boates came a- Saldinia Bay, boord vs, one from Ifaac le Maire, and the other from Henrike Brouwer. Much 60 refreshing was not here to be had at this time of the yeare, by reason of great store of raine, being now their winter, the mountaines also couered with inow. Wee yied great diligence in feeking of the roote Ningim, for which purpose the said two Holland ships had come thirther, one being or Root Ningim, I apan that first discouered the secret. But at this time the new elease began only to peope forth, that had we not received instructions, wee could not have knowne it; the right and ripe time bay for hides.

August 1. Zelon. Neganatan. No e falthood of Maps.

La tagapatas.

Hollanders triumping in our way.

Golconda.

thereof beeing December, Ianuary and February. It is called of these Inhabitants Canna.

We having filled our water, and refreshed our selves with eight Sheepe and twentie Neat. Set faile out of the Bay, leaving behind vs the boat of Ifaac le Maire with his fonne Iacob, who lay there to barter for hides and skinnes, and to make traine oyle; which was to continue there till December. To him we gave letters for England. Neere Tena de Natar. lune the tenth, wee were in great danger : a fforme of thunder, lightning, wind an Iraine, almost viclently thrust vs on shoare; but God mercifully and powerfully gaue vs vnexp. Red delinerance.

The rit of August, we saw the land of Ceylon falling with Punta de Galle, and running alone the coast. On the nixt we fell before Negapatan, beeing twentie eight miles (leagues) from our gueffing, the Map in that place beeing very falle. The like hath also happened to the Hollandern which in the night might be very dangerous. Neither found we the Hand fo broad as it is there 19 laid. M. Mullinenx layeth Punto de Galle in foure degrees , which lyeth in fixe. Towards eue. ning we passed before the Road, and might see the Towns and houses very plainely.

The fewenth, wee passed Lanagapatan, where the Hollanders having a Factorie, are weariebecause of little doings. On the eight, we came before Saint Thome, and on the ninth before Paleacatte, passing over the shallow being in length above a Musket shot, having but three fathome water. Here came two Boates abourd vs, one from the Sabander, another from the Hollanders. The tenth, the Sabanders men brought vs a Canl or conduct to come fafely alhoare. Wheremon I and Matter Browne went ashoare, but by the roughnesse of the Sea were turned ouer, yet (God be thanked) no man was drowned. The Sabander met vs, compassionating our mischance and appointed vs a house, promiting vs to procure a Letter from the King to the Gouernesse of Conda 20

On the elementh, John Van Werficke the Dutch President on the Coast of Choromandell, shewed vs a Caul from the King of Narlinga, Wencapati, Raia, wherein was granted, that it should not be lawfull for any that came out of Europe to trade there, but fuch as brought Prince Mauricehis Patent, and therefore defired our departure. We answered we had Commission from his Maiestie of England, and would therefore doe what we could. Hence arose high words, which the Sabander calmed, telling of the Got ern-fle her comming thither within three dayes.

On the feuenteenth, came Conda Maa, and Captaine Hippon, comming on shoare, wee were readie to goe to her, when we received word to the contrarie, and that the next day shee would fend for vs. We fispected the Hollanders close dealing, and the next day fent to the Sabander 30 (no man comming for vs) who answered the King, had made grant to the Hollanders, and wee must goe to him (the dispatching of which businesse would have cost vs two monethes space, and hazarded the Monfon for Patane) if we would procure libertie. The Hollanders also had made realie two Elephants to fend to the King. Wherefore we refolued to profecute our Voyage for Petapois and Masulipatan.

The twentieth, we arrived before Perapo's, and the Gouernour fent vs a Caul. Wee agreed with him for three thirds per Centum, Cultome and fent goods on shoare, refoluting that Master Lucas and Malter Browne ihould flay there : and that I should goe to Masulipatan , where was a better Road for the ship. Thither we came on the last of August, and Zaldchar Chan brought vs a Caul. We agreed to fend a present to Mir Sumela (a great Officer under the King, which far- 40 meth out his Revenues) to Condepoli, in regard of the shifts of the under Officers. On the twentieth of Ianuary, deceafed Corebara King of Badaya, or Lollongana, and of Masulipatan, and great cumults were feared. But the wildome of Mir Masurim preuented the same, presently electing Mahumad Unim Cotol ara, fonne to the Brother of the deceased ( who had left no children behind him) a yong-man of great hope. His Vncle had put all in the hands of the Perfians, but this theweth himfelte contrarie, and an Enemie to Mir Sumela the fountaine of Ty-

The Gouernour deal: treacherously with mee, in a bargaine of Cloth and Lead for Launces; faying, he had agreed with me for foure thousand Pagodes (intending by that coozenage to raise the Custome agreed at source per Ce sum to twelve) alleaging for reason, that hee was a Min, 50 and that he was borne of Mahimets Posteritie, whose words must bee beleeved before a Chriftians. I not knowing how to deale with this Knaue, the time not fuffering to fend to the new King at Goleanda, feeing no meanes to end with friendship, resolved to practise enmitte: but at last by intercession of other Morres, we ended in a kind of agreement. Having also cleered at Perapeli, we having a good Monton departed for Bantam, and arrived there the fixe and twentieth of Aprill 1612. We found the Dutch readie to depart thence for lacatra, by reason of the Governours new exactions. But we having no house there, after some contesting, agreed with him for three per Centum Cuitome. By order of Danid Middleton, a Factorie was fetled at Succadania, and continued by 60 cataria in Bor- Matter Spalding, but it feemeth (as things are carryed) rather to private then publike benefit. The first of June, we fet is le from Bantam, and on the two and twentieth came into the Road of Patane, where we found the Bantam a ship of Enthusen, of whom wee learned the manners of the Countrey. On the lixe and twentieth, we went on shoare in great state, taking with vs a present of about fixe hundred Rials of eight, to accompanie the Kings Letter. Wee were well received according to the manner of the Countrey, the Letter being laid in a Bason of Gold, and The Kings carryed upon an Elephant with Minstrels, many Lances and little Flagges.

CHAP. 14.S. I. His Maiefties Letters delivered at Patane and Syam. Floris.

The Queenes Court was sumptuously prepared, the Letter read, and free Trade granted vs. Queene of paying such duties as the Hollanders did. Wee departed from the Court wishout light of the Patage. Queene, and were brought to Dato Laxmanna the Sabander and Officer appointed for Strangers, where a Banquet of Fruits was let before vs : and thence to the Oran-caya Sirnona, and there also did eate something. The next day the Queene sent vs meate and fruits aboord.

The third of July, departed hence a Dutch Pinnalle called the Grey-bound for Japon, the Ma- July 3. 10 fters Mate thereof was the same man which had brought the Letter from William Adams to the W. adams in English at Bantam: by whom we fent the Companies Letters to Master Adams, which he promiled to deliuer with his owne hands. This otherwise wee could not have done; for those of Lapon are at enmittie with this place, and haue burned Patane twice within these fine or fixe Patane, Much adoe we had to get leaue to build a Ware-house here, fire-free, which we did hard by the eight fathome long, and foure broad. But their demands feemed very vnreasonable, amounting, besides former charges, to soure thousand Rials of eight, whereunto yet in hope of suture benefit we yeelded. Sicknesse also much afflicted vs, as if the plague had beene in our ship : and Cap-20 taine Hippon dyed the ninth of July. Whose Successor was nominated in the Boxe N . r. Master Death of Cap-Browne; but he being dead before, the Boxe N. 2. was opened, wherein Thomas Efficient was Capt Efficient. named, and did fucceed. Hereunto was added loffe by Theeues, which like relolute Diffolutes came into the house, a Lampe burning, and stole money out of my Chest, two hundred eightie three Rials of eight, and other goods; fifteene persons sleeping in the house, and a great blacke Dogge, and Watch kept in the yard, which made suspition of some of our owne, but we could neuer learne any certaintie.

Dutch-house in a place assigned vs thirtie fathome in length, twentie in breadth: the House

I and Iohn Persons, and fixe more were left here in Factorie; and the ship departed the first of The Globe at August for Syam. I would have written to Syam, of my ill Market of Lawnes, but could not Syam. fend by water, and by land no leffe then foure together would trauell for feare of Tygres, and Tigtes. 30 many Rivers they must passe, which made their demands to passe so farre, that I was forced to waite better oportunitie. In September the King of Ior ouer-ranne the Suburbes of Pahan, burning all before him, and likewise Campon Sina, which caused great dearth in Pahan. The cause Pan or of our want of vent here (where foure yeares before I had feene fuch quickneffe, as if the Pakan and World would not have provided fufficient) is the Portugalls bringing to Malacca the wonted quantitie, and the Hollanders filling Bantam and the Molnecas, as also the Trade of Moores at Tanafferin and Syam, befides Tarangh a Hauen new found out by Keda; the Guzerates, and another from Negapatan and we, helping to cloy the Market; to that the rumour is sufficient to keepe downe the price for ten yeares. I cannot at this present make five per Cento, which have made foure of one. Thus is mans wildome disappointed. I resolued to send a Cargason for Maccasar, Maccasar Celebra.

40 fending Iohn Persons as Chiefe, in a Iuncke of Empan, October the eight. On the ninth, arrived two Iunckes from Siam, in one of which was fent mee a Letter from Master Essington and Master Lucas of their trouble and small likelihood of sale, besides the for- cambon, Lanimer causes, the Countrey being filled with warres ; those of Cambois, Laniam , and Iagoman, am, & Iagoman preparing against Syam.

The five and twentieth, departed hence the Iunckes for Borneo, Iambi, Iaua, Maccafar, Iortan and other places, among whom was the Iuncke of Orancaya Raya Indramouda for Bantam, and thence to lortan, Amboyna, and Banda, and backe to Maccassar. I cannot imagine what the Hollanders meane to fuffer these Maleysians, (binesians, and Moores of those Countries, and to affift A Dutto mans them in their free Trade thorow all the Indies, and forbid it their owne Servants, Countrymen testimony of 50 and Brethren, vpon paine of death and loffe of goods. Surely a token of great ignorance or en- Duich iniquine uie, suffering Turkes and Heathens to grow rich, rather then their owne Countrymen should get in his owie their living. Surely a great ingratitude, and a token that Gods punishment is comming upon words, as they The eleventh of November, the Globe arrived from Syem, having beene eight dayes in the November 11.

way. They had arrived in the Road of Syam the fitteenth of August, and cast Anchor at three fathome high water: but the next day the water ebbing thirteene houres together they had but feuen foot muddie ground, and therefore not very hurtfull. They remoued further off, where they had three fathome at a low water, being foure miles (leagues) from the Barre. The Townelyeth fome thirtie leagues up along the River, whether they fent newes of their arrivall. The Saban-60 der and the Gouernour of Mancock (a place scituated by the River) came backe with the Mesfengers to receive his Maiesties Letters, but chiefly for the presents expected. Captaine Effing-ton and Mafter Lucas went with them to the Towne, where the feuenteenth of September they Customers came before the King, who promited free Trade, and gaue enery one a little golden Cup, and a Customes. little piece of clothing. The Mandorins (Officious Officers) would have interverted the Kings command for their owne couetoulnesse, taking at their owne prices what they please, and paying when they are pleafed with Bribes, with worse demeanure then in any other parts of the

Indies (though the reit bad enough) till complaint being made to the King, they were charged not to modelt them; and the goods were carried to the house which the King had affigned, being of bricke, the best in Siam, neare to that of the Hollanders. Now was the time of raines, and the countery coursed with water. The fixe and twentieth of October, arose such stormes, that old folkes had not there seene the like, renting up trees by the roots, and blowing downe the Kings monument, which hee had life, renting up trees to the consultation of the diligence of Mafter Skinner and Samuel 10 Harts, calting out a third anchor, being drinen, notwithstanding her two anchors, from fixe fa-Road of Sian a thome to foure, and not pailing an English mile from the land. Mafter Skinner was beaten from the anchor-stocke, but very firangely recoursed. Fine men were drowned; one after the Sou h-west

ces of Trade

Tempeft.

tue in a South reft, whom they supposed denoured of a Whale, which they faw soone after they had seene him, This forme latted toure or fine houres, and then followed a fmooth fea, as if there had beene no tempell. A tempell yet continued aboord the ship, by reason, as was reported, of the reasonlesse Ber'am Parame malterly Mafter, who was therefore apprehended, and Skinner placed in his roome, whereby and som toree that weather also calmed. As for their Trade, they were too much becalmed, this being the third princial plat place of Trade in all the Indies, and to farre diffant from Bantam and Patane. The cause where-

II.

Relations of frange Ocentrents in Pegu, Siam, Ioor, Patane, and the Kingdomes adiacent.

23 I A M hath been a mightie Kingdome and ancient, fince fubdued and tributary to Pegu, which yet continued not long. For the King of Sum dying, left two fonnes, 10 win h were brought up in the Kings Court of Pegu. But flying from thence to Simm, the clieft called in the Mareyan language, Rara api, or the Fiery King, and by the Portugals the Blacke King, tet up himfelte as King : against whom the King of Pegu tent his fin the Prince, who was flame in these warres, and hath beene occasion of the descruction of the whole Kingdome, and many millions of Peguan lines. For the King fore griened for the death fry in my P.L. of his forme, caused his chiefe Feguan Lords and Souldiers (himselfe being of the kindred of the Brama's) to bee flaine. This caused great perturbation, divers tributary Kings (whereof hee had twentie) falling daily from him : which at the last encouraged this Blacke King to make warre against him, going to the Citie of Vnxa or Pegu, before which he lay some two moneths without doing any thing; he brake up his siege and returned to Siam. But the King of Pegu not long after, because of the great dearth and death, gave over himselfe, and all his treature, into the King of Tangue hands of the King of Tangue; to present also falling into the hands of the King of Arracan, comming against him with a mightie power. This King of Arracan early made himselfe Maller of the Towns and Countrey, almost emptie and familhed. Thinking to goe into Tangu: That fharers of Pe-

Sittengh.

King fent Embaffallors, ollering to deliuer vinto him certaine portions of the treatures of Tegu, the White Elephant, and the Kings daughter (both which I have feene in Arracan, Anno 1608.) as also the King of Pegu, or else to kill him (as afterwards it happened that the King of Tangu flew him with a Pilon, wherewith they stampe their Rice, as being free against any stabbing.) In this manner came this mightie Empire to ruine, to that at this day there is no remembrance of it. The King of Arraean gaue the Towne or Fort of Siriangh, lying upon the same River of Pegu, in keeping to the Portugals, especially to Philip de Britto de Nicote, to whom hee gaue the name of Xenga, that is, Honett, which honor Xenga did after requite, taking his fonne pritoner force three or four yeares after, and ranfomed him at eleuen hundred thousand Tangans, and ten

Galeas of R ce; who yet also domineereth and careth for no bodie. Thus by Pegu's deftruction was Siam received, and hath fince brought in fubication the Kingdomes of Cambaya, Livia h, lagomai, Lugor, Patane, Teneferm and divers others. Anno 1605. the Blacke King deceafed without iffue, and left his Kingdome to his brother, called the H hae King, a courtous man, but enjoying his kingdomes in peace : he dyed Anno 1610, leaving divers children behind him. Hence much alteration : For lying in his death-hed, hee caused his eldest of the principall Lords of Siam, who having many flaves, thought to make himfelte Aug.

2 Taaytor

This prefent King was the feeond fonne of the White King, who not long after dispatched that landers info Trayto, which had amongst other slaves, two hundred and eightic landers. These thinking to ... revenge their Masters death, and to atchieue some memorable exploit, ran together to the Court of this new King, polleffed themfelues of King and Court (being with out fulpition) and com-

fonne to befluine, being a yong man of great hope, at the infligation of one lock omments, one 60

relled him to deliver foure of the principall Nobles to be flaine, as causes of their Masters death. And having sometime vied him at their pleasure, they compelled him to subscribe with his owne blood, and to give some of the chiefe Palapos or Priefts for hoftages, to such agreement as they propounded, and to departed with great treasure after much violence, the Stamites not being able to right themselves. Vpon this occasion, the kingdomes of Cambaya and Laniangh rebelled, as Rebellion, alio one Banga de Laa a Peguan. And the King of Laniangh came the last yeere into Siam, within three dayes journey of the Towne of Odija, hoping to find the Countrey still entangled with Oudija, thele ilauish laponian broyles. But they being departed, the King of Siam came forth to meete him, which the other durst not abide. The two other Kings are faid to have joyned league to 10 come together in Aprill, to dispesselfest this yong King, being about two and twentie yeeres of age, which yet without treason of his owne, they are not likely to effect. Once, it was our hard happe to hit vpon these bad times so vnfitting for Trade. We refolued that the ship should winter here in Patanie, forced thereto by divers causes. The Queene of Paone and thirtieth of December, the Queene accompanied with aboue fixe hundred Prawes, went to sport her selfe: shee lay first at Subrangh, where we went to salute her, hauing both fight and speech with her, in company of the Hollarders: Shee was a comely old woman, threescore yeeres of age, tall and full of Maiestie; in all the Indies we had seene few like her. Shee had in company her Sifter (which was next heire) and her yonger lifters little daughter, which hath been married They had to Raia Siack, brother to the King of loop. This her litter, commonly called the yong Queene, speech with was yet an vnmaried Virgin, about fixe and fortic yeeres of age. After we had had some confe- her. rence with her, thee let fall the curten, intimating thereby, that wee should depart, signifying that next day we should come againe; which wee did, and were well entertained. There were twelue women and children to dance, which I have not feene better performed in the Indies. Then were all the Gentilitie commanded to dance, or at least make shew thereof: which caused no small laughter. We and the Hollanders must doe likewise, and the Queene thereat rejoyced. She had not been out of her house in seuen yeeres before, till this going to hunt wilde Buffes and Bulles, whereof there is great abundance. As shee passed along with her traine betwixt our house and the ship, we saluted her with some Peeces from the ship, and Musket shot on sheare. In this winter of Nouember and December, the water, by continual raine, was higher then Great waters, in had been in the memery of man, so that many beasts died, many houses were driven away, and much harme done. The fine and twentieth of January, we had newes by a Dutch ship from Siam, January. that Master Lucas had fold more then halfe his goods, anp that the King had bought a great parcell thereof: neithr would be fuffer the Officers to carry away the goods, with a pretext of the Kings name, without a testimoniall from the King. We had also newes from Keda, that the Portugals had come with fifteene hundred men from Saint Thome, and taken the Hollanders house Hollanders in Paleacate, flaine their men, and carried away the goods. In March I fent the flip for Siam house in Paleac with more goods. The King of Pahan married the yonger lifter of the Queene of Patane, whom shee having not feene in twentie eight yeeres, having requested the same by often sclemne Embassies, and not ob-40 taining; hath made flay of all the lunkes that came from Siam, Cambaya, Bordelongh, Lugor, or any other places laden with Rice for Pahan, and lent forth all her power by water, confilling of about seventie failes, with some foure thousand men, under the command of Maha Raia, Datoe Beffar, and Orancayo Sirnora, with order to bring her fifter hither, either in friendship or by force, fe that Pahan shall have much to doe by reason of the great dearth, the burning of his house, Rice and barnes; as also the warres of Ioor, who as as said, maketh great prepartion to goe in his owne person for Pahan ; and the King of Borneo prepareth on the other side to their succour.

In Aprill 1613. here arrived divers Iuncks from Cambaya and China. In May I received letters from Siam, and good newes of fale, and of the Globes arrivall. He was butle to fend a Cargafon of goods for Iapan. Seeing good to be done with China Commodities, I tooke up three thousand Rials of eight of the Queene at interest, for three or foure Moneths, allowing fixe per Centum to Fires at Ranthe Queene, and one per Centum to the Treasurer. We received ill newes from Bantam, that Campochma had twice been burnt, the great English house also fill of cloath, and that of the Hollanders with great loile: of a great English thip at Pulo Panian much distressed, and great mortalitie. There The Trades.

came newes alto, that the Acheners had belieged loor.

Iuly the twelfth, here arrived the King of Pahan, with his Wife the Queenes lifter, and two Iuly. Sonnes, much against his will, leaving his countrey in great povertie, famine, fire, and warre, hauing towned conspiracie. He brought newes that the Achevers had taken loor, and carried all the loor or lobot Ordnance, Slaues, and other things away with them; Raia Boung fon with his children were ta-tiken. ken prisoners, and the King of loor fled to Bintam. It was belieged nine and twentie dayes. Some 60 Hollanders alfo, whole ship was then at Ioor, were there taken and slaine. None of the Grandes Dogges killed, went to entertaine this King of Pahan, onely all the dogs were killed for his lake, because he can endure none. He tooke our shooting as he passed by vs in his horiour very kindly, desiring vs to visit him, and to trade in his Countrey.

Iuly the fixteenth, we had newes of Captaine Sais his being at Mackian, in the way to I span.

Solor taken by

Death of Sir also of the death of Sir Henry Middleton on the foure and twentieth of May, as was thought by griefe for the most part, the Tradef-increase lying there on ground without Mast, with three and thirtie men the greatest part licke: the ship being sheathed on the one side, and not on the other. In her had deceated an hundred English, and more Chineses which wrought for wages, and eight Dutch, by some strange sickenesse. Captaine Schot had taken the Castle and Iland of Solor, with great quantitie of Sandalwood. In the Moluccos also they had done much on the Spannerd, and a hot warre was likely to enfue. July the one and thirtieth, came the King of Pahan to our house with great state, making great promises of kind entertainment in his Countrey.

King of Pabes departed. Winely conftancie. Maccalat in August the first, the Queene sent for vs to the Court, where was made a great feast in honour of the King of Pahan. There was also plaid a Comedie by women after the lanan manner, appa_ 10 relled antikelike, very pleafant to behold. On the ninth, the King of Paban departed, hanne been here a mocking Hocke to the Patanees: but the Queenes Sifter would not leave him, but returned backe with him; in liew of getting great presents, having spent almost all shee had. On the fixteenth, I received a letter from Thomas Bret at Maccafar of a bad Market, and that Iohn Persons was fallen frantike: and that they had bought a Junke with purpose to have come away, but that in the meane time the Darling came thither, beeing full of cloathing to fettle a Facto-September the eighteenth, arrived here Raia Indra Monda, which had gone from hence, O.

B. Welden Englifbman.

Market. He brought about two hundred tockles Mace, and a great parcell of Nutmegs. Hee 20 brought me a letter from Richard Welden. By him I learned the State of Banda; the Generall Peter de Bot, had ministred seuere iustice, hanging tome for sleeping in the watch, on a Gallowes hard by the Caille: which caused divers to runne to the Bandefians, and ten were turned Morrer; neither could they of the Castle by any meanes recouer them. Nor have they of the Castle any command at all ouer the Bandessans: onely they make the Iunkes to ride under the Castle, as also Banda nor commanded by the the ships, so commanding the Sea, but not daring to give a bad word on land to the Bandessans.

Ctober the twentie hit: he had been at Maccafar, and thence to Banda, where hee made a good

The three and twentieth, the Globe arrived from Siam, and I received a letter from M. Lucas, lazomai, Aus or that he had no newes from the Cargafon fent to lagomai, because the passages were stopped by Ama, and Lani- reason of the warres betweene the people of Ama and of Laniangh. The King of Ama is said to have taken Siriangh, and to have caused the Xenga tobe slave. The King of Siam expects 10 him with great forces, keeping good watches on his borders. I payd the Queene her debt in

Vproare by 74-

October the fourth, beeing the Moores first day of Lent, about eight of the clocke in the morning, arofe a mightie fire in the Towne, or rather the Fort and Court of Patania, the cause was this: Datoe Befar and Datoe Laxmanna dwelling neere to each other, and beeing (except Raia Shey) the richeft in Slaves of lavonians: it chanced, this Date Belar had been threatned by his Ianonian flaues, that they woul! kill him, Laxmannah, Raia Suterbangh, and others, which at last came to their eares. Whereupon Datoe Befar calling in his flaues, examined the busines, which by then was denied. Notwithstanling he caused two which were most suspected to bee bound which the Pongonla of the flaues would not fuffer, who was thereupon by the faid Befor thrust 40 through with his Cryfe or Dagger. The lauonian slaues enraged hereat, had laid hold on their Lord, but that his other flaues freed him. Their furie neuertheleffe flew all which came in their way, and let fire on their houses. The Janan slaves of Laxmannah, seeing their Countrey men in trouble, in fight of their Matter, and in spight of his threats, came to them, set all on fire: and being in all about an hundred persons, ranne to the great gate called Punta Gorbangh, setting all on fire on both fides as they went, to that the whole Towne, except some fewe, as the Queenes Court, Orançaio Sirnora, Datoe Bandara, and the Meskita, was burned. And the lanans going 2longit the streete, tooke the best bond-women that they found, along with them, and stayed till one of the clocke after dinner, domineering, none daring to come at them. Wee meane while were not without feare in our quarter, they threatning to fall on our house: wherefore (with the 50 Hollanders together) we kept firong watch, fending abourd for as many armed as might bee, which came in very fit time. For they beeing landed, and things let in order, we refolued to go to visit them, and to stoppe their way; which happened even just as they were comming downwards. But understanding by their spies of our strength and comming towards them, they retired thwart to the fields, and fled to Quale bouca, and fo forwards to Bordolongh, Sangora, and into the Countrey. Thus we, without harme received, got the name of Defenders of strangers. The lauans were followed afterwards to little purpose, three or foure sicke men beeing taken priloners: what became of the rest was not knowne at our departure. This is the third time that Patania hath been burned, twice by the lapanders, and once by the lauans, a thing strange and almost

Factories left at Patania and

On the one and twentieth, we tooke our leave of the Queene, which gave to mee, and to Mafter Effington a golden Cryfe. Weleft William Ebert in the house with Robert Litlemord and Ralph Cooper, with letters also for M. Lucas at Sum. The same day arrived the vishoped for Hope from laber, where arriving and going on shoare, before they could return aboord, the Armada of Achen was before the Towne to beliege it. Wherefore they fent a letter about for thirtie Hardhips of armed men to be fent by land, and to come as high as they could in the River with the Hoppe to the Hope fight against the Acheners, which by reason of the shoulds they could not do high enough to him. Duch thip, behgn: agains the Australia restriction in edayes the Towne was rendred by composition. Thus redeet them, but that after twentie nine dayes the Towne was rendred by composition. Thus renede mained twenty three Hollanders priloners, and twelve came aboord, where none of command were left, but the Mallers mate, and one Affiliant. Their refolued for Patania, but encountred with a fforme, were driven on the Corall ground of Boneo, and were by a larger wind put thence vpon Pulo Condor. It being now impossible to recourt Pataria, they fought refreshing in the Warellus, where they had a good Bay, but an ill Kitchin, the people being their enemies. They came 10 to Patania with eighteene men, the mo? lying in pitifull 1 light in their Cabbins. Sheebrought feuentie thousand Rials of eight, and twentie nine packs with Indie cloth.

ð. III.

Their Voyage to Masulipatan; accidents during their long flay there, and their returne.

🐧 He next morning we fet faile. The fiue and twentieth we were with the Southerliest Hands of Ridargh (which are about eighteene or twentie, lying in fixe degrees) and in Iles Ridargh, the Euening by the lles of Capas, which are three little Ile., lying fome thinteene Capas, Pale leagues from the former, and two from the Continent, The fixe and twentieth, we faw Ting. Pulo Tyaman, South and South by East from Capas twentie eight league. The nine and twentieth, being calme, we came to Pulo Tingi. If you keepe at eighteene fathome, you neede teare nothing

The first of November, we saw the point of Iantana or Iobor, and the Mount upon the Hand of Bintam, and the next Morning came in fight of Pedra Branca: and about ten of the clocke came sintam. of Button, and the next according came an agreement of abor fourel agues into the Sea labor Hu- Lingibour. gens describes this should very well, which we passed not without danger having the point with 30 the three little Ilands West South-west from vs. It is good to keepe towards the Sea, till you bring the little Iles shut in with the point of Iohor, and Pedra Branca open with the Ile of Bintam. Pedra Branca is a rocke full of fowle, and be-dunged, which caufeth the toppe thereof to be white, and gives it that name. Till the feuenth, we were every day buffe, turning vp with the floud till we were past the Ruer of lobor, and came about two leagues from Sinca pura. On the eighth, divers Prawes came aboord vs hard by the straight, being of the Salettes under the King of lobor, which for the mest part keep in their Prawes, with their Wiues and Children, and line on fishing. By these we understood, that the King of Achen had sent Raia Bonny Soe, younger brother of the King of Iohor, backe agains with great honour, attended with thirtie Prawes and two thousand Acheners, to rebuild the Fort and Citie of Johor, with good flore of Ordnance, 40 and other necessaries, having ma ried him to his Sister, and that he should bee set up in the old Kings place. Here we tooke a Pilot to carry vs through the Straights. The nineteenth of December, we arrived at Majulpatan, where we found an English thippe, Majulpatan and two Hollanders. We understood that Mirf dards was out of place, and that Atmachan and Bufebuller and tall governe. The Ergl/b thip was the lames, and was fent expressely to second vs. The lames, in our Voyage. M. Marlow, M. Danis, M. Gumey, and M. Cob came abound vs, and delinered vs Letters. The one and twentieth I went on snoare, where we were met by Wentacadra, some to Busebulleran, with the Sabandar and other Morres, and were well received. They gave vs divers tefferiifes, and to the Director Waner and me, to each a faire horfe, which I retuled, suspecting their treachery, but was compelled to accept it. I took a Caul at foure per Centum, & landedgoods. The twentie fift of Ianuary, the Iames departed for Petapoli: and on the feuenth of Fet mary, from thence for Baniam. On the eighteenth of February, I went to Narfapur Feca, and the nineteenth, the ship was brought into the River drawing nine foot three quarters, and having ten and an halfe, contrary to the reports of some, which wished no good to vs. The three and twentieth, I arrived againe at Massulpatan, and diffrached the Peon for Surat, writing to M. Aldworth. That 1 armed agains at real purposes amount according Frank, by whom we understood, that it day armed a Namette from Pegs, wherein came Cornelius Frank, by whom we understood, that it day armed a Namette from Pegs, wherein came Cornelius Frank, by whom we understood, that it day armed a Namette from Pegs, wherein came Cornelius Frank, by whom we understood, that it day armed a Namette from Pegs, wherein came Cornelius Frank, by whom we understood, that it day armed a Namette from Pegs, wherein came Cornelius Frank, by whom we understood, that it day are not a supplied to the person of the was certaine that the King of Ann had taken the Fort of Stringth, and flaine all the Portugals, and that Xenga or Philip de Britto, was either spitted or so dashed. This was done in Marchiart. The King had given order for rebuilding the old Towne, calling all the Pequers together, and making many faire promifes. Himfelfe went forward toward Tenefferin, where Banga de la 60 came to him with fiftie thouland Peguers, who before had been vader the King of Sam. The Moores in Massulpatan reionce greatly at this conquest, hoping to get the trade of Pegu into their hands againe, and prepare two thips to fend thirther in Septemb r. In March came newes of el uen ships arri sed at Goz, eight from China, and three from Malacca, which brought downe the price of the Market, in a good houre for me, which had almost dispatched before.

In Aprill 1614. Atmachan departed for Golanda to give vp his accounts, the yeare comming to an end. It was well for him, the King having depoted the great Treaf rer, and given his Office to Malick Tufar, Atmachans friend : and well for vs , these Governours Debts beeing good whiles they continue their place; otherwise doubtfull. The eighteenth of May, at five in the evening dyed Captaine Effirgton of a finden heat, having caten his Dinner at the Table. He had some Biles about him, which at that time or the yeare are very common : one great one on his thoulder, which would not breake, forposed the cause of that heate. I went and fet the ship in the best order I could, they all cerusing other G vernour but me, which thought it an abasement to tread in the steps of my vnder Merchan. I committed it for that time to Mafter Skinner, holding all in hope that they might doe their but endeaucurs, and returned to Masulpatan, where I found three perions which said that they were lent with 10 Ohiama Queen Letters from Ohiama Queene of Paleacatte, Inga Raiz Gouernour thereabout, and of Saint Thomee, Apa Condina S. cretarie of the Great King Wencatadraia, wherein they tent me world that if I would come thither, they would grant me a place right ouer against the Fort of Paleacane, with all fuch Primle iges as we should defire, and other great promifes besides. But I considering how I and the lames had beene entertayned there, could beleeve but little : yet at last we agreed that one of them should flay with me, and the rest should depart with one of my folkes, who should carrie the Letters to the aforesaid persons; as also to the King; wherein I repeated the bad entertainment which we had at Paleacatte. And if now it pleafed him that we should come into his Country, then to fend vs his Caul or fafe Conduct, to which we might truft,

Tho. Estingtons

Can and Avefliam to the English.

His offers.

The nine and twentieth of July, arrived foure persons as Embassadors, with my man Wengalia 20 et Nar Ing. his from the Great King of Nar Inga or Velur, bringing me a Caul with his Abeliam, (which is a white Cloth where his owne hand is printed in Sandill or Saffin ) as also one from the Queene of Palescette, and divers Letters from Iaga Raia, Tima Raia, Apacondaia and others. The Kings Letter was written vpon a leafe of Gold, wherein hee exculed the former fault done to vs in Paleacatte, desiring that now we would come into his Countrey, and chase a place to our best liking, and that there we should build a house or Cattle according to our owne liking, with other printledges. He gaue me a Towne of about four hundred pound of yearely reuenue, with promile to doe more at my comming thither. The Hollanders had wrought much against it, but their words were not now in such force; the Inhabitants greeting to see enery yeare English fhips passe by without any profit to them, and therefore filling the King with complaints, and 30 procuring thele friendly offers. I kept them with mee, allowing their daily charges till the ship be come into the Road, then to confider further. My man Wengali had beene in person before the King and spoken with him, the King laying his hand on his head, and presenting him with a Telleriffe.

Ouer-flowings

In August, was in Narsapur Peta and thereabouts, a greater ouer-flowing then had beene feene in nine and twentie yeares; that whole Salt hils, Townes, and Rice draue away, and many thoulands of men and cattell were drowned, the water being three yards aboue the common high-way. In Goleanda (which hath a branch running into this great River, dry in the Summer) were about foure thou find houlds washed away. Two stone Bridges, one of nineteene; the other of lifteene arches (as artificially made as the like may fearly bee feene in Europe, in my judge- 40 ment, at half three fathone high aboue water) were three foot under water, and fixe arches of that of nineteens washed away, beeing a Bridge which might well bee compared with that of The fourth of October, the thip being theathed came ouer the Barre without hurt, hindered Rochester.

before by the foule weather. And now I called freshly for my Debts, and writ thereof the third time to the Court, telling them that I would be payd the interest also; whereupon they writ to Mir Marumad Rafa and the Subander, to looke that I be tontented. The three and twentieth, the thip came into the Reade of Mafulpatan, and I tooke order for thipping the goods. On the ang or ner-figs lears a flucand twenti, the came new set the death of Wencatadrapa King of Velor, after his fiftee his wine dur- yeares raigne, and that his three Wines (of whom Objama Queene of Paleacute was one) had 50 ning withhim hurned themselves quicke with the Corps. Great troubles are feared; the Hollanders are afraid of their Callle new built in P. Meacaire. Soone after came fixtie fixe Souldiers to strengthen it,

The first of November, arrived the Lion from Bantam, which brought newes of the casting away of the Bantam in the Teffell, and of the White Lion at Saint Helena; of the lames arruall at Innerfor Pa. Bantam and going thence for Patania. I feeing the Governours trifling delayes for his Debt, and being in danger thereby not to returne this yeare, resoluted to carrie him or his some from the Custome house aboord the ship, how dangerous somer the attempt seemed, the whole Company promiting therein to line and dye with me. Whereupon I gaue order for the Beat to goe aboord, 60 and to bring fixe Muskets wrapped up in the Sailes, and so to lye in the Custome House, till we should see our oportunitie. Moreouer, seeing we may not bring any weapons on shore, I gaue cruer that all our folkes should stay within the House, and come to mee in the Custome House as soone as I should fend for them five, to take hold of the Souldiers Pikes, that were of the Governours

CHAB. 14.5.3. Strange attempt of English among the Moores. or his fonnes Guard, and so presently to enter the Custome House, which standeth hard by the Rivers fide, and then to flut the doore. So might we beable to carry them into the Boat, before the alarme be knowne in the Towne: wee having them in the Boate, wee needed not to feare. We kept it secretly, yet had the Hollanders intelligence, who esteemed it a bragge, and so reuealed it not.

The one and twentieth of November, the Gentiles had a Feast, which Solemnitie happens Gentile Feast. thrice 2 yeare, when the New Moone commeth on a Monday : in which both Men and Women come to wash themselues in the Sea, esteeming thereby to have great indulgence. The Branenes alfo and Cametis doe the fame.

On the foure and twentieth, I demanded my money of the Gouernour very angerly, having flaved feuen monethes longer then bargaine, asking also Mir Mabumad Rafa, why he did not helpe me according to the Letters of the Court: who laughingly answered, they would talke with me at the Cultome House when my anger was ouer. I replyed, I would no longer bee made a Foole, I would show my selie a Captaine of the King of England, who are not accustomed to fuch Knauish dealing. Thus went I to the Custome House, where I found the Gouernours Sonne with a small Guard, his Souldiers having set their Launces over against the Custome House, it now being also high-water, as if God had offered Occasions fore-looke. Wherefore I fent home (as was before agreed) for Maiter Skinner and the rest, (leauing only three to looke to the house) who presently came & laid hold on the Pikes, and entring the Custome house, that the Valorous and 20 doore. In the mean time I held Wencatadra arrested by the armes, til two or three came to me, who france attaking him in their armes carryed him into the Boat, into which I prefettly leaped, and beeing tempt of the followed of the rest, put off from shoare, rowing away : so that before his Father and Mir Ma- English. burnad Rafa could come to the Custome House, wee were in full rowing. But in regard that it The Governors blew hard, and that we were forced to row under land, within the length of two Cables to keep Prionerathe depth of the Channell; they came with might and mayne to purlue vs : fome comming boord. hard by the Boate, but were out-rowed. Some met vs in front which had indangered vs, but discharging three Muskets we frighted them, and carryed away our prey in light of three thoufand people, being much past the Barre before they co. Id come to it, and came fafe aboord. I had given order to George Chancey, to flay ashoare with three men more to give a reason of this Ho-30 fillitie, & toget in the Debts: but he, contrary hereto, going forth of the house to fee this Enterprize, was by some varuly fellowes set upon and thorowly beaten : which comming to the Gouernours eare, hee tooke him into his protection, fearing his fonne might pay for it. In the after-noone came from shoare Werner Van Berchem the Hollander, with the Kings

Interpeter, to demand the cause of this action, whom I answered that they knew it well enough, and I had also left my vn 'er Merchant on shere to tell them; of whose hard viage understanding, I made as though I would be reuenged on Wencatadra, but by Van Berchems intercession remitted it, conditionally to execute the fame, hanging him at the yard (which he writ to his Father) if any of my men should be wronged. I prohibited also any Boatto come aboord without a Letter from George Chancey, elle would I fet them all before the Mait. The Hollanders Van Berchem

40 with the Secretarie came aboord agains on the feuen and twentieth, offering the Gouernours owne Debt : I demanded no more but his and Callopas whose Suretie hee was, and for the rest, that he as Governor should fend such as refused to pay aboord; & I would held my selfe satisfied. Berchem also protested against me of all dammages, which they had bound, or might beare, because of my hollilitie; to which protest I answered by writing, shewing the nullitie thereof, and their ship the same night departed for Patane. In the meane-while, Wencatadra remay ned aboord without eating or drinking. For he being a Bramene, may neither eate nor drinke in any mans Superfition of house but what he hath dreffed himselfe; which made mee to to pittle him, that I offered if any Brimens. two Moores of qualitie would come aboord in his place, I would let him goe on shoare. But none would undertake it, and he must continue his fast. The Gouernour therefore payd his and so Callopas Debt, and made all the rest to pay except Miriapeik and Datapa which were in Golomo da, and I fent backe my Pr. foner, the thirtieth of Nouember. After this agreement diners Moores and others came abound to visit mee, promising to write to the King the truth of these proceedings, desiring me not to hurt any Moores ships. I answered I was for this time fatisfied: but let them hereafter take heed of giving like caute, and have better eares for Englishmens complaints. I also sent Letters to the King at Golconda to the same purpose for quicker lustiee. I dispatched likewise the Embassadors of Velur, in respect of the troubles there, and my short stay denying fit oportunitie : yet I left Letters with them for the first English ships, with my best aduice.

The fewenth of December, Master Chances came about with the rest, and next night I put to 60 Sea, having offered to come and take a friendly fare-well on shoare : but the Governour fearing I would write of his dealing by those Moores, refuted, pretending hee was ashamed to see my face, whom of a good friend he had made his Enemie. The third of Ianuarie, we arrived at Bantam, where we found the lames come from Patane, the Hostander, and Concord. I went on fhoare and received of Master Iohn Iordaine, (principall Factour at Bantam) Letters, from Sir flockes vaited. Thomas Smith, testifying that the Companie was joyned in one, &c. From Master Cockin at Maccafar, that he had received the Cargaton lent by William Ebert, with other circumftances: from Adam Denton and Master Gourney, complaying of the dead Market because of the Warres: from Mafter Lucas alfo, of his feares in the fame regard; but the Darling being gone thither. I

Here we agreed that the Hofianders goods should be discharged into the Globe, and Edward Christian (made Captaine thereof in that Countrey by Generall Eeast) should bee Captaine of the Giobe, and Nathaniel Salmon Matter; and Matter Skinner should goe Master in the Hosiander: 10 and that in the Globe thould goe fiftie men, in the lames five and fiftie, twentie in the Hofander which was to Pay here; and three or foure to keepe the Concord. On the thirtieth, the Lamer departed to goe on a moneth before and to stay at the Cape, or at Saint Helena, that we might go together. Seeing the Hosiander could not so quickly bee made readie, it was thought fit to send the Concord for Amboyna, George Bale going in her; and George Chancey was to flay in Macafar. The thip Zelandia arrived from lapan, and brought Letters from Mafter Cockes, that Mafter Pear cocke with the Hollanders was flame in Cochin China, and that Mafter Adams and foureother English were gone thence for Syam.

This is Sup-

Letters from

The fourteenth of Februarie, arrived Captaine David Middleton with the Samaritan, Thomas and Thomasin, the men being well and in good disposition. Captaine Middleton vnderstanding 20 of his Brothers death, and the loffe of his ship the Trades Increase, was perplexed and resolved to goe home, wherefore he called a Court to fee the disposing of the ships, and the manning againe of the Hosiarder. It was then thought fit to send home the Samaruan with the very fift, the Thomas to Sumatra, and the Thomasin for Amboyna, to succeur the Concord and the Hossander for Petania and Iapan, to wife those Factories, which was put in execution. They fet fayle out of Bantam Road, the two and twentieth of February. Aprill the thirtieth, they entred the Road of Soldania, where they found the lames which arrived the day before, the Aduise & Astendant outward bound. The fedenteenth of May, they weighed, and the first of June came to Saint Helens.

CHAP. XV.

" For the furthering of Marine knowledge, I haue though: good to adde this Voyage, how Societie with the East-Indian Societie.

A lournall of a Voyage made by the Pearle * to the East-India, wherein went as Captaine Master SAMVEL CASTELTON of London, and Captaine GEORGE BATHVEST as Lieutenant : written by IOHN TATTON, Master.

He two and twentieth of August 1612, we departed from Black-wall for Granef- 40 end, and being much hindered by contrary, before we could attayne to the Lands end of England.

The feuen and twentieth of Nouember, we fell with end, and being much hindered by contrary windes, it was the fift of Nouember, The feuen and twentieth of Nouember, we fell with Lancerota, one of the Ca-

The third of December, we towed into Lauratani Road. The fifth wee were put out of the Roade by foule weather, and fpent the whole moneth about this lle, and Tone-riffa, and tooke in fixteene Pipes of Wine.

The last of this moneth, we met with a small ship of London, a little in the Offing, which had formerly beene in the Read with vs, which an Holland ship of Warre had taken, whose men being all drunke in the night, the ficle away having but three men in her : into whom we put two 50 man of Warre- men, and a Merchant, whom we flould have fet on shoare at the Grand Canarie, but the weather not permitting vs, he agreed to goe for the Ile of Palme, we thinking there to better our prouifion. The small thip this day did beare vs companie.

The fifteenth day, we anchored in the Roade of Cape Verde where we watered, and got some Rofifes Road.

The one and twentieth, we weighed and went ouer to Rofifeo for Beenes, and at fine of the clocke anchored in Rofifco Roade in five fathomes. Note that there is but eleven fathomes over the Bay man East and by North course : for so lyeth Rosisco from the Ile which maketh the Roade at Cape Verde. The two and twentieth, we got leuen Beeues.

The three and twentieth, in the morning wee departed from Roffico. The eight and twen- 60 tieth, being in latitude fixe degrees, thirtie two minutes, we met with the first Ternado, lasting fome two houres.

The twentieth of Februarie, wee croffed the Equinoctial Line, and made our way South in English Koyages into the East-Indies. CHAP.IS.

The fifteenth of Aprill-1652, the latitude thirtie two degrees, thirtie nine minutes, the Aprill 15. wind South-west, we steered in East South-east, and met with many great weeds, called Trom. Weeds called wind South-well, we itered in East South-east; and met with many great weeds, caused 17000-bis by the Portugals, and the water was much changed; we fleered away East South-east till fine 17000-lines fleets with the 1700 by the 1700 b of the clocke; then wee faw the land betweene the East South-east, and East North-east: wee the Case of ftered away East till seuen in the morning; then we were thwart Punta de Sansta Lucia, some Bunna Espefour leagues off; we founded, and had forty three fathomes, Rockes: then it fell aland,

The fixteenth at noone, latitude thirtie three degrees, no minutes. At fine of the clock at night, Punta de Santia we were that so farre into the Bay, that we brought a ledge of rockes South South-west off vs: Laza.

The Bay.

The seventeenth in the morning, we were some seven lengues off the shoare, having got some three leagues to the Southward. This day our latitude was thirtie three degrees, no minutes, we flood in for the shoare, and at three of the clocke came in faire by the point in fifteene, fourteene, and thirteene fathoms, and had fometimes hard ground, fometimes foft Ozie: and when wee were shot within the point two miles off the shoare, we had nine fathoms for the most part foft Ozie: Then we anchored in the South-earl fide of the Bay in feuen fathoms foft ground, the one point North-North-east some seuers leagues of; the other which we came in by, North-west,

The eighteenth in the morning, we fent our Boat and Skiffe on shoare the Skiffe prefently They goe on The eighteenen in the morning, we tent our local and skine of money a new skine presently returning, brought news of people, whereof ione twentic came to them. We effect the Skine house, and on the same to them. We expect this find expect the find expect the find expect. on shoare againe with an iron hoope cut in pieces, and some hatchets: and for a small piece of this A Calle lora 20 iron hoope we had a Calte, and for an hatchet an excellent good sheepe. Then we sent our Boat piece of an to feeke for water, but ranging the Bay could find none: a little puddle we faw, of which the ironhoope, to feeke for water, but ranging the may could me home a little phone we law, or which the people dranke, making fignes that there was none other. This Countrey feemed to be a very analyzed people dranke, making fignes that there was none other. This Countrey feemed to be a very analyzed to the first harmonic five for water. Prefeteran people cranke, making ingues that there was now outer.

Perpendigues of the Bay, having fixe foote water parent place. Our Boat went into a River in the bottome of the Bay, having fixe foote water parent place. vpon the Barre at an high water, and went a mile vp a very fine River, but all falt water, and a

The nineteenth in the morning, at two of the clocke, the wind came up at North Northwest, and blowing right in, we weighed, and made a boord over the bottome of the Bay in ten, mine, eight and seuen fathoms. Then the wind came to the West South-west, and West by South, and so we plyed it out, all night becalmed some three leagues without the point of the road. The 30 two and twentieth at noone, latitude thirtie three degrees, fiftie three minutes, we were some eight leagues off the shoare. The three and twentieth in the morning, the Table bare South- The Table, caft some fine leagues off. All night was calme. The foure and twentieth, we came into the Road of Saldanha: The neonle desire nothing in much as Concar Bertle their regarded of Saldanha. of Saldanha: The people defire nothing to much as Copper: Braffe they regarded not. Saldamba: The people delire nothing to much as Copper: Braffe they regarded not.

Copper in The foure and twentieth of August, we departed from Priaman for Tecon: Priaman flandeth chiefe repuest.

in thirtie eight minutes of South latitude, and the vanation there is foure degrees, aftie minutes August. North-weff. Tecon flandeth in fine and twentie minutes of South latitude, having three or foure Priaman in shoulds betweene them : but keepe some foure leagues off the shoare, and there is no feare. The one and thirtieth, we ran into a Bay, and there (heing a willernesse) wee brought on a South hunder.

falle keele on our Pinnaffe. This Bay is called by the name of a Towne, a little to the South-Variatio foure 40 wardof it, called Airchaugge. The latitude of this Bay is some eight minutes North latitude, degrees fitte Round about the should going in, is nine fathome and a quarter less : but betweene the maine and minutes. Round about the should going in is nine station ne and a quarter selfe: but betweene the maine and it, is the best channell with a Northerly wind, because the point of the sile lyeth should a good directory. cables length off to the Northward: some two miles off the shore thwart the wester point, which Towns eight is to the Northward of Airebangye, lyeth a sheald, whereon is but eight or nine fathomes water, minutes North being rockes: but all over betweene that land and the long Isle in the offing, which lyeth foma latitude. feuer leagues off, is but eight and twentie and thirtie fathoms. The tenth of September, we got Afhoold. vp with the wind off the thoare, within two miles of Partaban.

The elementh in the morning, we anchored at the South-west end of the Isle of Pattaban in fourteene fathoms Ozici and at two in the after-moone we anchored thware the Ruser of Pattide

The Ruser of

Man, in flue fathoms Ozici All this Coalt is Ozic neare the fluear without it be the flueals. In the Ruser is very boad water, and you may each test in the flue float properties. The Ruser of the flue and th Ruer is very good water, and you may goe into felix or feuen foot voon the Barrs, it standeth degrees, wenin no degree, twentie eight minutes of North latitude.

The murteanth, we went from Pattaban with two Governours for our Pilots, for Barons and nures. Achen, with three Boyes.

The fixteenth, we were a little short of a bigge Island, which lyeth some two miles off the A bigge Island maine, with two other small Isles on the South-fide of it; and betweene the maine and it lyeth in one degree an high round homocke being an lile: This is some twentie sine or twentie sixe leagues to the toutie minutes. Northward of Pattaban. This bigge Itle standeth in one degree, fortie minutes. And on the North-west side is a fresh running downe a steepe cliffe, like a little River, all in a breach, and to the weth white a great way off, feuen or eight leagues you may very well fee it. On the Northfide of this lile is a fine Bay z going faire by it, we had thirty fathoms Ozie. South-west or West South-west some foure leagues from this Island lyeth a should: within this Isle your depth is A should two and twentie fathoms, and so close into the maine twentie fathoms, all Ozie, your anchor o-

February 20. They croffe

The first Ternado.

Landantaken by an Holland

Teneriffa.

Decemb. 1611 A fm all fhip of

Lanc-Teta.

330 Nouember.

The lait of October, we departed from Nienbar, where we had good refreshing, for the Isle of Cerlon; the Canoes still trading, so long as we were any thing neare.

The tweltch of Nouember at noone, the Sunne shining, we made our ship in five degrees thirtie fine minutes. By which observation I found our ship fortie leagues farther Southerly, then I could judge by our failing, in leffe time then two dayes. At eight of the clocke in the morning, we faw the land of Ceylon, North-east by north off vs some twelve leagues off, being the high land within Punta de Galle. Then it proued calme, and we got our our Skiffe to found, but found The thirteenth at noone, latitude fine degrees, thirtie two minutes, variation thirteene de-Variation thir- grees, twentie foure minutes at night: all night the wind variable, little wind, but very much trene degrees, raine; we flented it in to the Northward : the next morning the land was Eaft North-eaft, The 10 twenticfoure fourteenth at noone, our latitude was fixe degrees, or fix or fine. The Souther point of Ceplon called Diundra, East of vs. The fixteenth in the after-noone, the wind Southerly out of the fea, we weighed and went The Bay of Ve into the Bay, where the Boats were, called Velagam, thinking there to water, and anchored in feuen fathoms fine blacke fand, the one point West North-westerly, the other point which wee came in by South South-west Westerly, and rode within a quarter of a mile from the shoare. This night wee lent our Skiffe on shoare with a slagge of truce, but went not on shoare, the people making thew they could not understand Partuguife.

Punta de Galle

The feuenteenth, we fent our Boat to the other fide of the Bay, where there were houses built by Christian Portugals: where the people came downe to our Boat, and one of them came into 20 the water neare the Boat, speaking very good Portuguise, in habite like one of the Countrey peo-ple: but we judged him to be a Portugall. He answered our men, that wee could have nothing till they had acquainted their King; and so bid vs returne the next morning, and we should have answere from their King, with very pleasing words : but soone after we perceived an ambush of the Portugals, and weighed.

The two and twentieth, we fent our Boat and Skiffe on shoare, thinking that for their two Boats and men, they would have given vs water. But we commanded our long Boat not to goe neare the shoare, but to lye off to succour the Skiffe, if need were. The people on shoare keeping themselves close, fent one man downe to speake to our Skiffe, that if they would give them money wee should water: who made answere, that our Captaine was very well content to gine 30 them what it pleased them to require, and told them that we were bound for Maticalo, a Citie upon the Ille, to Trade. Then he drawing nearer to the Skiffe, seemed to be afraid, and told them in the Skiffe that they had Gunnes and would shoote him : but they making answere they had The treason of none, as indeed, they had not, (for the Boat was fitted for their defence) comming neare, hee talked very friendly, feeming to yeeld to any thing. But on the fudden he retiring from the Skiffe, there came off fuch a volly of small shot, as the like hath been seldome seene, I thinke not lesse then two hundred, which hurt all our men in the Skiffe, being fixe, but none deadly, thanked be God. In the long Boat none werehurt ; but the Skiffe was even in the wash of the shoare, At necke, to have gotten hold of the Skiffe : But two of our men having better hearts then the reft, 40 although hurt, rowed her off. The long Boate discharging her fowler and her small shot, made them retire into the bushes againe; and so both our Boats came abourd againe. The foure and twentieth, we flood to the Eastward about Diundra, the Souther point of the Iile, and anchored all night fome seven leagues to the East.

their discharging of their shot they sallied out of the bushes, some of them running up to the

The River

The fixe and twentieth, wee flood to the Eastward along the shoare, and at noone anchored thwart a River, which the people called Wallamay, in eight fathoms, black Ozie fand, yet shewed a great River within, but the mouth was dord vp. Our Boat being at the mouth of it, thought it to be a Rocke that lay thwart of the Rivers mouth; and the Sea going high they could doe no good, but came aboord.

The seuen and twentieth, at sive of the clocke at night, we were thwart a should in the offing 50 of vs, and being that to the Eastward of it, we tooke in all our failes but our fore-course, and stood it off a try to spend the night, and not liking the weather, I called to get up our new forecourse ; and while it was getting vp, the other split. Being some foure miles off the shoare, we laid it a hull till nine of the clocke, having foure and thirtie fathoms. Then we laid it about to the shoare, and at eleven of the clocke anchored in thirteene fathom fine fand, some three miles and an halfe from the shoare, being lesse wind.

The eight and twentieth, in running some five leagues, wee met with another shoald without vs some three leagues from the land, the shoare being landie hills. The depth some five or five miles off, fixe or eight fathoms: at one cast we had but fine fathoms, which was another should, 60 but it shewed not, being a smooth Sea. Then we came into ten and fifteene fathoms : and standing still to the Eastward, we came to a point of rockes, and there seeing a fine River, we anchored on the East-side of the point in nine fathoms blacke Ozie land; the point bearing Southwest and by South off vs. Heere we watered, keeping a guard vpon the Rocke of thirty small thor. Here some people came to vs with feare, making shewes of great friendship. They have Thedescription for the most part of them very great holes in their eares: and some of them have their haire vpon on of the protheir heads, like the Chinefer, long, and made up with a knot upon their Crownes. They are all ple. naked, they weare onely a piece of cloth about their middles, hanging downe to their knees. Here two came aboord vs at severall times, which spake good Portuguise. They promised all things, but performed nothing. But finding the first to play the villaine with vs, yet as farre as we perceived, not by his owne meanes, we tooke occasion to detaine the one aboord, sending the other with threatnings and promifes on shoare to procure vs victualls; who staying somewhat long, put his fellow which we had detained in great feare; who fained himfelfe ficke, and would to faine have gone on shore. But the next day his confort came with two Calues.

The fourth of December in the morning, we stood to the East-ward till the brise came, which Decembers was about two of the clock, & fetcht not the place by fixe leagues: we anchored in ten fathomes two miles from the shoare, fine blacke sand latitude sixe degrees fortie minutes. Variation twelve Latitude & dedegrees fortie fixe minutes North-westing. Here we rode till the eighth: then we stood to the grees 40. min. West-ward, and anchored all night thwart a great Hamocke. The ninth, we anchored all night Variation 12. a little to the West-ward of the Westermost Shoald. The eleventh in the morning, we stood faire degr. 46, min. in by the river Wallaway; but the fea going high, we went along to the West-ward, and at night were thwart the point some five leagues to the East-ward of Diundra. Here wee rode till the fixteenth, at which time the Current fetting strongly to the Fast-ward, which was very feldome.

we weighed and plyed to the Eastward. The feuenteenth, we flood it in, and fetcht in a little to the West-ward of Diundra, thwart the two red Cliffes, and anchored in twentie face fachomes, the point East a little Northerly. Cliffes, The eighteenth, we broke vp our Pinnaile, being fo worms-eaten, that the wearied our men with freeing her of water. Here we rode the wind Easterly all this Moneth out.

Ianuarie the feuenth, Eafterly winds began to blow, then we bare up for the river of Wallaway, January. where we staid, and laid up new shrowds upon our maine Mast, having very much wind Easterly. We rode here tenne dayes together in tenne fathoms, three quarters of a mile from the shoare, the point lying East Southerly off vs. The nineteenth at midnight we espied a sayle. The twentieth in the morning in lesse then three leagues chase we tooke her. And the same day we stood it shippe, away to the North-west out of sight of land; then we stood in againe. The foure and twentieth. wee anchored some seuen leagues to the North-ward of Punta de Galle. The fine and twentieth we began to discharge her, riding in thirtie fathomes some three miles from the shoare.

The second of February, we had done with the ship, leaving inher neete an hundred tunnes February. of Pepper and Sanders. The third day, we fet taile home-wards. At fixe of the clocke at night Theyreturne we were in foureteene fathomes, fome fine or fixe miles from the shoare, thwart an Iland, which homewards, is some fixe leagues to the South-ward of the Portugals fort upon Ceylon called Colombo.

The twentieth of March, Latitude thirteene degrees feuen minutes: Variation twentie foure The greatest In twentiern or Marcin, Landaue time to the state of that we found. We fleered away South-weft, degrated that we found. We fleered away South-weft, degrated that we found. and felt no current. Note, that we met with Currents, and many ripplings from South latitude 40 foure degrees thirtie minutes, till we came into thirteene degrees no minutes. Sometimes the Ripplings making a noyfe like ouer-fals, especially being in the parallels of Pedras Brancas to the West-ward of it.

The foure and twentieth, latitude fixteene degrees fiftie minutes, variation twenty three de- Variation 21. grees tenne minutes: we fleered South-weft. The twentie feuenth, latitude twentie one degrees, degr. 10. min. then we faw an Iland West South-west, and South-west and by West some fine leagues from Anewlland vs, being very high land. At fixe of the clocke at night, we anchored on the Easter fide of it in discoursed in tenne fathomes fine blacke land a mile from the shoare. From fortie fathomes to foure fathomes elose into the shoare, you have fine black fand . Here we sent our Boat on shoare, and found infinite numbers of great land Tortoiles, as big as a man might well carrie, which were very good meate. Infinite num. The North-east point of this lie is very high and steepe; and a little to the South-east of the Inhustenum, bers of great point is low land, where is a fine running water like a river: and though a Boat cannot goe in, yet Torroiles.

it is a very good place to water in, somewhat distant from the shoare. The Ile is like a Forrest, A good water and therefore I called it Englands Forrell; but others call it Pewle lland, by the name of our flip, ringplace.

There is store of land sowie both small and great, plentie of Doues, great Parrats, and such like: Pestelle. And a great fowle of the bignesse of a Turkie, very fat, and so short winged, that they cannot flie, beeing white, and in a manner tame; and so are all other fowles, as having not been troubled ner feared with thot. Our men did beate them downe with thicks and ftones. Ten men may take fowle enough to serue fortie men a day. Our men trauelling into the land, found another river and a Pond with great flore of Mallards in it, and wild geele. Moreouer, they found infinite 60 ftore of great Eeles, as good, I thinke, as any in the world. Strike them with a Pike, and they will flie from you not past two or three yards, and there will lie still againe: you may wade after them at your pleafure. I weighed one of them, because they were bigger then euer I saw, and it Anexcellent weighed fine and twentie pounds, and they are the sweetest fish that can be eaten. I thinke it is place for reso good a place as the world can affoord for refreshing, beeing also without people.

A point of

A fine Riner.

Aprill 1613.

28.degres, 47. great: ft ati-

They are to the West of Сарс ас Виона

The third of Inne. The fight bethree Hollanders and two vp and unke

The first of Aprill 1613. we went away, and bearing about the North-east point, all the North file of the Ile was fine low land, and full of trees, more pleasant in fight then the Southfide. The second, latitude twentie degrees fiftie eight minutes. The llebare South-east by East Variation deg fome five leagues off: Note that we law no dangers about the lle, but the shore it selfe. At fixe of the clocke at night, the South-west point was off vs South-east by East, variation twenty two degrees fortie eight minutes.

The first of May, latitude thirtie eight degrees fortie seuen minutes, which was the greatest latitule that wee euer raifed to the South-ward, wee fleered away West North-west. The eleuenth at noone, latitude thirty three degrees fiftie eight minutes, by which observation I found a Northerly Current, and found my felte to the West-ward of Cape de Buona Esperanza.

The first of June, all these thips, the Salomon and foure great Hollanders departed from the Road of Saint Helena. But within foure houres after they were gone, there came about the point two great Carackes, the other ships being still in fight; we having most part of our Companie ashoare sicke, I fent the Boat on shoare, having not about ten men aboord: so therecame as many as were able, some of our soundest men being up in the Mountaines. When the Boat was come aboord, we cut cur Cables in the haufe and droue away, fetting fayle as fast as we were able, being in all but fixe and twentie men; having left behind vs ficke and found five and twentie men of our owne Companie, and one Indian, with all our water Caske, and divers other things for the vie of our licke men were left on theare. So haftening toward the Hollanders, and making fignes for their stay, and within night comming up with the A mirall of the Hollanders, 20 and telling him of this newes, hee was very glad, and defired to make faile for the Road againe. and made fignes to his Fleet to follow, and is stood for the Road as wind would ferue. But in the morning his biggeit flip both of force and burthen was milling, with the Salomon of London Yet his three ships and we plyed it vp for the Roade, and gat in the third day at noone. The Admirall of the Hollanders went first in, and anchored on the Broad-side of the Admirall Caracke. He veered fo much Cable before hee brought up his ship, that his sterne hung by the galleries of the Caracke: but with his two therne pieces lying very low, and his quarter Peeces hee so galled the Caracke, that he put her from two peeces of Ordnance, and might have funke her, if they had not been too conctous, having defire to carrie both. The next came the Bantam, and anchored in fuch fort, that the had her Broad, the vpon the Bow of the fame Carocke, and so racked her afore and out, that it much cooled the Portugals courage. Then came the white Lion, whereof one Simons was Captaine, and laid her thwart the haufe, and fo tare her that a man might fee all the Sea wash into her betweene wind and water, and withall cut her Cables, and so she droue off from the white Lion, and had driven on thoate, but that the Vice-Admirall Caracke had a Carle fast on thoare : and so the Caracke lying in the byte of this Cable, in time got another Cable and Anchor readie, and to brought her vp againe, though long first. Then the white Live making way to veere aboord againe, with a generall confent that all three ships should lay her aboord : the white Lim falling with her Broad-fide along the Vice-Admirall Carack, let flye her whole Broad-fide, and likewife the Carack at her. But fill vering to get aboord the Admirall Caracke, his men full plying his lower Ordnance vpon the Vice-Admirall, one of his Peeces brake 40 ouer his Powder Roome, as tome thought, and the shippe blew up all to pieces, the after part of her, and fo lunke prefently. In the time of this fight eleven of our men came out of the Mountaines: whom wee chying fetched from the sheare, out of the Bay to the East-ward of the chappell, leaning on shore afteene of our Companie, one being an Indian. In the white Lion were Henrie Bacon, and Henrie Teddiman blowne vp, & nine and fortie of the Hollanders. Then the Admirall, whereof John Derickson Lambe was Captaine, feeing his forces to much weakened, him, felre having two of his Preces difmounced, with many of his men killed and hurt, and we being of small force, thought it belt to leave them, for want of helpe, promising to turnish vs with

The third of June, loofing one after another, and changing a few flot with the Carackes, we

The eighteenth of July in the morning, we met with many weeds, and a small long leafe with white Berries of the bignesse of a corne of Pepper. The Master of the Carauell abound the Hollanders reported that farther Westerly the Sea is so thicke with these kind of weeds, that they hinder a thips way. They call it The Sea of Graffe. Hee affirmed that in former Voyages he had beene in it. The nineteenth, we croffed the Tropicke of Cancer.

DENGLISH VOYAGES BE-YOND THE EASTINDIES, TO THE ILANDS OF IAPAN, CHINA, CAVCHIN-

CHINA, THE PHILIPINE WITH OTHERS, AND THE INDIAN NAVIGATIONS FVRTHER PROSECVIED.

Their iust Commerce, nobly vindicated against Turkish Treachery, victoriously defended against Portugall Hostility, gloriously advanced against Moorish and Ethnike Perfidie; hopefully recouring from Dutch Malignitie . iustly maintayned against ignorant and malicious Calumnie.

THE FOURTH BOOKE.

Hauing brought to light (rather as a Midwife, the fruit of Others Trauels then mine owne as a Parent) the imperfect untimely Births of Other Englishmen, and that more mature, well complexioned, strong limmed, and (if Genethliacall coniectures faile not) hopefully promising Riches, Honour, Happie Successe and Long-life, of the 40 Eaft-Indian Societie; which we have also in a Scenicall Historie, or an Historicall Scene, (the Actors being the Authors , and the Authours themselves the Actors of their owne Parts, Artes, Acts, Defignes) brought from the Cradle to the Saddle, from weaker Infancie of first beginnings to the happie Progresse and growth of youthfull vigour and courage: I made a stand, and, in the mids of our Indian Course, finished the former Booke; that as after a long afcent of some steeper Hill, Men take breath, and review with delight, that which with irkesome labour and wearie steps they have passed; or like the Land-traueller resting in his Inne, or the Weather-beaten Mariner refreshing, himselfe in some mid way Harbour (which heere you see our Indian Nauigators doe in Soldania, or at Saint Helena.) You might also after that stay beginne a fiest Career, with revined firits, and renewed alacrtie, refume this Booke-Voyage, and Reading Nauigation. So may your Mindes in few houres and a fafe course, without feare of Rockes, Sands, Winds, Stormes of unseasonable Monsons, unreasonable Men (Fugitiues, Traytors, Pyrates, false Friends, open Foes) of an ill Market, hard Customes. or harsh accounts to be given at last; communicate in that, which These with so long labours, and so perillous dangers, have done and suffered.

And here first we prefent unto you, the East Indies made Westerly by the Illustrious Voyage of Captaine IO HN SKRIS, who having spent some yeares before in the Indies, by Ob-Servations to rectific Experience, and by Experience to prepare for higher Attempts, hath heere left the knowne Coasts of Europe, compassed those more waknowne of Afrike from the Atlantike to the Erythraan Sea, and after Commerce there (tam Marie, quam Mercurio) compasseth the Shoares, and pierceth the Seas, to and beyond all instrumes of Indian and Alia, penetrating by along journey the Ilands, Cities, Court of the laponian Empires there fetleth an English Factorie, and after fafe returne, it readie to render thee the pleafure of his paine, and (why flag I thee any longer?) by a more pleasant Discoursive way, to discouer to thee the Karities of that Discouerie; and by hand, by the Eyes to lead thee along # with him all the way : and then leave thee to those that shall tell thee after Accidents and later Occurents in the Iaponian, Indian and Alian Affaires.

CHAP.I. S.I.

CHAP. I.

The eighth Voyage fet forth by the East-Indian Societie, wherein were implosed three Ships, the Cloue, the Hector, and the Thomas, under the Command of Captaine IOHN SARIS: His Course and Acts to and in the Red Sea, Iaua, Molucca's, and Iapan (by the Inhabitants called Neffoon, where also be first began and settled an English Trade and Factorie ) with other remarkable Rarities, collected out of his owne Iournall.

Their sayling about Africa, visiting diners Ilands thereof, and comming to Socatora.

Aprill 18.1811

He eighteenth of Aprill 1611. Wee fet faile out of the Downer. The fixth of Iune following, we passed the Equincetial Line.

The first of August 1611. we arrived in the Bay of Soldania, where having well refreshed our selves the space of eight dayes, the ninth of August in the morning we weighed Anchor, and about foure in the after-noone were fine leagues off the Cape Buona Esperanza.

The second of September, of latitude twentie foure degrees, twentie one minutes, way East by North Northerly fixe leagues. Nota, That fince our comming from Cape Buona 40 Esperanze, We found no Monsons of West-winds, (as hath beene reported) but to the contrarie, did find North Easterly, South Eafterly and Eafterly winds with extreame Stormes, Raine, Thunder and Lightening:

yet at that prefent very faire and so hot that calines were to bee doubted. The third, latitude twentie three degrees, fiftie minutes, way South by West twentie three leagnes wind at South.

The Bay of S. Augustine in the HenfSaint

A Prong cur-

About fine at night we made land being the lland of Madagascar, otherwise called Saint Laurence, the Bay of Saint Augustine bearing East by North about fixe leagues off. And then Recred away North North-east, variation at Sun-fetting fifteene degrees, eleuen minutes Westerly. We founded, but had no ground at one hundred fathome. The land not very high, but Sandie. And 50 then we passed the Tropicke of Capricorne, to the North-ward.

The teach of September, latitude seuenteene degrees, three minutes, way North-west twelve leagues, wind at North-east: we steered North North-west, variation at Sun-rising thirteene degrees, fiftie foure minutes Westerly. Heere wee found a strong Current setting South South-west; for these last source and twentie houres, shee could not have runne lesse then source and twentie lagues, having a stiffe gale: but for the reason aforesaid, in the evening we made the Itland Primeiras bearing West by North about foure leagues off.

The eleventh, latitude senenteene degrees, thirty three minutes way South by East halfea point Easterly tourteene leagues, the wind at Noth-east, and North-east by East, a storme.

Note that having flood but one watch and an halte to the East-wards, the Current did carry 60 vs there minutes to the Southwards of the latitude we were in, by the last observation; then we flood in for the land North North-west, hoping of a better wind neare the shoare with lesse current, an Middenly the water changed, but we could find no ground at an hundred fathom. In the euening we made the land bearing North, and North by West about fixe leagues off, finding is to be the Islands Primeiras, but being to the Northward of it, it shewed somewhat longer then Illus Primeira before, for it did beare from the North-west to the North of vs; wee founded and had twentie fathom small gliftering fand; and founding againe, had twentie fathom blacke Ozie, with black shels. Then we stood off to the Eastward, the storme continuing with more wind in the night, then in the day; and having food off one glasse, we sounded and had two and twenty fathome. gray land and shels.

The twelfth, latitude eighteene degrees feuenteene minutes, way South-east by East eight and twentie leagues, wind at North-east, a storme : so that these last twenty foure houres we were carryed by the force of the Current forty foure minutes to the Southward of the former obserto nation, variation fourteene degrees, one and forty minutes Westerly. About night the wind veered to East North-east, so that we lay North with the sterne.

The thirteenth, latitude nineteene degrees, fixteene minutes, way South-east by South, two and twentie leagues, wind North-east by East little wind, the Current very strong against vs.

The fifteenth, latitude fixteene degrees, fix and forty minutes, way North North-east, halfe a point Easterly thirty leagues, wind South-west, wee steered North-east by North. Noce heere we found not the Current fo forcible, for we have deprest the Pole one degree, feuen and twenty minutes these foure and twentie houres. The reason wee supposed to bee that the Island Nous, was betweene vs and the Current, for we made account it did beare East by North eighteene leagues off, variation at Sun-fetting twelve degrees, eight minutes Westerly.

The fixteenth, latitude fixteene degrees not nine minutes, way North North-east eighteene leagues, we steered North-east by North, wind South-west by South, little wind, but astrong Current, variation at Sun-rising thirteene degrees, not three minutes Westerly.

The fenenteenth, the ships way North by West eight leagues, variation twelve degrees one minute Westerly : in the morning we made the land to the Southward of McCambique, making it to be the Illands de Angoxa, bearing West South-wit feuen leagues. The Westermost part of The Islands d the faid Islands feeming whitish. The maine to the Northward bearing North by East, imooth August. champion ground : weiteered North-eaft by Eaft, and towards euening we faw the land trenting to the Northward, feeming to the Seaward to be full of trees; here we found the Current to fet North North-west, for we could perceive by the land that we ran very fast to the Northward, and having little wind, wee founded often, but could not find ground at an hundred fathome.

The nineteenth, latitude fifteene degrees, twentie nine minutes, way South by East foure leagues, wind at East South-east, we fleered North-east, but by extremitie of the Current, wee were carryed to the Southward. So that wee were heere ten dayes, and could not get to the Current to the Northward; notwithstanding we had a faire and reasonable stiffe gale. The one and twentieth, latitude fixteene degrees, twentie minutes, way South by West foure leagues, wind North-east, and North-east by East, little wind: in the morning wee were neare the Northermost of the Islands de Angonas, bearing West by North about three leagues off.

And to windward of vs, we espied a very dangerous shoale, lying East off the North part of the Avery dangemain, at the least three points into the sea, having a drie splat of white sand betweene it and the Tous shoald, maine: We founded and had ground at thirtie fathom, red ftones like Corall, with gray fand and shells, we stood off, it being a lee-shoare and Westerly Current. And finding by our skitte, which was fent off, that the Current did fet exceeding flrongly to the South-west by West, and such vncertaine thooling, we flood off for Saint Laurence. Note that these Islands de Augonas (which are many) doe fland in the plat in fifteene degrees, fortie minutes, and we find them in fixteene degrees, twentie minutes to the Southward of the Equinoctiall, variation thirteene degrees, no twentie minutes are minutes Wefferly.

The two and twentieth, latitude feuenteene degrees fiue minutes, way South South-east eighteene leagues, wind North-east, and in foure and twentie houres that we parted from the land, we loft no degrees, fortie fine minutes. But towards enening the wind came to the South-east, and South-east by South; we fleered North-east, and North-east by east, and East North-east for the Island Saint Laurence, looking out for Iuan de noua, which Hugen van Linschoten, willeth to beware of, and not to come neare it in a small Moone; notwithstanding wee were inforced to put our felues in hazard to get out of this Current and dangerous place, variation at Sun-feeting twelue degrees, fortie foure minutes Westerly.

The three and ewentieth, latitude fixteene degrees, foure and twentie minutes, way Northeast, two and twentie leagues, wind at South South-west, we steered East North-east, to rid vs of the Current, having deprets the Pole thefe last foure and twentie houres, no degrees, one and fortie minutes, variation at Sun-fetting thirteene degrees, fixteene minutes Westerly.

The foure and twentieth, latitude fixteene degrees, fixteene minutes, way East North-east tenleagues, wind at South-west, and South South-east, till eight in the morning, it came then Land vicence to the North, and North by East, little wind. In the morning at breake of day (to our great ad- cel neare it an miration) wee faw land to the Weltward, bearing North by West fine leagues off, not once loo- de Nous.

No:c.

and Alia, penetrating by a long journey the Ilands, Cities, Court of the laponian Empires there (etleth an English Factorie, and after fafe returne, is readie to render thee the pleafure of his paine, and (why flag I thee any longer?) by a more pleasant Discoursine way to discouer to thee the Rarities of that Discouerie; and by hand, by the Eyes to lead thee alonost with him all the way : and then leave thee to those that shall tell thee after Accidents and later Occurents in the Iaponian, Indian and Alian Affaires.

CHAP. I.

The eighth Voyage fet forth by the East-Indian Societie, wherein were implosed three Ships, the Cloue, the Hector, and the Thomas, under the Command of Captaine IOHN SARIS: His Course and Acts to and in the Red Sea, Iaua, Molucca's, and Iapan (by the Inhabitants called Neffoon, where also be first began and settled an English Trade and Factorie ) with other remarkable Rarities, collected out of his owne Iournall.

Their sayling about Africa, visiting diners Ilands thereof, and comming to Socatora.

He eighteenth of Aprill 1611. Wee fet faile out of the Downer. The fixth of Iune following, we paffed the Equinc chall Line.

The first of August 1611. we arrived in the Bay of Soldania, where having well refreshed our selves the space of eight dayes, the ninth of August in the morning we weighed Anchor, and about foure in the after-noone were fine leagues off the Cape Buona Esperanza.

The second of September, of latitude twentie foure degrees, twentie one minutes, way East by North Northerly fixe leagues. Nota, That fince our comming from Cape Buona 40 Esperanze, We found no Monsons of West-winds, (as hath beene reported) but to the contrarie, did find North Easterly, South Eafterly and Eafterly winds with extreame Stormes, Raine, Thunder and Lightening: yet at that present very faire and so hot that calmes were to bee doubted.

The third, latitude twentie three degrees, fiftie minutes, way South by West twentie three

The Bay of S. the He of Saint

About fine at night we made land being the lland of Madagascar, otherwise called Saint Laurence, the Bay of Saint Augustine bearing East by North about fixe leagues off. And then steered away North North-east, variation at Sun-letting fifteene degrees, eleuen minutes Welterly. We founded, but had no ground at one hundred fathome. The land not very high, but Sandie. And 50 then we passed the Tropicke of Capricorne, to the North-ward.

A frong cur-

The teath of September, latitude seuenteene degrees, three minutes, way North-west twelve leagues, wind at North-east: we steered North North-west, variation at Sun-rising thirteene degrees, liftie foure minutes Weiterly. Heere wee found a strong Current setting South South-west; for these last source and twentie houres, shee could not have runne lesse then source and twentie leagues, having a fliffe gale : but for the reason aforesaid, in the evening we made the Itland Primeiras bearing West by North about four e leagues off. The eleventh, latitude feventeene degrees, thirty three minutes way South by East halfea point Easterly tourteene leagues, the wind at Noth-east, and North-east by East, a storme.

Note that having flood but one watch and an halfe to the East-wards, the Current did carry 60 vs thirtie minutes to the Southwards of the latitude we were in, by the last observation: then we flood in for the land North North-west, hoping of a better wind neare the shoare with lesse current, an Middenly the water changed, but we could find no ground at an hundred fathom. In the euening we made the land bearing North, and North by West about fixe leagues off, finding is to be the Islands Primeiras, but being to the Northward of it, it shewed somewhat longer then Ilbas Primeiras, hefore, for it did beare from the North-west to the North of vs; wee sounded and had twentie fathom imall gliftering fand; and founding againe, had twentie fathom blacke Ozie, with black shels. Then we stood off to the Eastward, the storme continuing with more wind in the night, then in the day; and having flood off one glasse, we sounded and had two and twenty fathome.

CHAP.I. S.I. - English Voyages to the East-Indies.

The twelfth latitude eighteene degrees feuenteene minutes, way South-east by East eight and twentie leagues, wind at North-east, a storme : fo that these last twenty foure houres we were carryed by the force of the Current forty foure minutes to the Southward of the former obserto nation, variation fourteene degrees, one and forty minutes Welterly. About night the wind ve red to East North-east, so that we lay North with the sterne.

The thirteenth, latitude nineteene degrees, fixteene minutes, way South-east by South, two and twentie leagues, wind North-eaft by East little wind, the Current very strong against vs.

The fitteenth, latitude fixteene degrees, fix and forty minutes, way North North-east, halfe a point Easterly thirty leagues, wind South-west, wee steered North-east by North. Note heere we found not the Current fo forcible, for we have deprest the Pole one degree, feuen and twenty minutes thefe foure and twentie houres. The reason wee supposed to bee that the Island Inan de Noua, was betweene vs and the Current, for we made account it did beare East by North eightrene leagues off, variation at Sun-fetting twelve degrees, eight minutes Welterly.

The fixteenth, latitude fixteene degrees not nine minutes, way North North-east eighteene E leagues, we steered North-east by North, wind South-west by South, little wind, but a strong Current, variation at Sun-rifing thirteene degrees, not three minutes Westerly.

The fenenteenth, the fhips way North by West eight leagues, variation twelve degrees one minute Westerly : in the morning we made the land to the Southward of McCambique, making it to be the Islands de Angoxa, bearing West South-wit seuen leagues. The Westermost part of The Islands de the faid Islands feeming whitish. The maine to the Northward bearing North by East, imooth Agent. champion ground : westeered North-east by East, and towards evening we saw the land trenting to the Northward, feeming to the Seaward to be full of trees; here we found the Current to fet North North-west, for we could perceive by the land that we ran very fast to the Northward, and having little wind, wee founded often, but could not find ground at an hundred fathome.

20

The nineteenth, latitude fifteene degrees, twentie nine minutes, way South by East foure leagues, wind at East South-east, we steered North-east, but by extremitie of the Current, wee An extreme were carryed to the Southward. So that wee were heere ten dayes, and could not get to the Current to the Northward; notwithstanding we had a faire and reasonable stiffe gale.

The one and twentieth, latitude fixteene degrees, twentie minutes, way South by West foure leagues, wind North-east, and North-east by East, little wind: in the morning wee were neare the Northermost of the Islands de Angonas, bearing West by North about three leagues off. And to windward of vs, we espied a very dangerous shoale, lying East off the North part of the A very dangemain, at the least three points into the sea, having a drie splat of white fand betweene it and the rous shoald, maine: We founded and had ground at thirtie fathom, red stones like Corall, with gray fand and shells, we stood off, it being a lee-shoare and Westerly Current. And finding by our skiffe, which was feat off, that the Current did fet exceeding firongly to the South-west by West, and such vncertaine shooling, we stood off for Saint Laurence. Note that these Islands de Angonas (which The Isles de are many) doe stand in the plat in fifteene degrees, fortie minutes, and we find them in fixteene degrees, degrees, twentie minutes to the Southward of the Equinoctiall, variation thirteene degrees, no twentie mi-

The two and twentieth, latitude feuenteene degrees fine minutes, way South South-eafteighteene leagues, wind North-east, and in foure and twentie houres that we parted from the land, we loft no degrees, fortie fine minutes. But towards evening the wind came to the South-east. and South-east by South; we fleered North-east, and North-east by east, and East North-east for the Island Saint Laurence, looking out for Iuan de noua, which Hugen van Linschoten, willeth to beware of, and not to come neare it in a small Moone; notwithstanding wee were inforced to put our felues in inzard to get out of this Current and dangerous place, variation at Sun-fetting twelve degrees, fortie foure minutes Westerly.

The three and twentieth, latitude fixteene degrees, foure and twentie minutes, way Northeast, two and twentie leagues, wind at South South-west, we steered East North-east, to rid vs of the Current, having deprets the Pole thefe last foure and twentie houres, no degrees, one and fortic minutes, variation at Sun-ferting thirteene degrees, fixteen e minutes Westerly.

The foure and twentieth, latitude fixteene degrees, fixteene minutes, way East North-east ten leagues, wind at South-weft, and South South-caft, till eight in the morning, it came then Land vacance to the North, and North by East, little wind. In the morning at breake of day (to our great ad- ce ineare in as miration) wee faw land to the Westward, bearing North by West fine leagues off, not once loo- de Nout.

No:c.

Lind viexpe- king for any that way, but to the Eastward for I uan de noua, which we made account could not ded neere hade be about fixe leagues South from vs, and being be-calmed, did doubt least the Current would fee vs vpon it in the night: but the day clearing, we found it to be the Northermost Hand of the Angonas, whence we departed the one and twentieth, ditto in the atternoone, which so amazed our Marriners, as that they were discouraged of getting our Voyage this way. The reason of this difference was (as we supposed) by a Counter current, which certainely in the small of the Moon doth fet East North-east, and West South-West, from the Plabella or point of the shoare. which lieth North-east by East off the Northermost part of Inan de nona, which meeting with our auncient enemie the North North-east Current, hath thus violently put vs ouer to the Westwards, notwithstanding we have had a tresh gale and faire wind, vntill this morning that it fell lo calme. Note, that if there be any such lland as luan de noua, it lies not so farre to the West-ward,

the Pertuga's.

as Daniels plots make mention, but itan is neerer the maine Hand, otherwise we must of necessity tie have teene it. They of the fourth Voyage in the Afcension, made accompt that they passed to the East-wards of it, and S. Laurence, which thing the Portugals hold impossible, faying, that it flands fo neere the maine Iland, as that there is no passage but a little channell, which once one of their thips was inforced to put through, and fince nor afore they have not heard of any to have done the like. Wherefore it was held amongst vs to be but a cunning of the Portugals, to place fuch an lland fo farre to the Well-ward, to the end that fuch as shall faile this way, being not fo well experienced as themselues, might (giuing it a birth ) fall into this extreame Current which we certainely found to fet more Westerly then North-East, and South-west. Wherefore 20 it is necessary for all fuch as shall be bound this way, to be upon the Coast of S. Laurence by the first of lune, and from the Cape S. Augustine, vntill they come into twelle degrees no minutes. to keepe up to the East-ward, and not to make their way to the West of the North, or North by West, for feare of the South-west Carrent, which with calmes, and foureteene degrees two minutes variation Westerly, will perforce set them over vpon the Coast of Soffala. And most certaine it is, that in August and September, you shall find very violent North-west winds, so that if yee would fland it ouer for & Laurence, you shall not fetch it without great danger of the shoulds of India, (the Current taking you on the broad side:) I meane, if you bee to the North of the faid shoal is, neither can you stop voon the maine to keepe your Latitude, for it is broken ground, and very deepe water.

The third of October we came to an anchor (after much trouble by Currents) betweene Sof-

fala and Mofambique, in thirteene and four-teene fathome: Latitude fixteene degrees thirty two minutes : Longitude feuentie fixe degrees tenne minutes : Variation eleuen degrees fiftie minutes Westerly. We anchored under an Hand neere unto the maine, upon which wee neither found people nor fresh water, though we digged very deepe in the land. The tenth, wee weighed, the wind at South South-weft, and stood ouer East by North for S. Laurence, hoping thereby to get out of these Currents. Thus were we toffed to and fro with variable winds, and still troubled with the Current comming out of the North-east, vntill the twentie fixth, wee came to an anchor vnder Moyella, which is one of the llands of Comora, Latitude twelve degrees thirteene hadrefreshing, minutes, to the Southward of the Equinoctiall, where we refreshed our selues eight dayes procuring Bullocks, Goates, Hennes, Limons, Cocos, Pines, Papanes, Plantans, Pomgranates, Sugar canes, Tammarin hennes, Rice, Milke, Rootes, Egges and Fish, in exchange of imall Haberdashery wares, and some money, and had here kind viage and great store of fresh water, the rather for that we flood still upon our guard. I inuited the King of Moyella beeing a Mahometan aboord the Clone, and intertained him with a noyle of Trumpets, and a confort of Mulique, with a Banket, which he refused to eate of because it was then his Lent, which amough them is called Rammadon, but hee took away with him the best of the Banket to carrie to the Queene his Mother, faving, they would eate it when the Sinne was downe. The Queenes name was Sultanna Marmangalla. The Kings name was Sariffoo Booboocarree. He requested the Generall to leave him a letter in his commendations to those that should happen hereafter to come thither, wherby they might understand of his honest dealing with vs. The like letter he had procured from Stephen Verhaghen, Admirall of twelve Holland thip, who arrived there in the yeare 1604, which he delivered vinto our Generall, who gave him the like, with this caution in the end thereof, that they should not give too great credit to them, but stand upon their guard, for that oftentimes weapons continue peace. The Inhabitants here are Negroes, with short curled haire, and Pintados about their middles, fo ne wearing white caps, others turbants, by which we knew they were Mahometans. The King himfelfe wasapparrelled in a white Cotten coate, a Turbaht v pon his head, and a Guzerate Pintado about his middle: he was little whiter then the ordinary people, who are blacke: hee was leane, he had a round thinne blacke beard, great eyes, of a low stature, and of very few words; he could speake a little Arabique, which he had learned in his Pilgrimage to Mecca, from whence he had the name of Sheriffe. Here they defire money (where'y we understand Spanish Rialls of eight ) rather then commoditie. But for Crimson broad Cloath, Red sculd Caps, Cambaya cloaths, and Sword blades, you may have any thing the Iland affoords, which serueth onely for refreshing, and no way for merchandizing. He gaue the Generall a note under his hand of friendship, which beeing not long, I have here inferted.

CHAP.I.S.I. The English mens Wage by the King of Moyela.

Sharefoo Boobackar King of the More a, his note vnder his hand for further friendship. 1611. written in A-

The fourth of November, we let faile from this Iland Moyella. The feuenteenth in the mor- November. 20 ming, we made the land being the maine of Melinde, the Bay or Gulfe called Formofa, bearing The maine North-west about four eleagues off. The land trending North-east South-west, wee had thirtie land of Melinde fathome, small gray sand and shels, wind at East North-east, we stood off South-East a stiffe gale, and a very great fea, which sheweth to be shoale water, and a Current which we found to fet alongit the shoare, North-east. Latitude two degrees tenne minutes, variation at Sanne-Setting twelve degrees thirtie one minuts Westerly. Note, this land lieth more Easterly then in our plats, otherwise we should not have fallen therewith so soone: for by our reckonings we were at least fortie eight leagues off.

The nine and twentieth, latitude foure degrees fortie foure minutes, variation seuenteene degrees thirtie foure minutes Weifterly, beeing as we supposed tweltue leagues off the shoales, called Bases de Malhma East by South, we had a great Ruppling, and ouer-fall of water, a sit it had beene shoal-water; but founding found no ground at an hundred fathome, the wind came about here to South Southeast, our course North-east.

The fift of December, Latitude three degrees fortie minutes, our way North North-east eight December, leagues, wind at North North-east, East, East South-east, and North East by North, little wind for the most part calme, and had a very fearefull rippling of the water, much like voto the fall at Fearefull Rip-London Bridge, beeing out of fight of land, and finding no ground at an hundred fathome: when ling of the was we flood into the land it left vs, but bearing oif, (beeing fiftie leagues from land ) we found very ter. terrible. Variation fixteene degrees fifteene minutes Westerly. The second, Latitude two degrees fittie fine minutes, way North-cast by North eighteeene leagues, wind variable, the Rippling 40 continuing, variation fifteene degrees fiftie feuen minutes Welterly, which mooued vs to thinke that wee had a Current setting to the West, the variation decreasing so suddenly. The third, Latitude foure degrees foure minutes, way South twentie three leagues, wind variable, most part calme, with great Rippling of the water, and a very strong Current Southerly, so that these last twentie foure houres, we are carried backe to the South-wards of our former latitude, one degreenine minutes. The fourth, latitude foure degrees thirtie three minutes, way South tenne leagues, little wind and variable betwixt the North-east, and East by South, very strange Rippling of the water, and fireng Current Southerly, variation eighteene degrees fortie foure minutes Westerly. The fifth, latitude foure degrees fiftie foure minutes, way South by East seauen leagues, wind variable, betwirt North-east by North, & East by South, the Rippling continuing 30 and Current Southerly, variation eighteene degrees clouen minutes Westerly at Sun-letting. The fixth, latitude fine degrees fine minutes, way South-east by East eighteene leagues, wind variable betwixt North-east by North, & North-east by East a gale, and at sometimes more searefull Ripplings of the water then before, yet could have no ground at an hundred fathome. These Ripplings thew like thelfes, and are not at all times alike, but formetimes more, formetimes lefte; but met with many times in a day, and make a noise by the ships side, as if she did runne fine leagues a Watch, when the doth scarce goe a head. We were much terrified there-with, the rather because wee could not imagine from whence it should proceed, seeing no land; but supposed our selues to bee amongst the Easter-most Islands, which he of the Northermost point of S. Laurence. Here wee had raine, thunder, lightning, and fulden guils which continued not long. The feuenth, way 60 East by South eighteene leagues, wind betwixt the North and North-cast, the Rippling still continued. The eighth, way North-east twenty two leagues, wind at South-west, and Southwest by West, with Rippling, but no ground at an hundred fathome: variation twenty degrees seuen minutes Westerly. The ninth, latitude foure degrees eighteen minutes, way North-east eighteen leagues, wind variable, little Current and no Rippling: variation twentie degrees fortie feauen

CHAP. 1. S.2.

They had paffed the Line a moneth and fine dayesbe-

Innuary 1. Magadoxa.

Cape Das

338

continual calmes, euer fince we came off the Maine, and the further off, the leffe wind. Variation twentie degrees, fittie feuen minutes Westerly. The five and twentieth: Note, it is a moneth and five dayes since we were in latitude no degrees, one minute to the Northward, close by the shoare : fince which time wee have been put backe into fine degrees, fine and twentie minutes to the Southward : wherefore those bound to Socators at this time of the yeere, must hold to the Eastward of Pemba two hundred leagues, East by North, the variation there encreasing Westerly, which will bring you the more Northerly : and fo keeping the Island Socatora open of you, betweene the North by East, and the North 10 North-east, you shall be in the greatest possibility to make the best vie of these winds, which neare to the maine we found to keepe betweene the East by North, and East by South a continuall gale : but off at Sea, about the Islands Mascharenas at North-east North, and sometimes at North-west West, and West by South, with calmes, riplings of the water very fearefull, thunder and lightning. And albeit the North-east and Northerly winds are but bare helpes, plying to the Northwards : yet this benefit you shall have, that by how much easterly you are, by so much the more you shall recouer to the Northward of the Line, before you meete with the Maine, which if you can au id, fee not in this time of the Easterly Monson, vntill you be full in the latitude of ten degrees, to the Northwards of the EquinoCtiall. But in the time of the Westerly Monton, keepe the sheare aboord, for it is very bold, but lyeth much more Easterly, then 20 minutes Westerly; heere we found it extreame hot. The tenth, latitude foure degrees, twelve minutes, way East North-east seuen leagues, wind from North-west by North, to Northeast by East, many times calme, with no ripling, nor Current Southerly. Note wee haue found

The first of Ianuary, latitude three degrees, fiftie eight minutes to the North-ward of the E. quinoctiall, heere we made land, being the Maine of Magadoxa, Cape Das Baxas bearing North North-east eight leagues off; the land low, sandie and barren, all alongst; the wind at Northeast and East by North, a stiffe gale, we stood off to the Eastward, way North by West twelve

The fecond day, latitude two degrees, one and thirtie minutes, way South-east by South five and thirtie leagues, much wind and Current Southerly, having deprest the Pole in these last foure and twentie houres, one degree, feuen and twentie minutes, whereof fixe and twentie leagues thee had runne by dead reckoning, and nine leagues thee was carried by the Current contrary to 30 expectation. The eighteenth, Lititude fixe degrees, feuen and twenty minutes to the Northward of the Equinoctiall, way North-well by North foure and twentie leagues, wind at Northeast, and North-east by East. About two of the clocke we made the land, being the maine, called Doara, the South-part bearing West, and the North-part, North-west by North about eight leagues off, feeming not very high, but fandie and barren, westood off with much wind, and a Current letting North-west, as we supposed; otherwise wee should have gotten further to the

Note, that although the variation holdeth little proportion, yet did we find by experience,

A notable

The Maine

land called

that in running to the Eastward wee have variation Wellerly increasing: and standing into the shoare North-west, our variation was Westerly decreasing: so that by reckoning according to 4 mag the Varias our plats, we found our felies much further off the land, then by just proofe by variation : which truely is a most certaine thing to bee credited; observation being taken by one of experience, with an exact inflrument, our to often falling with this maine, hath gained vs this knowledge, variation at Sun-rising seuenteene degrees, thirty sixe minutes Westerly, and at setting seuenteene degrees, twentie minutes Wefterly.

February 1. Gape Det fuit

The first of February, we made the land bearing North-east by North, about seuen leagues off: we founded, and had ground at twenty feuen and twenty eight fathom, foft fand : this Land is called Cape Dorfus, being very high and barren by the Sea-lide; many gufts.

The ninth, latitude ten degrees, thirtie feuen minutes, way West by North sixteene leagues, wind North-east by East: we had now fight againe of Cape Dorfuy, from whence we departed 50 the first day, contrary to our expectation, bearing North-west, about nine leagues off, having found a strong Current in the offing, fetting West North-west; which vntill meeting with this land againe, we dreamed not of, but rather thought we had been fortie fiue or fiftie leagues off, not once looking for the land, we founded and had fifty fathom fine small fand, about fine leagues e. : this land is high and full of mountaines.

The tenth, latitude elenen degrees, twentie minutes, way North-east by East, Easterly fixceene leagues, wind from East by North, to North-east, we founded and had ground at five and fortie fathom, small blacke fand, about eight leagues off the high land of Cape Guardafus, wee made triall of the Current with our Pinnaffe, and found it to fet North by East. Towards euening 60 del Juice. We had fight of the Island Abba del Curia, bearing East North-east about ten leagues off, being very high land, rifing in two parts like two Islands.

The fourteenth, latitude eleuen degrees, two and thirty minutes, wind North-east, and East North-east calme : heere we had fight of the Eastermost Irmana, seeming to the Eastward low land, about fixe leagues off.

The fitteenth, latitude eleuen degrees, seuen and twenty minutes, way East South-east sixe leagues, wind Eatt, East North-east, East South-east, and North-east calme for the most part, making account to be eight leagues off the Eastermost Irmana: But wee were mistaken; for it was Abba del Curia, and the Duas Irmanas did beare North-east of vs twelve leagues off, variation at Sun-letting feuenteene degrees, three and twenty minutes Westerly, and in the night the wind came faire to the South South-east, we lay East with the stemme, with helpe of a Current Easterly; contrary to the report of former Hauigants, and by breake of day, were were fixe leagues off the Westmost Irmana, bearing East South-east, and had fight of Socatora ten Socatora to leagues off. The fixteenth, latitude twelue degrees, nineteene minutes, variation at Sun-rifing feuenteene degrees, two and twentie minutes Westerly, wee bare vp and went about the Wester point of Securora: towards evening we had fight of the white Rock, which lyeth about foure leagues off the Westermost point of Socatora, the point and the Rocke, bearing one off the other North-west by North, and South-east by South, the said Rock looming like a saile, standing to the Eastward, larboord tacke aboord; and was so made for, by them of former Voyages. The Current still helping vs to the East-ward.

The entertainement of the English at Socatora.

The seventeenth, latitude twelve degrees, seven and fortie minutes, variation at Sun-setting feuenteene degrees, two and twentie minutes Welterly, wind variable, at South-east, and Southeast by South calme, but a strong Current setting along it the land, after we were about the We-20 ster point. This night wee came to an anchor, one league and an halfe to the Westward of the Kings Towne, called Tammarin, in twentie fathom water, distant from the shoare two miles: our shoulding in, after we had ground, was two and twentie, twenty, ninetrene, twenty, twentie, twentie, small white fand, the wind East South-east, and South-east calme.

The eighteenth, we came to an anchor in the Road of Tammarin, right before the Kings house, The Road of in nine fathom water, a league from the shoare, fine sandie ground.

∂. I I.

Occurrents at Socatora and in the Red-fea.

He Generall fent Master Richard Cockes, Cape Merchant, with the Skiffe well ap- Societa pointed vnto the King, to acquaint him what were were, and the cause of our com- This Letter ming, and to proude cattell and fresh victuall. Master Geeler returned, hauing been was a brief friendly entertained and seasted by the King, and the rest that went with him. They summed Sir brought a Present of fresh victuals from the King to the Generall, together with a Letter left town Middle there by Sir Henry Middleton, dated the first of September 1611. abound the Trades-Increase in unnures in the Deliba Road, in the Island of Socatora: the original our Generall kept, and returned the copie Red-Sea by 40 verbatim, for the future ships.

The nineteenth, They went in folemnest manner on shoare, where the King bid vs welcome, die, as in bis and feasted all the Company in his Royal maner, himself being richly vested in crimson Veluet, laid rich with gold-lace. His house was built of free-stone, Castle-like the had aboue an hundred with caucatte attendats, wherof about fifty were wel apparelled, according to the Moors falhion, the refl were all English, and naturalls of the Island. After many complements and curtefies, at night we took our leaue of him, nouce of the His name was Sultan Amur Benfaid, tonne to the King of Calbin vpon the Arablide, We paid Road Affab. heere for kine twelue Ryalls of eight the piece, sheepe three shillings the piece, and for Goats one Ryall of eight a piece, which though it be deare, yet are the most of them not mans meate, being fo vildely, and more then beatly buggered and abused by the people, as that it was most so lothlome to see, when they were opened. We paid for Rice three pence a pound, Dates three pence a pound, Hens twelue pence a piece, Tobacco feuen hundred leaues a Ryall of eight, Egges pence a piece. The King will take no English money, but all Ryalls of eight. The twenty feuenth, our General caused a meeting of his merchandizing Councel, vnto whom he read the Companies Remembrance, and the Letter received by the hands of the King of Socretora, from Sir Henry Middleton: and shewed them , That whereas he had been put in good hope by the Companies Remembrance, to have obtained good flore of Aloes heere at Socatora, which now he found frustrate, the King being wholly unprouided, and not able to furnish vs therewith vintill August: And whereas we were appointed to goe from hence to Aden and Moha in the Red-fea, (the Monfon not feruing for Surat) we were now vnterly diffwaded from the view of 60 those parts, by the treachery and wrong done to Sir Henry and his Fleet. And lastly, whereas if we did not goe for the Red-lea, if we should remaine heere in Delisha Road fixe monethes attending the Monson, wee should find it very chargeable, and be able to effect nothing, (for vntill the end of September, there is no comming upon the Coaft of Cambaya) his opinion was, that notwithflanding these bad tydings received from Sir Henry, yet that we should go for Moba, we having with vs the Grand Segniors Pade, which the former thips never had. For hereby wee should be able to certifie the Company what steat the Paste might stand them in, determining to flan lypon our guard, and not to aduenture any one man without good pledge, fo that wee might ride fecurely, and obtaine trade aboord, though none on floare, our force being able to defend and offend upon occasion, the greatest power that Port could raite. And finding no hope of Commerces then he intended to make vie of his Maielties Commission, in respect of the violence offered vnto Sir Henry and his Company, and fo enforce the putting off of our Englyb commodities or to make spoile of their Skale and Cuttome, by not permitting the Indian Spips, which were expected in the fit of March to enter there, which wo libe a matter of no fmall hinderance with them : but wat ill then hee would be very vinwilling to deale with them by force. To And this course he did the rather approone of, because heere needed no parting of company, but the Fleet might keepe together, and affigone as the Monion hould permit, goe toyntly together for Surat, according to the Companies order, their force, united the better to rehit whattiener the enemie should attempt. The Conseell generall affented to what he propounded; and foconcluded to keepe company together, and goe for the Red-fea.

CHAP. 1. S.2.

March 1.

The first of March, we weighed anchor, & set faile for the Redsca, the wind at S. E. and South. fometimes little wind. The winds fince we came to an anchor heere were in the mornings and To till night for the most part at North-east by East, and East North-east, and at night of the land between the South and South-east, faire and temperat weather: witil you come to foure fathom, where we might have rid a musket that off the there, & further in, is three & three fathom 20 and an halfe, it is book all the Bay along ft, keeping two Cables length off the land, faire fand, and fome flenes amongft : a demie-culuering will reach the Callle, which is of no force, Latitude Tanmain Bay, in Tanmarin Bay twelve degrees, fine and thirtie minutes to the North, variation eighteene degrees, two and force minutes Welterly. The King of Socatora gane countaile, that if we went to the Redfea, we should ply to the Southward of Abba del Curia, for that keeping on the northfile wee should teep it over to the Arabian sheare, and should not without great trouble fetch Cape Guardafin, to that Ly proofe we found it beilt to keepe the Abajb sheare abourd.

The fourth in the morning, wee faw Cape Guardafui bearing West eight or nine leagues off, we flecred in West North-west latitude two ue degrees one minute, the Cape South by West foure leagues off, no ground at an hundred fathom, the land high and fmooth, variation at Sun- 30 rifing, feuenteene degrees, foure and thirtie minutes Westerly. In the euening wee had ground, Mount Felicke flanding in alongst the land, to find the Bay of Felicke, our depth was twentie fixe, seuenteene and eighteen: fathome. Heere we relolated togo for Moba, and not for Aden, because Aden is a Towns of Garrison, and of Intele Trade, with other incommeniences, as exaction of cultome, &c. as appeared by the fixt Vovage. Here we took good flore of Mullets with our Sayne, other large excellent fish with lines and hookes. Heere are Gummes of feuerall forts very fweet in burning, of fweetgums allo fine Mats will requested at Aden and Moha, and the Indies: For ordinarily the Indian thips touch heere, both inward and outward, to buy thereof, and of the Gumnies: allo victuall, theepe and Butter; which is fare better cheape then at Moha, for daily Boats goe ouer laden with vi-& iall, to fell at Aien and Moha; but they will not barter for any thing but linnen cloath.

the Towns of

Note that at Felule Towne, there is wood and water to behad plentie, but not in the bottom of the Bay, the passage up to the Towne is so large, as that three thips may passe a brest without danger. The going in is betweene the high Homock and the low fan die point. The Mafters were willed to fleere from hence West by North, alongst the South-shoare to Demity, and then to fnape their course oner to Aden.

The ninth, latitude elesen degrees, fiftie eight minutes, way West face and twentie leagues, wind at Eaft and Eaft ov South, a fuffe Breefe all day, but at night little wind, keeping alongft the shoare about eight leagues off, we steered West by North, variation at Sun-rising fifteene degrees, ten minute: Wester.v. The tenth in the morning, fleering West by North, the wind Easterly, wee had fight of two 50 small Islands, lying off the high land of Demety about a league off the maine, distant one from the other four leagues, the Exflermost bearing South by West seuen leagues off, and the Westermost South-west, the same distance; we stood over for the high land of Aden North-west by North, and North-west, the wind at East, and East by North, a stiffe breese ; Easterly Current ; variation fifteene degrees, no minutes, Westerly, latitude eleuen degrees, fiftie eight minutes.

Two fmall Islands.

The eleventh we had ignt of the high land of Arabia making it to be the high-land of Darfina, bearing North by East, by the compasse eight leagues of latitude at noone thirteene degrees eleuen minutes, or variation at Sunne-rifing, rifteene degrees two minutes Westerly, having had a strong Easterly current comming ouer, for wee steered betweene the North North-west and North-well, and were so carryed to the East-ward that shee made but a North by West way, 60 contrarie to expectation, for had wee had no current, weeshould by course have guen her a North-welt way Westerly. But after we were shot in about some twelue leagues off the shoare, we found no current, the point or head-land of Aden breaking it off, as we supposed.

I fent certaine instructions in writing to Captaine Towerson and Master Danis, to be observed at our arrivall in the Roade of Moha for the better grace and countenancing of our action and afeguarding of our ships; having to doe with so treacherous a Nation.

Thetwelith, variation at Sunne-rifing foureteene degrees fine minutes Westerly in fight of the high-land of Aden, bearing West by South ten leagues off, We steered in West South-west, and at noone had latitude twelve degrees, fortie nine minutes about five leagues of. The South-

most point bearing South-west by West, we founded and had ground eighteen fatheme foft fand. The thirteenth, in the eneming fourteene leagues to the East-ward of the entrance into the ftraights, and to the West-ward of Aden sixteene leagues, we came to an anchor, in respective were not acquainted with the Coast, and finding the inconveniences afore-faid, keeping all day 10 within three or foure leagues off the shoare to the time wee anchored, our founding was fortie. thirtie eight, nine and twentie, eighteene, seuenteene, fixteene, fifteene, fixteene, seuenteene, nineteene, eighteene, nineteene fathome. Here wee let fall our anchor, fandie ground, the Wefter-most land we could see, bearing West by South Southerly, and the high-land to the Eastward. North North-east about foure or fine leagues off.

The foureteenth, in the morning we weighed, the wind at West by North, a small gale with ra ne, having had none till this prefent, thefe foure monethes. We fleered South-west by South asineere as we could lye for the Braights.

In the evening, effecting our felues to be off the straights, we shortned sayle and stood it off and in with a short fayle, keeeping our Leade all night, beeing eight or nine leagues off the 20 Mayne of Arabia, we stood off West by South, and had no ground at an hundred fathome.

The fifteenth, our course West by South Southerly fixe leagues, wind East South-east, the land which on the foureteenth about fixe at night did beare West by South ten leagues off, did now beare South-well by South foure leagues off. To the East-ward heere we had fight of three small Ilands or Hummockes bearing North North-west one league & an halfe, the greatest showing as if it had a Castle vpon it, beeing the Eastermost, heere is a current setting from the South-east.

And about noone opened the firaights, we fleered North North-east, the wind at East by South, then we steered North and North by East, having thirtie, eight and twentie, seven and twentie, eight and twentie, three and twentie, one and twentie, nineteene, eighteene, feuen-30 teene, fifteene, fixteene, ten, ten, twelue, ten, nine, feuen and nine, and when wee had opened the White-house which standeth on a fandy Bay on the star-board side of the entrance Northealt, and the rocke or low point on the fame fide East North-east, we had fixe and seven fathome fine blacke fand. Then we fleered North North-east vntill wee brought the rocke or low point East halfe a point Southerly, then North by West, latitude at noone twelve degrees, fiftie fix minutes; And keeping this course we had seven, fixe, fix and a halfe, and as wee went in the deeper water, foureteene, fifteene and fixteene fathome good ground, and at night didlet fall our anchor in fitteene and a halfe fathome blacke Ozie ground, diffant from the Arabian flicare three leagues, and from the Abelt shoare on the other-lide ten leagues faire cleere weather, so that we could fee from fide to fide, the wind at South South-east, little wind.

40 The fixteenth, in the morning we weighed, the wind at East South-east, wee steered North fice of the by West for Moba, and had eighteene, fixteene, fifteene fathome about soure leagues off the firaight. flicare. Then we fleered North and North by East, and had nine, ten, eight and seven fathome: but finding a sheale or banke, which lyeth to the South-east-ward of the Towne, wee steered North North-west keeping in eight, nine, seuen fathome, and edging to the Southward we had ten, eleuen, ten and a halfe, vertill we brought the Towne East by South Southerly of vs , and were in fine and a halfe fathome where we let fall our anchor, the Steeple or high Church standing in the Towne bearing East, and one league of the point to the South-ward South by East three leagues off. Nota, you must bring the high Church East Northeast Easterly, before you shall be cleered of the ilioale afore-said at your comming into the Roade: which is very dange- The shoale so rous, and where the Trades-Increase did let at least foure and twentie houres. But it shewes it whereon the felieby the colour of the water; here at entrie, wee had very much wind at South and South frequency South-east with a great Sca.

Not long after we were at ancher, the Gouernour sent off a poore old ilaue in a small Canoa. to know what was the cause of our comming. The Generall vied the poore man kindly : who of his owne accord told him that the English that lately were heere, were not well vied by Re-Regel Aga difgib Asa then Gouernour, whereupon he was cashiered, and that the Gouernour at the present placed, Ider As was called Ider sign, a Grecian by birth, a man very kinde to Strangers, and a great friend to galuccessor. Merchants. The Generall willed the Purfer to give the poore man two Rials of eight, and fo returned him to his Master, with answere that we were Englishmen, and friends to the Grand 6c Siemor, and would upon his fending of a worthy and fit man, acquaint him further with the Cause of our comming. Prefently after he sent off an Italian turned Moore, well clad, with the like message, and to know whether we had the Grand Signiors Pasic. The Generall told him hee had not only such a Passe, but likewise Letters from the Kings Maiestie of Great Britaine vinto the Baffia. The Italian defired to fee them. Which the Generall denyed, in respect hee held him a bale fellow, from Christian to turne Moore, but willed him to acquaint the Gouernour therewith, and that we were appointed in honour of the faid Passe to shoote off fiftie one Peeces of Ordnance at our arrivall heere in this Road, which he intended presently to doe. The Italian intreated that he might first gure his Master to understand thereof, which was granted, and the Purler willed to gue him the Rials of eight, and his Boate one, his name was Mustafa Trudgemun. The Ordnance shot out of each shippe was, The Close nineteene, Hellor leuenteene, Thomas fifteene Perces. The Towne answered with fine Peeces of excellent Ordnance, and two Gallies three a-piece. These Gallies were flout Gallies, of fine and twentie Oares on a fide, and well fitted, yards vp. The Captaines name whereof was Many, and the Captaines name of the Towne Mahumet-bey.

They could fee

342

The fenenteenth, the Generall received a prefent from the Governour Ider Aga, that is to 10 fay, three Bullockes, twentie Hens, two baskets of Plantens, and two of Limons, with many complements, defiring him to come ashore. He returned him a faire fowling Peece, and willed the Mellenger to tell him that hee deired to have a tufficient pledge from him for his fafe returne, (when he should come) for reasons not vnknowne to the Gouernour,

The Governour fent his Secretarie vnto the Generall with a Letter to know what answere he haiformerly returned him by Mustafa Trudgeman; for he having given him at much intreatie a Bottle of Winewas fo dranke therewith before he got to the Gouernour, as that he could not speake: which being certified by the Secretarie, on the eighteenth Master Cockes, and Bolton our Linguist were sent ashoare, to acquaint the Governour that the Generalls comming was to intreate Trade, and that whenfoeuer it pleased him to send a man of equall worth to remayne with 20 the ships, as a pledge for his safe returne, hee would in person come and wish him : and also tolet him to vinderitind that our Generall was not ignorant of the wrongs done by Regib Aga vn. to Sir Henry Middleton his Countrey-man and his Companie. But if we might now have quiet Trade, all matters passed should be forgotten, and we would treate with him of such our busin: He as th. G. and Signior had given vs sease, which we hoped should bee for all our goods. The Secretarie remayned aboord, pledge for Mafter Cockes an 1 Bolton; he did eate of our victuals, but had it dreffed by his owne people. At night they returned having beene well vied, featled, vefted in cloth of S. luer, and carryed vp and downe the Towne with Mulicke before them, to give the people to vindentand how welcome they were, as Master Cockes understood it. But at their comming away, they were brought into a house, and dis-robed of their Vefts. The Generall as- 30 ked the Secretarie whether it were ordinary and vivall with them to doe fo, he answered; Yes: he replyed that in no other part of Turkie the like was done, that ever he heard of. In the end the Secretarie was difinissed, and halfe a Violet Kersie giuen him: hee was very importunate to know whether the Generall were not of kinne vnto Sir Henrie Middleton. The like wasdemanded of Master Cockes by them ashore, fearing that hee was come to take reuenge of them.

The Letter written from his mouth is this.

 $\mathbf{R}$  lebt worthy and my effectmed good Friend, I have had conference with them you fent afteare, and have view them in the best fort our Country fallown doth afford, investing them with Robes, and conducting them backe with Musicke, that the Country people might take notice how you come and are received in Amitie. And if it be your pleasure to come ashore to me to morrow, I will give you the best entertaynment the place will affoord, with a true and upright heart, without quile or deceit, of will fend you ensectariment in passe or major and manufacture fitting, if it pleafe you to fend me word thereof by my secret view or any other pleage you shall efterme fitting, if it pleafe you to fend me word thereof by my Interprete, which is now about a your shape, the time row will have me send my pleage, and boure you meane to come ashoure. I have written yestermight to letter Basha, and it will bee some fourteene or fificene 50 dires before I have answere from bim. Tet in the meane-time if you please to send any of your people a-Spare to buy e ther fresh victuals, or any thing else the Countrey will affoord, they shall be welcome. At alfo to fill any thing they please without any molestation at all. And so expecting your answer, I cease from Moha, the fine and twentieth of Moharem, De 1021. de Mahomet.

> Dus Como bono Amico Aidar Aga Aga de Mucha.

CHAP.I.S.2. Manner of fealing at Moha, and forme of Indian poriting.

I have also divers Letters of Mamy Captaine of Mucha (Moha) or of the Gallies there, vnto the Generall, which to avoide prolimite, and because the substance is as the former, I omit. I have yet caused some of the Seales to be cut, and heere added for the raritie, being not in wax. but stampes of Inke, in forme as heere is expressed.

Likewife I have added a piece of a Letter in the Banian hand and Language (common in great part of the Indies) written from the Sabander in Moba, to Captaine Saris.

The twentieth, the Gouernour fent aboord, according to agreement the day before, Mahn- Generall Sans met Aga Admirall of the shoare, and Commander of the Roade for the Turkes Custome and An-landethat chorage, And Nasuffea grave old man, with two attendants proper men to remayne pledges for Moba. the Generall. So he went ashore with all the Merchants, the three Skiffes well fitted, and had one and fiftie Peeces of Ordnance shot out of the ships at parting. Hee was received at the landing place by the Captaine of the Gallies, and diners other principall men, with Waites, Drums, and other Municall Instruments playing before, and divers Peeces shot out of the Castle, the people following in fuch abundance, that we could hardly paffe. Having paffed two Guards of verie proper men well clad, we were brought into the Gouernours House, which is built all of Free-Rone, with very faire and large staires, and so were led into a roome spred with rich Carpets, at the upper end of the roome was a window made after the fashion of our Bay-windowes: where a Silke Quilt was spread upon the floore, and two Cushions of Cloth of Siluer, laid thereon, he was requested to fit downe. But presently the Gouernour came forth of another Chamber accompanied with fine or fixe persons richly apparelled, himselfe in a Gowne of Cloth of Silver, faced with rich Forre. He tooke the Generall by the hand, kift his owne hand, and put it to his head. Then he ledhim by the hand to the faid window, where they fate downe, and aftersome few complements, he delivered vnto the Governour our Kings Letter, which Matter Lockes did reade, and Bolton our Linguist interpreted to the Captaine of the Gallies, and hee to the Aga, which course hee held for state. After, he delivered him the Grand Signiors Passe, which he gaue to his Secretarie to reade, which done, he tooke it, kiff it, and layd it vpon his head without further cere nonie.

The Originall I have in my hands, and have caused a little of the beginning to be here expresfed, and therewith the forme of the Grand Signiors Scale, (a little contracted to come within the Page ) and heere, to give delight to the Curious Reader , annexed. All the larger strokes or lines are Gold, the rest Azure, with Red here and there beautif lly intermixed. After which followeth the same Letters Patent, for better Patencie, Englished out of the A-60 rabique.

The Great Turkes Letters Patents Englished.

OV that are My most Laudable, Fortunate, Wealthie, and great Vice-reys and Beoletocys, that are on the way from My most Happy and Imperiall Throne (both by Sea and Land) onto the Construct and Bounds of the Eatt-Indies: Owners of some part of Dignitie, and those onto whom belimgethe to give aids, helse, and siccow in Go us cause, and Mushimanical Resignon, apposition Emperium becieg. The Wealth and Greatnesse of moom less neominate or ener. Likewise very to yee My moft Luudabity and Vuinot Saniacq Beys, that are under the aboue named Begletin, ys, ornners, mab pe of finene greater Digenizes, that hole was whom belongeth destylluside and help it Go Da coule and Kelugue, yopa thee Emperount either citien in the Honour and Dignite of whom bee course continumg. And was yee, ddy moft Ludable Wife, and Previens I saffices of Feece, Indiges, and Miscolyre of suiges, that we make pe the Feecht of other (also Saniacqbeys, mofte Indigenous), saffice, and Words dat for an internal perfection of the Gas Saniacqbeys, mofte Indigenous, saffice, and words dat for an internal perfection of the Wortherife and Greatness of whose Dignites and Review of all One Naties and Suppose that formers own the face of the San Event by ree My laudable Capitanes, of the Giftles, Cities, and Townes: And onto yee worth and Lutable Custemers, dated to the San-ocasi, your Kiness, Windee, and all other parts of our Dominions, and toverness adiaceus. Pon light of this My moss Light and Imperial Commandement, in conformitie of your moss beaund duties, you spelal urife, and dis other finen and Reservence thereuesto.

Hereby jee Stall understand, that the Embassadour of the King of Great Brittanie that resideth in Our happie and most high Port, hath given vs to understand by his supplication; That for a sunch as some of bis Masters the King of Great Brittaine his subjects, have with great charge and labour, disconcred a Trade in the East-Indies, and withall understand of Wealth, we likelihood of Trade in some Parts of Our Dominions by the way to be had in their Passage to the find Livines, beeing therefore desirous to visit those places for the better enlarging of their faid Trade. To the ende that such men may in so good and laudable enterprises have all fanour, aide, and helpe (so farre as lawfully and conveniently may be graunted ) Hath 10 requested us in the Name of his faid Master the King of Great Brittaine, to vouch afe them our safe. conduct and recommendations. In conformitie of whose request, as also in regard We and our Predecessors, are and have beene for the space of many yeares in strict league and Amitie, with the afore-mentioned King of Great Brittaine, and the Subjects of that Kingd me, who long have had, and at this prefent have free Traffique and Trade in merchands sing in our Dimitions and Provinces through the Mediterranean Seas. Wee therefore doe command, and expressely charge yee all, and every of yee, our about mentioned Subjects and Officers, that yee will not only kindly and loungly intertaine and receive the fact Merchants and Subjects of Great Britaine, comming or passing through or by any of Our Dominions, especially intending to trade, to the Domaitons of Yemen, Aden, and Mohit, and the parts adiopning thereunto. Affifting and relieving them with all things needfull for themselves, their men and Ships: but also freely to 10 permit them by Land or by Sea, to goe or faile, outward and returning even as their occasions shall require. and to remaine in any of our Dominons, Countreys, or Cities, greating them fuch libertie of treffique, and Primiledges as feat be reasonable without giving or suffering any let or hinderance inverse, or molesta-and Printeleges as fall be reasonable without estime or suffering any set or brinderstace, insure, or mostlytims to be offered or done with them. Tea, yee food yeed wino them to be offered or because and Humanitie, as fall bee meet and connection to be yeelded wino bornel met sand frangers, we dust sit go long and laborous a Voyage. And if to be that We foal wordens that, that contrary to the supervised with the same of the same with the same of the same with the same of the same with the same wit

The Governour afterward tooke a Copie thereof, and returned it againe.

He told our Generall that he was welcome, defiring that what had formerly been past, touching Sir Henry Middleton, might not be remembred, for that the quarrell grew by two drunken men, and was by the then Gonernour rably followed, for which he was difplaced fine Moneths fince. And as concerning Trade, he could not permit any great matter, till he had direction from his Master lafer Basha of Sinan, whom he had written vnto, and would within tenne or twelve dayes returne an answer, earnestly intreating that he would permit his people to come on shoare 10 to buy what they wanted, and to fell finall matters, to the end that the Naturalls might fee that we were in peace and ametic together, and that what was past was forgotten. These his speethes made good what the General had formerly conceined, touching the doubt that the East-Indian thips wo: Id make of their comming in here, valeffe they vaderflood that wee were all friends; and their not comming in here, would bee a great hinderance to every Officer of this Port. Betides, we riding to neere the shoare (as we did of purpose) as that no laden ship could come in, but that the must perforce ride within call of vs, which did put them in the greater feare; whereby he reckoned him felie fire of Trade, either a shoare or aboutd the ships, and that keeping the Towne in this awe, he might the more boldly aduenture his skiffe and people to the shoare, to letch what cur ships wanted.

The Gouernour teatle, them very revally at a dinner, with all forts of will i fowle, Hennes, Goates, Mutten, Creame, Cufacts, diners made diffies, and Confections, all ferred in Veffels of Time (different from our Peweter) and make Goblet-fallion with feet, the diffies for placed the one you there're, that they cli track a yard high as we fate; and yet each diffi fit to bee dealt you me without remoone. The meate was all ferred up at once, and that before we fat down.

CHAP.I. S.3.

Our drinke was water simply, or elfe water boyled with an herbe called Canham therein, which is in talt somewhat bitter. We did sit crosse-legged vpon Carpets laid vpon the floare: for there they yied neither Tables nor Stooles. Dinner ended, he led the Generall into an inner Chamber, where he had fowre little hoyes that attended him; beeing his buggering boyes: there they two being fet upon a crimfon Veluet Carpet, the rest of the Chamber Hoare beeing spread with very rich Carpets, one of the boyes bearing a linnen napkin in his hand, did wher in two of the other, whereof the first had a silver Chaffing-dish with coales, the other brought a dish wherein were divers rich perfumes, viz. Amber-greece, Lignum Aloes, and others. The Governour requested the Generall to let the Boy couer his head close with the napkin; which done, the other Boy held the Chaffing-dish, with the perfumes put therein, under his head, that he might receive the fume which was very pleasant. After he had finished, the Gouernour and two other chiefe men about him did the like, being as it feemeth a ceremony much vied among them. Hauing conferred a while together, there came in three of the Boyes again. The one brought a Vest or Gowns of cloth of Gold, wrapped up in a case of Taffatie, died in Saffron to preserve the colour of the Gold, The other Boy had a Shash or Turbant striped all with Gold, and in length twenty two yards: the third a Damaskeen, or Turkish Sword, richly garnished with Silver and Gilt, both Hilt and Scabberd. The Gouernour himselfe did put the Vest vpon the General, & did girt the Damaskeen vnto his fide, telling him, That they were not prefents from himselfe, but commanded by the Grand Signior, who (as he faid) did bestow them, and intreated him to ride with the Cady, 20 (who is chiefe Iustice there) and the Captaine of the Gallies, about the Towne, that the people might take notice of the amitie and friendship that was betwixt vs. They brought a horse richly trapped, the mettall worke of the bridle all of Siluer: but he rather choic to goe on foot, that he might the better view the Towne, whereto they gaue confent, and so wee walked together about the Town, and having viewed a house wherein to have settled our Factory, I was brought to the house of the Captaine of the Gallies, where he had a costly barquet. And thus returning by the Gouernours house, he met him vpon the stayres, where againe earnestly intreating that the discourtesies offered Sir Henry might be forgotten, and that it might appeare by his often comming or fending his people a shoare, they tooke their leaues one of another. And so accompanied with a great traine of the best of the Towne, he returned aboord, where the shippes discharged 30 fifteene preces of Ordnance. The Turkes that remained pledges having divers Presents given them, were fent friendly on shoare, and had fifteene Peeces shot off at their parting

The one and twentieth, the Generall fent M. Cocks and others a shoare with a Present to the Gouernour, a case of Bottles fild with Rosa Solis, which he did earnestly desire the Generall to give him, and to fend it fo wrapped up, as that it might not be knowne what it was: likewife was fent two Vests of Violet broad cloth to his Eunuches. They had further directions given them to enquire a shoare what Customes were due in and out, the weights, measures, valuations of Coynes, prizes of Indicos, Callicoes, Cotton-yearne, and other Commodities fit for vs to lade. Also to procure the lewe to come aboord, who was in the Ascension at her cashing away, neere the Barre of Surat, and could give vs certaine intelligence of Sir Henries successe.

Note, that this Road of Moha is very open and dangerous, with very shoald water a mile off the Towne low land eucn with the Sea. At this prefent the wind South South-west a great florme, which caused such a Sea, as that we did send not lesse then seven feete, riding in five fathome; and the wind at West you have no succour. But the country people say, that in the time Extremitie of of those winds, which beginne in the fine of May, the extremitie of heate is such, as that it deads hearb, ginneth the wind, which maketh that feafon very contagious.

The thirtie one, the General understood from the Captaine of the Towne that yester-night late arryued the Messenger from the Grand Basha, with Letters to the Gouernour to this effect, That he should yeeld vs peaceable Trade, both on shoare, and with the Indian ships, as he would answer the contrary at his perill, and to let vs furnish our felues with what we wanted. He was 50 doubtfull of the certaintie of this pleafing newes, for that not halfe an houre before, M. Cockes had speech with the Gouernour, who spake of no such matter. The Captaine said, that the reafon of the Governours not speaking thereof, was, because here was a lelba bound for Mecca, and readie to depart, which he would not have to know, that the Basha had graunted vs trade, fearing least they should acquaint the Sheriffe at Mecca therewith, who by his Letters to the Grand Signior, might cause the graunt to be reuoked. But we rather thinke the Basha hath returned fome harsh answer, with direction to doe that vnto vs, which as yet he cannot effect, we being fo watchfull and wary ouer him, and therefore will not be knowne to have received answer from Sinan, till better bethinking. Note that Hoforoofe (one that clotely had fent a letter of M. Femelli, teflifying their treacherous viage here) did now fend word by our Linguist, That the Generall 60 should beware of comming a shoare himselfe, vnlesse he had good pledges as formerly, and then he might boldly come, but otherwise not to trust them, though the Gouernour should sweare vpon his Alearon: for they were fouldiers, and did not much respect cathes : and as hee heard, the newes that was come from the Basha did not tend to our Benefit: for that the Copy of the Grand Signiors passe was not as then come to the Bashaes hands: But then should be fully seene what would be done, which would be within fixe dayes.

The second of Aprill, 1612. the Carauan from Grand Capro in Egypt, arrived here in Moba. Aprill. The third, came into the Road two Indian ships, one of Chanl, the other of Cananor, their lading Caravin of Indicos, and Callicos, Pintados, Amber-greece, and Cotten-yarne, with at least foure hundred paffengers, who carried much wealth about them. We faluted them with nine Pecces of Ordnance out of our Fleet. They answered with three Chambers a Peece beeing all they had. The Generall sent the Skiffe, to enquire what newes upon the Coast of Surat. The Captaine fent word that there were three English ships trading there, but further could not tell. The Captaine of the Towne with fine chiefe lanifaries came aboord, beeing fent by the Gouernour, to let our Generall understand, that the Basha had written unto him to intreate and use us kindly, and to 10 permit vs peaceable Trade, defiring the Generall that hee would in person come a shoare the next morning, and he should further vnderstand. He craued parden, not forgetting Hosreofes admonition. But Captaine Tower son being desirous to goe a shoare, the Captaine was requefied to tell the Gouernour, that the Generall youn good pledge would the next morning fend his Brother vnto him, which was well liked of fo haung feafted the Captaine and his retineve, and given them divers Presents, they were sent a shoare, with twentie one Peeces of Ordnance at parting, which he fent word that he tooke so well, as that we should not want the best assistance he could doe vs.

The fourth in the morning, though the pledges were not yet come, yet desirous to see what the Basha had ordered, Captaine Towerson was sent a shoare: for we held the two Indian shippes which rid hard by vs, for lufficient pledge, if on shore any iniury should be offered. The Gourtnour vsed him friendly, and vested him to content, but nothing was effected of that hee went about, the Turkes not performing their promise. The Gouernour sent word, that it would be fitting to fend two of our men of good falhion vp to the Balha to Sinan, with the Kings Letter and Present, and then speedy dispatch would be had to our liking. Whereof the General approoued, intending the next day to lay out a Prefent for him.

The fifth, the Captaine of the Gallies fent abourd three letters, which the last night came to Three letters the Gouernours hands, from S. Henry Middleton, and Captaine Sharpeigh, who rid then at an an-from Sit Herry ther at Bab mandel. The effect whereof was, That he was come from Surat, and had little or Middle or Middl no Trade there. That Captaine Hawkins upon distast was come from Agra, and with his wife Capt. Sharpdigh to was aboord his ship. That he had brought all away from thence, except one man of Captaine Hamkins, which went ouer Land for England. And that he was come backe to bee revenged of the Turks, wishing our Generall to get his goods and people abourd with all speed. Hereupon he altered what yesternight was agreed vpon, and forthwith sent one of the Marchants away to Sir Henry with a letter of the proceedings of his Voyage, and of the manner of our entertainement here hitherto: that if he had not thus come in, he had on Monday fent two men of fashion up to

Note, the two Indian ships aforesaid, did discharge here these goods fellowing: Lignum Aloes Indian Merfixtie Kintals, Indico fixe hundred Churles out of both ships, Shashes of all forts great store, Cina. chandile. mon of Celon one hundred and fiftie Bahars, each Bahar three Churles and an halfe, Osfar which 40 is a red die, great quantitie, Cloues great store, Bastas or white Callicos from twentie to fortie Royals the Corge, (a Corge being twentie pieces) a great quantitie. The Price of Indico was from thirty to thirty fiue, fortie, and fiftie Rials the Churle.

The feuenth, the Generall writ to the Captaine of the Towne, that he should procure the Indian Merchants to barter with him at reasonable rates for such of their commodities as he should defire, and as might ferue to lade one of our ships, which doing would satisfie S. Henry of their now friendly meaning towards vs, and cause him to forbeare all hostile attempts.

At this present, there was a great rumour spread in the Towne, of a selba or two, which Sir Hony had taken (comming over from the Abel fide with victuall) in respect whereof, we durst fearcely aduenture our Skiffe and Ging a shoare.

The Generall received another letter from Captaine Manee, That the answer which the Gourmour had received from the Basha, was in these words; Ider Aga, Tou have writ me that three English ships are come to Moha, to trade in merchandise, with the Grand Signiors Passe: Gme them faibfull promise from me to come on shoare, to take a house until the Monson be past, to buy and sell. You bane likewise west me, that they will send up two men unto me give them all things fit for their towney, ce. Captaine Mamee did further write, that what our Generall would propound, the Aga and hee would underwrite. That for bartering, they would doe fomething for loue, but nothing by force, and were as willing to lade all the three ships as one.

Note, as we were informed, the weight here yield is called an Inen, which is two Rottalas, a Weights of Rottala is a pound of their weight: tenne Inens is twentie pound of theirs, which makes twenty Mona three pound English haberdepoize, iometimes foure and twentie pounds as the Weigher will befriend you. A Churle of Indicoby their weight is an hundred and fittie pound, and of ours betwixt an hundred and fixtie fixe, and an hundred and feuentic pound. Cotten wooll is fold by the Bahar, which is three hundred Rottalas, making betwixt three hundred thirty two pound, and three hundred forty foure pound English, at eighteen Royals the Bahar, very good & cleane. Their measure of length is called a Peeke, contaying feuen and twentie inches, or three quarters of our English yard. The ninth, the Gouernour fent off a Canoa to intreate me, that the Generall in the morning he would lend a hoare, and he should have both the Bashas answere, and a warrant to stay all such Ion kes as shall passe Sir Henrie, and force them to come in hither, and trade with them for such of their goods as he defired, &c. and that he would fuffer his people to come ashoare, because the Merchants were now growne fearefull, by reason of Sir Henries staying some of the ships.

The tenth, Mafter Cockes was fent alhoare, had conference with the Governour, and Captaine Many, who told him that they were now fully resolved, that what they had formerly promiled, they might not performe, the Cadie dishking thereof, saying, that they might hazard Io their owne lives thereby: That neither Merchant nor Broker would come abcord (as our General had requested) the Knight had so discontented them: That they of Grand Cairo had their Fa-Etors there, which lay purposely to ingrosse Indicoes , and other Indian Commodities, whereof they would not buy vntill they should see what quantitie would come : That the Bannians (or Indian Liegers afhoure) which have Indicoes in their hands, would not fell, hoping of a fearcitie: he also brought word, that they denie ashoare to buy any of our goods, valesse wee will land

Note, the Grand Signiors Custome of this Port Moha, is worth yearly vnto him fifteen hundred thousand Chicquenes, (which rated at fine shillings sterling a piece, is yeerely thirtie seuen thoufand fine hundred pounds sterling) according to the report of the Gouernour to Master Cockes. 20

d. III.

Their Aduentures with Sir HENRY MIDDLETON, with other Obferuations of those parts, and arrivall at Bantam.

He eleuenth, the Generall caused the Merchandizing Councell to meete and confult what was best to be done, feeing that Sir Herrie thus kept the Iunckes from comming in thither, and that there was then no further hope of Trade heere. It was 2- 30 greed vpon, that vntill the Monfon would permit vs to proceed further, wee should continue friendship with the Towne, as hitherto we had done, &c.

The twelfth, the Generall being informed of Sir Henries earnest desire to speake with mee, and protestations of great kindnesse and love, resolved to goe vnto him; and so willed the Master with the first wind to set sayle for Babmandell. Whereof hee did let the Gouernour of the Towne to vnderstand, and tooke a Letter of his to carrie to Sir Henrie, the better to continue friendship still with him.

The fourteenth, in the morning we arrived at the Bab, where wee found the Trades Increase riding, and foure Indian Iunches or thips. The Generall went aboord the Trade, where heere- 40 mayned untill night, but nothing could at that time be concluded upon betwixt the Generals.

The fifteenth Sir Henry came aboord the Cloue. The fixteenth, cur General feing Sir Hemies resolution, called his Councel together, & acquainted them with what he observed thereupon, and that in regard, that by these brabbles and iarres happened betwixt Sir Henrie, the Turkes and the Cambayans, our hopes of any Trade to be hadat Surat, was as small, as that which we had already found at Moha: Our best course would be, that the Hellor and Thomas (hould waigh anchor & ply between Aden and the Bab, The Clone to keep the Abelb Channell there, that none might palle by in the night, and so to meet with as many of the Indian ships as we could, to whom we might put off our Broad-cloth, Leade, Tinne, Iron, and Elephants Teeth (Commodities which were prouided for those parts) in barter for such as 10 he knew would vent well in those Countries, whither wee were afterwards to goe: if wee lighted upon Indicoes, they would be good for England also. That he had certaine intelligence of two very great thips daily expected, called the Rehmi and the Hafani the least of them (by report) able to lade the Hellor, with requestable Commodities : Hereunto they generally affented, to be put in practice with the first wind.

The Generall went aboord the Trade, where at length this agreement was made : that both Fleets should in yne to trade with as many of the Indian ships as they could meet with, and to exchange our English Commoditities with them for theirs : Sir Henrie to dispose of two third parts of all the goods which should be bartered for from this day forwards, and Generall Sarie the other third. The Grand Signior to have his Custome paid. Hereof Writings were made, be- 60 ing fealed and delivered betwixt them. The Hellor and Thomas were appointed to ply betweene the North end of Babmandell and the Abelb shoare, to meete with all such as should come that way : with charge that no man should take the value of a penic out of them, or offer the least violence to any of their perions, &c.

The eighteenth, in the euening, a ship of Cananor arrived laden with Spice, Drugs and other

The Generall fer fayle for Moba, the wind at South and South by East a stiffe gale, where we arrived within five houres after. The Governour prefently fent off to vs intreating to know how all things passed at the Bab; requesting that our Linguist might bee sent alhoare to acquaint him therewith, which was accordingly done.

The twentieth, the Skiffe was fent alloare to fetch our Linguist, who returned and brought a present of fresh victuals from the Gouernour to our Generall. The Gouernour intreated to have a muster of our Commodities, which Master Cockes carryed presently to him : hee liked of 10 diuers colours of our Broad-cloth, romifing to take for a thouland Rials belides forme quantitie of Tinne and Lead. Many others defired to have Lead and Iron, wherefore he intreated that in the morning some quantitie thereof might bee brought ashoare, for hee haning once begun, the Merchants would certainly follow and trade with vs.

He sent three samples of Indico, but none of Labor, which is round and the best. The price a hundred Rials the Churle; which is an hundred fenen and twentie pound or Rottalas of Moha, and about a hundred and fittie pound English. But they would not fell by any other weight, then that they bought by, which they might very well doe, the price so vnreasonable : for wee esteemed the three forts to bee worth butthirtie, fortie and fine and fortie the best the Churle.

Our Generall writ to Sir Henry and Captaine Towerson, and fent his Letters overland by 20 Mahumed, Secretarie to the Gallies.

The one and twentieth we fent alhoare eight Clothes, one Tunne of Iron, one Tunne of Lead, two Chefts of Tinne of fixe hundred weight. They offered for foure of the best clothes three halfe Rials the Peeke, which should be seuen and twentie inches, but measured by another Peeke, proued to be one and thirtie inches. The Bahar of Tinne, an hundred and twentie Rials, The Bahar of Iron, twelue Rials. Lead fifteen: Rials, which were no prices to our liking. At night the Merchants returned with their Commodities aboord againe.

The fine and twentieth, the Generall (vpon conference with Mafter Cockes) refolied to fet faile and goe to Assab, where we came to an anchor.

The seuen and twentieth, about eight at night hee found the Trade and Hestor riding there, 30 with eleuen faile of Junckes or Indian shippes of seuerall places. Note, that comming into this Road or Harbor, keepe the Northerne fide aboord, leauing a little Rocke or Hummocke on your flar-boord fide, then we had twelue, cleuen, ten, nine, eight and feuen fathome fandie ground, and in scuen fathome wee let fall our anchor about halfe a mile off the shoare.

The thirtieth, the Generall fent his Skiffe to the Iunckes, to give warning to the Nobedsies, and Merchants, that they should not offer to fet faile without his leane. The Nobodas and principall of them requested, that fuch of their goods as wee defired might bee forted out of hand, that they might not look their Monion of going to ludds, offering to bring aboord our thippes what packes wee would to be opened there, and to carriebacke what we refused.

The ninth of May, 1612. I caused the ledian ships to be measured, which were found to bee 40 of the scantlings following, viz. Th: Rebemy, was long from sterne to sterne-post, an hundred three and fittie foot. For rake from the Portaile, fenenteene foot. From the top of her fides in bredth, two and fortie. Her depth, one and thirtie.

The Mahomedee in length, an hundred fixe and thirtie foot. Her rake afte, twentie. In bredth, one and fortie. In depth, nine and twentie and an halfe. Her maine Mast in length, was fixe and thirtie yards, an hundred and eight. Her mame yard, foure and fortie yards, an hundred two

The other were not much leffe.

The

The tenth, Captaine Mamy came from Moha to treate with Sir Henry concerning his demand. But first he came aboord the Clone, where hee was friendly entertayned, and after the 30 Generall went with him aboord the Trade, where he delivered to Sir Hemie two Letters, viz. one from the Basha of Sinan, and the other from the Aga of Moha: the effect, to know what he demanded of them, for they were ignorant of any after minire offered to him, & for the former they faid that they had given him fatisfaction before his departure. Wherefore they intreated the lunkes might hee discharged and sent tor Moha. His answere was, that hee demanded satisfaction for the lolle of his mens lives, & for the making of him lole his Monton, to the overthrow of his Voyage. Mamy faid, if he would write his minde, he should have answere from the Basha

The twelfth, Captaine Many returned with Letters from Sir Henrie.

The fifteenth, the King of Rebits being a pettie Prince vpon the African or Abeffe fide, came The Kof Rebi-60 riding downe vpon a Cow to whit Sir Henrie and our Generall: he had a Turbant on his head, a triding year piece of a Periwinkle shell hanging on his fore, head in shead of a Lowell appealed the a Cow whiteh piece of a Periwinkle shell hanging on his fore-head, in stead of a lewell, apparelled like a both the Ge-Moore, all naked (fauing a Pintado about his loines) attended with an hundred and liftie men in nerals. battaile after their manner, weapond with Darts, Bowesand Arrowes, and Sword and Targets: both the Generals went alhoare with an hundred thot and Pike to preuent all Treacheries, that the Turkes might plot against them by colour of this courtesie, being loath to let him returne without an enterniew, left they should want the refreshing which they might haueby his friendthip licere at Affab, which is under his command. They prefented him with diners gifts, and (according to his deire) that give him his lading of Aquanita, that hee was fearceable to fland; they are Mahometanes, being a blacke hard-fauoured people, with curled pates. The King bestowed vpon our Generall fine Bullockes, and proffered all the affistance he might doe

This day the Pepper-Corne arrived from Aden, bringing with her a Inncke, which came from This day the Pepper-Corne at most flour 2 and Cambaya cloath. They brought vs newes Sixde, or the River India, laden with Butter, Oyle, and Cambaya cloath. They brought vs newes 10 that Mallacamber, Captaine of the great shippe of Din had escaped them with his shippe, and was arrived at Moha, passing in fight of them; the Pepper-Corne shot at her, but could not reach her, thee went fowell. This was the thip for which the Pepper-Corne had purposely weighed, and which the Thomas and Darling had to long expected to have come to Babo.

This day our Generall had a note delivered him of the prifes of commodities, how they were lately bought and fold at Surat, whereof the copie followeth, viz. Broad-cleath of three and twentie pound a Cloati feuerall colours, twentie Mamoodyes, the Conido of fiue and thirtie Inches and fine Mamoodyes make one Riall of eight, Kerlies eightie foure Mamoodyes the piece, which was leffe then ours did cost in England. Lead the great Maund, thirtie three pound, at feuen and one third part of Mamoodyes. Tinne the small Maund, fine and twentie pound, at five and a halfe Ralls of eight. At Dabull, Iron the Bahar, containing three hundred and 20 threefcore pound, at one and twentie Rialls the Bahar. Perces damasked, from twelue to eighteene Rialls the piece. Filephants teeth, threefcore and fine Mamoodyes, the great Maund of three and thirtie pound. Indico Cirkela, three fores, whereof the best at fourteene Rupias, which make halfe a Riall of eight: the fecond fort, twelve Rupias; the third for: eight, the great Maund of three and thirtie pound. Indico Lahor, which is best of all; three forts, whereof the best at fixe and thirtie, the second at thirtie, the third at foure and twentie Rupias, the Maund of fine and fiftie pound. Charges of bringing it to the waterlide, ten in the hundred for the Cirkefa, and twentie in the hundred cuftome tor Lahor.

The feuenteenth, we began to weigh Lead, and deliuer our English commodities to the Cap- 20

tains & Mallers of the Iuncks, in part of paiment of the goods, which we had received of them. The three and twentieth, the Thomas manned with nine and fortie men, all in health, let faile for Socatora, for Aloes: and from thence for Priaman and Tecoo, vpon Sumatra, for Pepper.

The one and thirrieth, the mellenger from the Basha of Siman, the Sabander of the Barnians at Moba, and Captaine Many arrived at Affab, to compound the differences with Sir Henry maa and Tecoo. Iune 34.

Securers, Pria-

The foure and twentieth of Iune, the Trade iet faile out of Affab Road for Moha, and the fue and twentieth day, the Cloane did follow. The fame night they in Moha made great Bonefres, and Fire-workes, which for that they had not done the like before when wee were there, wee supposed them therewith to braue vs.

The fixe and twentieth, our Generall fent his Skiffe to the shoare with letters to the Aza, the 40 Sabandar, and Captain: Many, and gaue the Cockson charge not to put alloare, for feare of surprifing. The effect of these letters was, to see what readie money might bee procured to cleare the accounts between the Indians and vs. The nine and twentieth, the Governour returned an answere to our Generall, more ceremonious then of substance; so that the thirtieth day we returned agains to Affab Road. The first of boly the Trade came thither likewise, and fell to our old trade of bartering for In-

The lift, Mere Mahumood Tokee, Captaine of the Rehemi of Surat (which was the Queene Mothers ship) brought divers de hes of meate aboord the Cloane, being dressed after their lashion; co he was accompanied with divers of his principall merchants, who were all kindly entertained: his shippe was at the least of twelve hundred Tunnes.

The elementh, we all writted the Closus and Hellor: the Trade and Tepper-Corne weighed anchor and let faile for Moha, together with feuen of the Ind an thips, which for the most part of them were better then any of vs any way : in the evening we archored fhort of Mehr.

The twelfth, we weighed and flood for Moha, and about three in the after-noone, we all anchored before the Towne of Moha.

The eighteenth, one of the lunckes, which was indebted to vs.got in fo neare the shoare, that we doubted thee would steale all her goods ashoare. Whereupon, the next day, the Cleane and the Pepper Come did warpe nearer, and discovered many lelbaes abourd the Juncke to valade her, 60 but at their going a hoare, the Cloane, Heltor and Pepper-corne, made many flot at them, to as the men torlooke both the lunckes and the Ielbaes and Iwomme allicare; the Caffle nor Towns not once shooting at vs, albeit we were much within command of their Orenance.

The twentieth, the Gallyes fearing our comming to neare, warpt behinde an Island to the Northward.

The fewenth of August, wee had advice of the arrival of the great shippe of Sues, and source August 7. great Gallyes at Bogo, a Towne on the Abeffetide, about haite a dayes taile from Moha. Our Generall received a Letter from the Gournour of Moha, thewing that this day was Festivall amonest them, and that thereon they were accustomed to shoote eff certaine Peeces of Ordnance, defiring that it might not be taken in early part, doubting left we should hold it done in a brauado, and Io in requitall shoote into the Towne againe. About noone they discharged seventeen Pecces out of the fort, three from the landing-place, and diners from within the land, with abundance of imall that, which went off in good order; fome of their great that went a head vs. and some a sterne, to show what they could doe, but all past in kindnesse: hereby wee found

Io the report of this place falle, viz. That heere were only two Peeces, and that they were not able in two houres to discharge them.

The eight, the Hellor let laile for Priaman and Tecoo (the Monfon now ferning) having eigh- The Hellor detie eight English in perfect health. The Nobodais, or Captaines of the lunckes, defired to have pareth for Pasportstrom our General, for their better getting into their Countrey, in case they should meet Prient and with any more of our Nation : which was granted.

The tenth, all rekonings were cleared with the three Iunckes, the Hasani, Caderi, and Mabomodi. The eleuenth, we cleared the Rebemsy and Salameti. Note our whole cargaion of commodities and Rialls bartred for in this place, did amount but to fortie fix thouland one hundred seuentie foure Rialls of eight.

I have thought good to adde heere, two Acquit tances for better vnlerstanding the premises.

In Moha Road in the Red-feathe tenth of August 1612.

Memorandum, That I Mahomed Hasten Comall Advene Asten, Captaine of the Hassauy of Surat, have bartered and fold vnto Captaine Iohn Sarie, Generall of the eight Voyage into the East-Indies, for the samme of seuen thousand foure hundred Rialls of eight, and 11 of a Riall in these 30 goods following, viz.

Indicoes of both forts 86. balles amount with profit vnto the fumme of -3046 7 Combaya Cloath 316. Corges, 7. peeces, amounts to with profit, fumme---4136-Carnets three, valued at-Quales of Cottonia, two, at eightie Rialls a Corge-Rice, Butter, Ginger and Sugar, amount in Rialls-For eighteene yards Broad-cloath received backe in account, fumme-0096-Foure bales G'mme, lacke with profit-

Summe totall of all the Merchandizes fold, as aboue faid, is Rialls 7400 11

And I have Receits in payment thereof these goods following, viz.

| Eight and twentie and an halfe Broad-cloathes amounts to in Rialls 4574 | 1      |
|---|--------|
| Ten Pieces of Kersies amounts to  | 1      |
|   |        |
| Twentie Bahars fron, amounts to   | 740048 |
| Foure and an halfe Bahars of Tinne, amounts to                          | 1      |
| Fifteene Fowling-peeces, amounts to 0445-                               | ) .    |

Summe totall of these goods Received, amounts vnto in Rialls-7400 11

And in witnesse of the truth, I have hereunto set my hand and Seale the day and yeere about written.

الم حسرال الدي وي أغزو الصيورك المعلى وورك الدين

In Moha Road in the Red-sea, the twelfth day of Angust 1012.

Memorandum, That I Nohada Haffan, Captaine of the good ship, called the Candrie of Dien. haue bartered and fold vnto Captaine John Saru, Generall of the eight Voyage into the East-Indies, for the fumme of two thousand nine hundred fortie and fixe Rialls of eight, and reparts of a Reall, in these goods following, viz.

Indicoes of both forts, one and thirtie Bales, with profit, amounts to in Rialls-1694 Spicknard one Bale, Turbith one Bale, Cinamon fine Bales, with profit amounts

Cloach of Cambaya an hundred thirtie feuen Corges, and three pieces with profit, amounts to Rialis-Summeto:all-2947

And I have received in payment, these goods following, viz. Broad-cloathes, fixe pieces, for the fumme of Rialls--0890 $7 Kerlies, ten pieces, amounts to Rialls--0477 Lead one and thirtie Bahars and three quarters, amounts to Rialls--0762 17 Iron ten Bahars, amounts to Rialls -0240--->2947 Tinne one Bahar and an halre, amounts to Rialls--02264 Fo a ling-peeces fourteene, amounts to Rialls-0250-More Receits in money to ballance, Rialls --0000 17 Summe totall amounts to Rialls-

> And in witnesse of the truth, I have hereunto set my hand and Seale the day and yeare about written.

नाग्रजननन्तरास्य "

English commodules nor Vandible in any quantie at We departed for Bantam in

At the Port of Moha we found not our English commodities vendible for any quantitie: the Naturalls poore, and the Timkes vnwilling to deale with vs.

The thirteenth, we fet faile from Moba for Bantam, our Company feuenty five men all in per-

The four eenth in the morning, in fight of Rabo, but the wind large at North-weft, we fleered East by South through the great Channell on the Abeffe fide, having eighteene fathom, about one league of the Island Babo, where is very good and fafe harbour for shipping, and of good receit, but the place is barren.

The third of September, we arrived at Socatora in the Road of Delisha, having been much hindred in our passage hither, by a West and North-west Current. We understood that the Thomas had been heere three moneths past, but stayed not, for that they could not agree upon the price

The fourth, the Merchant and Linguist were sent ashoare, friendly entertained and furnished with horses to returne to the Skiffe, but could not agree vpon the price, hee holding it at fortie Rialls of eight, the kintall of one hundred and foure pounds; faying, he had only fue and twentiehundred weight, for which he was earnefily folicited by the Portugals.

Being loath to lofe time heere, it was concluded that hee should have thirtie Rials for one parcell, and thirtie eight for another; so he deliuered soure thousand sixtie seuen pound, which cost 50 one thou and foure hundred eighteene and an halfe of Rialls of eight: we found the King very false both in his weight and word, but we vsed him kindly for the good of future Voyage. The eight, we let faile for Bantam.

The two and twentieth, latitude by the Starre eight degrees, twelve minutes, the wind at West South-west, westeered East by South. About midnight we fell into the strangest and fearfallest shining water that euer any of vs had seene : the water gining such a glare about our ship, as that we could differne a letter in the book thereby, it being not halfe an houre before so darke, as that it was not possible to see halfe our shippes length any way. We doubted it had beene the breach of funcken ground, and thought to have cast about : but finding that wee had failed in it for halfe an houre, and faw no alteration, we held on our course, quartering very much wind; but at length it proued to be Cuttle-fish, which made this fearefull shew.

The felien and twentieth, in the morning we had fight of the Island Selon, bearing Northeast by East, about seven leagues off, being very high land vp into the countrey, but low to Sea-ward. CHAP. I.S. 3. Capt. Saris bis Voyage to Bantam. Plentie cause of dearth. The nine and twentieth about noone, we fell with Cape Comorin, bearing East by South a- Cape Comorin hout fourteene leagues off, being high land, and towards the North, shewing double land neare in seven dethe water-fide, we founded and had no ground at an hundred fathom. Note, that this land lyes grees, two and in the latitude of feuen degrees, two and fortie minutes to the Northward of the Line: but in Falle plats. our Plats it is made to fland in fixe degrees, and ten minutes, which differs one degree, two and thirtie minutes, stretching South South-east. By experience we find that it lyeth more Northerly; and in our course we had no fight of any of the Islands described in our Plats, neither did we discouer any of the Maldine Islands, whereof the number is faid to bee so great; making our account to have past betweene the Maine and the Northerne Coast of the Malduas, in eight de-

10 grees no minutes, diferying no land, untill we faw this Maine. The fifteenth of October, latitude foure degrees, nine and fortie minutes to the Southward of October 15. the Line: This day we had light of Sumatra, whereof the Eastmost part did beare East North- South Intitude east fourteene leagues off, high land; heere we found a very strong Current setting to the South- some degrees, ward, which put vs off from the land. Note, that those bound for the Straights of Sunda, must nine and fortie keepe Sumatra aboord, after they are come into one degree, thirtie minutes to the Southward of Sumata. the Line, for there begins the current: keep thirties league off; with good looking out, for there are many Cayos fifteene or twenty leagues off, which, by reason of the current, we did notice.

The eighteenth, latitude fine degrees and twentie minutes, way East, Northerly, very tempeftuous, with thunder and lightning very fearefull, with much raine, to that we could not fee 20 the land : But, praised be God, notwithstanding the enill weather, our people were all then in as good health (if not better) as when we parted out of England.

The foure and twentieth, we came to an anchor in the Road of Bantam, where (though con- We arrived in trary to expectation) we found the Hellor, which arrived there the day before, with the Inmes the Road of in her company, and certaine Flemmings. The arrivall of all thefe thips, and expectation daily Banam. of the Trades-Increase, the Pepper-Corne, Darling and Thomas to follow, occasioned a great The lames. (though fulden) alteration in the prices of commodities, Those of any request being railed very mare to thrice the value of what they were bought for, the day before the Hectors arrivall. Cloaues which the Marriners of the Heltor and James had bought the day before for fixteene Rialls of eight the Peecull were now rifen to fortie Rialls and vpwards: Pepper the day before 30 was at ten Rialls of eight the ten fackes, but upon our comming, were raifed to twelve Rialls and an halfe,&c.

The fixe and twentieth, we went alhoare, and so to the Court, accompanied with the Merchants, and gaue divers prefents to the Governour Pangran Chamarra, (who is as Protector to the King, r. ling all, the King being as no body, though of yeares sufficient) which Presents hee well accepted: we defired his Order for speedie landing of our goods, which he granted; prouided, that the Kings officers might be acquainted with what wee landed, that the King might not be wronged in his Cuftome.

The eight and twentieth, a Letter from Master William Adams out of lapan, was read to all Alener of Mathe Merchants, that they might take notice of the hopes of that Countrey. It was now con- fter nillian a 40 cluded vpon, that in regard the Flemmings were fo strong, and almost fole Commanders of the dams from Ia-Moluceas and Banda, and that the place heere is fo vnhealthfull, befides our people dangeroutly park difordering themselves with drinke and Whores ashoare: The Heltor should with all speed bee dispatched for England, and that fourteene thousand sackes of Pepper should be prouded for the lading of her, and the Thomas : doubting that if once there should come newes of the other ships expected, Pepper would be much raised over that it now was.

We bargained with Lackmon for two thousand lackes of Pepper, at an hundred twentie feuen Rialls of eight and an halfe the hundred fackes: and with Keemee, for a thoufand fackes, at an hundred twentie fine Rialls the hundred fackes: and for three thouland fackes more, at an hundred and fittie Rialls the hundred. Wee made triall on sheare, what a Peecull of Cloaves 50 might weigh by our English weights, and found it to be an hundred and thirtie two pound sub-till, good weight. The ninth of November, Sir Henry Middleton arrived at Bantam in the Popper-Corne. The fif. November 9. teenth, (the Gouernour having en meltly requelled it ) there mullered before the Cours forcie men out of the Cleane and Heltor, thirtie out of the Pepper-corne, and ten out of the Salomon, in all eightie men, which gaue him good content. The Flemmings denyed him : it was for the breaking up of the Mahametanes Lent.

The leaenteenth, agreed with Keenee for foure thousand fackes of Pepper, at fixteene Rialls ten fackes, with allowance of three in the hundred balle.

The eighteenth, heere arrived eleven faile of Flemmings, great thips, and the Thomas in the'r Twentie Taile 60 company; thee had gotten at Priaman only three hunared and twelue Bahars of Pepper, and of Gold.

The two and twentieth, an hundred Flemmings, with their furniture and their pike-men in bright armour marched to the Court, where they brought themselves into a ring, and gave three vollyes of shot: The Gouernour sent word to them, that the King thanked them, that they

September 3.

Cuttle fish yeelding a wonderfull glare in the had done enough, and might depart with their iron hats; for so the lawans call head-peeces. The eight and twentieth, three Holland thips, laden for the most with Pepper and Mace, fet faile, homeward bound : fine more of their thips fet faile for Banda, and the Moluccas . The fourth of December, a Dutch thip arrived heere from Choromandell: by whom wee vn-

December 4. The Globe in Patane, bound for Siam.

deritood that they left the Globe in Patane, bound for Siam. The eleuenth, the Heltor let faile from Bantam for Morough the watering place, where there is a fweet ayre, and where good refreshing of Orrenges, and other wholesome fruits are to bee had: there to attend till the Thomas were full laden.

The two and twentieth, the Trades-Increase and the Darling arrived heere from Priaman. The fine and twentieth, in honor of the Birth-day of our Samour Christ, certaine Chambers 10 were discharged at the English house in Bantam, and were answered with Ordnance out of the chants cur:e. Lanuary 13.

The eight and twentieth, Kenee, the chiefe China Merchant, inuited Sir Henrie and my felfe. with all the Merchants, to dinner, and caused a Play to be acted before vs by Scenicks of China. which was performed on a Stage with good pronunciation and gesture.

The twelfth of lanuary, the Thomas let faile for England, having in her fixe and thirtie Englifb, and three Indians.

ð. IIII.

The Voyage of Captaine SARIS in the Cloaue, to the Ile of Iapan, what befell in the way: Observations of the Dutch and Spaniards

He fourteenth of Ianuary 1612. in the morning, wee weighed out of the Road of Bantam, for Iapan, having taken in heere for that place feuen hundred fackes of Pepper for a triall there. Shee had in her teuentie foure English, one Spaniard, one I. pan, and 20 fiue Swarts or Indians. The fifteenth in the Morning, little wind at West, and haling into fourteen fathom, we steered

East by South, and East South-east, leaving Pulo Lack on our Starboord, and eleven or twelve on our Larboord fide, our depth from fourteene to ten fathoms, going within two Islands, which lye to the Eastwards of Pulo Lack. And in the faire way there lyeth a shoald, which hath not aboue fixe foot on the toppe of it, and is not aboue halte a Cables length every way, and hard aboord it there is ten fathemes, and the next cast on ground, as by experience: for heere we lay three houres beating, with a reasonable stiffe gale; but through Gods mercy, and the extraordinary labour and endeauour of the Company, got her off; but iprung a leake, that for all night, and t ll ten the next day we continued pumping every man (my felfe only excepted) taking his turne, and all little enough to keepe it from increasing, which made vs all to doubt that wee 40 should be enforced to put backe agains to Bantam, to the overthrow of all our men and Voyage for lapan. The Carpenter by his diligence having found out the leake, made it Thite, thankes bee to God. To goe cleare off this shoald, keepe close to the Islands, for the Maine is

Tinea lana.

The fixteenth, we anchored at the watering place called Tingo lana, beeing foureteen leagues from Bantam, and some three leagues and an halte to the West-wards of laccatra, riding between two Ilands which lie off the point, diffiant fine miles. Depth ten and nine fathomes close to the Iland, but the maine is shoald. I fent Presents to the King, to his Sabandar, and Admirall requefling leave to buy fuch necessaries as we wanted.

The eightcenth, the King of laccatra (ent his chiefe man vnto me, with thanks for the Prefents, and profer of what his Countrey affoorded. The twenty one, we fet faile, fleered neere vnto the East-most Hand of the two, that are against the watering place: depth ten and nine fathome, and so to Sea-board of all the Hands East North-east from the watering place. For the outward-most of them beareth East by North Northerly, and off the Norther point of the said Hand lieth a shoald, which yee shall see breake, distant from the Hand halfe a league, and having that South of you, the East point of I and will beare East Southerly, depth seventeene and eighteene fathome, and all the way out from twentie to foureteene fathome, but here you shall find a Current fetting East South-east, which you must allow for, as you have the wind. In the evening we anchored, little wind at North by West, the Current setting vs to the South-east vpon 60 the shoare: depth thirteene and thirteene fathomes and an halfe, being shot three leagues to the East-wards of the East point of Iaccatra, wind at North-west. The twenty two, the wind at South-west, we weighed and steered East North-east to get deepe water, and finding foureteene fathome, the high hill ouer Banam did beare West Southwelt, halfe a point Welterly. The three and twentieth in the morning, we deckt up our failes, CHAP. I.S.4. Captaine Saris his Voyage to Iapan.

the wind at South-east, and had fight of an Iland which lieth off Cherribon, with three of those high piked hils of lana, the Eastermost bearing South-east, and Cherrybon South by East. Latitide at noone fixe degrees tenne minutes, the wind at North North-west, the Iland bearing East by North three leagues and an halfe off.

Note, that yee may bol ly keepe betweene twentie three and twenty foure fathome water in the Offing, and in twentie fathome vpon Iana, the darkeit night that is, and in the day vpon Iana in what depth yee please.

The twentie fourth in the morning, we had fight of three high piked hils, and three other to to the East-ward, like Ilands: depth twentie fathome, the point of I and bearing South-east by South, and the Iland lying off it South-east and North-well about nine leagues off. We steered East by South, and East South-east. Latitude fixe degrees tenne minutes, way East twenty

The twentie fixth, at breake of day we had fight of the lland called Pulo Labuck, bearing Pulo Labuck North-east by East eight leagues off, wind West by North. We steered East by South, depth thirtie foure and thirtie fine fathomes, and about nine of the clocke had fight of land, bearing South-east and South-east by South, the Hand aforesaid bearing now North-east by North little wind, latitude fixe degrees twelue minutes, way East and East cy North twentie two leagues, wind at West, the Iland at foure in the after-noon, bearing West by North nine leagues off, depth thirtie foure fathomes. The twentie feuenth, latitude fixe degrees foure minutes, way East

20 Northerly twenty eight leagues, depth thirtie eight fathome, and at three in the afternoone had fight of an Iland bearing North North-east feuen leagues off, and at fine of the clocke founded, and had thirtie foure fathomes. The twenty eighth, at foure in the morning, we had twentie fine fathomes, steering East till noone, latitude fine degrees fiftie fine minutes, way East Northerly twenty leagues, depth thirty fathome. From noone we iteered East by South, and at foure a clocke had thirty five fathome. The twenty ninth, in the morning about foure, wind at West by North, we steered East by South, but had no ground at fortie fathome, but at noone fiftie two fathomes, with many overfalls. Latitude fixe degrees nine minutes, way East by South twentie eight leagues, wind at West and A Current, West In North, with a Current setting to the West-ward, afternoone we founded, but had no 10 ground at an hundred fathome, and steered East. The thirtieth in the morning, latitude fine degrees fiftie feuen minutes, way East Northerly twenty eight leagues, and in longitude from Bantam, two hundred twenty four leagues, the ouer-fals continuing, but founding had no ground at an hundred fathome. At three in the afternoone, we had fight of a low flat Iland at top-mast head, bearing North-east by North fine or fix leagues off, full of trees, and had eighteene fathome, and at next cast eightie five fathome : then we Heered East by South, and at foure a clocke it did beare North by East halfe a point Northerly, three or foure leagues off. Then we had fight of two other low flat Ilands, the one opening to the East-ward, the other to the West-ward, so that this was the middle-most. At sixe at night, it bearing North halfe a point Easterly, we founded againe, but had no ground at eightic fathom, 40 we steered East by South, keeping our lead in respect of the ouer-fals or Ripplings, which were fearefull, vet had no ground at fixtie fathome. The one and thirtieth, at breake of day we had fight of the Celebes, the Wester end rising like Celebes. an Iland, and the outward-most high land bearing East by North: Latitude fine degrees fiftie two minutes, the East part hearing East by North fixe leagues off, way East Northerly fixteene leagues and a Current fetting to the North-west ward. At Sunne-fetting we tooke in our failes to keepe short of the straights of Defalon, by the Naturals called Solore, and keeping our Lead all The Straight night, we found first twenty fathome, the high land North, and so droue into thirtie three, and of Defalmer fortie feuen fathome, fearing a shoald which lyeth two third parts of a league from the Celebes, Solore. and at low water the breach vpon it may be feene. On the Celebes fide it is very dangerous, and full of lunken ground. Wherefore we haled over for Defalontide, keeping a good birth of it, hauing a piked hill, which is next to the Sea fide, rifing like an Hand, being to the West-wards, then it is North North-east, and when it is North, then yee are thwart of the West end of the shoald, and then will the Hand which yee leaue on your Star-boord fide, beare East North-east, so that yee may be bold to steere out in the middest betweene the two llands. And when the Pike hill beares North by West, then are you thwart of the East end. Note that the East end of Desalon showeth like an Island, and will deceive you till you come to it, but having brought the North end of the point East North-east, halie a point Easterly, then bee bold; for you are cleare of the shoald afore-faid. It is about four leagues between them: we came within halfe a mile of the

The first of February afternoone, we were thwart of the point of the Iland bearing South off February. vs, and the two Ilands which make the straights, lying one from the other North and South, di-

The fecond in the morning, we had fight of the South part of Defalor, South-west by South.

Iland of our Star-boord fide, going through, and the wind taking vs fuddenly fhort, we founded, 60 but had no ground at fiftie fue fathome, right vp and downe.

North by East, latitude fine degrees fiftie two minutes, diffant from Defalor tenne leagues. The third in the morning, the Southerne end of Cambina did beare North-east by East, and the Iland or Hammocke North-east eight or nine leagues, latitule fine degrees fiftie seuen minutes : the L land North-sait halie a point Northerly eight leagues, way East Southerly fine or fixe leagues, and towards night the wind at South, and South South-east, we steered all night East by North.

The fourth in the morning, the wind at North-east, latitude fine degrees no minutes. At three

The fitth, three or foure leagues off Cambina, we found the Current to carry vs to the Northward, the wind at East by North; and the Iland of the East end of Cambina, North-east halfe a 10 point Easterly foure leagues off. The fixth at breake of day, the Iland North-east by North Northerly foure leagues off, the wind at North; fo that these twenty foure houres we have gotten to

The feuenth at breake of day, the Northern point was North by East, & a small high land, that lieth to the South-ward fixe or feuen leagues off Botton, South-east, and the Easter land of Botton

East North-east: we steered East by North, and East, but left the high land to the South-wards on our Star-boord fide, and it did beare South-east halte a point Easterly, then was the point of

The eighth in the morning, we faw another Hand, called Tingahaffe, rising round and flat. Here

The ninth, wind at North Weit by North, the point of Botun North-weit, halfe a point Northerly, we had light of two Curra Curras between vs and Botum. The Skiffe was fent off to them, we had a Current fetting North-east, the wind at North-east by North and North North-east, 20

Botun shut in, in a long great Hand. The Norther end will be North North-west.

we faw land East by North, making it to be Bosun.

the East-wards one point.

CHAP.I. S.4. The Hollanders binder English Trade at Bachian. The one and twentieth in the morning, we were foure or fine leagues off an Iland, called Ha-

The one and twentieth in the morning, we were foure or hue leagues off an Iland, called Ha-lebeling by our Saylers, being a high copped round Iland, different in shape from all the reit of the library in signs. The wind at North-east, and at East having made to this noone a North-east led by the Eastway fourteene leagues of latitude one degree, fixteene minutes the poirt of Haleboing, or 8a- 11fb Saylors, by chian, North-east by North foure leagues off: and the outwardmost land, North a quarter We- others Boade fterly, finding a current fetting North-east, wind all night at North North-east and North. The two and twentieth in the morning, wee had fight of land North by East, it being the I-land Machian very high land : heere we had a current fetting North North-east of latitude at Machian, moone no degrees, one and fiftie minutes, way North feuen leagues, variation at Sun-fetting,

10 foure degrees twelue minutes, wind at North by Eath, and North North-eaft. The three and twentieth in the morning we were three leagues off the Land, wind at North North-east seeking a place to anchor in: and within a quarter of a mile of the shoare had fortie fathome, wherefore webore up to the South part of the Iland, where we had twentie and nineteene fathomes for a cast or two, but then no ground. Wee steered from this South point East South-east, for so the Land lyeth open off the point of the high round Hand, being foure leagues betweene the two points, but the Wester point is an Hand with three or source other to the Eastwards, which you cannot perceine till you bee verieneere them. Then the Land falleth away North-east, and sheweth a large and round found or Bay with Land of both sides very deepe. This round Hill is Bachian, and yeeldeth great Hore of Clones; but by realen of the Warresthey Milery of wirs arewasted. The people not suffered to make their benefit thereof, fortheare to gather them, and in the Melucon let them fall and rot vpon the ground. Beeing by the Flemmings and Spaniards of preft, and wrought to spoyle one another in Civill Warre, whilest they both secure in strong Forts, six and looke on, prepare to take the bone from him that can wrest it from his fellow. Haung no ground to anchor in, and not able to get to the Northward, we resclued to stand of all night, heping to haue a shift of wind to carrie vs to the Hand Machian, whither we intended. The foure and twentieth, in the morning the high land South by East ten or twelue leagues off the Hand leemed ragged, we flood in, and a league of the point, lent off the Skiffe to found A small Fort of off the lland learned ragged, we tood in, and a reague on the point, tent on the Skine to ionia. Amount of the land to looke for water, but returned about in finding no water nor place to anchor in, wherefore the felicibilities.

And to looke for water, but returned about 1 finding of the Receive The Day, Base de States, and the looke for water, but the land to looke for water, but returned about 1 finding of the Receive The Day, Base de States, and the looke for water, but returned about 1 finding the land to looke for water, but returned about 1 finding to look we flood into the Bay, and prefently had light of a Fort and Towne called Bachan. The Pin-being the 10 naffea head finding fresh water in divers places, but steepe too into the cod of the Bay, where Norther end of the Flemmings have a Fort artificially and warlike built; the Towne hard by it. Heere we came the llands, in to an anchor (taker shot off the Fort) having had very vicertaine shoaling, as seventie, fixtie, our plats called eight and ten fathome; but Ozie. The Dutch faluted vs with five Peeces; whom I requited with the like number, but the Kings man being then a board our ship, we told him, it was done to the honour of his King, who fent mee word that hee would have come to visit mee, but that the Duich intreated him to forbeare. In this For: are thirteene Peeces: viz. one Demy-cul lering of Traile, the rest Saker and Minion. The Flemmings here refident are more feared of the Naturals then loued, which notwithflahding is caule of their better benefit. For the Naturals, affoon as we were arrived, told vs that they durst not bring vs a Cattle of Cloues, but vpon their lines. As wee rid heere, the outwardmost point was South South-west, and the other South-west, distant from vs foure leagues, The King fent his Admirall and divers of his Nobles abourd to bidme welcome, faying, that they knew of what Nation we were by our Flagge, vling much Ceremonious courtelle, withing that we were feated there in flead of the Flemmings, that they might bee cleered of them, their Countrey now almost ruined by these Warres. I entertayned them friendly, and told them that our comming was to procure Trade and to leave a Factorie amongst them, if their King so pleafed. They answered that it was a thing by them mu h defired, but at present not to bee granted, yet they would acquaint their King therewith.

The Captaine of the Dutch Fort came abourd to visit mee, by whom I understood their force The final force to be but of thirteene Peeces and thirtie Souldiers. The most of them marryed, fome to the ces of the Hel-Countrey-women, and fome to Dutch women, whereof the Fort was fitted with eleven able to land rain Bawithstand the furie of the Spanuard or other Nation whatsoeuer , beeing of a very lustie large chian. breed, and furnished with few good qualities. But it seemed they followed their Leader: for no sooner was the Captaint aboord, but the Amazon-band followed, complaying of great milerie, fitting downe with our Saylors to victuals at their first comming, with small intreaties They had what the ship affoorded, and they returned ashore with their Captaine.

The third of March, we founded with the Skiffe along the East-fide of this Bay, and at the opening or going out neere to a little lland, we found a place to anchor, in twelve, fixteene, twentie fathome, Corall ground, without command of the Fort. Note, there is a should to the 60 South-wards the length of three Cables, latitude no degrees, fiftie minutes.

The fourth, the King of Ternata fent me a prefent by his Prieft.

The fifth, variation at Sun-rifing, foure degrees fortie eight minutes Easterly, A Moore came degrees, 48 abound with a muster of Cloues, offering to sell some quantitie, if wee would goe to Machian, minutes East. This Moore was fent by a man of great account of that place, who at the present was heere, erly.

The Ile Tinga.

ployed in the Zuns leruice.

Aduer:ifeftraight of and brought one M. Welden, one of the Expeditions Companie, and a Flemming bound for Banda. The faid Weld n beeing employed in the King of Botuns affaires for Banda, and had now the command of these Curra Curras. Latitude fine degrees twentie minutes, wind at East North-east, we fleered North, and at night the wind Southerly, we fleered North North-east and from the East point of Botun, the land fals away fiddenly, with two or three great Bayes to the North-westwards; and three great liands which he to the Northward of Botun, which make the straights. Note, to goethrough the straights of Bosso, it is not about a league broad, and the entince is on the North-side of the Iland; and if you come from the Westward, being thwart of the North west point, your course is East North-east, and East by North, yp to the Reade, and no danger but what you shall see, but you must leave the three great Hands to the North-wards of you, yet goe not betweene any of them, and falling with the West end of Botun, goe not betweene the Iland that lyeth off it. There are two long Hands, but leave them on your star-board side, for it is full of broken ground betweene them and Botun. But if the wind ferue you, then hale to the North-ward of all the Hands either betweene Botun and Cambina, or elle to the North-ward of that too, and to you may keepe the Coast of Celebes, for it is bold : we steered with little wind all night, North North-east. The tenth in the morning, thestraights of Botan did beare North-west by West, and the maine lland of Tingabaffe South South-east halfe a point Southerly.

The eleventh, at five in the morning, the wind at North-well, the Iland West ten leagues off, we steered North North-east, latitude at noone foure degrees eight minutes; way North Northeast Easterly a little, foure and twentie leagues, and off the East point of Botun, fine and thirtie leagues, the wind all night betweene North and North by West. The twelfth, little wind at North by West, latitude foure degrees fixe minutes, way East by

The thirteenth in the morning, we had fight of the Iland Buro, beeing high-land, the one point hearing North-east by North, and the other North-east ten leagues off, the wind at North by West, having made to noone scuen leagues of latitude, three degrees one and fortie minutes. The tour centh in the morning, we bore vp with the East part of the Hand to feeke for some 50

The fifteenth and fixteenth of latitude, three degrees, fortie minutes, breake off day the Northermost part of Buro, East by North nine leagues off, little wind at East North-east, and

The seventeenth, little wind, the East-part of Buro, bearing East Northerly, wind at North, at noone North-weithy North, the North part of Boun East by South, and three Hands, which we then had in fight at Top-mast head, North-east by North. The eighteenth, in the morning we were by the Eaftermost Hand three leagues off, wind at North North-well, it bearing North North-east. At noone we were within a mile off the shore. The Ile of Sale. The Skirle was fent to fpeake with the Country people, This Hand is called Sular wee had fit. 60 teene fathome, the ships length off the shoare, and a mile off no ground at a hundred fathomes: the West part of Burolying South halfe a point Westerly, and North halfe a point Eatherly fourteene leagues the one from the other, wind at Welt, the Land stretching North North-east.

The twentieth, wind at East by North, steered North by East, of latitude one degree thirtie minutes, way North-east seuen leagues.

Tahannee, is a Towne vpon Machian where the Po tuga's bergiofor: haue hala Fort, but now there is none, neitherfor them not the riding of the Hand. whole Iland, but very necre the thore, yet

348

The Roade of

G:ilelo.

A shoale.

Wherefore it was thought good to ftay a day longer to have fome conference with him, his name was Key Malladaia; and was Brother to the old King of Ternata.

The fixth, we flaved to speake with this Caualier, who came and promised to goe with vs to Machian, and to bring vs to a place there called Tahannee, and did put abourd vs two of hie chiefe men to be as our Pilots thicher, appointing vs to goe before and flay for him at an lland by the way, and within two dayes he would be with vs., giving vs great incouragement of good flore of Cloues. He told me that the Dutch gave fiftie Rials of eight the Bahar, but they would cost v stixtie Rials, which I willingly promifed to give him.

The fewenth in the morning, we weighed anchor and parted out of this Road called Amalan. & by direction of our new Pilots, fleered in Well & Well by North for the Iland Machian, lea- 10 uing two llands (which lye foure or fine miles from the place where we last anchered) on our Flumnings, using two Hands (which tye foure of nuclinings from the past three is the best Hand-board fide, depth two and twentie, thirtie and fortie fathomes, two Cables length off the

The tenth, we had fight of Machian being a high and copped lland bearing North-eafterly. and the Han I Tidore opening like a Sugar-lofe on the Wester side, but not so high Land as Mafree of all dan- chian; it is thut into the point of the Welter fide of the outwardmost Hands, of the three that lye in the going out, two of them being without the narrow or ftraight, and the third maketh the ftraights it leffe, yet there are more Hands on the Eafter fide. But the current fetting to the South-wards, we anchored in three and twentie fathomes, a mile off the little Hande in the ftraights mouth : to that the diffance from the ftraights of Namorat, to this paffage, is fue 20 leagues, and from the Roade of Amafane, where the Flomm fb Fortrefle standeth, fourteene The cleuenth in the morning, we weighed the wind at South South-east, and current setting

Amount where to the North-ward, we passing the streights. The wind vered to the North-west by North, we flood to the East-ward till noone, then we tackt to West-ward the wind at North North-west. and had fight of Geilolo, being a long Land, depth going out nine and twentie, and foure and thirtie fathome, and many Hands to the East-ward, and East South-east. The point of cli Bachian lying to the North-ward of the streights some three or source leagues, leaving source llands Tanally Bachar, on the star-board side. This which maketh the straights on that side is called Tanally Bachar, and when you are a little without the small Hand which lyeth in the straights, you shall have 30 eighteene fathome, a cast or two, and then it will deepen and flanding to the North-wards you shall open another Hand to the West-ward called Tamata, with a Rocke like a Sayle a good difrance of the point of it. And anchored at an Han I bearing North Westerly, three leagues from the straights in three and fortie fachomes, where on the Southerne point is a shoale having three fathome on the skirts, and is dry at low water, which shoale reacheth ouer to the South part of Bachian, we riding halfe a mile off the shoare. This Iland is called Tanally, the wind at North

Heere we flayed all the twelfth day, for Keymalladaia, being the place where hee appointed to come vnto vs. This Hand is diffant from Machian ten leagues: here we had good ffore of wood,

The thirteenth, our Cowpers prouided themselves of Rottans for Water caske, which make excellent hoopes, and are heere of all affites in great abundance. The sheale afore-laid now dry, beareth West by South, halfe a mile off vs, and another point a mile off, North North-east. The wind at North.

The fourteenth, for that Keymalladaia came not, his feruant doubted that the Flemmings feeing vs to adventure through this pallage amongst the Hands did suspect him and perforce kept him. Wherefore we and fet fayle, the wind at North by West, and plyed up for Machin. The Norther point of Timally, and the Norther point of Lattetatte (from whence wee fet faile) bearing one or the other West by North, and East by South, distant fixe leagues, and the Norther end of Grachagreat Taunity, and the bodie of Grachie, the great Hand, lye the one from the other North-well foure 50 Lagues, and North North-well from Grochy, are foure or fine small Ilands which couer the Mayne of the great Hand, and are diffant from it file leagues North-wards, and there are many Ilands North-east by North, called Motere. The found lyeth cleere of all the Ilands betweene Bach in and Geilolo, (alias Batta China) South-east and North-west, and is very broad, but hath Ilands on the flar-board fide as you goe to the North-wards. The Channell betweene Bachian, Machian, Tistore, and Ternata lyeth North by Weit, and South by East, and is fixe leagues over in the narro west part.

The fifteenth in the morning, we passed betweene Battachina and Caia. Latitude at noone no degrees feuenteen minutes to the North-ward: So that Machian is not truely placed in the Plats: for that there the Equinoctiall cuts it in the middle, and wee find it to fland flue leagues more 60 legges North Northerly, wind at North by East, and North by West, with a Current setting to the Southoff the Line. Wards, variation foure degrees fiftie eight minutes Easterly. The fixteenth in the morning, we were faire by the Iland of Cara, the wind at North by East. Here we had fight of a falle to the North-wards, which by a Fitherman we understood to bee a Flemming bound from Machine to

Tabre with Sage, which is a Roote whereof the Naturalls make their bread.

CH AP. I.S.4.

The leventeenth in the morning, we were peere a Fort of the Flemmings called Tabelola, wind tops of trees. as North-eaft; wellood to the Southwards, the Carrent fetting vs to the North-wards. Then the windar Easting North, we fleered with the East-most point, and came to an anchor at foure led labeles. in the afternoone in the Road of Pelebere hard by Taharne in fiftiefathome, within call of the theore hairing one point of the land South South-west two miles off, and another North-east by Northone mile and an habe of, and the Hand Cais nur leagues off. This night fome small quantitle of Chares were brought about I, the price fet at fixtie Rials of eight the Bahar, of two hunto dred Catters, each Carter three pound fire thillings English. I recented a letter from Key Mal-Iddistrom Bachian, exenting his itay, with promite that he shortly would bee with me, in the means time that he had written to che people to helpe me with all the Cloues they could.

The eighteenth, a Santaca came abound and profered much curtefic two Hollanders came with him, being very inqui. time to know who directed vs to this roade, faying, that it must needs bee The Hollanders one of the Naturalis, and of they knew him they would cut him in peeces before our faces; that wedul wrong them in co. aming hirfier, this beeing their Countrey, as having conquered it by. the Sword. They were appointed to returne to their Forts, and tell their Captaines that if they needed ought that we might space, they should have it for reasonable content before all others, because we asknowledged them our neighbours and brethren in Christ: but for any propertie of this Country to be more in them then vs, we tookeno notice, and therefore would ride there, wantrade with whofoe ier it pleafed to come aboord. So they parted, threatning the Naturalls which were then abourd, that if any did bring Cloues abourd vs, they would put them to death. The countrey records made light of their threats, and faid they held vs their friends, and would come abourd to vs. Bought this day three hundred Catties Cloues for Cambaya cloth, and some fold for ready money.

The nineteenth, the two Flemmings came abourd againe, and beganne to note downe in their Table-bookes the names of the Countrey people which came abourd. Whereupon I caused the Boat-fwaine to turne them out of the ship, and command them to come no more aboord. Divers of our Companie were fent to walke ashoare, to fee what intertainement the Countrey people would give them. They went up to the Townes of Tahanne and Pelebere, and were very friendly Tahanne. 10 vfed. They told our men, that the Flewmings had wrought to with Key Chillefadaxg, the King of Peibre. Ternataer fonne, who was newly come, that he had forbidden them to fell vs any Cloues vpon paine of death, otherwise we should have had them before the Flemmings, whom they find great opprellors of them. Fowards night, the Prince passing by our ship in his Curracurra, Hent my Pinnaffe well fitted with a faire Twite Carpet, and Crimfon Silke and Gold Curtaines, intreating him to come aboord; which he tooke kindly, but excufed it, faying, that in the morning he

The one and twentieth, an Oran Cara came aboord, and told me, that a Curra Curra of the Flemmings had fearthed three or foure Prawes or Canoas comming aboord vs with Cloues, and had taken then from them, threatning death to them for the next offence. And that fince our 40 comming hither, they disturnished their Forts, and placed their people round about the Iland, that The fright of the Naturalls should not be able to bring vs any more Spice, and that they had fent ouer a Carra the Hollanders Curra to Tidore, to cause two great ships of theirs to come hither and ride by vs, the one a head, toys the other a iterne, to beate vs out of the Road, without trade or refreshing.

The twentie two, we had ight of one of the Flemm fb thips comming about the point, by reafon whereof we had little trade now, the people being afraid, I received a Prefent from Key Malladaia, who as yet was not come. The Naturals expected what would now become of vs, the Femmings having reported a houre, that they should see vs runne out of the Read at ight of one of their ihips. It was the Redde Lion, had thirtie Peeces of Ordnance, anchored a fterne of vs.

The twentie fourth, the Prince of Ternate, Key Chillif dang fent to tell me, that hee would 10 come and visit me. So all things were fitted in the best manner for his entertainment. Hee came attended with divers great Curracurras, and rowed thrice round about the thip before he entred. At his boording of vs, our thip discharged fine Peeces of Ordnance: I brought him to my Cabbin, where I had prepared a Banquet, meet enough to have been fet before the King of Terrata himfelfe (had he been there) with a very good confort of Mufique, which much delighted him. He promifed me to gue the people license to bring Clones aboord vs, and requested that I would but have patience for a day or two, that he might have advice from his brother then beeing at Tidore. I bestowed on him divers Presents, and at parting ordered seven Peeces for his farwell.

The twenty fifth in the morning, a Curracurra of the Flemmings came rowing by our thippe, feeffing at our people, and finging a fong which they had made in derifion of vs: they often vling 60 thereof cauled our men juilly to find themselves therewith agricued, as also for their rowing over our Can-bodyes divers times, endeaouring to finke the. Wherefore I cauled the Pinnaffe to be well our Can-bodyes divers times, endeaduring to innectine, while their mocking of vs. to ran about of the Holland o and tinke them. They came finging and footing according to their cultome, the Pinnaffe ranne derialmon ab sord them with fuch a furge, as that the water came through her fides; there beeing in her two make.

*complay he Hellanders cal-

Casan Hand,

and had two good Fowlers in the Skiffes head. They lay a good while aboord her, and willed them to take this for a warning, and leaue off their fcoffing and mocking of vs, for else they would teach them better manners the next time, and so they returned aboord with their pro-

A writing fent from the Holmile, that it should be no more so. Towards evening they fent one of their Merchants vnto me, with a writing from their Doctor in Droits, who as we were informed, was chiefe amongst them in absence of But or Blocke, who had come out of Holland, Generall of eleuen Saile. The effect whereof was to let me know. That all the people of the Moluccas had made a perpetuall contract with them for all their Cloues, at fitte Royals of eight the Bahar, of two hundred Cattees, in respect that they had de- 18 linered them out of the fernitude of the Spaniards, not without loffe of much blood, and expence of great wealth; willing me that I should not mooue the people from their obedience, which might redound to their greater damage, they holding the Countrey to be their owne, as conque. red by the Sword. Also that the Naturals ought them much money, which was advanced to be paid in Cloues. Answer was returned that we would not meddle with their businesse, our comming being only to trade with fach as defired to trade with vs, and fo difmitted him,

The twentie fenenth, the Flemmings inforced the Prince to lie with his Curracurra afterne, to keepe watch that none bring any thing aboord vs: for in our fight he commanded a Canoa aboord him, which was comming to vs (as we thought with Spice) making him returne. Towards night, two of the Naturalls brought vs some refreshing.

The twentie eighth, the Prince understanding that we tooke it not well, that hee rid so neere vs to the fearing of the Naturals, remooued and went about a point further off, which much difcontented the Flemmings. After noone, with the Skiffe well manned, I went to fee if I could deale with the Prince for a parcell of Cloues, but found him gone to the Wester side. Captaine Blocke freing my Ski fe gone into the Bay, followed vs with his Csaracsera, and would have landed where I was, but that I would not juffer him, which the Naturals feeing, and that Captaine Blocke returned aboord againe without landing, divers of the better fort came downe to vs, protelling great loue towards vs. and fent for Cocos and other fruites, and bestowed them vpon the Ging. The Master of the Clone seeing Captaine Blocke to make such speed after vs, manned the long Boat for aide, but vpon a figne given returned aboord.

The thirtieth, the Flemmings brought the Prince to ride by vs in his old place. Towards eue- 30 ning another Flemmish ship came in, call d the Moone, a proper ship of thirtie two Peeces of good Ordnance, but not aboue fiftie men: she came to an anchor so neere a head vs , as that wee could feareely wind cleare one of the other. The Prince fent vnto me to excuse his comming backe, but now we saw that he durst not displease the Flemmings. The thirtie one, divers harsh dealings and discourteses passed betwixt the Flemmings and vs.

Aprill the first 1613.

The first of Aprill, the Flemmings brought an hundred and twentie of their men ashoare, which morning and evening did fet and discharge the watch with Drum, Fife and Entigne. This force they hall gathered together out of their Forts and ships.

The second, I seeing no more hope of lading, and that Key Malladaia came not according to 49 promife, gaue order to the Master, to cause water to be filled, and to make readie to set faile with the first faire wind. At noone, obseruing we found this Road of Pelabry, to stand in no degree, twentie fixe minutes to the Northward of the Equinoctiall, Variation three degrees, eight and twentie minutes, the highest land in the Island, Mechian bearing West North-west halte a

The fift, we weighed anchor, little wind, the Current fetting to the Southward, we droue to fea, being under our fore-faile, and ahead the Moone the greater ship of the Flemmish, which made a faire shot under our sterne, which we presently answered, close a head his Admirall, expecting further, but heard no more of them. At noone they both weighed and followed vs, but the wind at South-west had put vs so farre to the windward, as that the Naturalls came abourd 50 with Cloaues for a time, as fait as we could weigh and pay for them, the Flemmings not able to hinder them. Also there came an Oran Cana aboord, who promised vs a good parcell of Cloaues, if we would but come nearer the shoare in the morning.

The fixt, about fiftie Cattees of Cloaues were brought aboord in divers Canoa's, but no newes of the Gallant. Towards evening I standing nearer the shoare then we were willing, but for this occasion, we had fight of a weft a hoare: the Skiffe was fent and spake with the Oran Caya, who faid the Cloaues were readie, and in the darke should be brought abourd; but presently a CHITA Curra, of the Flemmings passing by, put him into such a feare, as albeit our people would have wafted him, yet durit he not adventure : so they returned.

The feuenth in the morning, wee were thwart of Mossiere, being diffant from the Wester 60 point of Machian foure leagues North by East, halfe a point Easterly; and from it North three leagues, is the Island Marro, and from that two leagues Tidore. There is passage betweene these Islands, or on any side of them, without danger. Wee had light of the two Flemmings to the Southwards of vs, plying after vs: Latitude at noone no degrees, fine and thirtie minutes, wind

The eight, Marro, North by Weft, fome two miles off the body of it and one point North by Mario, Eaft; halte a point Eafterly, and the other North-west by North, halte a point Westerly, and the pike of Tidore North by West, and opening the East point of Tidore, and the Wester point of Bachian, they will beare the one from the other North and South, and the body of Marro West Southwest halfe a point Southerly, and the Westerne part of Tidire, that you shall see West by North. Looke welf out, for in the faire way is a long thoule, which lyeth even with the water at A dangerous highwater, the water shewing whitish, and stretcheth North-east and South-west, betweene should

Marro and Battachina: and having bringht the points of the Islands, as about faid, then it will to be East of you, at low water you shall fee it, for it ebbeth lixe foote, the tide feeting fixe houres to the Northward, and fixe to the Southward: but keepe close to the Islands for there is no feare. The Spaniards Fort is on the East-lideof Trane, where is deepe water shoare-too. It fell suddenly. The Spaniards calme, fo that a great fea did let vs into the floare. The Fort made a float at vs, but willingly. Fort on the caime, to that a great read out to you must be most from the Fort made two more, intending to thrike. Earl tide fhort: we answered with one to Sea boord: then the Fort made two more, intending to thrike. Earl tide for the fort was a fine to the fort made two more, intending to thrike. vs,one betweene our millen mail and ancient flatte, the other betwixt maine-mail and fore-mail. Then they shot a Peece from the Top of the Fort without sharpe; wee answered that without, and presently they sent off a Boat with a flagge of truce, the Sea stall setting vs vison the shoare, no wind, nor ground at an hundred fathom, to that we could lay 150 f no way, two Gallyes riding under the Fort: when their Boxt was put from the shoare, they shot their wo chase peeces, but without sharpe. They came and tooke a fast a starne our shippe: there were two Spaniards 20 fouldiers of good ranke, (knowne to Hernando the Spaniard, whom wee tooke with vs from Bantam) fent from the Captaine Generall of the shoare, Don Fernand Bifeere, to know of what Nation we were, what we came for, and wherefore we came notto an anchor under the Kings Fort. We requested them to come aboord: they faid they were commanded to the contrary; wherefore I willed to let downe wine and bread vnto them in a firing, from the poope, which they fell too luftily, in so great a showre of raine, as we had seene, yet would not enter the ships I returned answere, that I was the subject of the Kings Majestie of Great Britaine; as by my Colours they might well differne. They faid the Flemmings had many times past by foot-free; by shewing the like, which made them shoote the second that with sharpe at vs, thinking vs to bee Flemmings. Hent them word that my comming was, to doe the best good I could to the friends of the Kings Marestie of Spaine; but was not mireded to anchor heere but further a head; where, if it pleased Don Fernando to come about, he should be welcome : with which answere, they returned ashoare contented. Suddenly it rhased Godes grane vs a gale, to that we stood a longst the shoare. The Captaine Generall sent off the Pilot Maior of the Gallyes, Francisco Gomes, a man of good presence, to bid mee welcome, ofering his affiliance to bring vs into the best anchoring place under the Fort, or eliewhere about the Island. Being darke, he brought vs to a place about one league and an halfe off the Fore, whereas he faid no force was, and so intreated after supper to be let alhoare, for that the Captaine Generall would dispatch away letters to Ternate, to the Master Del Campo, Don Ieronimo de Sylva, for resolution in all points, and so departed.

The ninch in the morning before day, finding that we were within command of eight peeces of Ordnance, we got up our anchor and remoued a league further to the Southward, where we rid in fine and thirtie fathome: Gomes the Pilot came abourd with two Spaniards more of good fashion, whom I bid kindly welcome, so that they tooke their lodging about. They brought with them a Present of eatable commodities from their Generall. I returned the like to theirs, with proffer of all friendship and assistance, that in mee lay, to sapply his wants, and to accept of protect of arrivanting and an arrivant and arrivant and arrivant arrivant and arrivant arriva Flemmile shippes plyed, as if they would have come to an anchor by vs; but afterwards went Fort of the

The tenth, the Captaine Generall fent to request me to stay, and the next morning hee would visitme, with the Sergeant Major of Ternate, who was arrived with a letter from the Master Del Campo, giving them leave thereby to trade with me for divers matters, and to content mee in what I requested; wherefore I resolued a while longer, to see what good might be done.

Further observations touching the Molucca Ilands, and their proceeding on their Voyage to Iapan.

He eleuenth, wee expected the Captaine Generall according to promise, and hearing nine peeces of Ordnance to be shot out of the Fort, prouided for them, thinking verily that they were comming: But it proued to bee for the arruall of the Prince of Tidore, who had bin abroad in war, and was now returned with the heads of an hun-Hhh

by the Tidori.

ored Ternatans, his force being only fixtic small shot, two brasse Bases, and three or source Fowlets : hauing outerbrown Key (bill) Sedang, the King of Treate his some, whom the Fem-king mag had enforced ouer from Ternate to Machian, to keepe the country people from selling of Cioques to vs. For whom returning back towards Ternate, (after our departure) the King of 71dores fonce, lying purpolely in waite vpon fight of them, the Tydorians keeping themklues behind a point of land, fent out two small Praws to fish in their way, whom the Ternarans eforing, did prefently give chase vnto. The Fishermen casily retire, the other earnestly pursue, vntill before they once thought thereof, they fell into their enemies hands, who spared not one man of an hundred and fixtie, the Prince of Tonate himselfe being one of the number, whole head the Conquerour brought to his wife, who was fifter to the Prince of Ternate, to flaine. At their 10 first incounter, a barrell of powder, which the Prince had bought of vs at Machian, tooke fire. which was the confusion and lose of them all. With the Prince was slaine one of his yonger brethren, and the King of Gedela. Towards evening came about vs the Sergeant Maior of Ternate, and Secretary of State; with the like complements to those of the Tydorian Officers, requesting me to come thither, and they would doe what in them lay for me : whereto I confented, the rather because it was in my way. The twelfth, the Prince of Tidore lent vnto mee, to excuse his hitherto not visiting of mee.

and to acquaint me that he had some store of Cloaues, which I should haue. I thanked him, and requested speedie dispatch. They promised mee to be abourd againe before day. Wherefore to present all treachery, we kept double watch, match in cocke, and all things in readingle. This 20 Tidorian Prince leing a very resolute and valiant souldier, having performed many dangerous explaits upon the Flemmings, and not long fince farprized one of their ships (being a Man of War) then riding not farre from this place. Before day, a Gally (which the Spaniards told vs they expected) came ouer from Batta China, and were neare vs in the darke before they were aware,we haled her, they answered, Spaniards, and your friends, and so made to the shoare with all speed, thee was but small, of fourteene oares on a side. At moone latitude no degrees, fiftie minutesto the Northward of the Equinoctiall.

The thirteenth, we weighed, the wind Northerly , and a Current fetting out of the Southward : passing by the Fort, we gave them sine-peeces, which they required. Divers Spontards boorded vs with complements, and the Princes man, faying, that if we had stayed but foure and 30 twentie houres longer, we should have had good store of Cloaues, but weerather thought they intended fome treachery against with their Gallyes, Frigats, and Curra Curra's, which by fulden departure we thus preuented. Comming about the Wester point of Tidore, we had fight Foure ships of of the foure Flemmile shippes, riding before their Fort of Marices: one of them at fight of vs. shot off a peece of Ordnance, as we supposed, to call their reople abourd to follow vs. We steered directly with the Fortreff: of Ternate : comming neare, shortned our failes, and lay by the

Lee, and shot of a peece towards the Towne, without sharpe; which they readily answered, and fent off a Souldier of good fashion, but to as little purpole as those of Tidore had done. But little wind our shippe sagged in, and no anchoring, but at night a gale at South, we stood into the Sea, having loft much by the Current of that wee had gotten, finding it to let to the 40

Southward. The fourteenth, the wind at South South-west, we steered North North-west, and at noone had latitude one degree no minutes : we had fight of a Gallie, wherefore we cast about, but finding her to fland away, went our course for lapan. But before we part further from this Moluccan Coast, I thinke it not amille, to acquaint the Reader with a few Notes that I hold worthy observance, touching the Trade and state of those

Throughout all the Molucce Ilands, a Bahar of Cloues doth weigh two hundred Cattees of that Countrey, every Cattee three pound five ounces haberdepoiz, which maketh the Bahar to befixe hundred fixtie two pound eight ounces haberdepoiz fubtill. For which Bahar of Cloues, 50 the Flemmings by their perpetuall contract (as they terme it) gine fiftie Rials of eight. My felfe for more speedie obtayning of lading, yeelded to pay them fixtie Rials of eight the Bahar. Which increase of price made them so forward to furnish vs, that had not the Flemmings by their force ouer-awed the nationals, imprisoning and threatning them with death, and keeping watch and good guards along it the Sea-Coaft, I had in one moneth procured our full lading. The most of these Ilands beare store of Cloues. Those of note inhabited, yeeld one yeare with another as followeth, that is to say, Ternate, one thousand Bahars. Machian, one thousand and ninetie. Tydore, nine hundred. Bachian, three hundred. Moteer, fixe hundred. Mean, fittie. Batta China, fine and thirtie. The totall is three thousand nine hundred seventie fine.

Euery third yeare is farre more fruitfull then either of the former two, and is called the great 60 Monion. It is lamentable to fee the ruines that Civill Warre hath bred in those Ilands, which as I understood at my being there, beganne and continued in manner following. The Portugall at his first discourie of them, found fierce warres betwitte the King of Termere, and the King of Tydore, under which two Kings all the other llands are either librected or confederated with one of them. The Portugall for the better fetling of himfelfe, tooke part with neither of them, but politikely carrying himfelfe kept both to bee his friends, and fo fortified vpon the llands of Ternate and Tydore, where, to the Poringals great advantage, having the whole Trade of Cloues in their owne hands, they domineered and hore chiefest sway vntill the yeare 1605. Wherein the The Holland 15 Flemming by force displaced them, and planted himselfe: but so weakly and unprouded for fu- planted in the ture danger, that the next yeare the Spaniard, (who whileft the Portugall remayned there, was doing, 1605. ordered both by the Pope and King of Spaine not to meddle with them) came from the Philippinas, beat the Flemmings out of both the Ilands, tooke the King of Ternate Prisoner, fent him to the Philippinas, and kept Ternase and Tydore under their command. The Flemming fince 10 that time hath gotten footing there againe, and at my beeing there had built him thefe

CHAP.I.S.5. The Flemmings fenerall Forts in the Moluccaes.

Vpon the lland Ternate, They have a Fort called Malagon, which hath three Bulwarkes, and is walled round about. Secondly Tolonco, which hath two Bulwarkes, and a round Towre walled about. Thirdly, Tacome, which hath foure Bulwarkes, and is walled about.

Vpon the lland Tydore, Marieko which hath foure Bulwarkes.

Vpon the Hand Machian, First, Tafasoa, (the chiefe Towns of this Hand) where they have four great Bilwarkes walled about, fixteene Peeces of Ordnance, and about one thousand Inhabitants of the Naturals.

Secondly, Nofakia, another Towne, where they have two Forts walled about, and another 20 Fort vpon the top of a high hill there, which freeth the Roade on the other file, and hath five or fixe Peeces of Ordnance.

Thirdly, Tabalola, a Towne where they have two Forts walled, eight Peeces of Ordnance, and the Inhabitants hereof, (as of the former) under their command. This place is very fironely scituated by nature.

Those of Nofakia are esteemed no good Souldiers, but are reported to take part alwayes, as necreas they can gheffe it, with the strongest. But the Naturals of Tabalola, which formerly dwelt at Cayoa, are accounted the best Souldiers of the Malucca Hands, and are deadly Enemies to the Spaniards and P. rtugals, and as weary now of the Flemmings. In theie three Forts vpon Machian, there were at my being heere an hundred and twentie

30 Helland Souldiers, viz. eightie, at Tafason; thirtie, at Nofakin; and ten, at Tabalola : which Gar-

This Iland Machian is the richest of Cloues of all the Molucce Ilands, and according to the generall report of the Inhabitants, yeeldeth in the yeare of the great Monson about eighteene hundred Bahars of Cloues.

Vpon the Iland Bachian, The Flemmings have one great Fort. Vpon the Iland Moteer, They have foure Bulwarkes.

These Civil Warres have so wasted the Nationals, that a great quantitie of Cloues perish, and not upon the ground for want of gathering. Neither is there any likelihood of peace to bee made betwixt them, vntill the one part be vtterly rooted out.

Thus leading them to their warres I will returne to our Trafficke, and shew in what manner we traded with the Naturals for Cloues, which for the most part was by bartening and exchanging Cotton cloth of Cambaya, and Coromandell for Cloues. The forts' requested, and prices that Candakeens of Barochie, fix Cattees of Cloues. Candakeens Papang, or flat, three Cattees. Selas, or small Bastas, seuen & eight Pasta chere Malayo, sixteen. Dragam chere Malayo, sixteen. Fiue Cassas twelue. Courie of that kind eight. Betellias, or Tancoulos red, tortie foure and fortie eight. Sarallas chere Malayo, fortie eight and fiftie. Sarampouri, thirtie. Chelles, Tapfiels, & Matafors, twentie, & foure and twentie. White Cassa, or Tancoules, fortie, and foure and fortie. Dongeriyus, the finest, twelue. Course of that kind, eight and ten. Pour Cassella, ten. Ballachios the finest, thirtie. Pattachere Malayo, of two fathomes eight and ten. Great Potat, or long foure fathome, fixteene Cattees of Cloues. Parcallas white, twelue. Salalos Tram, twelue and fourteene. Turias and ape Twias, one and two. Patela, of two Fathomes, fiftie and fixtie. Those of foure and one fathome accordingly. Rice eight and twentie pound, a Riall of eight. Sagu, which is a roote whereof the Naturals make their Bread, and is their chiefest food through the whole Countrey, it is fold in bunches, and was worth there one quarter of a Riall of eight a bunch. Veluets, Sattins, Taffataes, and other stuffes of Silke of China, are very well requested heere. And this shall ferue for aduice concerning the Molucca Hands.

The fixteenth, calme till night, then a gale at West: we steered North North-west.

The feuenteenth in the morning, wind at East by South, we steered North but after variable, 6 hifting to all the points of the Compafic towards night we had light of land to the North-ward. The eighteenth, calme, much raine and contrarie windes, I therefore resolued to goe for the Iland Saiem which was to the West-ward, and there to stay and refresh till the Monson would permit me to proceed. But instantly the wind came to the West, so that wee stood North and

Hhh 2

CHAP. 1.S.5.

A Current to very much raine and extreame hot. The twentieth, in the morning calme, and a continual current fetting to the East-ward the East-wards which we have felt ever fince our departure from Ternate. In the after-noone the wind North a gale we stood to the West-ward to stemme the current, in regard of the Northerly winds subiect to calmes and the Easterly current, we stood in with a great lland called Do, to rest and refresh our selues.

Doy a great

The one and twentieth, in the morning we were faire before the faid lland, neere the Northerne point being a low point stretching to the Southwards, we flood in East by South, windat North by East: at nocone the Skiffe was fent to fearch out a convenient place to ride in, but the current did fet fo ftrong to the East-ward, as that we could not get a head, onely discourred a Bav 10 very large, but it had a great shoale lying off the Northerne point halfe a league into the Sea and A great hoale, had fixtie fathome two mile off the shoare fand, but night approaching wee stood off till

The two and twentieth, after Sun-fet we anchored in foure and twentie fathomes, in the Bay having had (franding in) fiftie fixe, thirtie five, twentie fixe, and twentie foure fathomes.

The three and twentieth, I fent the Skiffe ashoare to feeke a convenient place to water in. and to pitch a Tent for the company to defend them from the raine. They found fuch a place right ouer against the ship, together with a great tracke of Deare and Swine, but no signe of people: the Countrey full of Trees and abundance of Cokers, Penang, Serie, Palmitas, and Fowle. Phelant and Wood-cockes. I went ashoare, the Merchants with mee, a Tent was fet vp, our 20 Carpenter made Fal-pits very artificially to take Swine, some fish we tooke amongst the rockes, but cost much labour, one Phesant, and two Wood-pidgeons very large bodied like Hens. some of the Companie stayed all night on shoare, to looke for the comming of the Swine to the Trap.

clipse of the

The foure and twentieth, we saw very large Swine, but got none. This day about halfean houre after seuen in the morning, the Moone in the full was eclipsed in the strangest manner that euer any of vs had feene, being obfoured three houres and an halfe before she recouered her perfeet light, which vnto vs was very fearefull.

The fine and twentieth, our people fearched abroad, brought to the fhip great flore of Cokers, some Fowles, and heads of Palmita Trees, which boyled with Beefe are as good as

The eight and twentieth, the Companie laboured to get in wood and water. The Skiffe founded about the shoale, and found ten and twelve fathome, at the Norther point neere to it, ni ght and day very much raine.

The nine and twentieth and thirtieth were spent in getting aboord our wood, whereof wee had great store, and as good as our Billets in England.

The first of May, the Skiffe was sent to found to the Wester point into the Bay, and found very deepe water. Landing, they found the ruines of houses, and certaine brasse pannes, so that we were of opinion that the place had lately beene inhabited, but the Inhabitants by the Warres hunted from their home. Thetweltth, we fet fayle from this Iland Doy, being the North-east most Iland of Batta Chi- 40 na or Geilolo in the Molnecas, latitude two degrees, thirtie fine minutes, variation fine degrees, end of Geilole. twentie minutes Easterly, having remayned heere twentie dayes, beeing seventie one persons bound for Iapan, and at noone fourteene leagues North by East, off the place where wee an-

Dey at the Northermoft

May 1.1612.

> The thirteenth, the shippes way to noone North by East, twentie two leagues. Wee steered North the wind Weft, variation five degrees thirtie minutes Eafterly, with a firong Current letting to the East-ward, then the wind shifted to the West by South, West North-west, East, then a gale at West by South, and West South-west. The fourteenth, latitude fine degrees twentie fixe minutes, way North by East twentie fixe leagues, wind West, and Current as afore-faid: cleere weather. The fifteenth, latitule fine degrees fiftie fixe minutes, way North North-east, 50 fourteene leagues current as formerly. The fixteenth, latitude teuen degrees ten minutes way North Eafterly, twentie feuen leagues, wind at South-west, and West rainie. The seuenteenth, latitude eight degrees twentie two minutes, way North twentie foure leagues wind South-welt, but in the morning at Bast with raine. The eighteenth, latitude nine degrees seuen minutes, way North-easterly fifteene leagues, wind at East and East North-east very cleere weather. The nineteenth, latitude nine degrees fortie one minutes, way North eleuen leagues one third part, wind East and East North-east. The twentieth, latitude ten degrees fortie minutes, way North halfe a point Westerly, twentie leagues wind, East and North-east, with helpe of a current Northerly. The one and twentieth, latitude eleuen degrees thirtie fixe minutes, way North North-well twentie leagues, wind North-east East, North North-east, and North-east by East ftar-boord tacke aboord. The two and twentieth, latitude twelue degrees thirtie nine minutes, way North North-weit, twentie three leagues, wind East North-east, North-east by East, and

The three and twentieth, latitude twelve degrees fiftie feuen minutes, way North by Weft. fixe and two third parts of a league wind, South-east calme. The foure and twentieth, latitude thirteene degrees fortie two minutes, way North afteenel agues, wind South by East, very smooth water. The fine and twentieth, latitude fifteene degrees, twelve minutes, way North thirtie lengues, wind South, we steered North Westerly. Note, that wee find those fauourable Note. winds in the full of the Moone. The fixe and twentieth, latitude feuenteene degrees, fixe minutes, way North third eight leagues, wind South by West South, and South South-west a conrinual fluire gale and smooth water. The seven and twentieth, way North-east twentie foure to leagues, wind at West North-west and West, with Raine, Thunder and Lightning. The eight and twentieth, way North, nine leagues wind West, and West North-west. The nine and twennith latitude nineteene degrees fifteene minutes, way North, nine leagues winde North-east Eaft, West, West North-west and South, calmes and gusts. The thirtieth, latitude twentie degrees twelue minutes, way North twentie leagues, wind at South east and East South-east. The one and thirtieth, latitude twentie one degrees, thirtie fine minutes, way North by West, thirdegrees Eatieleagues, wind East, and East by North. Variation fixe degrees no minutes Easterly.

The first of June, we passed the Tropick of Cancer, the Sunne in our Zenith wee could not ob. June 1. 1613. ferue, way North fortie leagues, wind at South-east, and South-east by East, variation fine degrees twentie fine minutes Eafterly. The second, latitude twentie fine degrees fortie foure minutes, way North fortie two leagues, 20 wind South-east and South-east by South, making account we should have seene the Hands Dos The Hes Dos Ress Mages about eight of the clocke in the morning, but as yet fee none. About four a clocke Ress Mages.

in the after-moone we made land being a very low Hand bearing North-west about three leagues off, wind South-east by East, and having it North North-east, we had fight of the high-land ouer the low land, there being many little Hands to the number of ten or eleuen, with broken ground and breaches reaching over to each lland, so that wee could discerne no passage to the West-ward. At night we tackt off, tooke in our Top-sayles, and lay close by in our courses all night, wind very much at South South-east, we steered East. The Hands lye along it North-east

The third, we flood in for the land, being a high Hand bearing North-west, seeming to vs a 30 most pleasant and fruitfull toyle, as any we had seene since our comming out of England, well peopled, and great flore of Cattle. Wee purposed to have come to an anchor about the Northeast point, and founding liad fixty fathome, had fight of-two Boates comming off verto vs. wee yfed all the meanes we could to speake with them, being delirous of a Pilot, and to know the name of the Iland, the better to bee affured where we were. But the wind was fo forcible, as that we could not get in, wherefore we flood away North-weit, and had fight of another Iland bearing West North-west, we steered with it, and from thence had fight of another Hand, bearing North-east halfe a point Easterly, some seuen or eight leagues off, and comming under the Wester-most Hand, we discerned certaine Rockes that lay on the shoare aboue two miles, the one aboue water, and the Northermost vnder-water, and is a great way without the other, the 40 Sea breaking upon it. Then the land falleth away to the South-wards round, and neere to the point you shall open a steepe Rocke, that is vpon the West-side of the Iland, resembling Charing-Croffe. Then we steered North-west with an extreame gale at South by West, and South South-weft. When we had opened the Iland, and a current letting to the South-ward, at foureof the clocke we tooke in our Top-failes and haled close vpon a tacke, the Hand being about feuen leagues Nort-west off vs. Way to noone North halfe a point Easterly, fixteene leagues, way North North-west three quarters Westerly, twentie leagues. At three a clocke in the afternoone we fet our courses, the wind at North-west, and North-west by North, wee fleered North-east iome two houres, then calme and raine, variation at Sunne-setting foure de- Variation grees fortie minutes Eafterly.

The fifth, way West by North foure leagues and an halfe, wind North North-east, wee force minutes; fleere North-west starboord tackt, variation foure degrees fortie two minutes.

The fixth, way North North-west nine leagues, wind East North-east, North-east by North and North-east by East, little wind, much raine, variation foure degrees nineteene minutes Eafterly. At night the wind at East and East South-east.

The feuenth, way North-east by North fixteene leagues, wind at South-east and South Southwest, then we steered away North-east by North, supposing to bee off Tonan twentie eight or

The eight, in the morning wee had fight of a high round Hand bearing East fixe leagues off with divers other Ilands rifing in fixe or feven parts bearing West five or fixe leagues off : having 60 made to this noone twentie two leagues North-east by North, wind at South South-west a strife g.le. Then we haled ouer North-welt with another Hand, which we found to be foure in number, being barren and many picked Rockes. Then we steered North by East, the wind at South by West, about three of the clocke wee had fight of an Iland, with three Hils like three round Sugar-loues, bearing East by S. fine leagues off. At fine of the clock we had fight of an Hand ri-

toure decrees

fing in two parts, bearing North North-east, the Northren end being an high steep vpright point. the land falling away to the Eastward North-east, and at fixe of the clock the body of it did beare East one league and an laste off. The wind West, we flood off vpon a tacke North North-west. The ninth, in the morning wee had light of land, bearing North North-eaft, and fixegreat

Islands on a ranke. From the Island we descried yesternight North-east and South-west, and at the Northermost end of them all, many small rockes and hummockes, and in the Bay to the Eastward of the hummockes we saw an high land bearing East, East by South, and East South. Zima or Maft - east, which is the Island called Xima in the Plats, but called by the Naturals Majhma, and the Island aforelaid, North North-east, is called Segue or Amaxay: it lyeth East by North, and West by South, with many small Islands and rockes on the Southerne side of them, and is distant from 10 the Island with the steepe point, (which wee did see the eight day) South South-west twelve leagues, the wind calme all night, yet we got to the Northward, as wee supposed, by the helpe of a current or tide.

The tenth, by breake of day the outward-most land to the Westward did beare North by East ten leagues off, the wind at North-east by North: at nine, a gale at South, wee steered Northby West, and had fight of two hummockes without the point. Then wee steered North North-west, and soone after came foure great Fisher-boats abourd, about fine tunnes apeece in burthen, they failed with one faile, which stood like a Skiffe faile, and skuld with foure oares on kind of oares. a fide, their oares relting woon a pinne faitned on the toppe of the Boats fide, the head of which pinne was so let into the middle part of the oare, that the oare did hang in his iust poize, so that 20 the labour of the Rower is much leffe, then otherwife it must be; yet doe they make farre greater speed then our people with rowing, and performe their worke standing, as ours doe sitting. fo that they take the leffe roome. They told vs that we were before the entrance of Nangalague, bearing North North-east, and the straights of Arima, North-east by North, and the high hill. which we did fee yesterday, is upon the Island called Vfzsdeke, which maketh the straights of Arims, where at the Norther-most end is good riding, and at the South end is the going into Cachinach. To this noone we have made a North-way fixe leagues. We agreed with two of the Masters of the Fisher-boats (for thirtie Rialls of eight a piece in money, and Rice for their food) to Pilot vs into Firando; which agreement made, their people entred our shippe, and performed voluntarily their labour, as readily as any of our Mariners. We steered North by West, the Pi- 30 lots making account to be thirtie leagues off Firando. One of the foure Boats which came abourd vs, did belong to the Portugals, lining at Langa Jaque, and were new Christians, and thought that our ship had been the Macan ship; but finding the contrary, would voon no intreatie stay, but made haftbacke agains to adulfe them.

Naugasaque.

۵. V I.

Their arrivall at Firando : the Habite, Rites, and Customes of the Iaponians.

lune 11. 1613. He eleuenth, about three of the clocke in the afternoone, we came to an anchor halfe The king of a league short of Errande, the tide to from that we could not get further in : Some af-Fande and his. ter I was vilited by the old King Foyne Sama, and his Nephew Tone-Sama, Gouernour then of the Iland vnder the old King. They were attended with fortie Boats or Gallyes, rowed some with ten, some with fifteene oares on a side: when they drew neare to the ship, the King commanded all, but the two wherein himfelfe and his Nephew were, to fall

Legesia: habite, a sterne, and they only entred the ship, both of them in silke gownes, girt to them with a shirt, and a paire of breeches of flaxen cloath next their bodies; either of them had two Cattans or 10 fwords of that Countrey by his fide, the one of halfe a yard long, the other about a quarter. They were no bands, the fore-parts of their heads were shauen to the crowne, and the rest of their haire, which was very long, was gathered together and bound vp on a knot behind, wearing neither Hat nor Turbant, but bare-headed. The King was aged about seventie two yeeres, his Nephew cr Grand-child, that gouerned vnder him, was about two and twentie yeeres old, and either of them had his Gouernour with him, who had command ouer their flaues, as they appointed him. Their manner and curtefie in faluting was after their manner, which is this, First, in presence of him whom they are to salute, they put off their shooes (flockings they weare none) and then clapping their right hand within their left, they put them downe towards their knees, and so wagging or mouing of their hands a little to and fro, they stooping, steppe with 60 small stepssideling from the partie saluted, and crie Augh, Augh. I led them into my Cabbin, where I had prepared a Banq jet for them, and a good confort of Musicke, which much delighted them. They bade me welcome, and promifed me kind entertainment. I deliuered our Kings Letters to the King of Firando, which he received with great ioy, faying hee would not open it till Ange came, who could interpret the fame vnto him; this Ange is in their language a Pilot, being one William Adams an English man, who passing with a Flemming through the South-sea, by William Adams. mutiny and diforder of the Marriners shee remained in that Countrey, and was seited upon by His flory write the Emperour about twelue yeares before. The King having flayed abourd about an houre and a temby himfelfe halfe, tooke his leaue: he was no fooner ashoare, but all his nobilitie, attended with a multitude fore. of fouldiers, entred the ship, every man of worth brought his present with him, some Venison, fome Wilde-fowle, fome wilde Boare the largest and fattest that ever any of vs had feene, some Fruits, Fish, &c. They did much admire our shippe, and made as if they had neuer seene it sufficiently. We being peftered with the number of thefe vifiters, I fent to the King, requesting 10 him that order might bee taken to remoue them, and to preuent all inconveniences that mighe happen. Whereupon hee fent a Guardian, (being a principall man of his owne Guard) with charge to remaine and lye aboord, that no injury might be offered vinto vs; and caused a proclamation to be made in the Towne to the same effect. The same night, Henrick Brower, Captaine of the Dutch Factory there, came abourd to visite me, or rather to see what passed betwixt the King and vs. I did write the fame day to Mafter Adams (being then at Edoo, which is very neare three hundred leagues from Firando) to let him vaderfrand of our arrivall. King Form fent it away the next day by his Admirall to Ofacker, the first Port of note vpon the chiefe Island, and Ofacker. then by post vp into the Land to Edoo: giving the Emperour likewise to vnderstand of our being there, and cause thereof.

CHAP. 1. S.6. The King of Iapons kindnesse to the English.

The twelfth in the morning, there was brought aboord such abundance of fish, and so cheape as we could defire. We weighed and fet faile for the Road. The King fent at the least threefcore great Boats or Gallyes very well mand, to bring vs into the harbor. I doubted what the cause of their coming might be, & was fending off the Skiffe to comand them not to come neare the ship but the King being the head-most, we aued with his handkercher, and willed the rest to attend, and himfelfe comming aboord, told me that he had commanded them to come to tow our ship in about a point, fomewhat dangerous, by reason of the force of the tide, which was such, that Astrongtide. having aftiffe gale of wind, yet we could not ftemme it, and comming into the eddie, we should have been set upon the Rockes. So we sent Hawsers abourd them, and they fell to worke. In the meane while the King did breake his fast with me. Being at an anchor, I would have requi-30 ted the people for their paines, but the King would not suffer them to take any thing. We an- We anchored chored before the Towne in fine fathome, to neare the shoare, that we might talke to the people before the in their houses. We faluted the Towne with nine peeces of Ordnance, but were not answered. for they have no Ordnance heere, nor any Fort, but Barricados only for small shot. Our ground heere was Ozie. Diners Noblemen came to bid me welcome, whereof two were of extraordinary account, called Nobusane and Simmadone, who were very well entertained, and at parting held very great flate, one flaying aboord whileft the other were landed; their children and chiefe followers in the like manner. There came continually fuch a world of people aboord, both men and women, as that we were not able to go vpon the decks : round about the ship was furnished with Boats full of people, admiring much the head and flerne of the ship. I gaue leave to divers 40 women of the better fort to come into my Cabbin, where the Picture of Venus, with her fonne Note the dan-

Cupid, did hang somewhat wantonly set out in a large frame, they thinking it to bee our Ladie general Popids and her Sonne, fell downe and worthipped it, with thewes of great deuotion, telling men in a fenfe, by venewhilpering manner (that fome of their owne companions which were not to, might not heare) 12100 of Imathat they were Christianos: whereby we perceived them to be Christians, conversed by the Por- gestugall lefuits. The King came aboord againe, and brought foure chiefe women with him. They were atti- The Kings we-

red in gownes of filke, clapt the one skirt over the other, and fo girt o them, bare-legged, only men, their haa paire of halfe buskins bound with filkeriband about their instep: their haire very blacke, and tite. very long, tyed vp in a knot vpon the crowne in a comely manner : their heads no where shauen

so as the mens were. They were well faced, handed, and footed; cleare skind and white, but wanting colour, which they amend by arte. Of flature low, but very fat ; very curteous in behauiour, not ignorant of the respect to be given vnto persons according to their fashion. The King requested that none might stay in the Cabbin, faue my selfe and my Linguist, who was borne in lapan, and was brought from Bantam in our thip thither, being well skild in the Mallayan tongue, wherein he deliuered to mee what the King spoke vnto him in the Iapan language. The Kings women feemed to be formewhat bashfull, but he willed them to bee frellicke. They fung divers Their musicke fongs, and played upon certain Instruments (where one did much resemble our Lute)being bel- instrumental lyed like it, but longer in the necke, and fretted like ours, but had only four gut-strings. Their and vocall. fingring with the left hand like ours, very nimbly; but the right hand striketh with an Iuory bone, 6c as we vie to play vpon a Citterne with a quill. They delighted themselves much with their muficke, keeping time with their hands, and playing and finging by booke, prickt on line and space, Prick-long. refembling much ours heere. I realted them, and prefented them with divers English commodities: and after some two houres stay they returned. I moved the King for a house, which hee readily granted, and tooke two of the Merchants along with him, and shewed them three or foure

Prefents. Feating and

houles, willing them to take their choife, paying the owners as they could agree. The thirteenth, I went alloare, attended upon by the Merchants and Principall Officers, and delinered the Preferes to the King, amounting to the value of one hundred and ferrie prends, or thereabouts, which he received with very great kindnelle, feathing me and my whole companie healths in topen with disters fores of powdered wild fowles and fruits; and calling for a flanding Cup (which was one of the Prefents then deliuered him ) he caused it to be filled with his Countrey wine, which is diffilled out of Rice, and is as strong as our Aquanta: and albeit the Cuppe held vpward of a pint and an halfe, notwithflanding taking the Cup in his hand, he told me hee would drinke it pint and an mare, not viting of England, and fo did, my felte and all his Nobles doing the like. And whereas in the roome where the King was, there was onely my felfe and the Cape Mer-

Gesturcat

Nobles eid fit at meat croffe-legged vpon Mats, after the Turkie fashion, the Mats richly edged. some with cloath of Gold, some with Veluet, Satten, and Damaske. The foureteenth and afteenth, we spent with giving of Presents. The fixteenth, I concluded with Captaine Audaffee, Captaine of the China quarter here, for his houle, to pay ninetie fine Ryals of eight for the Monton of fixe Moneths, he to repaire it at prefent, and wee to repaire it hereafter, and alter what we pleafed: he to furnishall convenient roomes with Mats according to the fashion of the Countrey.

chant, (the rest of our Company being in an other roome) the King commanded his Secretarie to goe out vnto them, and fee that euerie one of them did pledge the health. The King and his

This day our thip was so pessered with people, as that I was enforced to fend to the King for a Guardian to cleare them out, many things being ftolne, but I more doubted our owne people, then the Na urals. There came in a Flemming in one of the Countrey boates, which had been at Maftana aplace the Hand Malhma, where he had fold good store of Pepper, broad Cloth, and Elephants teeth, but would not beacknowne vnto vs to have fold any thing, yet brought nothing backe in the boat with him. But the lapons his watermen told vs the truth, viz. That he had fold good quantitle of goods at a Mar: there, and returned barres of filter, which they kept very fecret.

The one and twentieth, the old King came abourd againe, and brought with him divers women to be frollicke. These women were Actors of Comedies, which passe there from Iland to I-

Women Amidies in laper,being alfo men, and their price rated. Bawdes in Ia-of good vent

for our commodities.

land to play, as our Players doe here from Towne to Towne, having feuerall shifts of apparrell for 20 the better grace of the matter acted; which for the most part are of Warre, Loue, and such like. These Women are as the slaues of one man, who putteth a price what every man shall pay that hath to doe with any of them; more then which he is not to take vpon paine of death, in cale the partie injured shall complaine. It is left to his owned iscretion to prize her at the first, but rise he cannot afterwards, fall he may. Neither doth the partie bargaine with the Wench, but with her Master, whose command the is to obey. The greatest of their Nobilitie travelling, hold it no disgrace to fend for these Panders to their Inne, & do compound with them for the Wenches, either to fill their drinke at Table (for all men of any ranke haue their drinke filled to the by Women) or otherwise to have the vie of them. When any of these Panders die (though in their life time they were received into Company of the best, yet now as vinworthy to rest amongst the worst) they are bridled with a bridle made of firaw, as you would bridle an Horse, and in the cloathes 40 they died in, are dragged through the streetes into the fields, and there cast vpon a dunghill, for

Fine thousand death for tradogges and fowles to decoure.

name of the Lord Talbet.

The twentie three, we had newes of two China lunkes arrived at Langa saque, laden with Sugar. By him we understood, that the Emperour of China had then lately put to death about fine Chinefes done to thouland persons, for trading out of the Countrey, contrary to his Edict, conficating all their diagin forrain goods: notwithstanding hope of profit entitled these men to put it in hazard, having bribed the new Punganas and Officers upon the Sea-coast, which upon the execution of the former, were The twentie ninth, a Soma or Iunke of the Flemmings arrived at Langafaque from Syam, laden 50

The Hollanders formerly patfed under the name of Engushmen. No c.

parts.

with Brafill wood and Skins of all forts, wherein it was faid that there were Englishmen, but prooued to be Flemmings. For that before our comming, they passed generally by the name of Englishmen: for our English Nation hath been long known by report among them, but much scandalled by the Peringal's Ielaites, as Pyrats and Rouers vpon the Seas: fo that the Naturals have Lapanian long of a long which they call the English Crofonia, hewing how the English doe take the Spanish thips. which they (finging) doe act likewise in gesture with their Cattans by their fides, with which the English. fong and acting, they terrifie and skare their children, as the French fometimes did theirs with the

Iuly.

The first of July, two of our Company happened to quarrell the one with the other, and were very likely to have gone into the field, to the endangering of vs all. For it is a custome here, That 60 whofoeuer drawes a weapon in anger, although he doe no harme therewith, hee is prefently cut in peeces; and doing but small burt, not only themselves are so executed, but their whole gene-

The second day, I went ashoare to keep house in Firardo, the houshold confishing of twenty fix persons. Note, that at our comming we found Broad-clockes of fitteen or fixteene pound a cloth to be fold by the Dutch in Fuando, for fortic Rials of eight, which is eight pound sterling the Mat, English broad which Mat is two yards and a quarter; but defirous to keep up the price of our cloath, and hearing the Dutch in that the Dutch had great store there, I had conference with Brower, Captaine of their Factorie to the Da this effect; That betwixt vs we should fet rates upon such clothes as both of vs had, and neither of vs in any wife to fell vinder the price agreed vpon; for performance whereof, I proffered to enter into bond to him. In the morning he feemed to approone hereof, but ere night fent word that he diffired it, excusing himselfe that he had no warrant from his Masters to make any fuch agreement. The next morning, he shipped away great store of Cloath to divers Ilands, rating them at base prizes, viz. at twentie, eighteene and fixteen Rials the Mat, that he might proto cure the more speedie dispatch of his owne, and glut the place before the comming of ours. Bantam Pepper vngarbled, which coft at Bantam one Riall three quarters of eight the facke, was worth here at our comming tenne Tayes the Peecull, which is one hundred Cattees, making one hundred thirtie pound English subtill. A Taye is fine shillings sterling with them. A Riall of eight is worth there in ordinary payment but feuen Masse, which is three shillings fixe pence sterling. For a Maile is as a Riall of Plate.

Tinne the Peecull, thirtie Tayes: Elephants Teeth the Peecull eightie Tayes: Iron cast Peeces the Peecull fixe Tayes: Powder the Peecull twentie three Tayes: Aloes Socatrina the Cattee fixe Tayes: Fowling Peeces the peece twentie Tayes: Callico and fach like Commodities of Choremandel, and of the Guzerates, as they are in goodnesse.

The feuenth, the King of the Hand Goto, not farre from Firando came to wifit King Foyne, faying, King of Goto. that he had heard of an excellent English thip arrived in his Dominions, which he greatly defired to see, and goe aboord of. King Forne intreated me that he might be permitted, for that hee was an especiall friend of his. So he was well entertained aboord, banqueted, and had divers Peeces thot off at his departure, which he very kindly accepted, and cold me, that hee should bee right The King of glad to live to fee fome of our Nation to come to his Iland, whither they should be heartly wel- Gotodesirous

The eighth, three Iaponians were executed, viz. two men and one woman: the cause this, The would come The eighth, three Iaponians were executed, viz. two her and one would be appointed thefe two dome. woman none of the honestelf (her husband being trauelled from home) had appointed thefe two dome. their feuerall houres to repaire vnto her. The latter man not knowing of the former, and thinking lapon is manthe time too long, comming in before the houre appointed, found the first man with her already, ner of Execu-

and enraged thereat, he whipt out his Cattan, and wounded both of them very forely, having very sian, neere hewne the Chine of the mans backe in two. But as well as he might hee cleared himfelie of the woman, and recouering his Cattan, wounded the other. The street taking notice of the fray, forthwith seased upon them, led them aide, and acquainted King Forme therewith, and sent to know his pleasure, ( for according to his will, the partie is executed ) who presently gaue order that they should cut off their heads: which done, every man that listed (as very many did) came to trie the sharpenesse of their Cattans upon the Corps, so that before they left off, they had hewne them all three into peeces as small as a mans hand, and yet notwithstanding did not then iue ouer, but placing the peeces one vpon another, would try how many of them they could ftrike through at a blow: and the peeces are left to the Fowles to denoure.

The tenth, three more were executed as the former, for stealing of a woman from Firando, and To steale sa felling her at Langafaeque long fince, two of them were brethren, and the other a sharer with them others slue. When any are to be executed, they are led out of the Towne in this manner: There goeth first death. one with a Pick-axe, next followethan other with a shouell for to make his grave (if that bee The manner of permitted him) the third man beareth a small Table whereon is written the parties offence, execution, which table is afterwards fet vp vpon a Post on the graue where he is buried. The fourth is the partie to be executed, his hands bound behind him with a filken cord, having a litle Banner of Paper(much refembling our wind-vanes) whereon is likewise written his offence. The executioner followeth next, with his Cattan by his fide, holding in his hand the cord wherewith the offen-

30 deris bound. On either fide of the executioner goeth a fouldiour with his Pike, the head thereof resting on the shoulder of the partie appointed to suffer, to skare him from attempting to escape. In this very manner I faw one led to execution, who went fo refolutely and without all appearance of feare of death, that I could not but much admire him, neuer having feene the like in Christendome. The offence for which he suffered was for stealing of a sacke of Rice ( of the value of two shillings fixe pence, from his neighbour, whose house was then on fire. The eleventh, there arrived at Langa Jacque three China Iunckes laden with Silkes. The nineteenth, the old King Forne, intreated me for a peece of Poldauis, which I fent him; hee caused it Poldauis worn presently to be made into Coates, which he (intwithstanding that hee was a King, and of that greatage, and famed to be the worthiest fouldiour of all Iapan, for his valour and feruice in the Co-614 rean warres ) did weare next his skinne, and fonce part thereof was made into handkerchieses, which he daily vfed. The twentieth, a Soma or luncke comming from Cochinchina arrived at Langasaque, laden with Silkes, and Beniamin, excellent cleere and rich. The nine and twentieth, M. Adams arriued at Firando, having been feuenteene dayes on the way comming from Sorongo, we having frai-Seutricie for fighting and drawing wea-

An intention

The old King

fpend by the way. A Tay is fine thil of our ward row..rd

Fuccate a large

William Adams ed here for his comming fortie eight dayes. After I had friendly entertained him, I confer. A commeth vnto with him in the presence of the Merchants, touching the incouragement hee could give of trade in these parts. He answered, that it was not alwaies alike, but sometimes better, sometimes worse, yet doubted not but we should doe as well as others; giving admirable commendations of the Countrey, as much affected thereunto.

The thirtieth in the morning, one of the yong Kings Gouernours was by his order cut into pieces in the street, for being (as it was thought) too familiar with his mother. A slaue of his died with him, for endeauouring to defend his Mafter. This day there came to Frando certaine Spaniards of M. Adams his acquaintance, to defire passage in our ship for Bantams. These Spaniards had been belonging to a Spanish Gentleman their Generall, who about a yeare pall, were 10 An intention of the Staniards come ( vpon the King of Spaines charge ) from Nova Hispania, to discouer to the Northward of to discouer to Iapan, and arriving at Edoo, attending the Monson to goe to the Northward, which beginneth the Northward in the end of May, his Company ( whereof these were two ) mutinied against him, every man taking his owne way, leaving the thip vtterly vnmanned, wherefore I thought it best to keepe

> The third, King Forne fent to know of what Bulk our Kings Prefent to the Emperour was,also what number of people I would take with me, for that he would prouide accordingly for my going up in good fashion both for Barke, Horses, and Pallanchins.

This day, I canfed the Prefents to be forted that were to be given to the Emperour, and to those of office and esteeme about him. viz. To Ogo/hosama, the Emperour, to the value of-

To Shongofama, the Emperours ionne-To Codskedona, the Emperours Secretarie To Saddadona, the Emperours Sonnes Secretarie-To Icocora Inga, Indge of Meaco To Fongo dona, Admirall of Orunga To Goto Shozanero, the Mintmafter

d. VII.

Captaine Saris his lourney to the Court of the Iaponian Emperour, and observations there, and by the way.

He seuenth of August, King Forne furnished me with a proper Galley of his owner rowed with twentie fiue oares on a fide, and fixtie men, which I did fit vp in a verie comely manner, with waite clothes, entignes, and all other necessaries, and having taken my leaue of the King, I went and remained aboord the ship, to set all things in orfent 100, Tayes der before my departure. Which done, and remembrances left with the Master and Cape Mer- 40 of lapse money chant, for the well governing of the thip and house ashoare during my absence, taking with mee tenne English, and nine others, besides the former fixtie, which were onely to attend the Gallie, I departed from Firando towards the Emperours Court. Wee were rowed through, and amongit divers Hands, all which, or the most part of them, were well inhabited, and divers proper Townes built vpon them; whereof one called Fuccate, hath a very strong Castle, built of free My ferring for itone, but no Ordnance nor Souldiers therein. It hath a ditch about fine fathome deepe, and twice as broad round about it, with a draw bridge, kept all in very good repaire. I did land & dine the Emperours there in the Towne, the tyde and wind so strong against vs, as that we could not passe. The Towne feemed to be as great as London is within the wals, very wel built, and euen, fo as you may fee from the one end of the streete to the other. The place exceedingly peopled, very Civill and 50 curteous, onely that at our landing, and being here in Fuccate, and fo through the whole Country, whitherfoeuer we came, the boyes, children, and worfer fort of idle people, would gather about and follow along after vs, crying, Core, Core, Cocore, Ware, that is to fay, You Coreans with falle bearts: wondering, hooping, hollowing, and making fuch a noise about vs, that we could scarcely heare one an other speake, sometimes throwing stones at vs (but that not in many Townes) yet the clamour and crying after vs was every where alike, none reproouing them for it. The belt aduice that I can give those who hereafter shall arrive there, is that they passe on without regarding those idle rablements, and in so doing, they shall find their eares onely troubled with the noile. All alongst this Coast, and so vp to Ozaca, we found women divers, that lived with their houshold and family in boats upon the water, as in Holland they do the like. These women 60 would catch fifth by diving, which by net and lines they miffed, and that in eight fathome depth: boats youth: atheir eyes by continuall diving doe grow as red as blood, whereby you may know a diving woman from all other women.

We were two daies rowing from Firando to Faccate: about eight or tenne leagues on this file

CHAP.1. $ 7. The true beire of Iapan defeated of his Inheritance.

the straights of Xemina-Jeque, we tound a great Towne, where there lay in a Docke, a luncke of Straights of eight hundred or a thouland Tunnes of burthen, shearhed all with yron, with a guard appointed. Xemina que. eight hundred of a thousand a dimer of the than a france to keep her from firing and treachery. She was built in a very homely fashion, much like that luncke, which describeth Noahs Arke vnto vs. The Naturals told vs, that she ierued to transport souldi-

ers into any of the Hands, if rebellion or warre shoul I happen. We found nothing extraordinary after we had passed the straights of Xemina-leque, vntill we came vato Ofaca, where we arrived the twenty leventh day of August: our Gailey could not Oface. come neere the Towneby fixe miles, where another imaller Veilell met vs, wherein came the good man or Hoft of the house where we lay in Oface, and brought a banquet with him of wine

10 and falt fruits to intertaine me. The boat having a fast made to the mast-head, was drawn by men, and last sare from London Westward. We found Oface to be a very great Towne, as great as Description of Landon within the walls, with many faire Timber bridges of a great height, feruing to palle ouer Oface. ariuer there as wide as the Thames at London. Some faire houses we found there, but not many. It is one of the chiefe Sea-ports of all lapier; having a Castle in it, marvellous large and strong, with very deepe trenches about it, and many draw bridges, with gates plated with yron. The Caffle is built all of Free-stone, with Bulwarks and Battlements, with loope holes for final shot A faire and and arrowes, and divers pallages for to cast stones upon the aslaylants. The walls are at the least strong Castle.

fixe or feuen yards thicke, all (as I faid) of Free-Hone, without any filling in the inward part with trumpery, as they reported vnto me. The stones are great, of an excellent quarry, and are to cut so exactly to fit the place where they are laid, that no morter is wied, but onely earth cast betweene to fill vp voyd creuifes if any be. In this Cattle did dwell at our beeing there, the forme of Tiquafamma, who being an infant at the time of his Fathers decease, was left to the governe- The fon of Timent and education of foure, whereof Ogelhosamma, the now Emperour was one and chiefe. The quisana, the ment and education of route, whereof open samue, the new Lingston was one and entered in the ingention of the first of the chief three defirous of Sourraigntic each for his particular, and repulsed by Ogoshofan ma, were laction with the control of the control o for their owne fafetic forced to take vp Armes, wherein fortune fauouring Oeoloafamma at the fened of his triall in field, two of them beeing flaine, the third was glad to faue himfelie by flight. He beeing light. Conquerour, attempted that which formerly ( as it is thought) hee neuer dream'd of, and prodaimed himfelfe Emperour, and feazing vpon the true heire, married him vnto his daughter, as the onely meanes to warke a perfect reconcilement, confining the young married couple to live to within this Castle of Ofaca, attended onely with such as had been brought up from their cradles by Ogoffrofamma, not knowing any other Father (as it were ) then him: So that by their intelligence he could at all times understand what passed there, and accordingly rule him. Right ouer against Ofaca. on the other fide of the River, lyeth another great Towne called

Sacay, but not to bigge as Ofaca, yet is it a Towne of great Trade for all the Hands thereabout. Sacay. The eight and twentieth day at night, having left musters and prices of our Commodities with our Hoft, we parted from Ofaca by Barke towards Fushimi, where we arrived.

The nine and twentieth at night we found here a Garrison of three thousand Souldiers maintayned by the Emperour, to keepe Miaco and Ofaca in Subjection. The Garrison is shifted eue- Garrisons ry three yeares, which change happened to be at our being there, so that we saw the old Bands changed energy and march away, and the new enter, in most Souldier-like manner, marching fine a brest, and to enerieten files an O feer which is called a Captaine of fiftie, who kept them continually in verie and Weapons good order. First, their shot, viz. Calicuers, (for Muskets they have none, neyther will they yie any) then followed Pikes, next Swords, or Cattans and Targets, then Bowes and Arrowes: next those, weapons refembling a Welch-hooke called Waggadafbes; then Calieuers againe, and fo as formerly, without any Enfigne or Colours : neyther had they any Drummes or No Enfignes other Muficall Instruments for Warre. The first file of the Cattans and Targets had fluer feab- nor Drums or berds to their Cattans, and the last file which was next to the Captaine had their feabberds of the Musicke. gold. The Companies confifted of divers numbers, some five hundred, some three hundred, some one hundred and fiftie men. In the midft of every Companie were three Horfes very richly so trapped, and furnished with Sadles, well set out, some couered with cottly Furres, some with Veluet, some with Stammet broad-cloth, every Horse had three slaves to attend him, ledde with filten halters, their eyes couered with lether couers. After every Troope followed the Captaine on Horle-backe, his bed and other necessaries were laid vpon his owne Horle, equally peafed on either fide, ouer the same was spread a couering of redde felt of China. whereupon the Captaine did fit crosse-legged, as if hee had fate betwixt a couple of pan- Strangeriding niers: and for those that were ancient or otherwise weake-backt, they had a staffe artificially fixed vnto the Pannell, that the Rider might reft himselfe, and leane backward against it, as if he were fitting in a chaire. The Captaine Generall of this Garrison wee met two dayes after we had met his first troop, (having still in the meane-time met with some of these Companies as 60 we passed along, sometimes one league, sometimes two leagues distant one from another.) Hee marched in very great state, beyond that the others did, (for the second Troope was more richly fet out in their armes then the first : and the third then the second , and so still every one better then other, vertill it came vato this the last and best of all.) He hunted and hawked all the way, Hunting and having his owne Hounds and Hawkes along with him, the Hawkes being hooded and lured as Hawkes.

ours are. His Horses for his owne Sadle being fixe in number, richly trapped. Their Horses are not tall, but of the fize of our midling Nags, fhort and well truft, small headed and very full of mettle, in my opinion, farre excelling the Spanift Iennet in pride and stomacke. He had his Pal lankin carryed before him, the infide of Crimfon Veluet, and fixe men appointed to carrie it, two Such good order was taken for the patting and prouiding for, of these three thousand Souldiers. that no man either trauelling or inhabiting upon the way where they lodged, was any way injured by them, but cheerefully entertayned them as other their gueffs , because they paid for what they tooke, as all other men did. Every Towne and Village vpon the way being well fitted with Cookes and Victualling houses, where they might at an instant have what they nee- 10 ded, and dyet themselves from a pennie English a meale, to two shillings a meale.

Their good

The Dyet in Store of pro-

The Dyet vsed generally through the Countrey, is Rice of divers forts, one better then on ther (as of our Wheate and Corne here) the whitest accounted the best, which they vie in stead of Bread, Fish, fresh and falted, some pickeld Herbes, Beanes, Raddishes and other Rootstalred and pickled, Wild-fowle, Ducke, Mallard, Teale, Geefe, Phefant, Partridge, Quaile, and dinere others, which they doe powder and put vp in pickle, of Hens they have great itore, as like. wife of Deere both red and fallow : will Bores, Hares, Goates, Kine, &c. of Cheefe they have plentie, Butter they make none, neither will they cate any Milke, because they hold it to bee as bloud, nor tame beatts. Of tame Swine and Pigs they have great abundance. Wheate they have as good as any of 20 ours, being red. They plow both with Oxen and Horse as wee doe neere. At our being there, we bought Hens and Phelants of the best for three pence a piece. Pigs very fat and large twelve pence a piece, a fat Hogge fiue shillings. A good Beefe, such as our Welch Runts, at sixteene shil-Water drunke. lings, a Goate three shillings, Rice a halfe-pennie the pound. The ordinarie drinke of the common people is water, which with their meate they drinke warme, holding it to bee a fourreigne remedie against Wormes in the maw: other drinkes they have none, but what is distilled out of Rice, which is almost as strong as our Aquasita, and in colour like to Canarie Wine, and is not deare. Yet when they have drawne off the best and strongest, they wring out of it a smaller and flighter drinke, seruing the poorer fort of people, which through want cannot reach to the better.

Countrey grew hilly, ten men were allowed me thereto. The Guardian whom King Foyn fent along with vs, did from time to time and place to place by warrant, take vp thele men and Hor-fes to ferue our turnes, as the Post-masters doe here in England : as also lodging at night. According to the custome of the Countrey, I had a slaue appointed to runne with a Pike before mee.

or fixteene leagues, of three miles to a league as we gheffed it. The way for the most part is won-

Thus we travelled vntill the fixth of September, before we got to Surunga, each day fifteene derfull euen, and where it meeteth with Mountaines, passage is cut through. This way is the mayne Roade of all this Countrey, and is for the most part sandie and grauell; it is divided into leagues, and at enery, leagues end are two small hils, viz. of either side of the way one, and voon

The thirtieth, we were furnished with ninetene Horse at the Emperours charge, to carne 20 up our Kings prefents, and those that attended me to Surunga.

I had a Pallankin appointed for me, and a spare Horse led by, to ride when I pleased, very well fer out. Sixe men appointed to carrie my Pallankin in plaine and euen ground. But where the Survege.

A Pike, figne

High-wayes.

Fotoquis Lapeni-

en Temples. Croffes and crucifying.

every one of them a faire Pine-tree, trimmed round in fashion of an Arbor. These markes are placed upon the way to the end, that the Hacknie men, and those which let out Horses to hire. should not make men pay more then their due, which is about three pence a league. The Roade is exceedingly trauelled, full of people, euer and anon you meet with Farmes and Countrey houies, with Villages, and often with great Townes, with Ferries ouer fresh Rivers, and many Futtakeasse or Fotognie which are their Temples, scituate in Groues and most pleasantest places for delight, of the whole Countrey. The Priests that tend thereupon dwelling about the fame, as our Friers in old time planted themselves here in England, When wee approched any Towne, 50 we faw Croffes with the dead bodies of those who had beene crucified thereupon. For crucifying is heere an ordinarie punishment for most Malefactors. Comming neere Surunga, where the Emperours Court is, wee faw a Scaffold with the heads of divers (which had beene executed) placed thereupon, and by it were divers Croffes with the dead Corpfes of those which had been executed, remayning still upon them, and the pieces of others, which after their Executioners Surunga avery had beene hewen againe and againe by the trial of others Carrans. All which caufed a most vnfauourie passage to vs, that to enter into Surunga, must needs passe by them. This Citie of Surunga is full as bigge as London, with all the Suburbs. The Handi-crafts men wee found dwelling in the outward parts and skirts of the Towne, because those that are of the better fort, dwell in the inward part of the Citie, and will not be annoyed with the rapping, knocking, and other 60 diffurbance that Artificers cannot be without.

Affoone as we'were fetled in our ledging in Surunga, I fent Mafter Adams to the Court, to Let the Secretarie vinderstand of my comming, and defire of as speedie dispatch as might bee. Word was returned that I was welcome, that I should rest me, and within a day or two I should have a ceffe to the Emperour.

The English entertayned by the Emperour of Iapon. 41 CHAP.1. S.6.

The feuenth was spent in fitting vp of the prefents, and prouiding little Tables of slit deale of that Countrey (which smelleth verie sweet) to carrie them vpon, according to the custome. The eighth, I was carryed in my Pallankin to the Calile of Sarange ( where the Emperour The Caffle & kepthis Court) and was attended with my Merchants and others carrying the preients before Court of the me. Being entred the Castle, I passed three draw bridges, every of which had a corps of Guard, Emperour. and comming vp a paire of verie faire and large stone staires, I was met by two graue comely men the one them Codske dona, the Emperous Secretarie; the other Fungo done the Admirall, 35 and who led me into a faire roome matted, where we fatdowne croffe-legged vpon the Mats. Anon after they lead mee betwixt them into the Chamber of Presence, where was the Emperotes

10 Chaire of State, to which they wished me todoe renerence. It was of clock of Gold, about fine feet high, very richly fet forth for backe and fides, but had no Canopie ouer head. Then they rea mirned backe agains to the place where before they did fit, where having flayed about one quarter of an houre, word was brought, that the Emperour was come forth. Then they role vo and led me betwixt them vnto the doore of the roome where the Emperor was, making fignes to me that I should enter in there, but durit not looke in themselves. The presents sent from our King to the Emperour, as also those which (a cording to the custome of the Countrey) I gause vite the Emperour, as from my felfe, were placed in the faid roome vpon the Mats very orderly, before the Emperour came into it. Comming to the Emperour, according to our English Complex ments, I deliuered our Kings Letter vnto his Maiestie, who tooke it in his hand, and put it vp 20 towards his fore-head, and commanded his Interpeter, who fate a good diffance from him behind, to will Mafter Adams to tell me that I was welcome from a wearisome journey, that I should take my reft for a day or two, and then his Answere should be readie for our King. Then he asked whether I did not intend to vifit his fonne at Edoo. I amwered, I did. The Emperour faid that order should be taken to furnish mee with men and Hories for the Journey and against my returne his Letters should be readie for our King. So taking my leaue of the Emparour, and comming to the doore where I had left the Secretarie and Admiral!, I found them there readie to conduct me to the staires head where formerly they had met mee, and there I tooke my Pallane kin, and with my Attendants returned to my lodging. The ninth, I went to deliuer the Secretarie his prefent, which in no wife hee would receive, so but heartily thanked me, faying, that the Emperour had commanded the contrarie, and that it were as much as his life if he should take any gift. But hee tooke hue pound of Aloes Socatrina toyle for his health. I delivered the Articles of priviledge this day to Coastedora being in number fourteene. He requested to have them abbreusated and made as short as might bee, for that the people of Japan affect breuitie.

The tenth, the Articles fo abridged, were lent by Mafter Adams to the Secretarie, who thewed breusie. them to the Emperour, and he approved thereof, denying one only, which was, That whereas the Chineles had refused to trade with the English, that in case we should now take any of them by force, that our Nation might have sease and libertie to bring them into lapon, and there make The Copie of fale of the goods to taken. At the first motion, the Emperour answered, that feeing they denyed vs Trade, we might take them. But vpon conference with the Lieger of Chma, the Em-brought home perours minde was changed, and would not allow of that Article. The reft were passed under his and gaue mes great Seale, which is not of Waxe (as ours) but stamped like a print and coloured red. The eleuenth, the Prefent appointed for the Mint-matter, was deliuered him, which he took thankfully, and returned to me two Iaponian Gownes of Taffata, quilted with filke Cotton. The twelfth, Mafter Adams was fent to the Mint-mafter (oeing the Emperours Merchant, and having charge of his Mint and readje monies, a man of very great effective with the Emperour, and one that hath vowed that whenfocuer the Emperour shall dye, he will cut out his own guts and dye with him.) Mafter Adams carryed vnto him the particular prices of our English Commodities (as before is specified.)

About noone the same day, wee departed foe Edoo, to the Emperours sonne, beeing furnished with horse and men by the Emperour, as formerly.

The Countrey betwixt Surunga and Edoo is well inhabited. We faw many Fotoquife or Temples as we passed, and amongst others one Image of especiall note, called Dabis, made of Cop. The description per, being hollow within, but of a very fibitantiall thicknesse. It was in height, as wee ghessed, on of an L from the ground about one and twentie or two and twentie foot in the likenesse of a man kneeling upon the ground, with his buttockes refting on his heeles, his armes of wonderfull largeneffe, and the whole bodie proportionable, he is fashioned wearing or a Gowne. This Image is much reverenced by Travellers as they paffe there. Some of our people went into the bodie of it, and hoope and hallowed, which made an exceding great noyfe. We found many Characters and 60 Markes made upon it by Paffengers, whom some of my Followers imitated, and made theirs in like manner. It flandeth in the maine Roade of the Pilgrimage to Tencheday, which is much fre- pagrimage to quented: for night and day, rich and poore, are com : g and going to vuit Tencheday. M. Adams Tencheday. told me that he had been at the Fotogui or Temple de heated to this Tencheday, to whom they make this denout palgrimage; and as he reported, there is monthly one of the fairest Virgins of the whole country brought in 0 that Fotogai, and there the fits all alone in a recome neadly kept, in a very faber manner, and at certaine times, this Tenthodoy (which is thought to be the Dunch) appeared with one, and hasing known her carnally, leaulest with liberat his departure certain skales, like write the skales of fithes: what quefthous thee is willed by the Bonzess, or Pricited skales, like write the Stales of fithes: what quefthous thee is willed by the Bonzess, or Pricited skales, like write the Ronger colours; and every moneth a fresh Virgin is taken my but what becomes of the least, Marker Admen himselfeeded not know.

Iatonians affect

374 Virgins dedicated to an

We arrived at

The fourteenth, we arrued at Edon, a Citté much greater then Surmaga, faire fairer building, and made a very glorious appearance without 15; the ridge, these and corner-tiles richly ding, and made a very glorious appearance with a variable it. Gloride-windowers they base nones, but to glory, the poster of board, opening in leases, well left out with painting, as in Hohmad citer is a great windower of board, opening in leases, well left out with painting, as in Hohmad citer is a Cardy which goeth arbupow the chief freeze of the Towns; underneath thus Cardy young cardy and the chief freeze of the Towns; underneath thus Cardy young cardy in the chief pointing the control of the chief pointing the control of the chief pointing th my or our ureers in england.

The ritteenth I gaze the Kings Secretary, Sadda-dona, to understand of my arrivalli requesting bim to let the King know thereot.

The leaenteenth, I had accelf to the King, and delivered him the Prefents from our King, as also certain from my kelie (according to the cultome of the Country.) The King kept his Court also certain from my kelie (according to the cultome of the that of Surmaya, he was better guarded and attended yoon, then the Emperour his Father. Sadda-dona the Kings Secretary, is 8g furthed and attended yoon, then the Emperour Secretary, whose yeeres alroading better experience, he is therefore appointed to haue the government and direction of the yong King, who (at our being there) we eltermed to be aged about two and fortie yeeres.

ing three we extensions again and the King here, was much like to the former at Suranga with My entertainment and accepted very kindly our Kings Letters and Prelients, bidding me welcome, and withing me to refusih my felfe, and his Letters and Prelints to our King should be made readile with all speech.

The nineteenth, I deliaered Sadde-done his Prefents. This day two and thirtie men being commanded to a certaine house, formor paying their debts, and being in the stockes within the 30 house, the house in the night time by chilalite aered, and they were all burnt to death.

Towards enring, the King fenetwo varialled Armours for a Preferit to our King. Hee fent likewife a Tatch or long fivored which none may weare there but fouldiers of the kelt ranke; and a Waggadah for a prefere to my kide. From Edo to the Northermoit part of lapse, it is eftermed two and twentie dayes iourney by horle, hule more or lefte.

efteemed two and twentieth, we parted by Boat from Edw to Oringgan, a Towne vpon the fea fide. From whence we arrued at Suranga the nine and twentieth day, and there remained for the Emperours Letters and Prefents to our King.

the emperous Letters and French to on Sing.

The eight of October, I received the Emperous Letters, directed to our Sourraigne Lord Imms, King of Great Britains, the true Capie whereof is as followeth.

To the King of Great Britaine.

Our Maiesties hind Letter sens me by your servant Captaine Iohn Saris, (who is the first shall have bowne to arrive in any part of my Dominions) I heartily embrace, being not a little shalto understand of your great wisdome and power, as having three plentifu's and might e Kingdomes under your powerfull command. I a knowledge your Maiesties great bountie, in se iding mee so undescrued a Present of many rare things, such as my Land affordeth not, newher have I ever before scene: Which I receiue not as from a stranger, but as from your Maiestie, whom I esteeme as ny seife. Desiring the continnance of Friendlin with your Highnesse: And that it may standwith your good liking, to sendyour 50 Subjects to any part or Port of my Dominions, where they jual bee most heartly welcome, applauding much their worthinesse in the admirable knowledge of Nausgation, having with much facilitie discourred a Countrie foremote, being no whit amazed with the d flance of fo mightie a Gulfe, nor greatneffe of such infinite clouds and stormes, from prosecuting honorable enterprises, of Discourries and Merchandixing : wherein they Iball find me to further them, according to their defires. I returne unto your M.stestie a small token of my love (by your said Subject) descring you to accept thereof, as from him that much resoyceth in your Friending. And whereas your Muschies Subsets have defired certaine primitedes for Trade, and setting of a Factorie in my Dominions, I have not only granted what they demanded but have confirmed the same unto them under my Broad-scale, for better establishing thereof. From my Castle in Surrings, this fourth day of the numb mouth, in the eighteenth yeare of our Davy, according to our Com. 60 putation. Resting your Maufties Friend. The highest Commander in this Kingdome of lapar

Subscribe ..

Minna, Mouttono, vei. ye. veas.

CHAP.I.S.7. Priviledges granted to the English at Iapan.

I also received the faid Priviledges for Trade in * Impost the Original was left with Matter * The Character * Cocky: the copie thereof with the Scale in clack eheere followeth. The translation whereof (as neare to the Original as may be ) followeth.

The Character * Th

pared them with this abookes, and they fe mediome quite different, yet not letters to compound words by feelling, as ours; but words expetited in their usual threat it is a the twist refer and the brounte manifelt; it is the them characters peculiar to letter.

The them thou Reads: and indeed better, if this case the second of the properties of the second of the s w AND SAN SAN ON COCHER SINC COCI いからまろういろはれいろう あるうろうとうべん しょうしょ かっとうしん 2 mings miles (mms)とくれた、とくころのとなるいと こうしょうしょうしょいんしょうしゃ to win our men togy worker h som wallen were The Control of the Same of the ついるというのでからいいいいとうといいい

This last is the Seale.

Priviledges granted by O G O S H O S A M A, Emperour of Iapan, unto the Right Worshipfull Sir THOMAS SMITH, Knight, Gouernour, and others the Honorable and Worshipfull Aduenturers to the East-Indies.

I Thorimis, Wee gine free licence to the subjects of the King of Great Britaine, viz. Sir Tho. mas Smith, Gouernour, and Company of the East-Indian Merchants and Aduenturers, for ener fast, to come into any of our Port of our Empire of Iapan, with their sh ppes and merchandizes, 10 without any hinderance to them or their goods. And to abide, buy, fell, and barrer, according to their owne manner, with all Nations: to tarry heere as long as they thinke good, and to depart at their pleasures.

2 Item, Wee grant unto them freedome of Custome, for all such merchandizes as either now they have brought, or hereafter shall bring into our Kingdomes, or shall from hence transport to any farraigne part. And doe authorize those shops that bereafter shall arrive, and come from England, to proceed to present saie of their commod ties, without further commong or sending op to our Court.

3 Item, If any of their supports hall happen to be in danger of supportacte, Wee will Our subjects not only to a fig. them, but that fuch part of Shippe and goods as Shall be faucd, be returned to their Captaine. or Cape Merchant, or their affignes. And that they shall or may build one house or more for themselves in any part of Our Empire, where they shall thinke fittest. And at their departure to make sale thereof 20

4 Item, If any of the English Merchants or other shall depart this life, within our Dominions, the goods of the deceafed hall remaine at the dispose of the Cape is terchant. And that all offences committed by them, shall be punished by the faid Cape Merchant, according to his discretion: and Our Lawes to :ake no bold of their perfons or goods.

5 1.cm, Wee will that yet Our fabroits trading with them for any of their commodities, pay them for the fine, according to agreement, without delay, or returne of their wares againe unto them.

6 Itom, For such commodities as they have now brought, or skall hereafter bring, fitting for Our seruice and proper vie: Wee wilthat no arrest beem ide thereof, but that the price beemade with the Cape Merchant, according as they may fell to others, and present payment upon the delinery of the goods. 7 Item, If in disconery of other Countries for Trade, and returne of their shippes, they shall need men or Victualls. Wee will that yee Our Subjects furnish them for their money, as their need shall

The discouery the northward.

8 And that without other Passe-port, they shall and may set out upon the discouery of Yeadzo, or any other part, in or about our Empire.

From our Caftle in Surunga, this first day of the ninth moneth, and in the eighteenth yeere of Our * Dary, according to Our Computation. Sealed with our Broad-seale, &c.

Under-written:

Minna. Mottono.

yei.ye. yess.

Oringram the beft L wen or readfor vs.

Note that Oringgam is a very good harbour for shipping, where ships may ride as safely as in the River of Thames before London, and the passage thereto by Sea very safe and good : so that it will be much better for our ships to faile thither, then to Frando, in respect that Oringgan is vpon the maine Island, and is diffant from Edoo (the chiefe City) but fourteene or fifteene leagues. The place is not fo well replenished with victuall and flesh-meat, as Firando is, which want only excepted, Oring gaw is for all other matters to be preferred before Firando.

At my returne to Starunga, I found a Spanish Embaliadour arrived there from the Philippinas, baffacor from who only had fight of the Emperour, and delivered him his prefents, which were certaine Chithe Philippinas. na Damaskes, and fine larres of fweet wine of Europe. After the first time, he could not obtaine acceffe to the Emperour. His Embalage was, that fuch Portugals and Spaniards as were within his Dominions, not authorized by the King of Spaine, might be deliuered up vnto him to carry away to the Philippines: which the Emperour denyed to doe, faying, That his Countrey was a free Country, and none should be forced out of it; but if the Embailadour could perlwade any to go, they should not be staied. This comming of the Spanis Embassadour for men, was caused by the great want of me they had to defend the Molneca Hands fro the Dutch, who then made great preparation for the absolute conquest thereof. After that the Embassadour had attended for the 60 Emperours answere, the time limitted him by his Commission, feeing it came not, hee departed discontented. But being at the Sea-side, there was an answere returned for him to carry, with a flender Prefent, viz. fue lapan Gownes, and two Cattans or Swords.

The ninth we departed from Surunga at Edoo. About a month before my comming thither, the Emperour being displeased with the (Intifiant, made proclamation, that they should forthwith A proclamatiremove and carry away all their Churches to Langafacque, a Towne fituate on the Sea-lide, and on against the diffant from Firando about eight leagues : And that no Christian Church should stand, nor Masse Christians. befung, within ten leagues of his Court, vpon paine of death. A while after, certaine of the Naturalls, being seuen and twentie in number, (men of good fashion) were assembled together in an Hospitall, appointed by the Christians for Lepers, and there had a Masse: whereof the Emperour being informed, commanded them to be shut up in an house for one night, and that the next day they should fuffer death. The same evening another man for debt was clapt up in the fame house, being an Heathen at his comming in, and ignorant of Christ and his Religion : But 10 (which is wonderfull) the next morning, when the Officer called at the doore for those which were Christians to come forth, and goe to execution, and those which were not, and did renounce the same, to stay behind : this man in that nights space was so instructed by the other, that resolutely he came out with the reft, and was crucified with them.

In our passage towards Miaco from Surunga, we had for the most part much raine, whereby the waters did so rise, that wee were forced to stay by the way, so that it was the sixteenth of October before we got thither. Miaco is the greatest Citie of Impan, confisting most vpon mer- The descriptichandizing. The chiefe Fotoque or Temple of the whole countrey is there, being built of free- on of the Citie Hone, and is as long as the Westerne end of Saint Pauls in London, from the Quier, being as high of Miaco. arched and borne vpon pillars as that is : where many Bonzees doe attend for their maintenance, Their Bonzees, as the Priests among Papists. There is an Altar whereon they doe offer Rice and small money, Idols, Alars, called Condrius (Whereof twentie make one shilling English) which is employed for the vie of Officings, &c. the Bonzees. Neare vnto this Altar there is an Idoll, by the Natiues called Mannada, made of Copper, much refembling that of Dabis formerly spoken of, but is much higher, for it reacheth vp to the very Arch. This Fotoqui was begun to be built by Taico fania in his life-time, and fince his fonne hath proceeded to the finishing thereof, which was newly made an end of when wee were there. Within the inclosure of the walles of this Foregui there are buried (by the report of the inhabitants) the Eares and Noses of three thousand Coreans, which were massacred at one time: Vpon their graue is a mount raised, with a Pyramis on the toppe thereof; which mount is greene, and very neatly kept. The horse that Taico fania last rode on, is kept neare vnto this Fotogui, having neuer been ridden fince, his hooffes being extraordinarily growne with his age. and still standing there.

The Fotoque standeth upon the top of an high hill, and on either side, as yee mount up to it. hath fiftie pillars of free-itone, diffant ten paces one from the other, and on enery pillar a Lanterne, wherein every night lights are maintained of Lampe-oyle. In this Citie of Miaco, the Colledge of Portugall Iesuits haue a very stately Colledge, wherein likewise are divers Icsuits, Naturall Ia Icsuits in Mist pomins, which prach, and have the new Telament printed in the Lapan language. In this Col. The new Teledge are many Lapanian children trayned vp, and instructed in the rudiments of Christian Reli-famous in the gion, according to the Romillo Church : There are not leffe then five or fixe thousand Iaponians in Iapanlanguage this Citie of Miaco profeiling Christ.

Befides the Fotogui before described, there are many other Fotoguis in this Citie. The Tradesmen and Artificers are distributed by themselues, every Occupation and Trade in their severall ftreets, and not mingled together, as heere with vs.

At Miaco we stayed, expecting the Emperours Present, which at length was delivered to me out of the Castle, being ten Beobs, or large Pictures to hang a chamber with.

The twentieth, wee departed from Miaco, and came the fame night to Fulbimi. The one and twentieth, about noone we arrived at Ofaca: heere wee found the people very Ofaca. rude, following vs, crying Tofin, Tofin, that is, Chinaes, Chinaes; others calling vs Coré, Coré, and flinging stones at vs; the grauest people of the Towne not once reprouing them, but rather animating of them, and letting them on. Heere we found the Gally readie, which had attended so for vs euer fince our landing, at the charge of the King of Firando. The foure and twentieth at night we all embarked for Firando.

The fixt of Nouember we arrived at Firando, and were kindly bid welcome by King Forne. All this while our people fold little, the custome of the Countrey being, that without expresse permission from the Emperour, no stranger may offer goods to sale. Besides, our chiefest commoditie intended for those parts being Broad-cloath, (which, according to former intelligence, had lately been fold there at fortie Rialls of eight the matte, which is two yards, as aforefaid) the Natiues were now more backward to buy then before, because they saw that we our sclues were no forwarder in wearing the thing which wee recommended vnto them. For, faid they, you commend your Cloath vnto vs, but you your felues weare least thereof, the better fort of you 60 Wearing Silken garments, the meaner Fustians, &c. Wherefore hoping that good counsell may (though late) come to some good purpose, I wish that our Nation would be more forward to vie and spend this naturall commoditie of our owne Countrey, so shall wee better encourage and allure others to the entertainment and expence thereof.

We embarked

378

Accidents after his returne to Firando, the fetling of a Factory there, departure for Bantam, and thence for England.

Per He feuenth of November, I visited the Kings with Presents first, and after with Pres ience, and was kindly entertained. The eighth, Andrew Palmer, Steward of the ship, and William Marnell Gunners Mate, lay alhoare all night, and in a drunken huthip, and William Market Gunners and wounded each other fo fore, that it is nour, went into the field and fought, and wounded each other for fore the mour, went into the field and fought, and wounded each other for fore the mour, went into the field and fought, and wounded each other for fore the mour, went into the field and fought, and wounded each other for fore, that it is thought Palmer will hardly escape with his life, and Marnell be lame of his hands for euer,

The ninth, in the morning very early I went abourd the Ship, and carried M. Cocker along with me, and called the Master and all the Officers into my Cabbin, making it knowne vnto them, that it much grieued me the indirect course some of them tooke, namely, Palmer and Mernell, who went out of the Ship without licente, and had wounded one an other fo fore, that the one was in danger of his life, and the other a lame man for euer; and that which was more, the Surviver in danger to be hanged if the other died, which could not choose but bee a great hearts griefe vnto me : as alfo to vnderstand, that Francis Williams and Simon Colphan were in the boat, going ashoare to haue fought, and lohn Dench and lohn Winston appointed to doe the like, and Dench contelled it was true, and that he saw Palmer and Marnell fighting, and went and parted 20 them, otherwise both had remained dead in the field: these matters, I told them, were greuous vnto me, and therefore I willed them it might be amended in time, otherwise they would dispeople the Ship, to the vtter ouerthrow of our Voyage, and deceive the Honourable Companie, that had put their trust in vs.

After much contestation, each one departed, with promise to amend what was amisse, and not to offend in any fort hereafter, which God graunt may prooue true. I told them also, that Force Same, the old King, had made complaint vnto me, that if any more came ashoare to fight and shed blood in his Countrey (contrary to his Lawes) he would cause them to be cut in peces, for that he would not fuffer strangers to have more Priviledge in that matter then his owne Subjects. And at my returne to the English house, Foyne Same the King came to visit me, and told mee the piece of Poldauis and a Shash I gaue him, were consumed with fire when his house was burned, which 10 was a manner of begging two more, which I promifed him, and got him to fend of his people aboord, with my Isarebaffo lobn I apan, to fignifie to the Company, that if any of them came alhoare to fight any more, the King had given order to cut them in pieces, and not to fuffer any one to returne aboord. I did this in hope to restraine them from such drunken Combats.

Towards night came a Spaniard from Langa Jaque, called lohn Comas, and brought two Letters from Domingo Francisco, one for me, and the other for M. Cockes, and fent me a Prefent of three baskets of Sugar, and a pot of Conferues, with many no leffe fugred conferued words of complement in his Letters, that he was forie that our feuen men were gone away in his absence, excufing both himielie, and the Fathers or Ieluites, that they had no hand in the matter, neither e- 40 uer spoke such word, that we were heretikes or theeues, yet said our men were gone away from thence, three of them in a China or Iapan Soma for the Manillias, and the other foure in a Portsgall Vessell; but I hold these but words to excuse themselves, and put other men in tault: for the Spaniards love not the Portugals, neither either of both the lapan, much leffe the lapan them.

The eleuenth, I went and vifited Nobefane; he vied me kindly, and would have had mee come to dinner to morrow, but I excused the matter, in respect of the much businesse I had, and short time offtay. I met the old King Foyne at his house, who defired to have two peeces English poudred Beete, and two of Porke fod with Turnips, Raddish and Onions by our Cooke, and lent vnto him, which I caused to be done. Wind Northerly a fresh gale day and night, faire dry weather, but cold.

The twelfth, the two Kings Gouernours, came to visit me at the English house; and from thence went abord the Clone (Mafter Cockes accompanying them) to fignifie vnto the Mafter and the rest of the Companie, that from hence forward, our ships Companie should have a care how they came a shore to fight and shed blood; for that the Law of the Countrey was, that they which went out to fight, and drew weapon, were to die the death, and all those which did behold them, obliged to kill both parties, in paine of ruinating all their generation if they did not

The foureteenth, I fent M. Cockes and my Iurebaffo to both the Kings, to entreat them to prouide me of a dozen Sea-men, that were able to doe their labour, to goe with me for England, and for wages I was willing to give them what in reason their Highnelles thought fit. The Kings 60 were impeached about other matters; fo they spake with their Secretaries , who told them, they need not to speake about that matter to the Kings, for that they would prouide mee a dozen such as should be fit; but that there were divers vagrant people about Towne, which no doubt would be willing to goe, yet were not fit to be carried to Sea; for that when they came there, they would ferue for nothing but to spend victuals, and of such the Flemmings serued their turne without making request vnto them: and what is become of them or the Ship is not known to this day. But feeing that now the matter was referred to them, they would looke out for such as were for

CHAP.I.S.8. The English settle a Factorie in Iapan.

The eighteenth, Foyne the old King fent me word be would come and visit me, and bring the dancing Beares or Curtesans of the Countrey, which soone after he did, being three whoores of the Countrey, and two or three other men with them, they all dancing and making musique after the Countrey fathion, although harth to our hearings.

The nineteenth, the Captaine (binefa and George Duras the Portugall came vnto me, defiring Seuere inflice ne to fend to Semidone, to procure the libertie of two honest poore men, who were like to loote in Iapan. their lines, for bidding a poore Knaue flie, which had stolne a little piece of Lead not worth three halfe pence, and yet the Malefactor was taken and put to death, and thefe men in danger to haue done the like, had I not fent M. Cocks with my Ring to Semidone, to defire pardon for them for my fake, which he granted to procure, and did effect it. The twentieth, Samedon the King of Crass ient mee word hee would come aboord our Ship: So I met him there, he beeing accompanied with both the Kings of Firando, they had five peeces of Ordnance at their entrie aboord, and three with shot or Bullets, were shot at a marke at the request of Samedon. He gaue me two Pikes or Iapan staues with Cattans or Sables on the ends, and so they departed with seuen peeces of Ordnance for a farewell, one being with shot at 20 the marke aforefaid.

The twentie two, a Present was laid out, and sent to Samedon King of Crass: it was delinered vnto him at Tomesares the young Kings house, he being there at Breakfast, and tooke in very kind part, fending me word by M. Cocker, that he was doubly obliged vnto mee, first in his kind entertainement aboord, and now in fending him such a Present of worth, of such things as his Countrey affoorded not the like, and all without any defert of his: onely the recompence he could make was, that for his take, if euer any of the English Nation did come within his Dominions, he would bid them kindly welcome, and shew them any fauour he could.

The twentie fifth in the morning betimes, the Purler and M. Homefell came ashore, and told me Andrew Palmer the Steward departed out of this world about tenne of the clocke the night 30 past, and that the Chirurgion Thomas Warner affirmed (as he told me the like many times before) that Palmer was the occasion of his owne death, his wound beeing curable, if he would have bin ruled. I willed the Purser M. Mel/ham to goe aboord, and that the Master and he should take order to carry him, and bury him on an Iland as fecretly as might be, in respect we were about to get some lapans to goe along in our ship, which it might be hearing of the death of any one, would make them the more vnwilling.

The twentie eighth, a lapan was put to death: fome faid for theft; others faid he was a houseburner: He was lead by the Hang-man to execution, one carying a board before him, wherein was written the fact he had committed, as the like was written in a paper flag ouer his head, and two Pikemen followed him with the points of their Pikes hard to his backe, to have killed him 40 if he had offered to relift. Divers of this place complained, that the Ships Company owed them money, and now the Ship was ready to depart, defired payment, which to preuent a greater inconuenience, I hearkened vnto, and wrote to the Master to enquire aboord who they were that were indebted, and what the fumme was they owed, to the intent to make fatisfaction, and fo to abate it out of their wages.

Now touching a Factorie to be left there, I had on the twenty fixth, affembled my Merchandizing counfell, where vpon these considerations, viz. The encouragement wee had received in the Moluccas by private intelligence, the Dutch Factorie alreadie planted here in Firando: The large Priviledges now obtained of the Emperour of Lapan: The certaine advise of the English Factories settled in Siam and Patane: The Commodities resting vnfold vpon our hands appointed 50 for these parts, and the hoped for profit which further experience may produce: It was resoluted, These sling of that a Factorie should be left here, viz. eight English, three lapan Inrebasses or Interpreters, and an English Fa two fernants, who were appointed against the comming of the next ships, to search and disco- Roriein Lapan, uer the Coast of Corea, Tushmay, and other parts of lapan, and Countreys thereunto adioyning, to

The fifth of December, M. Richard Cockes, Captaine and Cape Merchant of the English Facto- December. rie, setled at Firando in Iapan, tooke his leave of me aboord the Clone with his Companie, beeing eight English, and fine others. After their departure, our Companie was mustered aboord, finding fortie fixe English, fine Swarts, fifteene Lapaners, three Passengers, in all fixtie nine : hauing loit fince our arrivall here three English, two by ficknesse, one slaine, and seven which ranne away to 60 the Portugals and Spaniards, whileft I was at the Emperours Court. The names of the English we left in the Factorie with M. Cockes, were William Adams, (entertained at an hundred pounds the yeere into the Companies leruice) Tempest Peacocke, Richard Wickham, William Eaton, Walter fee what good might be done in any of them.

Carwarden, Edward Sares, William Nelson. The wind Northerly a stiffe gale, we set saile, beeing foure leagues from the place where wee jan.

We returne

home from I4

CHAP. 1.S.8.

Variation ar Firando 2.deg. so, minutes Eafterly. We tayled alongst the Coaft of China. Agreat Current fhooteth out betweene Corez and the maine of China. Sumber.

Three hundred failes of fmall Fisher-

Ilands of Fi-

Latitude 25.

A Rocke.

Variation 1.

deg. 59. minut.

380

rid:our courle South by West, halfe a point Westerly, Latitude thirtie three degrees soureteene minutes. Note, that by exact observation on the shoare, we found this Iland of Firando to stand in latitude thirtie three degrees thirtie minutes, variation two degrees fiftie minutes Easterly. It was refolued to keepe along it the Coast of China, directly to Bantam, and so wee brought abourd our ftar-board tacke, and fteered away South-weft, edging ouer for China, the windar

North North-east, a stiffe gale and faire weather. The fixth, Latitude thirty one degrees thirty nine minutes, way South by West forty leagues. The feuenth, it blew very much wind, a fforme at North-west, wee fleered South South-west no observation, there we felt the great Current which shoots out betweene the Hand Cores and the maine of China, which made a very great Sea, way South South-west halfe point Westerly twentie fine leagues. The eight, Latitude twentie nine degrees fortie one minutes, way South-west, twentie sixe leagues, wind North-west a very stiffe gale, we steered West South-west, to make Cape Sumber youn the Coast of China: the Sea very much growne, so much wind, that it blew our maine course

The ninth, Latitude twentie eight degrees, twentie three minutes, way South-west three quarters Westerly, twentie two leagues and two third parts, we sounded and had fortie nine, and fortie fine fathome Ozie, the weather cleered, and the wind came to the North, but wee could

The eleventh, no observation : way West South-west thirtie fine leagues, verie greene water. we kept our Leade, and had fortie nine, fortie three, thirtie fiue, thirtie feuen, thirtie fathome. 20 no fight of land, yet very cleere, wind North and North-west by North. The twelfth, before day we founded, and had thirtie fine fathome Ozie, wind North and

North-west by North a stiffe gale, and in the morning esteeming our selues to bee neere the Coast of China, we had fight of (at the least) three hundred failes of Junckes of twentie, thirtie. and vowards tunnes apiece, whereof two came to the wind-ward close by vs, but perceining them to be Fisher-men, we let them passe, vsing all the faire meanes wee could to get some of them to come aborad, but could not preuayle. Wherefore we flood on our course West by South, and presently described the land, being two llands called the Ilands of Fishers, bearing West by

North halfe a point Northerly some foure leagues off. Latitude at noone twentie fine degrees fiftie nine minutes, way South-west by West fiftie leagues, Depth twentie, and twentie sixe 30 fathome. Soone after, the wind came to North-east, wee brought our Lar-boord tacke aboord, and steered alongst the land South South-east, very much wind. About seuen at night we came faire by a Rocke, which, by Gods mercie, wee descryed by Moone-light, and lay right in our courfe, supposing to have runne from noone to this time twelve leagues. We were within twice our ships length of the Rocke depth thirtie fathome. Then we haled off South one watch togice the land a berth, and after mid-night fleered South-weft, the wind at North-east very much wind, and continually following vs.as the Land trents.

The thirteenth, Latitude twentie foure degrees thirtie fine minutes, variation one degree, degree 30. mi- thirtie minutes Easterly, way South-west fiftje foure leagues, wind at North-east faire weather, nutes Eafterly. wee fleered South-west keeping faire by the Hands, lying alongst the maine of China, some sue 40 leagues off, much wind.

Latitude 28.de.

The fourteenth in the morning little wind, having this night past had twelve and fourteent fathome, then stood off into deeper water. Latitude at noone twentie two degrees ten minutes, way South-west by South one quarter Westerly fortie two leagues wind at East North-east, and at eight at night we had fifteene, thirteene fathome, at nine a clocke fixteene, twentie feuen, twentie one and twentie fine, fandie ground. The fifteenth, in the morning we came among it many Fisher-boates, but had so much wind

Many Fisher-Latitude 21.

as that we could not speake with them. They made fignes to vs to keepe up to the West-ward (as we thought.) Our founding the last night to this present was twentie, twentie foure, twentie fine, twentie fathomes, three leagues off the land. Latitude at noone twentie one degrees, 50 fortie minutes, way West South-west one quarter Southerly fiftie two leagues. The wind at North North-east a stiffe gale, we steered in West North-west Northerly to make the land, and about two houres after had fight of it, but by reckoning should not have beene neere it by fiftie fixe leagues, fo that the diftance from Firando hither, is leffe by fiftie fixe leagues.

Note, that the Hands which lye along the Coast of China, lye more Southerly then in the plats; about three in the after-noone wee were by an Iland called Sancha about two leagues off, we steered South-west alongst the land, esteeming to have runne since noone three leagues West North-west.

The fixteenth, at noone no observation: way fortie leagues, South-west by South one quarter 60

Westerly, wind at East with drisling raine.

The seuenteenth, Latitude eighteene degrees nineteene minutes, course South-west by South one quarter Westerly fortie seuen leagues, wind at East, variation sittle minutes Westerly, we min. Wefterly. founded, but had no ground.

The eighteenth, latitude fifteene degrees fortie three minutes, course Soutk-well by South fixtie leagues, wind at East a stiffe gale, and at fue at night wee had fight of land beeing an Hand called Pulo Cotan, bearing West South-west, about the leagues off, wee steering South-west. Puls Cotan This Iland is high land, and lyeth about twentie leagues (by report) from the shoale called Plaxel, to the West-ward of it we founded about eight of the clocke, but had no ground. The nineteenth in the morning, the maine of Camboia was on our ftar-boord-fide about two Camboia

Imoues off : we steered along st South by East Easterly, keeping the maine in sight. Latitude at noone thirteene degrees one and thirtie minutes, way South by West fortie foure leagues, wee noone thateene degrees one and thirtie minuses, way south by wetter order loading, wee to feered along it South South-west, making account to bee thwart a Varella. keeping about two Cambina's not leagues off the shoare, we founded but had no ground at fiftie fathome. Note, that this land of fo far E.sl.rly, Cambeia lyeth more Eafterly in our plats, then it should, for wee find South South-west to goe as it is see in along it the land a faire berth off. So that the land heerelyeth South South-west, and North our Plats. North-east, having divers Rockes like Ilands, some one league, some league, and an halfe off the maine, but otherwife no danger that we could fee. Note also, that heere wee found the windes trade along it the shoare, for from Frando hither we did goe large, finding the wind to follow vs The twentieth, Latitude ten degrees fiftie three minutes, course South by West fiftie foure leagues wind at North, a stiffe gale alongst the shoare. And three Glasses after we had observed, wee had fight of a small Iland, which wee made to be the Iland at the end of the shoale, called wer man ingress a man family, the second of the Glasses running we founded and had eleuen fathome, the fand, two leagues Pale City, or off the shoare. We steered alongst Southwest to bring the point of the shoale called Pulo Citi a Pulo Citi a Pulo Citi flarne : then wee founded about two Glasses after, and had fifteene fathome. Note, that wee Linstonens Obfound Ian Huighen Van Linschotens booke very true, for thereby we directed our selues ever from Canationstrue, our fetting forth from Firando. The one and twentieth, Latitude nine degrees fortie three minutes course South-west a quarter Westerly thirtie foure leagues, wind at East North-east a continuall stiffe gale till noone, then calme, and found that we were in a tyde girt, our depth all the last night to this noone was ten, fixteene, feuenteene, eighteene, twentie one, twentie one, nineteene, twentie, twentie, nine-teene, eighteene fathome good ground, but had no fight of land. The two and twentieth in the morning, we had tight of land being an Hand called Pulo Con- Pulo Conder. dor, bearing off vs about fine leagues off, we steered South-west, the wind at North-east, lati- Latitude 8.

tude at noone eight degrees, twentie minutes, way South-west by West, fortie leagues and two degracamin. third parts. Depth eighteene, nineteene, twentie two, twentie one, twentie one, twentie two and twentie one fathomes, we steered South South-west, for the land called the seuen Points. The three and twentich, no observing, way South-west by South one quarter Southerly, fiftie one leagues, depth twentie, twentie two, twentie foure, and at noone twentie feuen fathomes. The foure and twentieth, way South-west halfe a point Westerly, thirtie three leagues one third part, wind at North-well by North, depth thirtie feuen, thirtie nine, fortie three, fortie. and at noone thirtie fiue fathome Ozie ground.

The fine and twentieth, latitude two degrees, thirtie eight minutes, course South by East, one Latitude 27 quarter of a league Easterly, twentie two leagues one third part, the wind at North-west and deg 38, min. East by North, Depth, thirtie foure, thirtie two, thirtie, thirtie foure, thirtie foure, thirtie foure, thirtie fine. And about foure a clocke in the morning, we made the land, beeing an Hand called Pulo Timon, distant from vs some five leagues. And at fixe in the morning, the Northermost part Pulo Timon. bearing South-west Westerly : and the South part South South-west halfe a point Westerly, we had fight of another Hand called Pulo Tinga, bearing South South-west Westerly, about fixe Pulo Tingo.

The fixe and twentieth, Latitude one degree eighteene minutes, course South-east by South, thirtie two leagues wind at East and East by North, Depth thirtie seuen, thirtie fixe, thirtie seuen, thirtie fiue, thirtie, and twentie feuen fathome.

The feuen and twentieth, courie South by East fortie leagues, and two third parts, Depth, twentie fenen, thirrie one, twentie eight, twentie nine, twentie eight, twentie fixe, and twen-tie foure fathomes at noone. The eight and twentieth, way South South-east, forticleagues and two third parts, Depth eighteene, nineteene, fixteene, eighteene, nineteene, fixteene, & at noone fifteene fathome fan-and at the South-west point full of Trees or Bushes. At fixe Glasses after-noone wee sounded, Pulo bate. and had twentie fathomes Ozie ground, fleering along it the Land South South-east, the wind at North North-west. Note, that those long Ilands on our star-boord-side heere, and divers small I-66 MOTER NOTES WELL NOTE, that the straights of China-bata, finding it to be tracky laid da men Placer Draught male by Ian Ianson Mole a Hollander, which he gaue to Master Hippon, The Plat of anche to the Companie.

The nine and twentieth, a little before noone, we perceived the water to be much changed a die ground, making account that China-bata was about one league and an half of being low land, china-bata of head, and therefore doubted it to be alhoale; fo narrowly eleaping a very great danger, wee founded and had eleuen, twelue, fourteene, rifteene fathome, but within halfe a Gl sie had eight & feuen tathomes & a halfe, it feemed three fquare fharp to the South-west-ward, & io we steered when we had first fight thereof, not farre from the entrance of the Braights of China-bata. This shoale lyeth very dangerously, but is truly placed with his depths. Latitude at noone foure degrees fixe minutes, course South by West thirtie leagues, wind at North-west and North. depth twentie, thirteene, fifteene, twentie foure, twentie leuen, twentie, twentie fiue, twentie. eightetne, ten, ten, ten, eight and ten fathomes fort fand. And at eight a clocke in the night, we came to an anchor in feuen fathomes, the weather likely to bee fowle, and our experience little er nothing, the place verie fell of shoules, and before our anchor was a ground wee were in fixe Io fixe and a quarter, fine and an halfe, fixe, and then in feuen fathomes loft fandie ground, then wind at North west a small gale and rainie.

A dangerous thoslano: ice from the entrance of the Lanuac toure dog fix min.

The Darling figling or Coromandel. Le the Sir H. M.daleion, and latte of the Trades !a.

The thirtie h, this morning we had fight of the Darling, plying for Coremandell, her Companie one and twentie English, and nine Swarts. By them wee first understood of the death of Sir Henrie Middleton, and I fie of the Trades Increase, &cc. The weather close, wee observed not: way South South-west halfe a point Westerly fifteene leagues, depth, ten, thateene, fourteene. eleuen, ten, nine, eight, feuen, fixe and an halfe, ten, ten, tixe and a halfe, feuen, five, foure and an halfe, foure and a quarter, fiue, fiue, and foure fathome, hard fandie ground, esteeming this the sheale described in Moles Plat, and not that which we made it for. This night God mercifully ledge of rocks. delinered vs out of a great danger. For wee passed by a sunken ledge of Rockes, vinder all our 20 fayles, within aftones cast of the top thereof, which was onely seene aboue water, and, had not the noyfe of the breach upon it wakened vs , wee could not have cleered our felues. Wee did let fall our anchor prefently, being in a great Tide girt, and had feuenteene, feuenteene fathomes and an halfe Ozie ground. The one and thirtieth, in the morning as we rid, the high land of Sumatra was about

The high land leagues off vs, and one Hand a flarne. The paffed shoale or ledge of Rockes on the star-board fide, and three small Hands on our lar-board bow, lying three square: way South three quarters Easterly, one and twentie leagues wind at North-west. Depth, ten, nine, eight, seuen, nine, ten, el men, twelve, fifteene, twentie two fathome, about eight leagues off the high-land of lana. We could not get in, because it fell cal ne.

The first of January, beeing calme, was most spent at an anchor. The second having a little 30 Tanuary I. The Expedicion wind we let file, and about eight of the clocke met with the Expedition, and viderstanding bound or that thee was bound home-ward laden with Pepper, we writ by them to our friends in England. Ext Aid We arrived in

The third, we came to an anchor in Bantam Roade, finding (to our great griefe) no lading in readinesse: For which I isftly blamed those whom I had left there to prouide the same, who ex-Bantan Roads. cufed themfelnes, faying, that they did not as yet expect me.

I questioned with Kewee, the chiefe Merchant of the ( hinefes, (being come aboord to visit me) what price Pepper did beare, and how he would fell. He answered that it was alreadie knowne ashoare that I was home-ward bound, and must of necessitie lade Pepper, whereof my Mer-Chants having rouided none afore-hand, I might be affored it would rite. He faid it was then at 40 twelue Rials of eight, the ten fackes, but he would not undertake to deliver any quantitie at that price. I offered him twelve Rials and an halfe for ten fackes, but found him fo farre off, as that there was no hope of dealing at the prefent.

Note, that of the ten, left in the Factorie heere for the eight Voyage at our departure for Japan, we found now but five living at our returne. Betweene Firando and Bantam, wee loftonly one.

The fourth, in the morning, I went alhoare, visited the Gouernour of Bentam, and presented him with two faire Cattans, and divers other things of worth.

This day I bargained with Kemee and Lackmore for foure thousand lackes of Pepper, at thirteene Rials of eight the ten fackes: Basse three the hundred, and appointed the Merchantsto 50 hasten the milling thereof, all that might be.

The fifth was spent in reducing the Guerall English Factories in Bantam to one Gouernment, and fetling them in one house : also order was taken that the expence of Dyet should bee more frugally managed, and not ipent in racke houses abroad, or on Hang-by Swarts at home, as of la e it had beene : and that the Ware-houses in the Towne should be fewer in number and better looked wate, as well it might be, the goods being with more differenion orderly flowed.

The fixth, in the reweighing of the Pepper received the day before, wee found most of the fackes hard weight, and many to want of what the Kings B. ame did allow. Wherefore I fent for the Weigher, view him kindly, intreated him to take a little more care and paines to amend this fault, which he promifed to doe: whereto the better to incorrage him, I appointed the value of fine Rials of eight to be given him.

The fixteenth, being the Sabbath day, I flayed aboord. About two of the clocke in the afternoone the Towne was all on a fire. Wherefore our Skine being well manned was prefently fent CHAP. E.S.8. The King of Firando bis Letter to our King.

of time almost the whole towne was burnt downe, the English and Dutch houses excepted, which Towne of Banit pleased God of his mercy to preserve. pleated God of the metry to proceine.

The twentieth, being alhoure, I procured Lackmon and Lanching, two Chinesa Merchants, to the Entitle and translate the Letter which the King of Finando in lapan, had delivered mee to carry to our King Hollandershoulames; it was written in China Character and Language, they translated it into the Malayan, les. which in English is as followeth, viz.

alhoare to helpe the Merchants to guard the goods. The wind was fo violent, that in a moment The whole

To the King of Great Britains, &c.

MOR mitghthe King, how acceptable your Maiesties louing Letter and bountifull Present of many worthy things sent more by your servant Captaine, Iohn Saris is unto mee, I cannot sufficiently expresse: neither the great happinesse Lesteeme my selfe to be in, by enioying your Highnesse friendship: For which I render you many bhankes, defiring the continuance of your Macsfies love and acquaintance. I am bearisty glad of your subsets safe arrivall at my small Mand, from so long a tourney. My beige and suctherance they shall not want to the uttermost, for the effecting of their so worthy and landable enterprises 10 of Discovery and Merchandizing, greatly commending their forwardnesse therein : referring their hithere entertainment to the report of your fernant, by whom I returne unto your Maieflie an unworthy token, wishing your Maiestie long life. From my Place of Firando, the fixt day of our tenth moneth.

> Your Maiesties louing Friend, Commander of this Island Firando in Iapan,

They could not well pronounce his name, for Lanching faid it was * Forne Foshin Sam: But * This comes Lackmov faid as is about written.

The two and twentieth, fuch houses as the former fire had spared, were now burnt downe; &crs, which is yet the English and Dutch houses escaped againe : thankes be to God.

The fixe and twentieth, heere arrived a Flemmift thippe of a thousand tunnes from Holland. called the Flushing. At the Island Mayo the Company had mutined against the Captaine, and Characters of had marthered him in his Cabbin, but that it pleafed God a Scotch-man reuealed the matter, like or nearest euen when they were armed to the exployt, fo that they were taken betwixt the deckes with found, and their weapons about them. In this hippe were divers English and Scottiff fouldiers. Shee flayed therfore cause not heere, but towards evening fet faile for laccarra.

The seuen and twentieth, I went ashoare to hasten the Merchants, divers of our Company being at this prefent fallen ficke. Our thip had now her full lading in.

The first of February, the Darling was enforced to returne hither, and order by common coun- Divers English cell was taken, both for her goods and prefent fending to Socadanna, and after to Patane and and Scottish

The thirteenth day, we got out of the Straights of Sunda. Note that in the Straight of Sunda, the Tides fet twelve houres to the Eastward, which is floud, and twelve houres to the West-houres floud,

The fixteenth of May 1614. we came to an anchor in the Bay of Saldania, where wee found ebbe in Sunda, the Concord of London, being the first that was set out for the joynt stocke. We found the Natu- May 16 1614. so talls of this place very treacherous at the prefent, making fignes vnto vs of the forcible carrying the first thip fee away of two of their people. They had wounded one of the Concords men very fore; and whilst out for the we were up in the Land, they did affault those that kept our Skiffe, carried away our Grapnell, joynt Stocke. and had froiled those that were lest to tend her, but that they tooke the water.

The nineteenth, heere arrived a Flemmith thippe bound for Bantam, the Mafter, Cornelis Van Hate. We remained heere three and twentie dayes, and having well refreshed our fel ies, tooke with vs fourteene Oxen and feuentie sheepe aliue, besides good store of Fish and Beefe, which The Beefe of We powdered there, finding it to take falt well contrary to former reports. For ten dayes after our Saldanit takes departing from S. Idania, we had the wind at North-west, and West North-west, but then came sale well to South-west, so that we might goe our course North-west.

60 The fenen and twentieth of September, we arrived, thankes be to God at Plimmouth, where September and for the space of five or fixe weekes wee endured more tempestuous weather, and our lives more We arrived as endangered, then upon the whole Voyage befides. Since which, having had fome spare time, I Plimmeth, laue collected certaine notes ( in the Iournall omitted ) and have thought good, to cause them heere to attend the former Relation.

often miftaking, as Iofeph

Acofta hath ob-Souldiers.

February r.

counts of their owne Voyage, nor.without loffe to the publike.

The multipli-

ries for each

fed the prices to rite, each

oat-bid ling o-

th refor the porticular ac-

cit e of Facto-

Yedzois an I-Hairie people.

Hat Tedzo is an Island, and Iyeth on the North-west side of lapen, and distant from thence ten leagues . That the people are white, and of good condition, but very hairs all their bodies ouer like Munkeyes. Their weapons are bowes and arrowes poyloned. The people in the Southermost part thereof doe understand weight and measure: whereof within the Land thirtie dayes journey they are ignorant. They have much filter and 10 land-gold, whereof they make payment to the lapaners for Rice, &c. Rice and Cotton cloath of lapan, is here well requested. Iron and Lead is brought to them from lapan. Necessaries for the belly and backe are most vendible to them. Rice transported from Iapan to Tedes, bath yeelded

The Towne where the Impanners have their chiefe refidence and Mart, is called Match ma, therein are fue hundred houffields of Iapanners, who likewife haue a Fort there, the Governour whereof is called Matchmadonna. This Towne of Matchma, is the principall Mart Towns of all Tedze, whither the Natines most refort to buy and fell, especially in September, for their prouision for winter. In March, they bring downe Salmon and dryed fish of funding forts, and other wares, for which the lapanners barrer, which the lapanners rather defire then 20

People of low fta:ure farther to the North-A current to

The Impainters have no fetled being or Trade, in any other Towne then Matchma. That further to the Northward, vpon the same Land, are people of very low stature like Dwarfes That the Tedzos are people of the stature of the lapanners: and have no apparrell, but what is brough t them from Infan. That there fetteth a very violent current betweene Tedzo and Infan, which commeth from Corea, and fetteth to the East North-east. That the winds are for the most part, as vitally they are in Tapan, viz. That the Northerly winds beginne in September, and end in March, and then the Souther y winds begin to blow.

cives cooling Crappi Harif

Observations of the Said Captaine IOH N. SARIS, of occurrents which happened in the East-Indies during his abode at Bantam, from October 1605, till Octob. 1600 As likewife touching the Marts and Merahandizes of those parts; observed by his owne experience, or relation of others, extracted out of his larger Booke, and heere added as an Appendix to his former greater Voyage; and may ferue as a continuation of Master Scots premised Relations. To which are added certaine Observation of the faid Author, touching the Townes and Merchandize of principall

Trade in those parts of the World.

Left eighteene menin ail v.z. fue Mauners, and therecene Sailess. A Flemmifb Inneke from Praman:n-we of SirE ward Michelborne. The danger from our men

Admirall Ver-

baren erfaile 10 Holland S r Edward Michelbarne came into the road

He seuenth of October 1609. Our Generall Henry Middleton, and Captain (briflopher Coulthurst departed this Roade for England. The eight, we killed one of Keyeus Varowes Staues, which would have fired our house."

The three and twentieth, here arrived a Junck of the Flemmings from Priaman, by whom we vnderstood of Sir Edward Michelborne and Captaine Dauis, there 50 being upon the coast, and that they had taken a Guzerate Iuncke in the Straights of Sunds, which came from Bantam, bound to Priamer.

The fine and twentieth, we were commanded to the Court, vpon the report the Flemmings had made of Sir Edward, where it was demanded whether weeknew him, and wherefore hee should offer violence to the Kings friends, which had done him no wrong. It was answered, we knew a Knight fo called, but whether he were vpon the Coast or no, we knew not, nor did know the Guzerate to be taken, but by the report of the Flemmings, which we held fabulous, and that vpon their better confiderations, it might prooue rather to be one of the Flemmings ships, which fet faile two dayes before the departure of the faid Gnzerate from Bantam. Whereupon we were willed to depart, till fur her proofe could be made.

The fixe and twentieth, Admirall Vanhangen of Viricke departed for Holland, with two thips more in company, by whom we admited the Company of all matters at large.

The nine and twentieth, Sir Edward Michelborne came to anchor heere, in the Road of Bin-

English Voyages to the East-Indies. CHAP.2.

tam, Master Towersen and my selfe went aboord to him, where we had good entertainment: And Nou. 2-1605. he did intimate vnto vs the taking of the Guzerate: wee intreated him that he would not take Sir Enmodier the China Iunckes, the which he promifed vs, as he was a Gentleman, he would not,

The second of November 1605. Sir Edward set saile, directing his course for the Straights of Pallinghan. Pallingban.

The thirteenth heere arrived a small ship of the Flemmings from the Moluccas, called the lit- Pinnase voon The eighteenth, heere departed a small Pinnage of the Flemmings, for the disconery of the I-led Nova times land called Nous gimes, which, as it is faid, affordeth great flore of Gold. The four and twen- Paul Van Just 10 tieth Vanfoult let faile for Choromandell. The second of December 1605, heere arrived three Junckes from Pattanny, they brought newes of the great loffe the Flemmings had had by fire there.

The feuenteenth, Generall Warmicke arrived heere from Patanny, where hee had taken a very rich Carracke, which came from Mackean, the greatest part of her lading was raw Silke. The fecond of January 1605, heere departed a Juncke of this Towne, fraughted by Chinefes wide arrived. for Temore: their lading or commodities they caried wes Brand pecces of filtuer, beaten very thin lanuar, 2,1605. of an hand-breadth English, Iron, course Purseline, Taffacies, China Pans and Belles. The twen-terface for 19eieth, arrived a China luncke, which Sir Edward Michelborne had taken, and restitution was demore fraughted.

manded of vs, the Gouernour and principall Courtiers being very much offended, but by the Ad- by chineje. 20 mirall and Sabandar were pacified. The Nockhod: of the Lincke alledged many rich parcells May 23, 1606. The three and twentieth of May 1606, heere arrived a small Frigat of the Flemmings from of Icrasis, Ternate, and brought away their Merchants, which had been left there by Bastianson. The Spa. The Hamines mard had taken away all they had, but gaue every man his libertie. They carried the King of Ter- Pinnaffe pillanate for the Mannelyes, and as it was reported, they purposed to fend him for Spaine. Some ten ged by the leagues from lackstra, this Flemmilb Frigat chances to meete with the King of Bastams Fleete, of Bastams which pillaged them of all which they had faued from the Spaniards. The Flemmings laboured The Kines to get restitution, but could get none of the lauwer. The nine and twentieth, the Kings Fleete returned, having done vere little against their ene- lune 15.

The fifteenth of Iune, heere arrived Nockhoda Tingall a Cling-man from Banda, in a Jaua Juncke, Jaden with Mace and Nutmegs, the which he fold heere to the Guzerass for an hundred in Bantam an and fiftie Rialls of eight the Bahar Bantam, which is foure hundred and fiftie Cattees: he told hundred and me that the Flemmings Pinnasse which wene upon discouery for Nous Ginny, was returned to fifthe Rualisathe methat the Flemming Pinnalle which wene vpon discourry for Ivona Unity, was returned to Bahar four Banda, hauing found the Iland: but in fending their men on floare to intreate of Trade, there Bahar four depends a particular to the property of the proper were nine of them killed by the Heathens, which are man-eaters; so they were constrained to fifte Cartes, returne, finding no good to be done there.

The fixt of August, the Moone was Eclipsed about eight of the clocke in the evening continuing for the space of two houres, the Chineses and lananies beating of Pais and Morters during Nonaginnea. the robfcurie, in fuch manner, as you would thinke there were no hell but there, and crying out The Moone The fourth of October, 1605, the China quarter was all burnt downe, yet it pleafed God to Baniam.

preserue Ours. The same night, the Carracke of the Flemmings fet faile for Holland, her lading October 4. was ffreene thousand sackes of Pepper, some rawe Silke, and great store of (hina Sugar. The fifth, the West Frisand arrived here from Ternata, whence she was beaten by the Spaniards: quarter burnt

the was not aboue halfe laden with Mace, Cloues, and Cotton-yarne. The ninth, here arrived a small Frigat from Soocadanna, the Merchant was Class Simon fon, landbeaten his lading was Wax, Caulacca, and great flore of Diamonds. The thirteenth, about midnight we from Ternala. had an Earthquake, it continued not long, but for the time it was very fearet. Il. The thirteenth of December, here arrived two lunkes of the Flemmings from Ior, by whom Sourceans. we understood, that there was a Fleete of Flemmings, beeing eleuen ships before Mallacca. The Ancarthouske Commander whereof was Mattelet fe the younger. The flips names were as followeth: The in Banian. Orangia Admirall, Amsterdam Viccadmirall, Midleburgh, Mauritius, Erasmus, Great Sunne, December 13. Little Sonne, Naffan, Prouincies, White Lyon, Blacke Lyon.

The twentie two of May, they came to an ancher before Mallacea with nine thips: for their sune by the denirall before their companies thinks and forest their companies thinks and forest the forest their companies that the ball forest their companies that the ball forest their companies that the ball forest the ball forest their companies that the ball forest the ball for the ball forest the ball Admirall before their comming thither, had fent the Promincies and the Erafmus for Achen. The fifth of Inne, they landed their men, but a little before their landing, the Portugals let fire of Flemming at of one Carracke and foure lancks which were in the Road. In July, the Provincies and Erasmus Malacca. came to the Fleet at Mallacca. The twenty fifth of Argust, the Viceroy with a Fleete of fix temperate thins, were differented by the Latte Came, which was appointed to keep anything. June 5. & ternegreat ships, were discoursed by the Lattle Sunne, which was appointed to keepe watch at The Hammings an Iland colled Cape Rochado, who immediately came and certified their Admirall, finding him discoursed the very much verrouided, his Ordnance and men beeing associate. But by the Portugalls calling of a Vice-R y or Councel, they gause the Flemmings twenty foure houres time, to get his men and turniture aboord, the cordance and to fit himfelfe before he came to them. Thus being reade, the Flemmings weighed, and flood like to reduce and to fit himfelfe before he came to them. Councel, they gave the Fletonings twenty foure hours time, to get his men and furniture aboord, Gra with a

Straights of

Decem. 2.1605

Iuncke from Patany.

Fice: te:urned.

Eclipsed in

The West Frie

286

performe a good fight. Three Portugal thips burnt by the Flem. and three by raemfelues. The flem finds the Nicobers but they were to ftrong afhoare, as they could not deale with them. Maseletfe departed for the Molluras Index and fine i lem, more put to death at Bemermasten. A thip called the Great Sunm mings hath left Factors vpon the coall of Charemandell. The latt ude of the Countrey. In the Month ot May much wind. A Flom. from S. Lucia vpon the Il and of Madazafer. Cape Middleton arrived in the Confest of Loude . Mattelafrarriarrived from

Cheromandel. The places

wherethe Flow

The ship GeL derland from

Admiral Paywith 7, thips.

The Flemmass out of the Harbour to them, where they beganne a good fight, which continued two nights and thandoutorthe one day : in which fight was burned the ship Middleburgh, the Nasjaw, and three Portugal ships. toad and meet The Orangia having I prung a great leake, was faine to put into Ior, the King beeing their great wint the vice-roy, where they friend and a sidant, the Fleet following him, where he remained one moneth, and then fet faile for Mallacea againe, where he met with fixe thips of the Portugals, of the which the Flemmings burnt three, and the Portugals themselves burnt three. From thence they departed for the Ni. cubars, where they found the Vice-roy with feuen ships, but they were haled so close ashoare. that they durit not deale with them. The twentieth, he arrived here with fixe ships. The twenty ninth, he departed for the Ma-

The foureteenth of May, 1607. here arrived a Malasa Junke from Grefe, by whom we under. 10

the V.ce-roy at flood, that Iulius a Flemming, and flue more, which departed this Road the thirtieth of November, 1606. for Soccadanna, was put to death at Bemermaffen, and all their goods taken by the Kine of that place, the occasion (as it is reported) proceeded from the Flemming, who had vied certein foule speeches of the King, which he came to the hearing of and thereupon sent for the Merchant and Mafter, and by the way gaue order to kill them.

The feuenteenth of August, here arrived the Great Sunne from Choromandell, the Captaine Peter Isaacson, by whom we understood, that upon the Hand of Selon, they tooke a very great ship of the Portugals, out of whom they had eightie Packs feueral forts of cloath, eight hundred Bades of Sugar bound for Malacca. Item, that in the road of Masulpatan, where their Factory lieth, they took a Portugal ship very richly laden with all forts of Commodities fit for that Coast, which was 20 greatly for their benefit, for that they were ignorant what Commodities were most vendible there: her lading was Clones, Mace, Nut-megs, China Taffaties, Veluets and Dammasks of the brightest colours, but no white, China Porfeline fine and course, but your great Basons with brims are the best, Item, the Flemming hath Factories in three seuerall places vpon that Coast, but not farre the one from the other, viz. At Masulipatan, at Pettapoli, and Balligat. Mesulipatan lieth in the latitude of seuenteene degrees. It is a place of great plentie of victualls, thirty two Hennes for a Riall, two sheep for a Riall, an Oxe for a Riall. Item, in the moneth of May, the wind at West, it is so extreame hot there, that you would thinke the wind would take away your breath, yet can you not by any meanes sweat till the Sunne be downe, and then you shall Iweat very much, wherefore in this Moneth they goe not abroad in the day time, but in the 30 night, for there have been many imoothered. The feuenth, here arrived a small Pinnasse from an Iland called S. Lucia, in the latitude of twentie foure degrees and an halfe, about a mile from the Iland of Madagascar, where they were forced in by a leake in the Carracke, which departed from hence the fourth of October, 1606. they were foced to throw away three thousand tacks of Pepper, befales other Commodities to great value. They reported vinto vs, that it is a very good place to refresh in. The people have no knowledge of Coyne : they bought a fat Oxe for a Tinne ipoone, and a sheep for a small peece of Brulle: it is hard ground, and very good riding in feuen and eight fathome. The foureteenth of November, 1607. Captaine Danid Middleton arrived here in the Confent of London.

The fenenteenth, the Flemmish Admirall Matteleefe arrived here from the Coast of China, 40 where be hoped to have got ten Trade, but could not: he proffered them at Canton an hundred thouland Realis of eight for a gift onely, but they would not accept it; he was there in great dang red racing, by fixe Carracks which came out of Maceau of purpose for him: they made him cast of his Pranaste, the which the Portugals tooke. He touched at Camboya and Pahang, but bought nothing but victuals.

The feuenteenth of December, 1607, here arrived the Gelderland from Holland. They came betweene S. Laurence and the maine : their first place of refreshment was at Mayor, one of the Il ands of Gomora, where they fet up a fine Pinnaffe. It is a good harbour, but there is little cattel to be had. From thence to Callicur, where in their way they tooke a small Boat of Meeca, laden with Rice and people of divers Nations. The Towne of Calient lieth by the Sea-side, and is 50 thought to be fine Englate miles long. The Sambrin which is their King, came downe vnto them, he was very rich in apparell, hauing a Crowne of Gold ouer his Turbant, a naked Sword in his hand, which is the manner there, he gaue the Flemmings good words, offering to let them leave & Factory there : but they durit not trust him, the Portugal being so great with him.

The twenty feuenth, here arrived Admirall Paulus van Carle, with feuen very good ships, and one Portugall Frigat. They refreshed at Cape de Lope Gonsaluo, which lieth vpon the Coast of Ginnie, where they found very good water and fish; they continued here fixe weekes, having the wind at South-east by East. From hence to an Hand called Annabon, vpon the same Ceast.

The thirtieth of March, Stilo nono, we (fay they) came to anchor in the read of Mofambique, 60 letting fall our anchor in eighteene fathomes, the Caitle shooting very hotly at vs, but wee anfault the Caffle fiveted them not againe, but made all the speed we could abourd of two great Guzerate shippes and a Frigat which ride hard by vs, laden with Callicees, courfe blue cloth with white spots, and tome with red spots, the which for the most part we tooke out, and set the great ships on hire, but the Frigat we kept. The the tie one, we multred our men, finding nine hundred ninetic flue. all well and in perfect health

The first of Aprill, we landed leaen hundred men, and seven peeces of Arrillerie, vic. eight Demy-Cannons of Brafe, two D-my-Culurings of Iron, and battered vpon the Caffle, but to little purpose: wherefore we brought our trene ies so neere the enemie, as we could heave itones into them. And the same night we began to make our mine, but there fell so much raine, that we were constrained to give it over. Here they heaved fire-pots downe from the walls vpon vs. which scalded our men very much, and perceiving hereof, failed out vpon vs, to our great detriment. Thus having been here fixe weekes ashoare, our men beeing hart and ficke, wee brought 10 our Ordnance and men aboord, having lost in all fortie men, we let faile out of the Roade, the Ca-file hooting very hotly at vs, fo that they lunke the fterne Maft of our Fleete, which was a very flaine. tall ship: and other of our ships had thirtie shot through their failes and hull. The Gunner was From hence we went for Mayotto, which is one of the Hands of Gomora, to refresh our men. Mayot a good

Here we bought fixe hundred twenty Oxen, thirty fine Sheepe, and Goates, to the great com-place torefort of vs. These people have knowledge of Coyne, and would deale with vs for no Commodi- fresh at. tie but Rialls. The King made a decree, that no man should fell vs any Cattell, vntill the Kings were fold, the which he would not fell vs under three Rialls of eight the piece; but his peoples eattell we bought for a Riall of eight the piece, but sheepe and Goats cheaper. Here we mustred 10 our men againe, hauing bin here fix weeks, & found our felues nine hundred & forty firong: wherfore it was determined to goe againe for Mosambique, to all all the Castle once againe. But comming into the Reade, we found three Carracks riding there, which were newly come from Portugal, whereupon it was held best, not to goe in againe, but to ply off and on, to see if they would come forth; but they did not, wherefore we flood away along it the shoare some thirtie leagues off the land for Goa: where at a Towne called Seperdowne, we landed all the Guzerats which wee Seperdowne a had out of the thirs at Mosambique. At this place is good refreshing and cheape, twentie hennes good place to for a Riall, one hundred and fittle Egges for a shilling, and as much fresh fish as would serve all the ships companie for a day, for a Riall of eight. It lieth in eighteene degrees to the North of the line, and is not far from Chaul: we rid in feuen fathomes clay ground. The people are Moores, and to great enemies to the Portugale traffoords no Marchandife but a little Pepper, From hence hard a Carrackette by the Ilands of Commedo to the North of Goa feuen leagues, we took a Carracke which was come ken hard by from Liftone, her lading was most Rialls of eight, currant Spanish coine; all which we tooke out, the llands of and fet her on fire. The Captaine we tooke with vs, his name was Ieronymus Telbalditto. At Goa commedo. we remained a Moneth at anchor, hoping to have met with the Carrackes which we had feene at Mosambique, but they came not : wherefore we fet saile, and went for Callicut, purposing to haue spoken with the Sambarine, but by reason of tenne Gallies, which were come from Goa Ten Gallies in and lay there, we went not ashoare, fearing some Treaton. We sent him a Present, which was the Road of Chiartonia two pieces of Iron Ordnance, and one piece of Brasse, we sent our Caske ashoare to fill with wa- Portugals. ter, but we could find none that we durit drinke. From hence we shaped our course for Cape The Flow, give 40 Commerin to looke for water, but could get none: wherefore wee directed our course for the the Sambrine of ftraights of Mallacca, but finding the winds and Current contrary, we came directly for Bansam, fent.

having been out of Holland twenty one Moneths and an halfe. The thirtie one of December, he departed this Roade with feuen ships, and one Frigat to spend Paulus van Carlo fome time in the straights of Mallacca, in hope to have met with the Mackaw shippes, but set saile for the

The fourth of Ianuary, 1607, he arrived in the Road here, leaving his thips riding at Poolo Mallacea. Tindoo. The fifth, he departed hence for the Molluccas.

The eighteenth, Admirall Matteleefe the younger fet faile for Holland: his lading was twelve Matteleefe the thouland lackes of Pepper, foure hundred fackes of Nutmegs, Sugar, Ebony wood, and some sales for Holso raw Silke. This yeare, 1608, arrived here many Junkes of China, and other places, which I forbeare to

The nineteenth of August, arrived a Flemmift ship called the Erasmus from Ambonna, having AFlem. this in her some seuen hundred Bahars of Cloues, which she laded at Hitto.

The first of September, arrived a small Pinnasse of the Flemmings from Mackian, by whom we A FlemPinviderflood of two ships called the China and the Done were cast away, riding at anchor afore natifefrom Machian, with very litle windat West, which makes such a Sea, that it is not poll-ble for ships Machian. to ride there, by reason it is foule ground, and very deep; water, as seventy and eightie fath, ms. Iten, that they had taken Machien and Taffafal without the loffe of a man, and had lett meach Machien and 6 Place, one hundred and twenty Flemmings: in like manner they had strengthened the Caitle at Taff-sultaken The tenth, departed a Pinnaffe of the Flemmings for Soccedama, to fetch away the Merchants of one man. whom they heard could get in no part of their debts, left there by Clawer Simonfon, and that they nuffe for Sores Were very licke.

Paulus vancarh

A Tlemmish th:p from Bas-

The Hay from Charamandell. 1 he Dragon from Priaman. A Prefent giuen the King of Parram. The Gouernour and his Irrotoples killed. A Flow, Pinnaffe from Soocedanna. Fine faile of Flem, bound for Holland.

A Flem. Pine

lasca. A Pinnaffe of the Fiemmings, for Seec :da ma. W.K.celing .ct fayle for Eig-Lind. Hereturned backe. H. departed. He returned meerin; with the Heffer in the Straights. A Flem. from Holland which had met with two English

> A Flem, Pinnaff : fet fayle for Mallacca. The Dragen for England. The Heller for Banda. Two thips and a Pinnaffe from Cheromandell. Three Flem. thips for Barda A Fleet from Cop Premeros.

Scuen Flem. for the Molluc. A meeting at the Court by rwelus faile.

Our Houle ef-

The three and twentieth, arrived the ship Zeland from Banda, halte laden with Mace and Note. megs, her barthen was an hundred and fiftie last. The fine and twentieth, arrived the Hay from Choromandell, her lading was diners forts of Mallayo cloth, and cloth Cherra laua.

The fecond or October, arrived the Dragon from Triaman, wherein was General William Keeling. The feuenth, the Generall went up to the Court, and delivered the King our Kings Letter, with a Present, which was fine Peeces, one Bason and Ewer, one Barrell et powder.

The thirteenth in the morning very early, the Gournour and his lerotoolies were killed by the Punganas, the Sabandar, Admirall, Key departy Viennagarra, &c. who allembled themselves over night at Kermas Patties house, and beset the Court, first laying held of the King and his Mother; and then they ranne into the Gouernours Court, thinking to have found him in the bed, but he 10 was on the backefide his bed, where they found him, and wounded him first on the head, whereupon he fled to the Priest, called Keyfinkkey, who came forth and intreated them for his life, but they would not be periwaded, but perforce ran in, and made an end of him.

The eighteenth, arrived the Flemmings Pinnasse from Soocodanna, and brought away their Merchants, leaving the Countrey much indebted vnto them.

The fixth of November, fet faile the Vice-Admirall of Paulus van Carle, with five faile for Holland: their lading was Cloues, Mace, Nutmegs, Pepper and Diamonds. The eighth, arrived a naffe from Masmall Pinnafle of the Flemmings from Malacca, by whom wee understood of thirteene faile of thips which rid there, and that in their Voyage they had taken two Carrackes.

The ninth of November, 1608. Samuel Plummer departed this Roade for Soccadanna, to re- 20 The fourth of December, being Sunday in the afternoone our Generall William Keeling departed this Roade for England in the Dragon. The fixth, hee was forst backe by foule weather and West-winds. The tenth, hee departed from the West point. The thirteenth, hee returned having met with the Hellor in the Straights of Sonda. They were very weake, their men for the most part toucht with the Scuruie. The Portugalls of Damas had betrayed their Boates at Surat, taken nineteene of their men, and nine thouland Rials in Cloth as it cost there. Item, as they came for Bantam, they tooke a finall Frigat of Collumba, out of which they tooke eleven packes of Cloth, contayning in all eightie three Clothes, thirteene pieces poulings, which were fent for the Ilands of Banda.

The fixteenth of December, arrived a small ship from Holland, by whom we understood of two ships which they met withall to the North of the Cape Bona Speranfa in thirtie two degrees. They made them to bee English ships, but whether they were bound they were not certaine, but the smaller shippe bore the Flagge inthe maine-top. This shippe had beene on her thips in 31. de. Voyage eight monethes and ten dayes, they refresht at one of the Hands of Comora, called Pulo to the North of the Cape of Lamone, where they had great store of Beeues and Greats for old Kniues and Tinne Spoones.

The two and twentieth, the let faile for Mailacca, to their fleet which lay there, to will them to give over their fiege.

The three and twentieth, departed the Dragon for England: Captaine, Gabriell Towerson. The first of lanuary, 1608, our Generall William Keeling fet fayle in the Hector for the Ilands 40

The fewenth, arrived two shippes and a Pinnasie of the Flemmings from Choromandell, laden with Cloath the which some part they had taken, and the rest bought. They had taken fine prizes, one a Carricke at Mofambique. The fifteenth of Ianuary, 1608, departed the great Sunne, and the two ships which came from

The third of Februarie, arrived Admirall Willamson Verhoose with twelve sayle of good ships

Holland, being from Mallaca.

The fourteenth, the Admirall with feuen ships departed for the Molluccoes.

The ninth of March, the Flemmings caused a meeting at the Court of all the Punganas . To 50 tell the King that they had received Letters from their King, which did make mention of peace betweene them and the Portugalls. Wherefore they thought good to certific io much vnto them, To this end that if the Portugalls should come thither under colour to trade with them, and so fet vpon them for their Countrey, they could not take their parts as aforetime they could have done, by reason the King of Holland and Portugall were friends. Where at the Iauans fellall into a great laughter, fmoking them, that their pretence was to frike feare into them of the Portugall, doubting the King would if they came, give them peaceable Trade, which would be the ouerthrow of the Flemmings. The Gouernour gaue them no anfwere, but willed them to take their course.

The twentieth, It pleased God to deliuer vs from a great danger, for a Chineses housenext vn 60 eaped burning to our Ware-house tooke fire and was burnt downe, but ours escaped.

The one and twentieth, I was fent for to the Court by Pangran Areaumgalla the Goucinour. I went and carryed with mea Prefent which was one Peece, one Mallee Goobaer, one piece Morey, one piece Mallayo Pintado, one Bandaleere, one roll of Match, the which he accepted very kindly, he told me he had fent for me, hearing that there were two men in chaines in our house for debt, and he would know by whose order I kept them. I told him by the order of the King we had taken them up, and hoped that he would not take them from me before I were fatisfied my debt, or some part, and that it was due by them, Ishewed their Bils : hee faid, hee thought they were indebted, but that the King gaue vs leave to chaine them vp, he knew to the contrary, wherfore he would have them loofed, but with much intreatie, I perfivaded that he gave me leave to keep them til Taryomge, which ought foure hundred twenty Rials & a half, should pay one hundred, and Bungoone which ought five hundred Rials, & one hundred facks of Pepper, should pay twentie bagges of Pepper, and one hundred Rials in money, according as hee had before a-10 greed and given me his Bill. Wherefore hee fent one of his flaves home with me to tell the Priioners thereof, willing them to refolue and pay me.

The foure and twentieth, I was ient for to the Court, and the Flemmings: hee demanded of the Flemming whether it was their Countrey manner to take vp a man for debt without telling The Gouerof the King, the Flemming laid no, whereupon he willed me prefently to let them out, cleane for nours order. getting his promise three dayes before, the which I charged him with , but all would not pre- I was tent for nayle; wherefore he fent one of the Kings ilanes and tooke them out of the house. The which to the Court, first course I hold to be taken against vs, by the instigation of the Flemmungs, wrought by Lack and willed to more, to the end we should not trust the Chineses: so that by this course they must need scone to deliver the Chineses. him, & hebeing fitted with all forts of Commodities from the Flemming, will wholly ouerthrow neferyp. 20 our Trade, in respect wee cannot trust but at hazard, for there is no Justice to bee had.

The three and twentieth of Aprill, 1609, here arrived a small Pinnasse of the Flemmings from A Pinnasse of Socadanna and Ternata: by whom wee viderstood that Admirall Pauls Vankerle was taken at the Flemmings

The one and twentieth of May, 1609. A Pinnasse of the Flemmings set faile for Bemermassin, A Pinnasse of vpon a league made betweene them. And with purpose to search every Creeke and corner of the the Flemmings Iland. For they have heard there is much Gold there and Bezars, the which is to bee traded for with Beads and other Haberdasher-ware.

The fixe and twentieth of August, 1609. arrived Captaine William Keeling from Banda, hauing laden there twelve thousand foure hundred eighty foure Cattees one halfe quarter of Mace. 30 fiftie nine thouland, eight hundred fortie fixe Cattees of Nutmegs, which stood them in nine, ten and eleven Rials the Bahar, the Cattee there weighing thirteene and an halfe of our English Ounces. The smal Bahar Mace is ten Cattees, or one hundred Cattees of Nutmegs: &the great Bahar is one hundred Cattees of Mace, or one thousand Cattees of Nutmegs : so that if a man be indebted vnto you ten Cattees of Mace, and will give you one hundred Cattees of Nutmegs you cannot refule it.

The fourth of October, 1609. Captaine Keeling fet faile from Bantam , having taken in the The Holler fee rest of his lading, which was foure thousand nine hundred bagges, three Cattees of Pepper, in sayle from the which thip called the Hellor. I came for England having beene in the Countrey four yeares, Bantam. nine monethes, eleuen dayes.

Certaine Rules for the choise of sundry Drugges, as also from whence they may be had, as followeth.

Ignum Aloes, is a wood fo called by vs, but of the Mallayens, it is called Garros. The best Alfo from commeth from Mallacka, Syam, and Cambaya. The best is that which is in large round stickes Sumatra Polanand very masse, of blacke colour intermixed with Ashe-coloured veines. In talle some-what nie, Cauchaybitter and odoriferous, and being burnt, it becommeth like vnto Pitch in bubbles. If a iplinter chine. thereof be laid upon a fire-coale, for if it be good, it will not leane frying till it bee quite confumed, catting forth a most delectable Odour.

50 Beniamin, is a Gumme called by the Mallayers Minnian. The best fort commeth from Syam, which is very pure, cleere and white, with little ftreakes of Amber colour. The other fort which Burrowse yeelwhich is very pure, cleere and white, with little treakes of samoer conduct the doth Tyurall, is not altogether fo white, but is allo very good, comment from Samatra. And a third fort which delid in Eng. commeth from Priaman and Barrowse, is very course like Horse-bread, not vendible in England, glish Buris, but well effeemed in Bantam.

Cizer, the best is that which is of a deepe yellow colour some-what inclining to the colour of Riall the Cat-Gold, not whitish, for that is visually iophisticated with Grafe, yet if it bee newly taken, it is tee, and heere naturally whitish, and will in continuance of time become of a yellowish colour.

Muske, there are three forts, blacke, browne and yellow, of which the first is naught, the fe-keptin Gresse, cond is good, the last best: which ought to be of colour like the best Spicknard, that is, of a deep 60 Amber colour, inclosed with one onely skinne, and not one ouer another, as it is oftentimes to be feene, not ouer-moift which maketh it waightie, but in a meane, hauing fome haires like briffles, but not ouer-many, cleere of flones, leade, or other trash intermixed, and of so flrong and fragrant a finell, that to many it is offenfine, and being taffed in the mouth, it pierceth the very braine with the fcent, and ought not ouer-foone to diffolue in the mouth, nor yet to re-Kkk 3 mayne very long undiffolued in any hand, it must not be kept neere to any sweet Spices, least it late the lent.

Bezar, there are heere of two kinds, the one brought from the West, the other from the Bast-Indies, whereof the East-India Bezar is worth double the price of the other. The formes of both are diners, some round, others long like Date-stones, others like Pidgeons Egges, some nke the Kidneyes of a young Goate, and others in forme of a Chef-nut, but all for the most part are of int at the ends, not picked, and no leffe varietie is also to be feene in the colours, for some ere of light redde, others of colour like Honey, many of a darke Ash-colour like that once waring of the Cinet-Cat , but for the most part of a waterish-greene. The East-India Bezars consist of many peelings and scales, as it were artificially compacted together, in manner of the skinnes and peeles of an Onion, each inclosing other, bright and splendent, as if they were po- Io lifted by Art, the one peeling being broke off, the next is more iplendent or brighter then the former, these peelings are some thicke, some thinne, according to the largenesse of the stones, and the larger the stone is, the better for sale. This is a certaine way to make tryall of Bezars; take the direct waight of the stone, then put him into water, and let it stand for the space of source houres, then fee if he be not crackt, wipe it dry, and weigh it againe, if it weigh neuer fo small a matter more then he did at the first, then build vpon it, it is not good. Thus have I proued my felfe many times in Bantam, and have had divers turne to Chalke with a little flicke in the middle, which hath weighed a Taile Iana, which is two Ounces. The mest Counterfeites come dle, which hath weighed a rane rane, which is from Soccodanna, which is vpon Burneo. These names in the Margent, are the places from whence they may be had. Amber, there is hereof, if you regard the colour, many forts, as blacke, white, browne, and gray, of all which the blacke is viually the bafeft, and the gray the best, of which choose what is best clented from filth or drosse, pure of it felfe, of colour inclining to a white, and of an Ashcolour intermixed with veines, some Ash-colour, other whitish, being put into a bowle of water, it ought to floate aloft. The which, although some which is sophisticated may doe, yet this is certa 25, that none which is pure will finke in the water. The greatest quantitie commeth from Mosambique and Sofala.

Of all the chiefe and principall Townes for Trade in these parts, with their severall names and situations, and also what commodities they doe affoord, and what is there desired.

 ${f B}$  Antam, a Towne fituate in the lland of Iana Maior, flandeth in the latitude of fixe degrees to the South of the Equinochiall, and hath three degrees variation West. To this place is great refort of divers Nations, in fundrie forts of commodities. For of it selfe it affoordeth little but victuals, Cotton wooll and Pepper, whereof the quantitie may be at a haruest (which is in the moneth of October) some thirtie or thirtie two thousand sackes, each sacke containing forty nine Cattees and an halfe China, and each Cattee twenty one Rials and an halfe English, a facke is called a Timbang, and two Timbanges is one Pecculi, three Pecculls is a small Bahar, and foure Peeculls and an halfe a great Bahar, which is foure hundred fortie fine Cattees and an halfe. Item, there is a Coclack, by the which the Iananes most commonly deale, because they are not very 40 pertoct in the vie of the Beame; it containeth feuen Cattees and a quarter, and feuen Coolackes is Timbang (water measure) the which is one Cattee and a quarter, greater then the Beame (there should be no difference, but that the weigher, which is alwayes a Chinesa, doth give his Countrimen leaue to get) for according as he fanours, he can fit them with a great or a small measure, at his pleafure. Item, there commeth in the moneths of December and Ianuary to this place, many Iunckes and Prawes Luden with Pepper from Cherringin and lanby, fo that in the fine of Ianuary there is alwayes Pepper fufficient to lade three good shippes. Item, the King hath no Coine of his owne, but what commeth from China, which is called Cashes, and is made of the drosse of Lead, it is round and thin, with holes to firing them on, a thousand Cashes upon a string, called a Pecoo, which is of diners values, according as Cashes rife or fall, wherewith they know how to 50 make their accounts, which is as followeth: ten Pecooes is a Laxfau, ten Laxfaues is a Cattee, ten Cartees is an Vta, ten Vtaes is a Bahar.

Item, you are to understand, there are two manner of wayes of the stringing of Cashes; the one called Chuchuck China, the other Chuchuck Iana, of which the Iana is the best, for there should be two handred Cashes upon a Tacke, but for the China Tackes you shall find but an hundred and fixtic, or an hundred and seuentie: siue Tackes should make a Pecoo; so that you lose two hundred Cashes vpon a Pecoo, or an hundred and fiftie, which will rife to a great matter, if you deale for much; but by the law of the Countrey they are to be just a thousand Cashes upon a ftring, or to give Baffe, which is allowance. Hem, upon the departing of the lunckes, you shall buy thirtie foure and thirtie fue Peccocs 60 for a Riall, which before the next yeere you may fell for twentie two and twentie for a Riall, fo that there is great profit to be made, but the danger of fire is great.

Item, the weight yied to weigh Bezars, Ciuit and gold, is called a Taile, which is two Rialls

Best wares to be bought or fold . And Customes at Bantam.

of eight and a quarter, or two ounces, English. Item, a Mallaya Taile is one Riall of eight and a The weight v. halfe, or one ounce and one third part English, Item, a Taile China is 1.7. Riall of eight, or one led in weighounce and one fift part Engl. fo, fo that ten Tailes China is fixe Tailes I ana, exactly. Item, the ing of Bezaus, English commodities vendible heere, are as followeth: English Iron, long and thinne barres, fixe Gold, with the Rials the Peccull: Lead, in small pigges, for fue and twentie or fixe and twentie pecces, fiue Rialls and a halfe the Peccull: Powder, fine round cornd, the barrell fine and twentie Rials: Pecces feneral Tailoe, fquare, sanguined, the peece ten Rialls, of fixe foot long: Peeces square, damasked all ouer, fit- Laglift comteene Rialls, of fixe foote long and a halfe: Broad-cloth of ten pound the Cloath, of colour Femice red, a Gasse, which is three quarters of a yard, three Rialls of eight: Opium Misseree, which ion,

10 is the best, eight Rialls the Cattee : Amber, in great beads, one Wame and a halfe Taile Mallaya, fixe Rialls of eight: Corall, in large branches, fine and fixe Rialls, the weight of the Taile Mallega: Rialls of eight, the principallest commodities you can carry.

Item, in the Moneths of February and March, heere commeth three or foure Iunckes from February and China, very richly laden with Silkes raw and wrought, China Cashes, Purseline, Cotton cloath March, the of divers fashions and prices, as followeth, viz. Raw-filke of Lamking, which is the best, an hun-time of the dred and ninetie Rialls the Peccull: Raw-filke of Caston, which is courfer, eightie Rials the Peccull: Taffata in boults, an hundred and twelue yards the peece, fortie fix Rials the Corge, twenty for Bantam and peeces: Veluets all colours, thirteene yards the peece, twelue Rialls the peece: Damaske all co-what commofours, twelue yards the peece, fixe Rialls the peece; white Sattins, twelue yards long the peeces, diffes hey are eight Rialls: Burgones, ten yards long the peece, fortie fine Rialls the Corge: Sleue-filke, the laden with belt made colours, three Rialls the Cattee: Muske the belt, two and twentie Rialls the Cattee: Sewing Gold the best, fifteene knots, every knot thirty strings, one Riall: Veluet Hangings imbroydered with gold, eighteene Rialls; vpon Sattins, fourteene Rials; white Curten stuffes, nine yards the peeces, fiftie Rialls the Corge; white Damask Flat, nine yards the peeces, foure Rials: Sugar white the Peecull, three Rials and a halfe, very drie: Sugar Candy very drie, fine Rials the Commodities Peecull: Purseline Basons the peeces, two Rialls, very broad and fine: Callico cloath, course, from Guna. white and browne, fifteene Rialls the Corge: Courfe Purfeline, Drugges, and divers other commodities they bring, but because they are not for our Countrey, I doe omit. Beniamine very Beniamine good and white, flue and thirtie, and thirtie Rialls the Peccull: Lignum-Aloes, eightie Rialls Lignum Aloes the Peecull: Allum, which is as good as the English, and comes from China, two Rialls and tobe bought at ahalfe the Peecull. Choromandell Cloath is a principall commoditie heere, the most vendible forts are called Goobares; Pintadoes of foure and fine couets: Fine Tappies of Saint Thomas, Ballachos, Inna Girdles, alina Caine-Goolong, Callico Launes, Booke Callicos, and Callicos made Commodities vp in rowles, white. Item, a Goober is double, and containeth twelue yards, or fixe Hastaes sin- vendible in gle. Item, Ballachos, course and fine, containing two and thirtie or foure and thirtie Hallaes, but Bantam. Item, the fine Tappyes of Saint Thomas, fixe Hastres. Item, Moorees is a fine fort of cloath, Loan, which cloath Chera but not very much vied heere, for it is deare and flort, containing fixteene Hastaes, at two Rialls comes from

and a quarter. Item, Booke Callicos, if they be not corted, are two and thirtie Hallaes. Item, all Chromandell, to forts of Mallayan cloath are generally eight Hastaes long, wherefore it is called, Cherra Mallaya. Item, generally all forts of Cotton cloath, which is broad, and of good length, is well reque- Generally

Item, Callico Lawnes, white and red, are two and thirtie Haffaes. Item, a Haffa is halfe a yard, requested in accounted from your elbow to the toppe of your middle finger. Item, the Kings Customes heere, are as followeth: The Kings Custome called Chukey, is eight bagges upon the hundred bagges, Custome, rating Pepper at foure Rials of eight the facke, what price focuer it beares: Billa-billian is, if any Billa-billian o ship arrine in the Roade, laden with cloath or fuch like; the King is to be made acquainted there- Libba, is you with, and with the forts, quantitie, and price thereof, before you may land any part : then hee will fend his Officers, and fuch forts, as he likes, he will have at the halfe of your price, or fome-dred fixty fixe what aboue, as you can agree : for if you prife your cloath at twentie Riells for Corge, hee will Riell, and to giue you but fifteene or fixteene Rialls a Corge: but the Flemmings course hath been to giue him bigher or feuen or eight hundred Rialls at a time for a shippes lading, to cleare them of the dutie and trou-lower, accorble. But by the custome of the Countrey, this dutie is voon fixe thousand sackes of Pepper, fixe ding to the ote. But by the cultome of the Countries, with dutie is post take to many thousand fackes of the burden, hundred fixtie fixe Rialls, if you lade Pepper, otherwise to take for many thousand fackes of the flugge. King, at halfe a Riall, or three quarters of a Riall vpon a lacke, more then the price currant is in

Item, if you shall have provided afore-hand sufficient lading to dispatch your shippes, yet you are to pay for this dutie as aforelaid, or elle they will not permit you to lade.

Item, Roobst, Roobst, is a duty for anchorage, and is vpon fixe thousand sackes fine hundred Ri-Roobs, alls of eight. Item, the Sabandars duty is vpon fixe thousand sackes two hundred fiftie Rials. Item, the Waighers dutie is one Riall vpon an hundred fackes. Item, the Ieretoolis or Waighers belonging to the Custome-house, their dutie is one Riall for an hundred sackes. Torran, is to the Eastwards of lacatra, it is called Serebaya. It affoordeth of it selfe victuals, and great flore of Cotton-woell, and spun yarne. There commeth many lunkes from landy, whose vacas, which is into Cambaja.

The Jana Aloh roct is twen-Bairte Baitame Conjugated

Banas

Deceir in the weigher. Lunckes from Creringin and Iaio). In the fine of Lanury thice lading of Pepper in Bastam. china Gaihes. The baft Cathesin Bantam called Chu-chuck Iau:. Baffe called allowance vpon Profit to bee made in ingroffing of lading is Pepper; also there are small Prawes of the Towne, which goe to Banda; so that there are fome few Mace and Nuts to be had there.

Mackeffar, is an Iland not farre from the Celebes. It affoordeth great flore of Bezar flones. which may be had reasonably: also Rice and other Victualls great plentie. There are lunkes also which trade to Banda, fo that a small quantitie of Mace and Nuts is there to be had also.

Balee, is an Iland to the East-wards of Mackasar, standing in eight degrees and an halfe to the South of the Equinoctiall. It hath of it selfe great store of Rice, Cotten-yarne, slaues, and course white Cloth, well requested at Bantam. The commodities for this place are the smallest fort of blue and white beads, Iron and courfe Purfeline. Tymore, is an Iland which lieth to the East-ward of Baly, in the latitude of tenne degrees, for- IQ tie minutes. This place affoordeth great store of Chindanna, by vs called, white Saunders; the greatest logges are accounted best, it is worth at Bantam twentie Rials of eight the Peccull. at the comming of the lunkes: Waxe in great cakes, worth at Bantam eighteene, nineteene, twentie, thirtie Rials the Peecul, as the time ferues. Item, you must be verie carefull in the choofing of it, for there is great deceit therein; wherefore you mult breake it, to fee whether it bee The Commodities which are carried thither, are Chopping-kniues, small Bugles, Porseline.

coloured Taffataes, but no blackes, China frying-Pannes, China bels, and peeces of illuer beaten flat and thin as a water, of the bredthof a hand. Item, there is great profit made of this trade, for the Chineses have given to our men which adventured with them thither, foure for one.

Banda lieth in the latitude of fue degrees to the Southwards of the Equinc Chall. It affoordeth Oyle of Mace great flore of Mace and Nutmegs, with Oyle of both forts: it hath no King, but is gouerned by 4 Ruls a quirt, a Sabandar, which toyneth with the Sabandars of Nere, and Lentere, Puloway, Pulorin, and Labaat Basian 5. or tacca, Ilands neare adjoyning. Their llands in former times have been under the government 6.Rials a quart of the King of Ternata, but at this present they governe of themselves. Item, on these Ilandsis haruest thrice a yeare, viz. in the Moneth of July, October, and February. But the gathering in July is the greatest, the which is called, the Monson Arepostee.

Monfon Arcpostee. From liss, the deuils the foule called

392

Item, the manner of dealing for their price, is as followeth. A small Bahar is tenne Cattees Peslo Swange, 4- Mace, and an hundred Cattees Nuts; & a great Bahar Mace, is an hundred Cattees, and a thouland Cattees Nuts, and a Cattee is fue pound, thirteene ounces and an halfe English, the prices variable Item, the Commodities requested in these Ilands, are Choromandel cloth, Cheremaliaw, viz. Sarrasses, Pintados of fiue Coueyts, fine Ballachos, blacke Girdles, Chellyes, white Callicoes, bread cloath Stammell, Gold in coyne, viz. Rose-nobles of England and the Low Countreys, Royalls of Lignum Aloes eight. Item, you shall have that there, for seventy Rialls in Gold, which will coft you ninetie in Ophion miffer Rialls, China Basons fine large, and without brims, Damasks of light colours, Taffataes, Veluets, China Boxes, or Counters gilded, Gold chaines, Plate cups gilded, Head-peeces bright damasked, Peeces for shot, but not many Sword blades brand and backt to the point. Item, Cambaya cloth, Callicoes blacke and red, Callico lawnes, &c. Item, Rice is a very good commoditie to carrie

The Hands of the Moluccos are five, viz. Molucco, Ternate, Tydore, Gelolo, Mackean, and are 40 under the Equinoctiall line. These Ilands affoord great store of Cloues, not every yeare, but every three yeares. The Cattee there is, three pound fine ounces English, the Bahar two hundred Cattees. Item, nineteene Cattees Ternata, makes fitty Cattees Bantam exactly.

The commodities vendible for these places, are Choromandell cloth, Cheremallaw, but fine; and Stam girdles, Salolos, fine Ballachos and Chelleys are belt requested. Item, China Tuffata, Veluets, Damaske, great Basons, varnished Counters, Broad cleath crymson, Opium and Benia-

Siam, lieth in the latitude of foureteen degrees & a halfe to the Northward of the Equinoctial. It affoords great flore of very good Beniamin, and many rich flones, which are brought thither iro Pegu. Item, a Tayle is two Rials of eight and a quarter. Item, here is much Silver in bullion, which 50 commeth from I apan, but Rials of eight are in more request, for two Rialls and a quarter in coine, will yeeld two and an halfe in bullion. Broad cloth stammell colour, Iron, and faire looking glaffes are well requested, all manner of China Commodities are there better cheape then at Bantam.

Item, the Guzerat Iunkes come to Siam in the moneths of Iune and Iuly, touching first at the Maldsues, and then at Tenaffere, from whence they may goe over land to Siam in twentie dayes. Item, at Tenassere there is alwayes fine and an halfe, and fixe fathomes water.

Borneo, lieth in the latitude of three degrees to the South of the EquinoCtial. It affoordeth great flore of Gold, Bezar flones, Wax, Rotans, Cayulacca, and Sanguis Draconis. Item, at Bemermassin, a Towne situated on this Iland, is the principallest trade for the Commodities afore-said. Item, the Commodities requefted there, are as followeth, Chromandell cloth of all bets, Chris Silker, Daniels, Tribras, Valence, Italy, Indiana, Italy, Indiana, Italy, It Silkes, Damasks, Taffataes, Veluets, all colours but blackes, Broad cloth, Stammell, and Rialls of eight. Item, Bezar stones are there bought by the Taile, which is the weight of one Riall and an halfe of eight, for fine or fixe Rials the Taile, which is one Ounce, and the third part English.

Soccedanna, is a Towne fituate vpon Borneo, , in the latitude of one degree and an halie to the South of the Equinoctiall, and is North-east from Bantam one hundred and fixtie leagues. There is in the entrance of the harbour flue fathomes, and at low water three fathomes, a Faulcon short of the shore, Ozie ground. To this place is great Trade in Iunkes and Prawes, for it yeeldeth great store of Diamonds, the CHAP.2. Diamonds and other merchandise of Soccodanna and China:

which are accounted the best in the world. There is store to be had at all times, but specially in the moneths of Ianuary, Aprill, July and October, but the greatest quantitie in Ianuary and Aprill, at which times they are brought downe the River called Laue by Prawes. The manner of getting of them, is as you dime for Pearle. The reason why more quantitie is gotten in one Moto neth then in an other is, for that in July and October, there falleth io much raine, that it rifeth nine fathomes, which causeth such a streame that they can hardly diue, and in the other moneths there is but foure, or foure fathomes and an halfe, which is held the best depth for their diving. Item, Commodities vendible and in request here at Socodanna, are Mallacca Pintados, verie fine Sarrassa, Goobares, Poulings, Chera Jana, Callico Lawnes, China Silkes light colours, sewing Gold, fleaue Silke, Broad cloth, Stammell, all forts of fmall Bugles, Bugles which are made in Bantam, of colour blue, and in fashion like a Tunne, but of the bignesse of a Beane, and cost at Bantam foure hundred a Riall of eight, worth at Soccodanna, a Maffe the hundred, the Maffe beeing the quarter of a Rail of eight, China Cashes, Rails of eight, but principally Gol4, wishout which you can doe little, for you shall have a stone for one Rial in Gold, which you shall have a stone for one Rial in Gold, which you shall not have for a Rial and an halfe, or a Ri all and three quarters in filter.

20 Item, you are to vinderstand, that it is the best course when you are bound for this place, to goe for Bemermassen first, where you may barter the Commodities aforesaid for Gold, which you shall haue for three Cattees Calhes the Mallacca Taile, which is nine Rialls of eight, as I haue beene credibly informed, it hath been worth of late years. And bringing it to Socodanna you shall put it away for Diamonds, at foure Cattees Cashes the Taile, which is one and three quarters and halfe quarter of a Riall in weight, so that you shall gaine three quarters of a Riall of eight vpon a Taile, But the principall gaines must be in the Diamonds.

Item, you must vinderstand, that there are Diamonds of foure waters, which is called Varna. viz. Vurna Ambon, Varna Lond, Varna Sackar, Varna Bessee. The first is white, green-yellow, and neither greene nor yellow, but a colour betweene both. But the white water is the best. Their Weights are called Sa-Maile, Sa-Copang, Sa-Bootick, Sa-Pead. Item, foure Coopangs is a Maffe, two Boofucks is one Copang, and one Pead and an halfe is a Boofuck. Item, there is a Pahaw which is foure Masse, and fixteene Masse is one Taile, and by this weight, they doe not onely weigh Diamonds, but Gold also.

Or China wares, raw Silke the best is made at Lanking, and is called Howsa, worth there eighty Rals the Peccul. Taffata, called Tue, the best made at a small Towne called Hoecha worth thirtie Rials the Corge, Damaske called Towne, the best made at Canton, worth sittle Rials the Corge. Sewing Silke called Coufwa, worth one hundred Rials the Peecuil. Imbrodered Hangings called Poey, the best ten Rials the piece. Sewing Gold called Kimswa, is sold by the Chippan, which is a bundle, each Chippau, contayning ten Papers, and in each Paper is five knots fold for three Pawes, two Rials of eight, and the best hath thirtie sixe threds in a knot. Sattins called Lyn, the best one Riall the piece. Great Basons called Chopau, worth three by the Riall. White Sugar called Petong, the best one halfe Riall the Peecull. Purseline of the small forts called Poa. the best one Riall the Cattee. Pearle Boxes called Chanab, the best fine Rials the piece. Velauets called Tangoiounck of nine yards long, fine Rials the piece. Sleaue Silke called Iounckes, the best one hundred and fiftie Rials Peccull. Muske called Saheo, seuen Rials the Cattee. Cashes fixtie Pecooes, the Riall.

Item, Broad-cloth called Toloney, Safocke, which is three quarters of a yard, worth seven Rials of eight. Loking Glasses very large, called Kea, worth ten Rials the piece. Tinne called Sea, worth there fifteene Rials the Peecull. Waxe called La, fifteene Rials the Peecull, Mufso kets called Cauching, the Barrell twentie Rials. Iapon Sables called Samto worth eight Rials the piece. Elephants teeth the greatest and best two hundred Rials the Peecull, and small, one hundred Rials the Peecull, called Ga: White Saunders called Toawheo: The best in great logges fortie Rials the Peecull. hem, the Cultome of Pepper inwards, as one Taile vpon a Peecull, and out-wards no Cu-

Item, it is very straightly looked into that they carry no munition out of the Land in any fort,

Item, in the moneth of March, the Iunckes bound for the Mannelies, depart from Chanchu in Companies, sometime foure, fiue, ten, or more together, as they are readie. Item, there lading out-wards is raw and wrought Silkes, but farre better then those which 60 they carrie for Bantam. Item, betweene Canton and the Mannelies is ten dayes fayle.

Item, in the beginning of Iune they returne from the Mannelies, there lading is Rials of eight, and there is not leffe then fortie fayle in a yeare, which are bound thither, there force is nothing, so that you may take them with your ilips Boate.

394 Item, in this yeare, 1608. Pepper was worth in China fixe Tades and an haire the Peccull. and at the same time in Bantam worth two and an halfe Rials the Timbang.

A note of requestable Commodities wendible in Iapan, together with their prices there Current, being Masses, and Canderines, each Canderine contayning the is of a Maffe : viz.

BRoad-clothes of all forts, viz. Blackes, Yellowes and Reds, which coft in Holland eight or mine Gilders the Flammife ell, two ells three quarters is worth three four too fine hundred, mine Gilders the Flammife ell, two ells three quarters is worth three four too fine hundred. In Note that cloth of a high Wooll is not requestable, but such as is low shorne most vendible. Fine Bayes of the colours afore-faid vendible: not according as the Portugalls were, but well Sayes. Rashes. Bouratts single. Bouratts double: Silke Grogarams. Turkey Grogarams. Chamlets. Diuo Gekepert. Weersctynen. Caniant, Gewart Twijne. Veluets. Muske sold in weight against Siluer. India cloth of forts requested. Sattins. Taffataes. Damaskes. Hollandcloth from fifteene to twentie Stiuers the Flemmift ell, and not aboue. Diaper. Damaske the betterit is wrought with figures or branches. Threed of all colours. Carpets for Tables. Gilded Leather painted, with Pictures and Flowres, the smallest worke best. Painted Pictures, they delight in lascimious Stories of Warres by Sea and Land, the larger the better worth, one, 20 two, to three hundred. Quick-filter the hundred Cattees, from three to foure hundred.

Vermillion, the hundred Cattees, worth from three to fixe hundred. Painting for Womens faces, the hundred Cattees twentie eight. Copper in Plates, one hundred twentie fine. Flom. milb weight worth from ninetie to an hundred. Lead in small Barres, the hundred Cattees worth from fixtie to eightie eight. Lead in sheetes best requested , the thinner the better, one hundred pounds Flemmish, to eightie. Tinne in logs fine, one hundred and twentie pound, Flemmilb three hundred and fiftie. Iron, twentie fine Ounces Holland, worth foure. Steele the hundred Cattees, worth from one to two hundred.

Tapiffrie. Ciuet the Cattee, worth from one hundred and fiftie to two hundred. China roots the hundred Cattees or Peecull worth fortie. China fowing Gold the Paper, three maffe, three Powder Sugar of China, the hundred Cattees or Peecull worth fortie to fiftie. Sugar Candie the 30 Peecul, or one hundred Cattees, worth from fifty to fixty. Veluets of all colors, eight els the piece, worth from one hundred & twenty, to one hundred and thirtie. Wrought Veluets like fabricke, worth from one hundred & eighty to two hundred. Tailataes all colours, & good Silke worth the piece, from foure and twentie, thirtie, to fortie. Sattin of feuen or eight ells long, the piece worth from eightie to one hundred. Figured Sattin, worth from one hundred and twentie to one hundred and fiftie. Gazen of feuen pikes or ells, worth from forcie to fiftie. Raw Silke the Cattee, of twelue pound Flemmifb, worth from thirtie to fortie. Vntwifted Silke of eight and twentie pound Flemmillo, worth from thirtie fine to fortie. Twifted Silke, worth from eight and twentie to fortie.

Drinking Glasses of all forts. Bottles, Cans and Cups, Trenchers, Platters, Beere Glasses, Salts, Wine Glasses, Bekers gilt, Locking-glasses of the large & fort, Masconie Glasse, much Salt, Writing Table-bookes, Paper-bookes, Lead to neale Pots, Spanift Sope well requested, it is sold for one masse the small Cacke. Amber in beades, worth one hundred and fortie, to one hundred and fixtie. Silke flockings of all colours. Spanib Leather, Neates Leather, with other forts of Leather vsed for Gloues, worth from fixe, eight, to nine. Candiques of China, worth from fifteene to twentie. Candiques of the same place blacke, the former being blew, from ten to fifteene. Wax for Candles one handred pounds Flemmilb, worth from two hundred, to two hundred and fiftie. Hony the Peccull, worth fixtie. Samell of Cochunchina, the Peccull, one hundred and eightic. Pepper the Peecull, if there come not much, worth one hundred. Nutmegs the Peecull, twentie 50 fue, Campheir of Barous or Borneo, the poundholiaus, from two hundred and fiftie to foure hundred Sanders of Solier the Peecull, worth one hundred. Callomback wood good and weightie, the pound worth from one, two, three to fine. Sapon, or red wood the Peecull, from twentie to twentie fixe. Elephants teeth the greater, the better worth from foure, fixe, feven, to eight hundred. Renosceros horne, the Ianan Cattee worth : hirtie. Harts hornes gilded the piece, three, foure, or fue hundred. Roch Allome esteemed good ware, and enquired after: that which cost but three Gilders, hath beene fold for one hundred Gilders, but not every mans money.

Note, that the Chinefes will commonly trucke for your Siluer, and give you Gold of twentie three Carrackes: from fifteene to twentie the Ounce Siluer, but some times there commeth much, and other fome times little.

A Memoriall of (uch Merchandize as are to be bought in Iapan, and the prices as they are there worth.

Hempé very good, one hundred Cattees beeing one hundred and twentie pound Holland, worth from fixtie fine to feuentie. Eye colours for dying blew, almost as good as Indico, made up in round cakes or pieces, and packed one hundred cakes in a Fardell, worth the Fardell. fiftie to fixtie. Dying for white, turning to red colour, made in Fardles or Bales of fiftie Gautins Malios worth fine to eight. Rice very white and good, cafed, worth the Fares, eight, three fifth 10 parts. Rice of a worler fort, the Bale worth feuen, three tenth parts.

At Edo, Saccaio, Osacaio and Meacom, is the best Dying for all forts of colours whatsoever your defire, viz. Red, Blacke and Greene, and for gilding Gold and Silver, and is better then the Brimstone in great abundance, cost the Peecull, seuen. Salt-peeter dearer in one place then another, worth one and an halfe. Cotton-wooll the Peeculi, ten.

CHAP. III.

Relation of Master RICHARD COCKES Cape Merchant, Of what past in the Generals absence going to the Emperours Court, Whereunto are added diners Letters of his and others for the better knowledge of Iaponian Affaires, and later Occurents in those parts.

The Kings care, unreadinesse of ours, Japonian Saperstitions, strange tempest.

He seventh of August, all things being in a readinesse, our Generall in company Theold King of Master Adams, departed from Firando towards the Emperours Court of In- fent 100. Take pan, and tooke with him Mafter Tempest, Peacocke, Matter Richard Wickham, in Iapan mo-Edward Saris, Walter Carwarden, Diego Fernandos, John Williams a Taylor, John Generall to Head a Cooke, Edward Bartan the Chirurgione Mate, John Japan Inrebasso, Ri- pendon the chard Dale, Cox Swaine, and Anthonie Ferre a Sayler, with a Caualeere of the way, which I 4 Kings for Guardian and two of his Seruants, and two Seruants of M. Adams. And to they depar- putto account ted in a Barke or Barge of the Kings, which rowed with fome twente Oares on a fide, and had by our Genethirteene Peeces of Ordnance shot off at departure.

I went to complement with the two Kings, (as being fent from the Generall) to give them thankes for providing so well for him for his Journey; they tooke it kindly. And I verily thinke the old King tooke notice of some of our mens euill behaulour this last night. For he willed me to put the Master in minde to looke well to them aboord, and that I should have a care on shoare, that matters might be as well managed in the Generals abience, as when hee was heere prefent, otherwise, the shame would bee ours, but the dishonour his. Wind a stiffe gale at North-east, most part of the day but calme all night.

The ninth, a lap in Boy called luan, came and offered me his feruice, hee speaking good Spanift, asking me nothing but what I pleased, and so to seme nine or ten yeares, and to goe with me for England, if I pleased. I entertayned him, the rather, because I did find the Inribasso Msgell, which Matter Adams left with me to bee fomething flubborne, and loued to runne abroad at his pleasure, leaving mee without any one that could speake a word. I bought him two lapan Garments coft me fourteene Mas, hee is a Christian and most of his Kinred dwell at Langasaque: only one dwelleth heere, who came with him and passed his word for him. Hee served a Spaniard three yeares at Manilias.

The thirteenth, I shewed our commodities to certaine Merchants of Majora, but they bought nothing, only their chiefe defire was to have had Gun-powder. Semidone went abourd the thip to accompany certaine strange Canalerces, and afterward hee brought them to see the English House. I game them the best entertaynment I could.

The nuneteenth at night, began the great Feath of the Pocasi, they inniting their dead kin-Finance, being dred, banquetting and making merry all night with candle-light at their graves: this Feathers a kind of Candared chree dayes, and as many nights. And very first command was given from the King, that diemas, Aljoules.

ra sorder as

every house should gravell the street before their doores, and hang out candle-light in the night. in doing whereof I was not flacke; and as I was informed, a poore man was put to death, and his house that vp, for disobeying therein. The China Captaine furnished me with a course of paper Lanternes very decent. And I was informed the Kings would ride about the streets, and come to vilite me: 10 I made readie 2 banquet, and expected them untill after midnight, but they came not at all.

On the twentieth, one and twentieth, and two and twentieth, I fent prefents to both the Kings (being informed that it as the vie of the Countrey) of Wine and banquetting stuffe; as likewise to Nobesane the yong Kings brother, and to Semidone, the old Kings Gouernour, and Unagenfe, which were well accepted. Some Caualeros came to visite our house, and received the 10

beit encertainment I could giue.

On the three and twentieth, we made an end of landing our Gun-powder, being in all ninety nine barrells, of which I aduifed the Gener Ilby letter, to referue convenient flore for our felues, if he fold the Emperour the rest. We landed divers other things, which things the Master though Leofeneffe of good to fend ashore, because our men begin to filtch and steale, to go to Tauernes and Whore-houles. The Purler, Mafter Mel ham and my felte, dined at Semydones this day : and the Mafter and Master Eaton were likewise inuited, but did not goe : he vsed vs kindly.

End of the great Fe. ft.

This day the great Feaft made an end, and three companies of Dancers went up and downe the Towne with flags or banners, their musicke being Drummes and Pans; at the found whereor they danced at every great mans doore, as also at all their Pagods and Sepulchres.

Masking and

The foure and twentieth at night, all the streets were hanged with candle-light, for that the yong King and his brother, with Nabefore, Semydone, and many others went with a Maskarado, or to dance at the old Kings house : the yong King and his brother were mounted on horse-back. and had Canopies caried over them; the rest went on foote, and the musicke was Drummes and Kettles, as aforesaid; and Nabesone winded a Phise: I was informed they meant to visite the English House at their backe returne: fo I sate vp vntill after midnight, having a banquet in readincile, and in the end they returned confuledly, and out of order; to I thinke there was some discontent, once none of them entred into the English house: Captaine Brower went along by the doore, but would not looke at vs, and we made as little account of him.

The feuen and twentieth, we landed other three peeces of Ordnance, viz. all whole Culusrin, all which fixe peeces are Iron Ordnance. The old King came downe when they were about it, and feeing but twentie men, offered them feuentie or an hundred Iapans to helpe them; but very quickly, in his fight, our men got them ashore, which he maruelled at, and faid an hundred of his men would not have done it to foone; fo hee fent for a barrell of wine, and certaine fifth, and gaue it to our people for labouring fo luftily.

The eight and twentieth, I received two letters from our Generall, by the Governour of Shimon feke, dated the nineteenth and twentieth of this moneth, with two other from Mailter Peacock, and Maiter Wickham: this Governour came not ashore at Ferando, but delivered the Letters aboor I to the Matter, and fo went directly for Langafaque, and promiting to returne hithershortlv. A fo I carried a letter to the old King Foyne, which the faid partie brought : Mafter Mal-40 Sham and Harnardo accompanied me: the King gaue a Cattan to Master Melsham, and another with a Spanish Dagger to Harnando, and gaue both me and them certaine bunches of Garlick, and gane vs leave to drie our Gun-powder on the toppe of the Fortresse; offering vs of his people to helpe ours, if they thought good. And I received aland into the English House two and twentie barres of Irad, and put into our new lodge and hundred an twentie fine Culuerin shot, round and langrell. And as wee were going to Supper, the old King came and supped with vs, being very merry, and tooke such fare as we had, in good part.

Septemb. 1.

The frit of September, the old King, with all the Nobilitie, made a Maskerado; and this night following went to visite the yong King his Grand-child, with musicke as aforefaid, all the streets being hanged with Lanternes; and I was informed he meant to vilite our English Houlest 50 returne : fo I made readie for him, and flayed his returne till after midnight but he partied by with the rest of the company, and entred not into the House. I thinke there was not so few as three thousand persons in company with him, which I make account was the occasion he went by, becaufe he would not trouble vs.

Taxe for Forts

The fecond, Semydon and others, being appointed by the King, measured all the houses in the ftreet; our English house being measured among it the rest: I understand it was for a generall taske to bee paid for making Fortrefles by the Emperours appointment. I entertained them to

The fourth, we had newes the Queene of Spaine was dead, and the King a Suter to the Princes Elizabeth of England.

The fixt, a Caualero, called Nombosque, came to visite our English House, and brought mee 2 present of two great bottells of wine, and a basket of Peares. I game him the best entertainment I could, and he departed content.

The feuenth in the morning, much raine, with wind encreasing all day and night variable, from the East to the South, and in the night happened such a storme or Turson, that I never saw the Araighty Suilike in all my life; neither was the like frene in this Countrey in mans memory, for it overthrew ton or Temabout an hundred houles in France, and vnouered many other; namely, the old Kings houle, and Poff, with the Line downed how well which compafied the volum Kings houle, and control and house and fining chiefs blew downea long wall which compafied the young Kings house, and carryed away boughes or thereof. branches of trees: & the Sea went to high, that it undermined a great Wharte or Key at the Dutch House, and brake downe the stone-wall, and carryed away their Staires, and sunke and brake them two Barkes, as also fortie or fiftie other Barkes were broken and funke in the Roade, It brake downe our Kitchen wall at the English House, which was newly made, and flowed into

10 our Ouen, and brake it downe, and blew downe the tyles, and vncouered part both of the house and kitchen, and the house did shake, like as if there had beene an Earthquake; I neuer palled night in all my life in such seare, for the barbarous virially people did runne vp and downe the stions. freets all might with fire-brands, that the wind carried great coales quite ouer the tops of houles, and some houses being carryed away, the wind whirled up the fire which was in them, and carried it into the ayre in great flakes, very fearefull to behold; so that the greatest feare I had was that all would have been confumed with fire: and I verily thinke it had, had it not been for the extreame raine which fell (contrary to the true nature of a Tuffon) being accompanied with lightning and thunder. Our shippe roade at an anchor with fine Cables, and as many Anchors, whereof one old Cable burft, but God be thanked no other hurt done: our long Boat and Skiffe were both driven from the shippe, yet both recovered againe: And as it is faid, it dud more hurt 20 at Langasaque then heere, for it brake aboue twentie China Iunckes, and the Spanish thip which brought the Embafiadour from the Manilleas or Philippinas.

The twelfth, two Merchants of Miaco came to our English house, vnto whom I shewed all our Merchants of Commodities; they laid by two broad-cloths, viz. a Stammel and a Blacke, the best they could Misse. find, and offered feuen Tais Lapan money the yard: also they faw our Priaman Gold, and offered eleuen Tais Iapan plate, for one Tais Gold: but went away without doing any thing. Francis Of many mis-Williams beeing drunke ashoare, did strike one of the old Kings men with a cudgeil, which gaue demeanours, t him no occasion at all; nor spake a word to him. The man came to the English house and com- permittome to plained, being very angry (and not without cause ) giuing me to understand, that he would informe the King his Matter, how he was mil fed by our people. He had three or foure in Compa-10 ny with him, who did fee him abufed, and that he which did it, was newly gone aboord the flip. deaths in the

I gate them faire words, and defired them to goe aboord, and find out the partie, and they should Indies, angle fee him punished to their contents; and to that effect, fent Miguell our Iurebaffo along with befoundrither them: fo they found out the faid Williams, who would have denied it, if the matter had not been to manifelt, but he flood fiffely againft it with oathes; yet the Mafter cauled him to be brought than the faither than the first head of the foundation of the foundation of the faither than the first head of the faither than the fai to the Capstaine in their presence, which they seeing, intreated for his pardon, knowing he was mens different dranke, but he was so vnruly, that he tooke vp a crow of Iron to have stricken the fellow in pre- per, and for a fence of the Mafter, ving the Mafter in very bad termes. The thirteenth, I vnderstood, that Foyne the old King of Firando was sicke, whereupon I fent theis which findlend or be Miguel our I uneballo to wifit him, and to carry a Present of one great bottle of the Generals sweet sent into Elb-40 wine, and two boxes of Conserues, Comfits, and Sugar-bread, offering him my Service, beeing miles Regions, very fory to heare of his ficknesse, and that I would have come my selfe, but that I knew compa-yet doe I conny was not pleafing to ficke men. He tooke my Prefent in very good part, and returned me many thanks; withing me not to let to aske for any thing we had need of, either for the flips, or and worft. shoare, and he would give such order, as we should be furnished.

CHAP. 3.S.I.

The foureteenth in the morning betimes, the Master came ashoare, and told me that most part of the ships company had lien ashoare all night without asking him leave, notwithstanding the great wind which had continued all night, and the ship on ground. So he willed me to let Miguell our Israbaffo goe along with him to feeke them out, which I was content he thould doe, and would have accompanied him my felfe, but he was vnwilling, telling me it was needlesse. Bit Vnrulinesseed

M. Meliham the Purfer went along with him , and he found divers drinking and domineering the beflowed blowes among ft some of them, and notwithstanding the Master had commanded Lambart and Colphan to retire aboord, yet they staid alhoure all day, notwithstanding the great need was abourd about thips bulinefle, divers lapans being hired to helps them: and Lamburt and Colphar being drunke, went into the field and fought, Lambart being hurt in the arme, and remained drunken ashoare all night, as Boles did the like, and so had done two or three nights before, and quirrelled with Christopher Euans, about a whoore.

The feuenteenth of September, I was given to understand the Bastian which keepeth the September, 17 whoore-house gaue it out, that if I came any more into his house to seeke for our people, he would kill me, and fuch as came with me. Whereupon I went and complained to the young King, be- kritical the kill me, and fach as came with me. Whereupon I went and comptained to the young army, oc-fo can fethe old was facket and at my request, the King made Proclamation, that no Lapanete hould be a sufficient of the sum of th receive any of our people into their houses after day light was done, vpon great paine, and that it were did too do should be lawfull for me, or any other that accompanied me to goe into any laptors house to feek. The Kann has for our men, without any moleftation; and that they themselves should aide and assit me; and if six: the doore were not opened at my comming, I might lawfully breake them downe : and a fouldiour was fent to Baftian to fignifie vnto him, he should take heed he did not molest or disturbe me in my proceedings for if he did, he should be the first that should pay for it. This angred our people in fuch fort, that fome of them gaue it out, they would drinke in the fields, if they might not bee suffered to doe it in the Towne; fordrinke they would, although they sought it in the

The Kings care

The fixe and twentieth, Novasca dona came to visit me at the English house, and brought me two bottles of wine, feuen loaues fresh bread, and a dish of flying fish, and as he was with me, the old King came by the doore, and faid, he met two men in the street as he came along, which hee thought were firangers, and none of our people, wherefore he willed that Swanton and our Intebaffo might goe along with one of his men, and he would show them to them, which they did. and found it was John Lambart and Jacob Charke, who were drinking water at a doore in the streete as he palled by. I was glad the King looked so neare after them; for it caused our men to haue a better care of their proceedings. The feuen and twentieth, M. William Pauling Masters mate, having been long sicke of a con-

Death and bu-

leffe in the people.

riallof W. Pas- fumption, died at the English house, whereof I advertised the old King ty Miguel our Imeballo. defiring a buriall place for him among the Christians, which he graunted me. So we put the dead corps into a winding sheete, and coffind it vp, letting it rest till morning. Then the Master, and divers of the thips company, came to the English house, to accompanie the dead corps to Boogs specification and then were we given to vinderstand, that of force we must transport it to and the grave, and then were we given to vinderstand, that of force we must transport it to and a fare as the Dutch house, onely because the Bose (or Priets) would not their vs to passe through 20 the street ( with the dead corps) before their Pagod or Temple: so the Master sent for the Skiffe, and conneied the dead body by water to the place aforefaid, we going all by land, and met it and fo accompanied it to the place of buriall, the Purier going before, and an the rest following after, the coffin being courted with a Holland theet, and vpon that a Silke quilt, we being followed with many of that countrey people, both young and cld. And after the corps was enterred, wereturned all to the English house, and there made collation, and so our people returned about about ships bulinesse. But I had almost forgot to note downe, that we had much adoe to get any une of these countrey people to make the graue, that a Christian was to be buried in; neither would they fuffer the dead corps to be conucied by water in any of their boates. The King commaunded that all the streetes in Firando should be made cleane, and channell rowes made on either side, to conney away the water, the fireetes being granelled, and the channels covered over with flat ftones; which worke was all done is one day, every one doing it before his owne house. It was admirable to fee the diligence enery one vied thereintour houle was not the last a doing, the Captaine Chinefa (our Land-lord) fetting men a worke to doe it.

Good obedi-

The thirtieth, certaine Merchants of Miaco came and hallight of all our commodities, and laid out the best Stammell cloth we had, and offered twelve Tais a fathome for it, and so departed without doing any thing. We had extream winds both day & night, fo that we thought another Turion had beene come; for all the fifthermen haled their boates on shoare, and every one bound faft the couering of their noutes : for a Bofe (or Coniurer ) had told the King (a weeke fince) that this tempeit would come. Our Chirurgion being in his pots, came into a house where a Bofe was 40 conjuring for a woman, to know other husbands or friends returne from Sea: fo when he had done he gaue him three pence to conjure againe, and tell him when our General would returne for this place, which in the ende he affured him would be within eighteene dayes; hee faid, hee hearda voice answer him from behind a wall, both when he conjured for the woman, as also when hee

Conjuring coolening

The fecond of October, the Master sent me word that some of our ships company were runne Seven English, away with the Skiffe, viz. Iohn Bowles, Iohn Sares, Iohn Tasie, Christopher Euans, Clement Locke, vir. fine Esligh lafter Malconty, and lames the Dutchman. I was in way to goe to the King to get boats to fend after them, but our Dutch Iurebaffo, (entertained for thips vie) came running after mee, and told me our people were on the other fide, making merry at a Tap-houle: which speeches can'ed me 30 to returne to the English house, and to get a boat for the Malter to goe looke them out; but they procued to be others; namely, William Marrell, Simon Colphae, and John Dench, who had hired a Boat, and were gone ouer to an other Hand, because they could not have swinge to walke by night in Firando. So in the meane time, our Run-awayes had the more time to runne away. This night about eleven a clock, the old Kings house on the other side the water was set on fire, were bound for England run 2-and quite burned downe in the space of an houre. I neuer saw a more vehement fire for the time, it is thought his leffe is great; and as it is faid, le bimielte fet it on fire, in going vp and down in the The Kings night with lighted canes, the coales whereof feil amongst the mats, and to tooke fire. The third, I went to visit the ell King, giving him to vuderstand by his Governour, that I 60 was very forry for the milchance happined the night past, and that I pretended to have come my felle in person to have holpen the best I could, but that I stood in doubt whether my companie would have been acceptable, I being a granger, yet affuring him that he should find me readie at all times, to doe him the best feruice I could, although it were with hazard of my life the returned me many thanks; faying, the lose he had fastained was nothing. And in returning to the English house, I met the young King going to visit his Grandfather. And before noone weehad word, that our Run-awayes were at a defart Iland, some two leagues from Frando, which I made knowne to both the Kings, defiring their affiltance and counfel, how we might fetch them backe againe; they answered, that backe they would fetch them either aline or dead : yet they would beloch to kill them, in respect we might want men to carry our ship backe for England. I saue them thanks for the care they had of vs. yet withall game them to vn.lerstand, that although these knaues miscarried, yet we had honest men enough to faile the ship for England. In fine, the King made ready two boats full of fouldiours to goe after them, with full determination to bring them backe either aliue or dead, which I made knowne to the Matter, who defired verie 10 much to goe along with them.

Lies of or on the Deuill, and vproares about fire. Deceit of Nangalack. Suspitions, Feasts, Spanish Occurrents.

The fifth, the old King Foyne Same came to the English house, where I gaue him the best entertainement I could: he also told me, that our Fugitties could not escape taking, and that hee had fent out two other men of warre after the two former. And as I was talking with him about these matters, there came a Cauelero, and brought him a Letter from the Emperours Court, and faid; that our Generall would be hereat Frand) within eight or tenne dayes; for that the Emperour had diffratche him away before his comming from thence.

The King told me, that the Gouernour (or King ) of Langafaque, called Bon Din, would bee here at Firando to morrow, telling me it were good our flup that off three or foure Peeces of Ordnance as he passed by. This Governour is the Empresses brother. And there is an other Japan Gouernour, or King, in Towne, of a place called Seam.

The fewenth, our Master, M. lames Foster returned from Langasague, and had brought the Skiffe with him, but all the men were gotten into Sanctuarie in the Towne, so that he could not come to freech of any one of them. I was informed, that Miguell our Iurebaffo dealt doubly both with the Master and my selfe: for I sent him along to be linguist, and assist the Master, and divers Tapans came to me, telling me, that he both spake with our people, and gaue them counfell to abfent themselves. Once I did perceive how the world went, and doubted the privy conveyance in of our people, which was like to enfue, if this Bon Din the Governour were not extraordinarily dealt withall: whereupon a Present was laid out.

Afternoone, the Bon Din passed along the street before our Erglish house on foot, bee being accompanied with the young King ( who gave him the upper hand ) with above five hundred tollowers after them. I went out into the streete, and did my dutie to them, and the Bon Dia stood fill when he came to the doore, and gaue me thanks for the Ordnance were shot off at his passing by our thip. I defired pardon of his Greatnesse, if I had neglected my dutie hitherto, which was by meanes of the small acquaintance I had in the Countrey, but that I meant to visit him at his lodging, or aboord his Juncke, before he went; he answered me, I should be very welcome. So it was darke night before he came to his lodging. At which time I carried the Present aboutfaid, so which hee accepted of in very good fort, offering to doe our Nation any good he could'at the Court, whither he was now bound, or elfe where. And to of his owne accord, hee beganne to speake of our Fugi ines, asking me if he brought them backe againe, whether they should be pardoned all for his like for this fault? I answered him, it was not in my power to pardon them, but in our General, which no doubt (except it were one or two, which were the chiefe authors of this and other euils which deferued punishment) that the rest might easily goe free. He faid, that his defire was for pardon for all in generall, without exception. I answered, that I knew our Generall would be contented with any thing, his Greatnesse and the two Kings or Firardo would defire. To conclude, he told me, that if I would give it under writing of my owne hand, in faith of a Christian, that all in general! should be pardonel for this time, and that I would procure the Generall to confirme the same at his returne, that then he would fend to Langasaque for them, and deliuer them into my owne custody:otherwaies he would not medile in the matter, to be the cc-Casion of the death of any man. Hard I was contented with any thing it pleased his Greatnes to command, and to to give the faid writing vincer my hand, provided all our men might be brought backe. And to I returned to the English house, the Dutch comming after with an other Present, but we were before them.

CHAP. 3.S.2.

The eight, Semidone patting by our doore, told mee that Bon Din had a Brother in companie. which expected a prefent, although it was not fitting it shuld be so much, as his Brothers So vpon adurce with others I laid by a prefent for him, as followeth; & going to deliner it, the Flemmings were before me with another, Captaine Brower himselfe being with it. Hee accepted very kindly of the present, offering his attiffance to our Nation, either at Court, or in the Countrey. And foone after he came to the English House himselfe, accompanied with many Caualectes, where they looked on all our Commodities, yet hee went away and bought nothing, but gave mee a fmall Cattan, and I gate him two Glaffe Bottles, two Gally-pots, and about halfe a Cattee of great Cloues, picked out from the rest of purpose, hee being desirous to have them for Physicall matters, as he told me. I made him and his followers a collation, and so they departed content. And foone after Bon Din, & the two Kings fent a Canaleero to me, to have me to give it in wri- 10 ting under my hand, that our Run-awayes should not receive any punishment for this fact, so by counfell of others I condescended thereunto, and made a Writing in promise and faith of a Chriflian, they procure their pardon for this time of the Generall; if I had not done this, out of doubt, we should never have got them againe, but the Spaniard would have convayed them to the Manillies or Maluccoes, I not doubting but the Generall will allow of what I have done. An! prefently after this man was gone I had word, that the Bon Din, and his Brother would goe aboord to visit our thip, to I tent some banketting stuffe aboord, and went my telte and met them, where they were ent reayned in the best fort we could, and Bon Dingaue meetwo Cattans for a prefent, and so they departed with seven Peeces or Ordnance shot of for a fare-well. But forth-with his Brother returned aboord againe, defining to have one of the little Monkeyes 20 for his Brothers children : 10 I bought one of the Mafter Gunner, coft me fine Rials of eight, and fent him to Bon Din, and being readie to goe ashoare, he was desirous to have me goe along with him in his Boate, which I did, he having three Peeces of Ordnance for a fare-well, which as I understood afterwards, was much esteemed off of both Brothers, and being a hoare hee would needs accompany me home to our English House, which I was vinwilling of, yet hee would of force doe it. So I made him collation againe in Captaine Adams chamber : and so hee and the rest departed well contented, (as it seemed) I offering to have accompanyed him backe to his lodging, but he would not fuffer mee. And late at night Forne Same the olde King fent a man to me to know the particular of the presents given to both the Brothers, and put it downe in writing, but for what occasion I know not. And I forgot to note downe how Bon Din went to the 30 Dutch House to wash himselfe in the new Hot-house, and from thence it was that hee cameaboord our ship.

The ninth, Bon Dis fent one of his men to me to give mee thankes for his kind entertaynment aboord, and by the same Messenger sent mee two Barrels of Mizeo Wine for a Present. And toone after his Brother fent another man with two Barrels of Iapan Wine, with the like ceremonie: both of them being very earnest to have a Prospective Glasse, and in the end I found an old one of Matter Eatons, but soone after he returned me the fail Glasse with thankes, not de-firing at all to have it. The tenth, two of the Gouernours sonnes of Langasaque (I meane another Gouernour which in the best fort I could, and shewed them our commodities, and after made them collation and gaue them Muficke, Mafter Hownfell and the Carpenter by chance being heere : and as wee were at it, old Forne the King came itealing in vpon vs, and did as the reft did, and feeing the King and thele Langafikians together, I willed our inrebasso, to put out a work for the speedic sending backe of our Run-awayes : which they all promited, provided, that they should be par loned for this tault, as I had formerly promuled, which now againe I acknowledged. The old King delired to have a piece of English Beefe, and another of Porke, fod with Onions and Turnips, and

modated as afore-faid, with a bottle of Wine, and fixe Loaues of white Breadthe accepted of it 50

Gouernour, and from thence went to the young King, and spake with him himselve: they gaue me thankes for the kind entertaynment I gaue vnto thele flrangers; which they tooke as done these people which are departed, had taken away certaine commodities from me, and payd mee what they themselves thought good, and not that which I required, I returned him answere, Countrey or no; for that I was guen to understand they what the like course both with Chinefes and Portugalls at Langa Saque, and that that which they had taken from mee, was not worth the speaking of. I was answered, that although they did so with the Chineses at Langasaques, which were a people detended not to trade into Iapan, yet could they not doe to to Strangers dwelleth in the Towne) came to fee our English Houle, they are Christians. I enter-ayned them 40 fent to him to morrow. The elementh, I tent Migell our Iureboffo to the old King , with the Beefe and Porkeaccomin very kind part, having in his company at eating thereof, the young King his Grand-childe, and Nubifone his Brother, with Semidone his Kiniman. The twelfth, I went to visit both the Kings, and found old Forne affecte, but spake with his this day, it be- vnto then selues. And towards night the old King sent to visit me, and to tell me he understood that it was true that they had done so, but I know not whether it were the custome of this 60

that had free priviledge to trade, especially heere in this place where these fellowes had no command nor nothing to doe. I replyed, I would come and speake with his Highnesse my selfe, and informe him of the truth : and in the meane-time returned humble thankes, for the care hee Bea D'us Brohad to vie Iustice to Strangers as well as home-borne. Captaine Brower sent me word that they ther injurious had taken divers forts of commodities from him, and paid him what they lift for it: he alfo fent to the Earlife an emptie Bottle, desiring to haue it filled with Spanish Wine, for that hee had inuited certaine and Datch. Strangers, and had none.

The thirteenth, I heard three or foure Gunnes, or Chambers goe off, which I thought had bin A chiralun ke to done to entertayne the King at the Dutch Houle : but they were shot out of a China Iuncke, for Language. which passed by this place, and so went for Langasague, and presently after the old King Sent for me to come to dinner to the Dutch House, and Malter Eaton with mee, and to bring a Bottle of Wine, Master Eason had taken Physicke and could not goe, but I went: wee had a very good Dinner with Dinner at the Dutch House, the meate being well dreft both after the Ispan and Dutch fathion, the Dutch and ferued vpon Tables, but no great drinking. The olde King fate at one Table, accompanied with his eldest Sonne, and both the young Kings Brothers (for the young King himselfe was not there, fending word he was not well)at the other Table. First, face Nab-fone the old Kings Brother, and then my felfe, and next me Semidone, and then the old Kings Gouernous, and next him Zanzebars Father-in-law, and divers other Cavileeroes on the other fide. Captaine Brower did not fit at all, but carued at Table, all his owne people attending and ferning on their knees, and 20 in the end, he gaue drinke to enery one of his ghelts, with his owne hands, and vpon his knees, which seemed strange to me, and when they had dined, all the Nobles went away, and Captaine Brower would needs accompany me to the English House. I asked him why he served these people vpon his knees, they fitting at Table : he answered me it was the fashion of the Country; and if the King himselfe made a Feast, hee did the like for the more honour of his ghests. And before night the old King Foyne came to the English House, and visited all parts, and made collation, staying an houre talking of one thing and other. The fixteenth, I was given to understand that two Christians were come from Langa faque, fo I went to their lodging to fee what they were, as alfo to understand some newes from our men (or Fugitiues) I found the one of them to bee a * Flemming borne in Flushing, (as hee told mee) (or Fugitiues) I found the one of them to bee a ** temming point in timping; (as nee total mee)

19 and the other an Italian berne in the ** Duchie of Venice. They told meet that our feuen men (or Danis Ma-Runawayes) were conucighed away fecretly in a small Barke, which is gone for Macoro, and 1702 Venetians that they were runne to get paffage in our thip to returne into their Countries, they told me Mafter Adams knew them well. And they were very defirous to have gone immediately abound our ship, there to have remayned, because they were Sea-faring men. The Flemming having serued the Spaniard three and twentie or foure and twentie yeares, and came a Malieis Mate from Agua pulca for the Manillus or Philippinas, they had good store of money, and would have sent it aboord our ship, or have brought it to the English House: but I told them that in our Generals absence I durst not presume to give them entertainment. Yet notwithstanding, I would doe them any fauour I could at his returne, and so sent Migell our Invebasso to the King to let him under-40 ftanil, that two fuch Strangers were come to Towne to feeke passage in our shippe, they being no Spaniards, nor yet Subjects to the King of Spaine. The King returned mee answere, that if they were fuch as I faid they were, they were welcome; but if they were Castillians, or Portugalls, hee would permit none to stay in this place, his reason is, for that the Spanish Ambassador hath procured order from the Emperour of Japan, that all Spaniards which are to be found in his Empire, shall retyre themselves into the Phillippinas, but their being no Spaniards, are out of that number. The feuenteenth betimes, the two strangers came to mee, defiring me to accompany them to the old King, the better to countenance them; which vpon good confideration I did. They told me in the way, that our Fugitiues had reported at Langalaque that more would come after them, and not any man of account stay to carry away the ship; the occasion they faid was, for that they which had command ouer them, vied them more like dogges then men: adding further, that if but twentie refolute Spaniards would take the matter in hand, with a small Boat or two they but twenthe resolute apparara would take the first might eafily take our shippe. The old King gaue we all kind entertainment, and asked the stranging might eafily take our shippe. The old King gaue we all kind entertainment, and asked the stranging might eafily take our shippe. gers many questions about the warres betwire the Spaniards and Flemming in the Moluccu; the of Purugalis which they faid the Spaniards were determined to puritie very hotly, and to that effect had great necestic Conforces prepared. They also told the King, they thought verily all our Fugitiues were secretly timent of conveyed from Langa Jaque Leuen daies pattin a Soma, that departed from thence for Macow, but China. conneyed from Lange Jaque fruin daies path in a Soma, that departed from thence for Macros: out the King would not believe them, laying, it was not possible that such a man as Don Diss, having the King would not believe them, laying, it was not possible that such a man as Don Diss, having 1896, Capt. pailed his word to bring them backe, should be found to be falled this promite. In fine, he was Adams his man very well contented, that these two strangers should stay heere, and goe along in our ship, if it was supposed to pleased the Generall to carry them. So the poore men returned to their lodgings with much of double deaenterner; and told me in the way, that we might make account we had not lot all our men, but recovered two, that would remaine as faithfull to the death, as the others had proud falle. Addition further that we need not consider a consideration of the fairs of the Faithers and the fall of th ding further, that we needed not to wish any worse reuenge to our Fugitiums, then the bad en- circumstances, terrainment they were fure to have of the Spaniards, comming bare and beggerly as they did, in Iomic fuch base fort.

A great Feaft among the Paing told me it was likea Lent,

An Eclips of Fire in Firando.

402

The eighteenth, there was a great Eclips of the Moone this night, it began about eleven of houres, it was quite darkned. the clocke, and endured from the beginning to the end

The nineteenth, at night, about eleuen of the clocke, a fire began in Firando, neare vnto the yong Kings house, the wind being at North-east, which if it had so continued, most part of the Towne had beene burned: but the wind fell variable South-easterly, and in the end calme: yet notwithstanding forty houses were burned to the ground; and had not our English men bestirred themselues lustily, many more houses had gone to wrack, for the fire tooke hold three or foure times on the other fide the street, where our English house was, but they still put it out, and were very much commended of the Kings, and all other in generall. The old King Foyne came on horiebacke to our doore, and wished vs to put all things into the Gadonge, and daube vp the doores, 10 and then it was out of danger. Captaine Brower, and some of his people, came very kindly to the Englift house, to have a listed vs by land or water, if need had bin it cannot certainly be known how this fire began, but there is speeches amongst the lapans, that there will be a greater bre then any of thele, it being told them by the Diuell and their Conjurers : God grant it bee not done by some villanous ill minded people, thinking to rob and seale what they can lay hold on, in time of fuch trouble and confusion.

The twentieth in the morning, I went to the Dutch house to visite Captaine Brower, and to giu: him thankes for his frien ly vilitation and affithance the last night. And towards right Harnando the Spaniard, and Edward Markes, returned from Langafaque, but could not come to fight of any of our Runawayes, vet it is certaine that they are in Langa Jaque. And a Tortugall or Spa. 20 niard, a great man in Langa faque about Sea-matters, told Edward Marker that wee should have none of thele men backe; but to the contrary, if all the rest would come, and leave the shippe emptie, they would give them entertainment: yea, and that which was more, if they would bring away the shippe and all, they should be the more welcome. The Iapan, which the King Sent to accompany Edward Markes and Harrando, and to looke out our people, would not let Edward Marky budge out a doores in the space of one night and halte a day after they were arrived there at Langa aque, He going abroad himfelfe, and the Spaniard Harnando lying at another place. So I doubt some legerdy-maine betwixt them two, and am now out of all hope to have any of our people come backe. I blamed the lefints, and the old King liked well of my speeches: and told me he would take fuch order hereafter, that none of our people should be carried to Longs (940 except they flole away our ship-boars, as the others did of which I adusted the Master, Master 10 Iames Foster: and so an Edict was set out, that no man should carry or conuey away any of our people, without making it knowne vnto me, and telling the King thereof. The three and twentieth, I was given to understand of a great Pagan Feast that was to be performed this day, and that both the Kings, with all the rest of the Nobilitie, accompanyed with Solemne Feat, diuers firangers, met together at a S.mmer-houle, fet vp before the great Paged, to fee a Horferace: I thinke there was not forew as three thousand persons assembled together, as I esteemed in viewing of them. Every N bleman went on horse backe to the place, accompanied with a rout of Slaues, fome with Pikes, some with Small-shot, and others with Bowes and Arrowes; the Pike-men were placed on the one fide of the streete, and the Shot and Archers on the other; 40 the middeft of the streete being left void to runne the race and right before the Summer-house (where the King and Nobles fite ) was a round Buckler of firaw hanged against the wall, at which the Archers on horse-backe running a full Careere, discharged their arrowes, both in the Atreete and Summer-house, where the Nobles fate; that neither the Present which we fent, not we could have entrance: And to we patted along the streete, beholding all, and returned another way to the English house. And late at night Zanzebars wives brother came to the English house, and brought me a Present of a hanch of Veniton, and a basket of Orenges : Zanzebar himlelie did accompany him. And about ten of the clocke in the night, the Captaine Chinesa (our Landlord) came and knocked at the doore, telling me that the King had given expresse command, that every house should have a Tubbe of water ready on the toppe of their houses, for that the Divell 50 The Divella- had faid the Towns should be barned this night: yet he proved a lyer. But for all that, we got a gine alyer, if great Tubbe of water on the top of our houle, which held tween's backets of water; and men the Kanate be did runne up and downe the firectes all night, bidding euery one looke to their fire, that it was strange and fearefull to heare them.

lyed not their Mafter.

The foure and twentieth, this report of burning the Towne being fill current, and every one making prouision to preuent it, I made readie sifteene buckets, which cost fixe Condrins a peece, and filled them full of water, and harged them up in the yard, and fet another great Tubbe by them full of water, besides that watch stood on the toppe of the house; and gaue order to make a couple of ladders, to carry water to the top of the house, and had formerly promided nine emptie wine-barrels full of tempered clay, to daube vp our Gadenge doores, if need should 60 require, God defend vs from any fuch necessitie. Three or toure men did runne vp and downe the ftrestes all night, making a horrible noyle, that every one should have a care thereof; that it was bot strange and fearefull to heare them.

The fine and twentieth, the Captaine Chine fa our Land-lord, being fiche, fent for a piece of CHAP.3. S.3. The English are invited to a great Feast.

Porke, which I fent him, and prefently followed after my felfe to visite him, and carried him a fmall bottle of Spanish wine, and while I was there, Semedone and our Guardians father in law came likewife to vifite him.

The King sent me word by Mignell our Iurebasso, that he had a bad opinion of Harnando Ximenes our Spaniard, and that he went about to have runne away when he was last at Langasague : but that I know is not 10, for he had free libertie to goe when he would, without running away. Another complaint was also made of him, that he was a common Gamiler, and had brought on divers to play, and got their money: which report I doe rather beleeve then the other; and I find by experience, these people are no friend, neither of Spaniard nor Pertugall, and love them of A frinte tobe. to Langafaque the worfe, because they love them fo wel. And I had almost forgotten to note downe, lye the Divell that the night past ill disposed people had thought to have fired the Towne in three places, and sooken. in one place fet a house on fire, but it was soone put out, and no hurt done; but the partie that did it was not found : out of doubt it is nothing but a villance of these Conjurers and other base people, which are given to the spoile, hoping to get or steale away something when the Towne

The fixe and twentieth, Master Melsbam being very sicke, Zanzebar came to visite him, and put him in mind to take the Physicke of this Country, and that it would prefently stop his Booke Physi-Flax; and brought a Bonze or Doctor with him, to administer it : Master Meliham was very de uan. firous to take it, but that first our Chirurgion shoul life it and so he gave him two pils yesterday, 20 two in the night, and two in the morning, with certaine other feeds; but for ought I could fee, it did him no good at all : God fend him his heal h. All our waste-clothes, pendants, Brasse shiuers, and other matters were fent aboord, and the thip put in order to receive the Generall. Another house was fet on fire the night past by villaines, but some put our, and no hurt done. Our night-criers of fire doe keepe fuch a horrible noise (without forme or fashion) that it is impessible

The Captaine Chinesa being ficke, sent for some spiced Cakes, and a couple of waxe candles which I lent him, as I had done the like heretofore. Mafter Melham now being weary of his Iapan Physicke, returned to our Chirurgion, Master Warner. Whereat Zanzebar and his Doctor tooke pepper in the noie.

). III.

A strange Comadie acted by Kings and Nobles: Preventions for Night-cries

He thirtieth day, the Captaine Chinefa (our Land-lord) came vnto me, and told mee fend prefers of eatable commodifies to the co of a generall Coll ction which was made throughout every house in the Towne, to Another Feast fend prefents of extable commodities to the Kings, for the more honor of a great Feast with a Como. they have to morrow, with a Comorcie or Play : and fo by his counfell (with advice die.

40 of others) I ordained two bottles of Spanish wine, two roasted Hennes, a roasted Pigge, a small quantitie Ruske, and three boxes banquetting fluste, to fend to their Feast to morrow. And before night the yong King fent one of his men vnto me, to furnish them with some English apparell, for the better letting out their Comoedie, namely, a paire of Stamul-cloath breeches. I returned answere, I had none such, neither did know any other which had: notwithstanding, if any apparell I had wo. Id pleasure his Highnesse, I wo. Id willingly give it him. And within night both the Kings iene to me, to bring Mafter Foster, the Mafter, and be a spectator of their Como-

The one and thirtieth, before dinner, I fent our Prefent aforefaid to the Kings by our Incebaffs, defiring their Highnesses to pardon the Master and my selfe, and that we would come to so them some other time, when there were lesse people : but that would not serue the turne, for they would needs have our company, and tobring Mafter Eaton along with vs; which wee did, and had a place appointed for vs, where we fate and faw all at our 1 Lafures : and the old King himselste came and brought vs Collation in light of a I the people : and after Semidene did the like Iunketting. in the name of both the Kings; and after divers Noblemen of the Kings followers, made vs a third Collation. But the matter I noted most of all, was their Comordie (or Play) the Actors Their Play, being the Kings themselues, with the greatest Noblemen and Princes. The matter was of the inwhich the valiant deeds of their Ancestors, from the beginning of their Kingdome or Common-wealth, Kingsthemvalue deeds of their Ancestors, from the beginning of their anguoine of Common people content, solve were small this prefent, with much mirth mixed among, to give the common people content, solve were with much mirth mixed among, to give the common people content, solve were a content of the people content. The Audience was great, for no houle in Towne but brought a Preient, nor no Village nor thorse and the second of the Audience was great from the second of t & place under their Dominions, but did the like, and were ireclasors. And the Kings them- Nobles. Elues did fee, that every one, both great and fmill, did eate and drinke before they departed. Their acting Mu' que and finging (as also their Poetry) is very hard to vs, yet they keep doe Therading, time both with hands a direct. Their Murque is little Tabers, made great at both ends, and final fong and muin the middelt, like to an Houre-glaffe, the y beating on the end with one hand, and straine the ficke.

cords which goe about it, with the other, which maketh it to found great or small as they lift, according their voices with it, one playing on a Phife or Flute; but all harth, and not pleafant to our hearing. Yet I neuer faw Play wherein I noted fo much, for I fee their policie is great in doing thereof, and quite contrary to our Comædies in Christendome, ours being but dumbe shewes. and this the truth it felfe, acted by the Kings themselves, to keepe in perpetuall remembrance their affaires. The King did not fend for the Flemmings, and therefore I accounted it a greater grace for vs. At our returne to the English house, I found three or foure Flemmings there, one of them was in a Japan habit, and came from a place called Cufinna, within fight of Corea. I vnderstand, they fold Pepper, and other Commodities there, and I thinke have some secret trade into

Cafbma. Cores.

Corea, or else are very likely to haue. I hope, if they doe well, we cannot doe amisse, M. Adams being the man that put them forward vnto it, and no doubt will beeas forward for the good of 10 his owne Countrey, as for Strangers. Hernande Ximenes was with Captaine Brower, and faw the Dutchicalouse two men which came from Cushma, and did but aske him from whence they came; whereat Captaine Brower was angry, telling him he would give him no account thereof. And towards night, I understood that two Spanisrds were come from Langasaque, and lodged at Zanzibars, and sent for our Iurebaffa to come to them; but I would not let him go fo foone. After, Zanzibar and they came to the English house, the one of them beeing Andres Bulgaryn, the Genemes, which palled by This place the other day; and the other is called Benito de Palais, and is Pilot Maior of the Spanish thip, which was cast away on the Coast of lapan, and is the same man which came from Langafaque, to visit M. Adams at his being here. They told me they were come of purpose to visit 20

their friends; namely, my felte first of all, with many other words of complement, and then entred into speeches of our Fugitiues; saying, it was not the Fathers (as they call them) which kept Langa faque bad our people secret, or went about to convey them away; but rather they of Langa saque themselues, who they reported to be very bad people. In fine, I stood in doubt that these fellowes are come of purpose, to inueigle more of our people to doe as the others have done, and thereof aduifed the Mafter, to have a care both to ship and boats, as also to take notice of any such as went about to keepe them company : for that it is good to doubt the worst, for the best will faue it

The first of November at night, two houses were set on fire on the other side the water, but fre was foone put out, but the villaines that did it could not be found. I fent M. Foster the Master 40 a letter, adulting him to take care of thip and boats, as also to looke vnto the behaviour of our people, for that I doubted there two Spaniards were but come as Spies, to fee what we did, and to intice tome other of our people to do as the former did. Alfo, I adulfed him how I vudentood the faid Spaniards did pretend to invite him to dinner this day; but I wished him to take heed they gave him not a Higo: he returned me answer, that he esteemed them such as I tooke them for, and therefore would have a care to the maine chance. But soone after he came ashoare, and the Spaniards came to the English house, and with much intreaty, got M. Foster, and M. William Eaton to goe along to dinner with them to Zanzebars, and the other two Spaniards and Harnando did the like. But these two Spaniards came vnto me, and bade mee tell the Master or any other that went with them, to take heed they did not eate nor drinke any thing, but fuch as they did fee the others tafte before them; for that it was no truffing of them, of which I aduifed both the Ma-40 fler, and M. Eaton. Also I fent Mignell our Iurebaffa, to both the Kings (and other Nobles) to give them thanks for our kind entertainment yetterday, Harnando Ximenes told me that M. A. dams had goods in his hands, belonging to this Pilot Maior the Spaniard, and that his chiefe comming was, thinking to have met M. Adams here, and doth meane to attend his comming to have an accompt of those matters. As also they brought Letters of recommendation from the Bishop, Bishopin Istas and other Fathers to the other two Spaniards (or strangers) to perswade them to returne backe to Langafaque : but I thinke it is not their determination fo to doe.

Forewarned

The record, some villaines set an house on fire in the Fish streete; and it was soone put out, and the partie escaped: and it is generally thought to be some base people or Renegados, which lie so loytering vp and cowne the Towne, and came from Misco, and three are much suspected, but no proofe as yet found against them. But there is order given, to make Gates and Partitions over euery streete in divers places, and watch to be kept at each place, and no man be suffered to walke in the night, except he be found to have earnest businesse. Another villaine got into a poore widdowes house, thinking to have robbed her, but she making an out-cry, hee fled up into the wood, ouer against the English house, where the Pagod is; and soone after, the wood was beset round about, with about hue hundred men, but the theefe could not be found. At night, as we were godolitemple, or ing to bed, there was an out-cry on a fudden, that theeues were on the top of our house, setting it on fire; but our ladders being ready reared, both my felfe and others were not long a going vp, but found nothing, but that all our neighbours houses were peopled on the tops on a sudden, as well 60 as ours. And it is to be thought it was nothing but a falle larum, given of purpose to see how every one would be found in a readinesse. Yet at that very instant there was a house set on fire, but foone quenched, it being a good way from our English house.

The night past, three houses were set on fire in divers parts of the Towne, but all put out at beginning, fo that no hurt was done. So now order is given, to take notice in every house what Order to prepeople are in them, whetherstrangers or others; and such as are found to be suffected are to bee unit firebamshed out of the Countrey; and gates or bars made to shut up the passages or ends of streets, knowes, and and watch let in divers places, without crying and making a noyie vp and downe fireets in the Night cryes. night, as hath been for a time heretofore without either forme or fashion : yet notwithstanding all this, a villaine about tenne a clocke in the night, fet a house on fire near, vinto the Pagod, ouer against our English house: but he was espied by the watch, who pursued him with all speed, but again the got into the wood about the Paged, which forthwith was befet round about, with about fine hundred armed men, and the old King Forte came in person with many other Noble men, 10 affifted in the pursuit, yet I verily thinke, the viliaine did runne vp and downe amongst the rest, crying, Keepe theefe, as will as the ben-

The fourth, the night past there was fire put in divers places more, one in the Towne and an other in the Countrey, besides the House neere ours, as I said before. Order is now given, to haue fecret watch in ouers parts of the Towne every night, and no man to goe out in the night except vpon vrgent occasion, and then to have a light before them, to the end they may bee feene. If this decorum be duly kept, our Houle burners will play least in fight. I told the Kings. and others hereof aboue a weeke pait, and now it is put in execution.

The fifth, this morning I received two Lett rs, the one from Domingo Francisco the Spanish Ambassadour dated in Ximonaseque fine dayes past, and the other from George the Portugall: the Ambassadour went over Land from to ence for Langa Jaque, and tent his Servant with the Letters, vnto whom I shewed such Commodities as he enquired for, and referred him off for others till our Generals returne writing him a Letter in antivere of his, the Copie whereof I kept: his man tooke liking of two peeces of fine Semian Chowters, and eight pieces of white Baffas, and paid feuen Tais the piece for Chowters, and two Tais the piece for Baltas. There came a Spanish Frier or Iciuite, in the Boat with the Ambassalours man & defired to see our ship, which I willed our Master to let him, and to vie him kindly, which he did. For as the olde taying is, It is good fometimes to hold a Candle to the Dauill, &c. Master Eaton, Harnando and my selfe dined with Unagense, and were kindly entertayned.

The fixth this day about ten a clocke, our Generall and all his company arrived heere from Capt. Satishis the lapan Court, Maiter Adams being in company with him. An a presently the Generall fent returne rom me wi h lobn lapan our lureballo, to vuit both the Kings, and tha ke them for their kindnelle in the Emperour fo well accommodating him with a Boate, as alfo for the care they had of the ship, and the reft Court, in his ablence, and that he would come on the morrow to visit them, beeing now weary of his long Voyage. They tooke this vifitation kindly, faying, they would be glad to feehim at their Houses. Asso certaine Merchants of Miaco which came from Langasaque, came to our English House, and had light of all our commodities, and among it the rest, took liking of ten pieces of Casfedy nill, and made price for them at three Tais the piece, which is in all thirtie Tais, and so fent them to their lodging, as other Merchants before had done the like, and so returned mee money to my content, but these sent mee nothing but a Paper, and consigned mee to receive my 4 money of Semidone, who was newly gone out of Towne on a Voyage, our Generall meeting him on the way: but I returned these Merchants word, that I would have my payment of them, or ele my Merchandize backe againe, but they made answere, I should have neither the one nor other; neither would the Hoft of the House where they lo ged passe his word for payment, so I Merchanis of was torced to goe to both the Kings to feeke for luther, but had lent word about i, that it the Mire play the Boate of Miaco weighe lanchor to goe away, that they tho Il man out the Skiffe, and thay her, Merchants. which they did, and made her to come to an anchoragaine, and in the meane-time! I pake to the Kings, but the younger faid that Semidone was a man able enough to pay me. And then I an wered and asked hum, that if Semidone did not, whether he would, and he told me no, and wonle we were talking of it, old Forne Same came in and told me he would take order that I should have content: yet his order had come coolate, if our Pinnaile had not stayd them. So in the end the 10 Host where they did lodge, passed his word for payment. Coptaine Brower and all his Merchants came to the English House to visit our Generall, and Georgethe Por-Nobifara fent him a young Porke for a Prefent, faying, the would come himselfe and wift him General Pre-Here follow certaine Letters, the first fent from the Emperour to the Prince of Orange, the Figs and tell from the English in Iapan, and principally from Matter Cocke, wherein the Iaponian Affaires Chefaus. and various Occurrents for divers yeares are expressed.

The Copie of a Letter fent by the Emperour of Iapan, Into the King of Hol. land, by the Ship called the Red Lyon, with Arrowes, which arrived in the Texel, the two and twentieth of Iuly, 1610.

Emperour and King of Iapan, wish to the King of Holland, who hath sent from so farre Countries

I reioycc greatly in your writing and fending unto me, and wish that our Countries were neerer the one to the other, whereby wee might continue and increase the friendship begunne betwiet os through your Maiestus presence, whom I imagine in conceit to see, in respect I am unknowne unto your Maiestie, and 10 that your lone toward me is manifested through your liberalitie in bonouring mee with foure Presents. whereof though I had no need, yet comming in your name I received them in great worth, and hold

And further whereas the Hollanders your Maiesties Subjects desire to trade with their shopping in my Country, which is of little value and small, and to traffique with my Subjects, and defire to have their abiding neere unto my Court, whereby in person I might helpe and affift them; which cannot bee as now through the inconveniencie of the Countrey : yet notwithstanding I will not neglect, as alreadie I baue beene, to be carefull of them, and to give in charge to all my Governours and Subjects, that in what places and Hauens in what part seems they shall arrive, they shall shew them all fauour and friendship to their Persons, Ships and Merchandize: wherein your Miniestic or your Subjects need not to doubt or feare ought to the contrarie. For they may come as freely as if they came into your Maiesties owne Hauens and Countries; and so may remayne in my Countrey to trade. And the friendship begunne betwist mee and my Subjects with you shall never bee impayred on my behalfe, but augmented and increased.

I are perity a hamed that your Maiestie (who se Name and Renowme through your valorous Deeds is spred throughout the whole World) should cause your Subjects to come from so sarre Countries into a Countres so unfitting as this is, to visit me, and to offer unto me such friendships as I have not deserved. But considering that your affection hath beene the cause thereof, I could not but friendly entertaine your Subjects, and yeeld to their requests : whereof this Shall Serve for a testimonie, That they in all claces, Countries, and Ilands under mine obedience may trade and traffique, and build Houses serviceable and needfull for their Trade and Merchandizes, where they may trade without any hinderance, at ther 30 ple: fare, aswell in time to come as for the present, so that no man shall doe them any wrong: And I will mayntayne and defend them, as mine owne Subjects.

I promise likewise, that the persons which I understand shall bee left heere, shall now and at all times be held as recommended unto me, and in all things to favour them, whereby your Maiestie shall sind vs as your Friends and Neighbours.

For other matters passed betwint me and your Maiesties Seruants, which would bee too long heere to repeate, I referre my felfe unto them.

Firando in Japan, the tenth of December 1614.

M. Practike

leferers bani-

Foine Same

in Later.

Ciu li Warres

eb worth

O this day I have not had time to perfest up my old booker of Accounts, by meanes of the dispat-I ching away our people, some to one place, some to another, and then the new building of our bille, Tride at Syam, and of er that the buying of a luncke, and repairing of her, which is now ready to depart for Syam, and bath been any time this ten dayes riving at an anchor at Cocha, a league from Firando, where your fing rode as your departure from hence, expetting but a furre wind to fet forward on her voyage : shee is called the Sea Addenture, being about some two bundred Tunnes, in whom Maiter Adams goeth for Master, and Maffer Wickham and Edward Sayer for Merchants, by meanes of the death of Mafter Peacock flaine in Cochinchina, and likelihood of casting away Walter Carwarden, returning backe from thence, 50 for to this houre we have no newes of him, or the Inneke they went in, as I have at large advised the wor-Ilipfull Company, &c. Since your departure from hence, the Emperour hath banifhed all lefuits, Priefis, Friers and Numes out of Iapan, and pulled downe, and burned all their Churches and Monasteries, so pping them away, some for Amacaum China, and the rest for Manillias. Foyne Same the old King of Firando is dead, and Viliandono his Governour, and two other Servants cut their belies to beare him company; their bodies being burned, and ashes entombed by his. Heere are warres like to ensue betweet Omiho-fame the old Emperour, and Fidaia-fame the yong Prince, Sonne to Tico-lame, who hath fortified himselfe strongly in his Castle or Fortresse of Olakey, having eightie thousand or an hundred theufand men run awayes and banished men, mall-contents, which are retyred out of all parts onto bins, of cicitualled themselves for threeyeures. The old Emperor himselfe is come downe against him in person with an armie of three hundred thousand souldiers, and is at the Castle of Fushma: their fore-runners have had two or three bickerings already, and many flame on each part. All Olakey is birned to the ground, but only the Castle. So Master Eaton is gone to Sackey withhis goods; yet not without danger, for part of that Towne is burned too.

Ofacay. Fulhma.

Ozicay burnt.

CHAP. 2. S. 2. Difguft of Dutch. Corean fratagems and fayling was cons.

Such a Tempest or Tusson hath lately happened at Edoo, that the like mas never seens in that place, the Most terrible les ouerflowing all the City, drining the people up into the mountains, defacing and breaking downe all the Tutton. Noblemens honfes, which you know were beautifull and faire. So let thus much suffice for newes in Japan. And now for Sales of our goods : the Emperour tooke our Ordnance, with a good part of our Lead. and ten barrels of powder, and two or three Broad-cloathes, and a good part of our other Broad-cloathes are fold, namely, Blacke, Haire-colour, Syna non-colour, at fifteene, fourteene, thirteene, and twelue Taies the Tattamy : but they will not looke on a Venice-red, nor a Flame-colour, neither are Stamels in such request as heretofore: they enquire much after white and yellow Eroad-cloath. The Hollanders have fold most of their Broad-cloath at base rates, which maketh us to drethe like. And for our Cloath of 10 Cambaya, they will not looke on our red Zelas, blew Byrams, nor Duttis, which are the greatest part of that you left with vs, only some white Bastas are sold at fourteene and sifteene Masse a peece : And Caffedys mill, Alleias, broad Pintados, Chader Pintados, with such spotted, striped and chequered Stuffes, most looked after, and sold at prosit. We have also sold neare halfe our Bantam Pepper for sixtie sine Masse the Peecull, and all the rest had been gone before now, had it not been for this rumour of warres. I stand m great bepe we shall prosure Trade into China, by meanes of Andrea, the Captaine China, and two o- Hope of Trade ther of his brothers, which labour in the matter, and make no doubt but to bring it to effect, for three ships in China. a yeste to come and goe to a place neare Lanquin, to which place we may goe from hence in three or foure dages, if the wind be good. I have written hereof at large to the Worshipful Company, as the like to my Lord Treasurer.

10 Some little sieknesse I baue had, but now I pr.tise God it is past. Master Wickham, Master Eaton. Master Nealion, and Master Edward Sayer, have all foure been very sicke, but now well reconcred all, except Master Eaton, who is troubled with the Fluxe and a tertian Ague, God send him his health, for I cannot too much prate that man, for his deligence and paines taken in the Toofhipfull Companies affaires. Iacob Speck, who was thought to be east away in going from house to the Moluccas, is now returned to Firando, Captaine of a great ship called the Lelandia, with a little Pinnasse, called the laccaira: the cause of his so long missing was for that the ship wherein he went from hence, passed to the Eastward of the Philippinas, the fame way we came, yet by currents and contrary winds (as they (av) they could not fetch the Moluccas, but were driven to the Westmard of the Iland Celebes, and so pailed round about it through the Straights of Defalon, and fo backeto the Molnecas, &c. The Chinaes doe much complaine 30 of the Hollanders robbing and riffering their Inneks for (as they suy) they have rifled and taken seven. The Emperour of lapan bash taken some distaste aga nit the Hollanders, for he refused a Present they late- Hollanders disby fent up to him, and would not speake to them which brought it : as he did the like by another Present the statisting this Portugalls fent him, who came in the great fire from Amazau, this yeare, to Langalaque; he refusing min and lapans both the Present, as also to speake to them which brought it. You thought at your being heere, that if Potingalismot any other stip came out of Englan I, we migh: sell our Goods without carrying up any Present to the Emperour: but now I find it to be otherwise, for every thin which commeth in must carry a Present to the Presents a cu-Emperour, as a custome: neither can me fet out any lunche, without procuring the yearely License of the ftome for cue-Emperour, otherwise no Iapan Mariver dare goe out of Iapan upon paine of death, only our owne stroppes ty this.

from England may come in, and goe out agains when they will, and no man gain-fay it. Wee cannot yet by any meanes get Trade from Tulhma into Cotea, neither have they of Tulhma any other primiledge, but to enter unto one little Towne (or Fortresse ) and in paine of death not to go without the walles thereof, to the Landward, and yet the King of Tuilinia is no Subject to the Emperour of Iapan. We could vent nothing but Pepper at Tulhma, and yet no great quantitie of that, and the weight is much bigger then that of lapan, but fold at a better rate. I am ginen to understand, that up in the Countrey of Corea, they have ereat Cities, and betwiee that and the Sea mightie Bogs, fo that no man can travell on Corea Bogges Horse-backe, nor very hardly on foote; but for remedie against that, they have great Was gons or Carts, and tring which goe voon broad or flat wheeles under faile, as ships doe. So that observing Monsons, they transport wassons. their goods to and fro in shefe firshing Waggons. They have Damaskes, Sattins, Talfeties, and other Silke suffes made there, as well as in China : it is faid that Ticus-same (otherwise called Quabicondono) 50 the deceased Emperour, did presend to have conveyed a great armie of Souldiers in these sailing was gons, to have all suited the Emperour of Clana on a fudden in his great Citie of Paquin, where hee is ordinarily paning resident, but he was presented by a Corean Noble-man, who personed himselfe, to por son the Emperour, and other great men of Iapan, which is the occasion the Iapans have lost that, which some two and twenty yeares past they had gotten poffeffion of in Corea. Tames Turner the fidling youth, left a wench with child beere, but the whore, the mother, bill dit fo foone in it was borne, although I gasse her two Tates in plate before to nearifo it, because shoe should not kill it, it being an ordinary thing here. Muster Fotter, the Masters whistis and chaine is found, and Mifer Ada as bath it, and will be answerable unto him for it. I did thinke to have fent you a Japan Almanacke in another Letter to the same effect as this, deted the fine and inconnech Vitimo, and fent by Ser-admenture, by way of Syam, but forgot to put is in, vet now

6 commeth here melofed. I pray you let this Letter suffice to Master George Saits your brother, and the rest of my louing friends word with beartie Commendations in generall, I leave you all to the boly protection of the Aimightic, resting alwayes

Your ever louing friend at command, RICHARD COCKS.

400

Sir, my last vnto you was of the first of December 1613. dated in the life of Firando in Lapan; and fent by Captaine Iolin Saris, in the fine called the Cloaue: wherein I advertised you, how unfinally the Hollanders dealt with us in the Maluccas. Since which time, there is not any matter of moment to aduife you of, more then I have touched in another Letter to my good Lord Treasurer. The Hollanders give it out heere, That it is very likely our East-India Company of England, and that of Hollan! shall be inout heere, I hat it is very interpretable on some the state of the both Spaniards and Portugals to med all in one : which if it prous true, it is thought an easte matter to drive both Spaniards and Portugals to out of these Easterne parts of the world; or else veterly to cut them off, or debarre them from all Trade

Britaine-Burfe, at the Strand, give thefe.

Spaniards and

4c8

For you will har ily believe how the Hollanders alreadie have dannied the Spaniards and Portugals in these parts, estectally in the Maluccas, where they daily encroach upon the Spaniards, which are not able to with tand their proceedings : but now stand in much feare, that in short time they will also take the Phi-Portugals feare. lipping from them. Alfo the Portugals, which trade from Ormus to Goa, and fo for Malacca and Macao in China, stand daily in feare to be surprised by them. One thing there is , the iffue whereof I cannot well conceive : and that is the robbing of the lunckes of China, daily practifed by the Hollanders in these parts: the goods whereof cannot choose but amount to the lunckes of great matters, and suffice to set out and maintaine a great Fleete, which is worthy of consideration. And if great mitters, and jujice to jet on many mount of the Hollanders, and debarre them from Trade 20 into his Dominions, (as it may fall out that he will : ) then is it likely the Hollanders will make prize as well of Iapans as Chinaes. For out of doubt, their Forces at fea in thefe parts are sufficient to doe what they lust, if they have but a victualing place to retire unto. And they are of late growne very stout, and mocke at them, which, all the world knoweth, were their masters and teachers. And it is very certaine that they have gotten possession of diners Fortresses in the Maluccas, and those parts: yet on my knowled e the people of those parts doe rather encline to the Spaniards, then to them: although at the first, they were glad of their arrivall, by meanes of the intollerable pride of the Spaniards. Ent now time telleth them, that the Spaniard brought them store of Rialls of plate; and in their proud humors were liberall which was easie for them to doe, in respect they had wherewithall to doe it. But the poore Hellanders. which Grue in these parts for Souldiers, both by sea and land, have such bare pay, that it will hardly find 30

them clothing to their backes, and mease for their bellies: Their Commanders alledge, that all the benefite which hapneth, either by revifall or conquest, is for the States, and Winthebbers, as they call them. So that what will come of this in the end, is ha d to indge. But letting these matters passe, I am verily of opinion, that, if it be not for the missemeanour of the Hollanders, we shall obtaine a Trade in China: fir our demand is but for three ships a yeare to come and goe; and only to leave Fastors sufficient to doe the businesse, without bringing in any lesits or Padres, as they tearme them, which the Chinaes cannot abide to beare of, because bretofore they came into these these parts, as parts in such numbers to inhabite, that now they will not endure it, and were alwayes crauing and begging

Iefuits play-he and Beggers in by all inda : relations may Fame of the remote Eaft.

without bame, which is a common faying among the Pagans. One thing there is, which putteth me in good hope, and that is the good report and fune, which our 40 Englub Nation hath gotten in these parts, since our Arrivall: which, as I am given to understand, in come to the knowledge of the Emperour of China; and how the chiefe King of lapan bath received vs. and granted unto us very large priviled, es. As alfo, bow that the English at all times, have held the Cathilians, as they call them, to hard meate, both ty fex and land. Thefe things the Chinaes themfelnestell me : and that the Emperour and other great men in China, delight to heare reports of our Nation. But I had almost forgotten to note downe, how some China Merchants put out a question to me, to know if we had a trade in China, whether the King of England would debarre the Hollanders from robbing and fooiling of their Iunckes? Which question was dow full vn:0 me: yet I arfwered them, that his Musflie would take such order, that the Hollander should not misufe them.

Of Lue heere is come newes from Edoo, a Cuie of Iapan as bigge as London, wherein the chiefe of 10 petts in tapan. the Nobilitie of Iapan have beautifull houses, that by manes of an exceeding Tuffon or tempes, all or the most part of them are deficed; the whole Citie being over-flowen with water, and the people forced to flye up into the mountaines, a thing never heard of before: and the Kings Palace being stately builded in a new Fortresse, the tyles being all gilded on the out-side, were all carryed away with a whirlewind, so that none of them are to be found. The Pagans attribute it to some Charmes, or by Coniurations of the lesuits lately banished: but the Papist Iaponians doe rather ascribe it to the punishment of God, for the banishing of Another matter there is, which I thought good to advertise you of, and that is of a disaster lately hipfone English in pened to vs in Cauchin-China: To which place we fent a quantitie of goods and money, to the culture of Cauchin Cina. Jeuen hundred and thirtie pound feerling, as it coft in England. At after Tempet Peacock, and Ma- 60 fler Walter Caerwarden, going for Merchants in a Iapan lunche, carryed the Kings Mauflies Letters of England, with a Prefent of worth for the King of Cauchin-China, and arrived at their Port of Difebarge, called Quinham: delivered his Maiefies Letters, and the Prefent, which were taken in god part, and they entertained with kind speeches, and large promises. The Hollanders steing we adventured to that place, would needs doe the like, and tooke fraught in other Junkes, and were likewife well entertained at first. But in the ende, Master Peacocke and the ch efe Merchant of the Hollanders , going on shoare, bah in one boat, to receive certaine summes of money of the King for broad-Cloath, and other Commodia ties fold him, were treacherously fet upon in the water, and their boat ouersurned, they beeing killed in the water with harping yrons like filher, with their Interpreters and other followers which were Iaponians: Walter Caerwarden beeing aboord the lunche, escaped and came away. But from that day to this, wee can heare no newes neither of him, nor of the lunke, wherefore we feare bee is cast away. The common report both of the Chinas and Tapans is, that the King of Cauchin-china did this, to bereatnged on the Hollanders, for burning a Towne of his and putting his people to death without merthe resognation to a sociation space of maning a tomory or some party of the period of the social space of chans of that place. But the falfined of the money beeing efficed, they laid hands on the Holland Factors, and I thinke, Joine one was purto death, interenge, whereupon the Holland hips comming on that Coaft, landed their meth, and burned a Towne, parting Man, Woman, and Child to the Sword. This was the schafe occasion (us report goeth) that this musichence is cappened now; M. Peacocke being slame, because be not use company with the Hollanders. Here inclosed, I find you a lapan Almanacke, whereby you may, fee their order of Printing, Eigenes, and Characters. And folleane you to the holy protection of the Almighty. Refting alwaies

Divers Intelligences from Iapan to England. CHAP.3.S.3.

Your Worthips to command, RICHARD COCK.

From Frande in Tapas. December 10. 1614.

December 5. 1615.

Ir, I received a Letter from you by the hands of Captaine Copendall, Captaine of the Hosiander. which arrined here in lapan the twentie ninth of August, 1615, wherein I understood of your safe arrinallat the Cape Bona El peranza bomeward bound: wherein your Worlbip gaue mee to understand, of the left of some of your Company; pet I make no doubt, but by the grace of Ood, you are fafely arrived in Righard long before this time. I sent you a Letter, dated the last of Nonember, 1614, by the Hollan-10 ders storp called the old Zealand, wherein I game you to understand of the death of M. Peacocke, and Walter Carwarden betrayed in Cauchinchina, which was not a little griefe to vs all besides the losse of the Companies goods. This last yeere past, M. Wickham, M. Adams, and my Selfe, beeing bound in a luncke which we bought for Siam, having great stormes and foule weather, sprung leakes in her, and were faine to beare up for the Ilands Leuckes, where we stayed so long and could not stop our leakes, we lost our Monson, and came to Firando againe. This yeere we have trimmed her againe, and at this present readie to fet sayle againe for Siam. My greatest bope in these parts is, that we shall have a trade into China, for we have great possibilities, and I make no doubt but ere long, to see a Factory established there, by meanes that the Captaine Cheny and his brothers have made. We have had here the last Summer great troubles of Warres, betwire the Emperour and Fidaia Sama, which we doe not know whether hee bee saine or fled, but the Emperour hath got the victory, with loffe of men of both sides, the summe of foure hundred thousand. Forty thou-Thus bearing so more nemes to write, I commit you to the precedion of the Almightie. From Fixando Sand laponian in lavan.

Your Servant alwaies to command. EDMOND SAYER.

Firando in Iapan. December 4. 1616.

Woofhigfull Sir, my humble dutic alwayes remembred: basing so site on opersumitie, I could not choose to the time your Worshop with these from lines, I being but nearly arraned heere in Firaudo, of a bard and tedious Voyage from Siam, which went in a lunke of the Right Honourable Companies, M. Adams being Master, and my selfe Factor in her bauing bought more goods then we could lade, we fraightedanother Innke for Iapan: M. Beniamin Fary being principall of the Faltory of Siam, thought at fit for me to goe in this lunke for Iapan, for the safegard of the Worshipfull Companies goods: wherein I tooke my Veyage, the yeare beeing far frent, that we were from the first of lune, to the seuenteenth of September, betweene Siam and Shachmar, with much torments and fowle weather, having loft twenty of our men with sicknesse and want of siesh water. The greatest occasion of this first, was for want of a good Pilot for we had a China Pilot, which had no understanding of Nanigation: for when he was one of fight of the Land, bee knew not where he was, nor what course to take: then he falling sicke, was not able to creepe out of his Cab-60 bm, I beeing forced with the small skill I had, to doe my best, and with the helpe of God brought the lunke safe to Shachmar, where we arrived the sewenteenth of September, having but five men able to stand on then legges, comming so late to Firando, that I could not goe this yeere to Siam, but the Companies lunke is gone with M. WillEaton, and two English Pilots, whose names are Robert Burges, and John Burges

Your Worthips feruant till death. EDMOND SAYER. Almm

Firando

Firando in Iapan. February 15. 1617.

Aptaine Saris, My last Letter unto you, was the fifth of lanuary, 1616. Sent by way of Bantam. the frip Thomas, which went from bence that yeere, with an other fmall frip called the Aduice; in which Letter I wrote you at large, of all matters which occasion then offered : as also of the receipt of two Letters of yours, the one dated in London the twenty fourth of Nonember, 1614. and the other the fifteenth of August, 1615. Since which time the flip Aduice & returned agains into Iapan, and arrined at Firando, the second of August Last past. By which convarance I received a Letter from the Haussrable Company, dated in London the thirtieth of lanuary, 1615. Wherein they write me, Oc.

Capt. George

410

There are forms which can tell you, that Captaine Backely lying on his death bed, escaped a scorning of loofing six thousand Riells of eight; and had be died before it was found out, paid out for Custome of Penper, it may be some other man might have had the credit of paying it. It is a common Prouting, that it is a small matter for men which lie at Bantam, to be rich if they line but a little time: for as the ald some ss, No man dieth without an heire. Wee have beene this yeare againe, before the Emperour of Lapan, but cannot get our Primiledges enlarged, but trade onely at Firando and Langalaque, and our English (hipping to come for Eirando only. M. Edmond Sayer went this last yeare for Cochinchina, with a Cargefon of some one thousand eight bundred Tays Goods and money: and being ready to come away, was coozened of fixe bundred and fifty Tays by a China of others, of whom he had bought Silke for the Worshipful Company, and weighed out the Me. 20 on a title of the state of the when it was done. I am forrie for the muschance, but he hopeth to recour it againe this yeare, baning left a man to follow the fuite, and returneth backe this Monfon in a China Iunke, with a Cargeson of two Thousand Tais in Plate to bestow in Silke, and one Robert Hawley goeth with him for mortalities fake, and M. William Adams goeth Pilot for the Chines. God fend them a proferous Voyage, and to rece. ser the money loft.

Trade in Cau-

Our lunke, the Sea Aduenture , made an other Voyage the last years to Siam, M. William Eaton going Merchant in her, and is returned againe in her thither this yeare, God fend them a profesour The Hollanders sent a Fleete of ships the last yeare from the Moluccas to the Manillias , to sight with 30 Spanish Fleete: but they kept in for the space of fine or fixe moneths , fo that the Hollanders mide account they durst not come out at all: and therefore separated themselves, to looke out for China lunkes whereof they tooke and rifled some say twentie fine luncks, others say thirtie fine: once they tooke great riches , and all under the name of Englishmen. But in the end, the Spanish Fleete came out, and ses upon fine or fixe of their ships, burning and finking the Admirall, and two other Holland ships, the rest escaping: but the Spaniards separating themselues to seeke out the Hollanders, the Viceadmirall of them sell with two fresh Hollanders on the morning, who fought with her all day, and made her to runne on ground, and fet her felfe on fire, because the Hollanders should not take them: the which two ships, and one of them which was at former fight, came after to Firando, with two other great Hollanders from Bantam, to 40 looke out for the Amacau (hip, but miffed narrowly of her, so that fine great Holland ships, the least of them as big as the Cloue, came into Iapan this yeare, one of which, called the Red Lyon ( which was she which rid by us at the Moluccos) was cast away at Firando in a storme, with a China luncke they brought in for Prize, but all the Merchandise recovered, although wet. The Emperour letteth them make good price of all. They sent away the Blacke Lyon for Bantam, a Sosp of nine hundred Tunnes, full laden with Raw Silke, and other rich China stuffes. Another, called the Flushing, of seven or eight hundred Tumes, is gone for the Moluccas, full laden with provision and money: and the Sunne, a shop of sixe or seven hundrea Tunnes, with the Gallias of abone foure hundred Tunnes, are left to scowre the coast of China, to take what booty they can, and returne the next Monson: the Gallias is gone out already, but the Sunne attendeth the going out of the Amacau Ship from Langalaque, to be doing with her. She was going out hereto- 50 fore, but comming in sight of the Galiau, ( the wind ferming her ) returned into Langusaque againe, so I thinke the will hardly goe out this yeare: and as I faid before, they have robbed all the Chines in the name of Englishmen, which hath done much hurt to our proceeding, to get trade in that place; so that we were Hollanders English name.

> Your louing Friend assured at command, RIC. Cock.

The Coppie of my Letter the last years, I fend you bere inclosed.

make no doubt but you will heare: And fo I commit you to God, resting

A piece of another Letter of M. Cockes.

forced to fendnew supplies to give the Governours in China to understand, that they are Hollanders which did it, and not Englishmen. In fine, I have advised the Worshipfull Company at large of all, of which I

There came two Friers in that ship as Embassadours from the Viceroy of new Spaine, with a Present for the Emperour, but be would neither receive the Prefent, nor speake to them which brought it, but CHAP.3.S.3. Abuses offered by the Hollanders to the English.

lent M. Alams to tell them, they should avoide out of his Dominions, he having formerly banifled all of their coate, and remained still in the same opinion. It is said, that Fidain Same had promised the lefunes entrance againe, if he had got the victorie, and been setled in the Empire, which if it had taken effect, out of doubt both Hollanders and we had been turned out of Japan. And therefore better

Also, the last yeere when we set out our lunke, we entertained a Spaniard, called Damian Marina, and was the same man which thought once to have gone along with you, in Company of George Peterion. This Damian was a good beline man : and therefore entertained , and an other Spaniard, called Iuan de Lieuana went with them as a Paffenger: but the lunke loofing her Voyage, they returned 10 to Langalaque, where some after arrived the Carracke from Amacan; and understanding that these two men had gone in our shipping, they laid hands of them, and put them in chaines abound the great ship, condemning them to death, as Traytors to their Prince and Countrey in serving the English their enemies. Which comming to my knowledge, I tooke their defense in hand, and by authoritic from the Emperour got them fet at libertie, to the great fright and hearts griefe of both Spaniards and Portugalls, thefe two men going Possengers in the Holiander for Bantam, & We have had extreame trou-bles in lapan, by meanes of these warres, in possing or transporting of our goods from place to place, to faue it. I long to heare from you of your fafe arrivall, &c.

M. Adams is gone againe in the lunke for Stam, accompanied onely with M. Edmond Sayers and M. Neallon is very ficke, but M. Wickham, and M. Eaton well: I pray you deliver the enclo-

> Yours, most affored at command, RICHARD COCK.

Naugasaque in Iapan, the tenth of March 1610.

TI is now almost three yeeres last past since I wrote your Worship any Letter, and is by meanes of the volooked for & vnruly proceedings of the Hollanders against our English Nation in all these pares of the World, not sparing vs in these Kingdomes of Japan, contrarie to the large Priviledges which the Em- Hollanders abuse prour of Iapan bath given vs. that the Iapans should not meddle with vs. But these Heilanders this is ot the Enggeere having seven ships great of small in the Harbor or Port of Firando, have with sound of Trumpet troclarmed open War against our English Nation, both by Sea and Land to take car English ships & goods, published for and kill our persons as their mortall Enemies , which was done by one Alam Westarwood, their Ad. knowledge of mirall or Lord Commander (as they tearme him) and openly preclaymed abourd all their hippes. Als the Hafteine they came to brane vs before our owne doores, and picking quarrels entred into our Houle, thinking to Occurrents, and Occurrents, as have cent allow throates, yet wounded but two per font, and had it not beene for the efficience of the lapa- it is meetin a 40 nesses our Neighbours, which tooke our parts, they had killed as all, they being a kindred Hollanders to Historia. But one Englishman : and not contented with this, they tooke our Boat going out about our businnesses, where- neither were in there was one Englishman which they carryed Prifoner into their owne House, threatning to have hit these National habim, putting kim in great danger of bis life, by meanes of a Company of distance Conforts which Cimes, and were about him, threatning him to flab him with their Kniues. The young mans name is Richard King done in time and sonne to Captaine King of Plimmouth. And besides this, two other of our Barkes going besides and place of their ships within the Towns and Harbour of Firando, they bent a Peece of Ordnine against them, pretended Ho-mbish heals folk for hinter than with Montar has willed the Englishman Mill Hard. Blue, and which took falfe fire, but they shot at them with Mungets, but missed the Englishmen, and killed a la-now hope sapan : Tet for all this there is no inflice executed against them by the King of Frando, although the Em- its Counts of perour hath commanded him to doe it.

10 Also may it please you to understand, that two of these shippes which they brought into Firancio this Niighbour-Jeere, are English Ships which they tooke from Englishmen in the Indies, as alfo they tooke two other hood of Repeer, are English copy more tree come from Englishmen in the studies, as also now tone woother gion Reli-this yeere from them, riding at an anchor in the Roade of Patania, where wee have a Factorie, and not gion and Cudenbing any Such matter : in which broyle, they killed Captaine * Iohn Iordaine, our Chiefe President flomes; are for the right Wor hipfull Companie in the Indies, with divers others, and carried the thips and goods quite e tilly violated aney, but fixe of the Mariners which were in the English ships which they tooke, escaped from them and by Drink, Co-Cametothe English House, they sending to me to haut them fent backe againe vonto whom I as served. Untousing the I would first the their Committee how then during to referre to take any limiting and good. It is Pride, the I would first see their Commission, how they durst presume to take our supports and goods, and fill our three lunes Kings Manesties faithfull Subjects as they did : fo then they went to the Tono or King of Firandi; this rayled

60 buffions. This Historie hash related the worth of many Worthy Hollanders, if it yeelds a Close-stocle for Westaroust (as Exerciments rather then true Dutch) or a Graine-Tub or Swill tub for some brane Brewers and Bores, that conbreved with Nobler blend only report then the theory of a seriant is not of which to how the same when and publik Petro, betteb no impurise route blen thriffichs have preferre their bruth pations to Gods Gloire, Relgion, and publik Petro, betteb no impurise route Nation (which I lour and homour) but to fuch biter (pirits a share (the Scribbitcal) burmours in the library Vayage, and their formation of the state of the Respecte and wint of wonted employments) been bred as Difficults to their, and infections to our bodie. My in one true present others with their Acts, my felic with Prayers that all may be amended. This 1660 to dames said in the time of trustice to both defining

Mmm 4

defining to have their * English flaves (as it pleased them to call them) delivered unto them, but they we the hoppy had a fivere, they must first deman a them of the Empereur, and took what he orderecast culabeful infirmental filled. Yet in the meane time, they held not the English - men to bee flanes anto them. This was the chiefe occasion which made them to picke quarrels against vs, to have killed vs all, but I here in God, his Mase. which her ac- fire by the Solicitation of our right Honourable, and right Worth of the impleyers, will not fuffer his true countilance . and loyall Subjects to lofe their flipping, lines and goods, in fuch order as they one by fuch an arithmee. but the Evel fir full and the cuish Rubble of them, which are assembled together in these parts of the World, who make a duly practice to reb and spoile all both friends and fees, and I trust that you year self will be a Solice tor in this fo suft a cause, against so common an Eremie.

Vnchriftian, vaciuill,inhu-

This Adam Westerwood their Lord Commander, set my life at Saile, effering fifthe Rials of eight, to 10 any one that would kill me, thirtie Rials for each other Englishman that they could fall but kitherte God but preserved me and the rest in this place, all hough they wounded two or three , yet they are needed And this proceedings of their Lord Commander, was told me fecretly by seme of their owne zerole (willi : a me ) and the rest to take heed of our selnes. They also informed mee of the Noble Parentage of their Lord Commander Welterwood, telling that his Father is a Close-Stock-maker at Arafter am, or thereabouts, and the best of their Captaines either Shoomakers, Carpenters, or Beere-brewers Sonnes, God bleffe fuch an Honourable and Worshipfull Generation, I meane, God bleffe mee from them, And To to make an end of this matter, I was this yeere about at the Emperours Court at Miaco, to make complaint of the abuses of ered to us within his Dominions, contrary to the Friniledges his Maisslie hados nen vs, and I had very good words and premifes that wee should have Instice, and the Tono or King of 20 Firando commanded to fee it performed but as yet nothing done, although I have many times eas neitle And at my beeing at Court, and at the Emperours Palace, Portugals and Spaniards being there at the same time, to doe their duties to the Emperous, as they doe every yeare when shipping commesh. There was a Hollander in the Court, (which had lined in Iapan almost twentie yeeres, and speaketh the Iapan Language well) this fellow, in my hearing and others, beganne to extoll their King of Hoiland, to be the greatest King in Christenzome, and one that held all the others under, he little thinking that we had znderstood what he faid; but I was not behind hand to tell him that he needed not to lye so loud, for that there bad no King at all, in Holland, but were governed by a Count, or rather they governed him. But if they had any King at all , in whom they might boast it was the Kings Matefile of England, who bitherto had 30 beene their Protestor, otherwayes they had never bragged of their States, at which freeches, both Spaniards, Portugals, and others did laugh apace, and for the Hollanders mouth was ftopped, &c. And now for newes in these parts, may it please you to understand that this Emperor is a great Enemy to the name of Christians, especially lapans, so that all which are found are put to death, I saw fifty sue martried at Miaco. at one time when I was there because they wold not for sike their Christian Faith & amone st them were little Children of fine or fixe yeeres old burned in their mothers armes, Crying out, leftis receine their fulles. Also in the Towne of Naugasaque, there was sixteene more martyred for the same matter, whereof fine were burned and the rest beheaded and cut in pieces, and cast into the Sea in Sackes of thirtse fathome deepe : yet the Priests get them up againe, and kept them secretly for Reliques. There is many more in Prison in divers other places, as also heere, which looke howely when they shall die, for 40 very few turne Pagans. Also this last yeere b fore Christinas, the Emper ur bath displaced one of the greatest Princes of Japan, called Frutinna Tay, of fixtie or feventie Mangocas, and turned him into a Corner, in the North parts of layan , where hee hath but a small portion in respect of that was taken from him, and this must bee doe or cut his belly. It was thought there would have been much trouble m Japan about it, for all Frushma Tayes Subjects were in Armes, and meant to have held it out to the wtermost, having fortified the (itie of Frushma, and gotten proussion into it for a long time, but the Tay himselfe and his Somne being in the Emperours Court, he commanded them to write to their Vassals, to lay downe their Armes and Submit themselves to the Emperous pleasure, or else forth-with to cut their bellies. So life was freete unto them, and all rendred unto the Emperior, and those pardoned which hadtaken up Armes in the defence of the Tav. And the Emperour hath given his Dominions being too King- 50 domes, to two of the Emperours owne Kinfmen, and now this yeere the Emperour bath pulled down his Castle at Frushamy, which I thinke was fore bigger then the Citie of Rochetter, avery beautifulland gallant thing, wherein I faw bem this yeere, and all the flores are carried to Olackiy, and that old ruinated Castle which Tiens Samma built, and Ogetha Samma pulled downe, must now bee built ogaine, three times bigger then it was before, fo that all the Tonos or Kings, have each one their taske for them to des at their owne profer charge, not with ut much grudging, they basing leave after fo many yeares, tothe turne to their owne Lands, and now on a fuddaine, are all fent for agains to come to the Court, which angreth them not a little, but they must, will they nill they; in paine of belly-cutting. Yet at this very instant, beere is a fecret muttering, that Fidaia Samma the Sonne of Ticus Samma is aline; and in the Daires House at Minco but I thinke it hath beene reported divers times heretofore that hee was aline, and in o- 60 ther places but proved outrue, yet here are some rich Merchants at Miaco, hereat present, which are affraid, and are readie to goe up on a fuddame, for feare the Emperous flould hurne Miaco, if is be true, be be aline, and out of dealer of he be aline, it may turne the Emperours Estate applied downe, for hee is no Marshall man, but a great Politician : once, howsoever it bee, it cannot bee worse for us then it is . &c

Brags of a

Perfecution.

And as I admifed you in my last, of the pulling downe of all the Churches in Iapan , yet there were fine

Fufuma de-ftroyed.

Tidaia Camma fonne of Tico CHAP.3.S.3. Christ crucified betwint two Theenes.

remeants standing in Naugasaque till this yeere, and the Monasterie of Misericordia not touched neither any Church-yard nor Buriall place, but now by order from the Emperour all is pulled dompe, and all Granes and Sepultures opened, and dead mens bones taken out, and carried into the Fields by their Parents and Kindred to be buried else-where. And streets made in all their places, where both Churches or Church-yards were, except in some places, where the Emperour hath commanded Pagods to bee creeted, and fent Heathen Priests to line in them, thinking veterly to roote out the memory of Christianitie out of Japan. For there were certaine places a little without the Citie of Naugasaque, where divers Fathers and other Christians were martyred, in the time of Ogolina Samma, where their Parents and Friends had planted greene Trees, and fet up Altars neere each Tree, unto which place many bundreds went energy day to pray, but now by command from the Emperour, all the faid Trees and Altars are quite cut downe, and the ground made even, such is his desire to root out the remembrance of all such matters.

And in Anno 1618. in the moneths of Nouember and December, heere were two Comets feene o- Comets which ner all Iapan, the first rising in the East, being like a great siery beame rent to the South-wards, and appeared also there within the space of a moneth vanished away. The other did also rife iust East, being a great blassing in the epacts. Starre, and went North-wards, and within a moneth vanished quite away about the Constellation of Charles-mayne, or Vila Maior. The Wissards in these parts doeprognosticate great matters thereof, but buberto nothing of moment hath happened, but the deposing of Frushma Tay, aforefaid.

But I am ashamed to write you the newes the Portugals and Spaniards report, and some of them have Exuncue Leobened me Letters to verifie it, and is of a bloudie Crosse serve in the Ayre me England, apassing which an acceleration of English Preacher should not the Pulpis was strook admits, which Miracle, as they terme it, caused our Tales of Miracle, as they terme it, caused our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our Tales of Miracle should not be a considered our transfer of the considered not be a considered not be considered not be a considered not be a considered not be a cons Kings Maiestie to send to the Pope, to have some Cardinals and Learned men to come into England, for cles at home & that he meant all England should turne Roman Catholikes. I pray you pardon me for writing such fop_ abroad, by peries which I doe, to the intent to have you laugh a little, yet I affine you, heere are many Portugals and this. Spaniards, will not be perswaded to the contrary. I know not what else to write, but I hope by the next shipping which commeth for this place to come towards England, where God grant I may find you in good

Your Worships at command, RICHARD COCK.

To the Right Worshipfull Sir Thomas Wilson, &c.

I have heere added for the Readers profit and delight this Map of Iapan, published by I. HONDIVS.

CHAP.4. S.I.

Remembrances touching Sierra Leona, in August 1607. the Bay, Countrey, Inha. bitants, Rites, Fruits and Commodities.

This should haue followed next after Mafter Hawitin, with whom he went into the Mogolls Countrey, if I then had had it. But better a good dith, thou b narmdueff. place of ferhe altogether borne out of duetime, which comes in due place (whiles

414

North. affaires recei-

Ch intenitie fashion-mon-

Their feature.

He Iland which we fell with, lyeth fome ten leagues to the South of the Bay, the Ite I Iand window retal with, syem some ten leagues to the south of the Bay, the latitude is eight degrees; it hath on inhabitants, nor did I learner the name. I have fome Plantans, and by report good watering and wooding for flips. Some league from the floate is a dangerous breach of a rocke, fearcely at high water to be edit, occrued. The Bay of Surra Leans is about three leagues in breadth. On the South is high land, fall of trees euen to the Sea-fide, haung diuers Coues, in which we caught plentie and varietie of fish. On the further side of the fourth Coue is the watering place, of excellent water continually running; at which place, on the rockes, we found the names of 20 divers English men which had bin there; amongst the rest, of Sir Francis Drake, which had bin there leven and twentie yeeres before, Thomas Candift, Captaine Lifter, with others. About the middest of the Bay, right from the third Coue lyeth a fand, neere about which, is not about two or three fathome; in most places else eight or ten close to the shoare. It floweth East Southeast, and higheth sixe or eight foote, a strong tide of ebbe; the latitude eight degrees and a halfe

The King keepeth his residence in the bottome of the Bay, and is called by the Mores, Borea, or Capaine, Caran, caran, caran. Hee hath other pettie Kings under him, whereof one, called Captaine Pinto, a wretched old man, dwelleth at a Towne within the second Coue: and on the we are yetin ladia) and in other fide the Bay, Captaine Boloone. Boreas Dominions stretch fortie leagues into the land; he 16 time allo, be- hath tribute of Cotton-cloath, Elephants teeth and gold : he hath power to fell his people for fore the Magall flaues, (which he proffered vato vs) and some of them are by Portugal Priests and Islants made Christians, and haue a Chappell, wherein are written in a table, such dayes as they are to obsense hely. The King, with some about him, are decently cloathed in lackets and Breeches, and some termamitie; with hats, but the common fort go naked, faue that with a Cotten girdle about their walle, they and for that eir courretheir printies; the women courr theirs with a Cotton-cloath, tacked about their middles cumfunce fai- and hanging to the knees, wrapped round about them; the children goe flarke naked. They are mag, thou man ail, both men and women, raced and pinked on all parts of their bodies very curiously, having in lab flance, their teeth allo file i betwix, and made very sharpe. They pull off all the haire growing on their with more see eye-lids. Their beards are short, crispe, blacke, and the haire of their heads they cut into allys 40 curate obter- and croffe paches; others weare it iagged in tufes, others in other foolish formes; but the women uarios of Men, shaue all close to the flesh.

Cines, Deferts, - Their Townes conflit of thirtie or fortie houses, all clustered together (yet each hath his own) covered with reed and enclosed with mud-walls, like our houels or hog-sties in England, lauing at Cafter, Bill Coursed with reed and enclosed with mud-walls, like our nouns of negating robbery, where the house drugs, Regions sheen trance a matter in field of a doore, locked and bolted, not fearing robbery, where the house drugs Regions sheen trance a matter in field of a doore, locked and bolted, not fearing robbery, where the house Rengions then hold holds correspondence to the house. In stead of a carued bed-sted, they have billets of wood amon any o- laid ouerthwart, vpon which, in stead of a fether-bed, they spread a matte or two. Some are so Waies, Wares, proud, that they have their (Arras) hangings also of matter about the walles, yet most about their bede butwist them and the wall. Their other furniture, is two or three pots of earth to keepe water in, and to boyle such meate as they can get, a gourd or two to fetch Palme-wine, and 10 at hiera Land.

Their apparell.

a hallo going for his quaring cup, earthen dishes for their loblolly, a basket or two by the walles They are also for his Maria to gather cockles, with a fnap-facke for himselfe made of rindes of trees to carry his Gallants and prouant, with his Tobacco and Pipe, and thus is their house furnished. When they goe abroad each weareth one of those inap-fackes on his shoulder, wherein he carrieth his prouision and Tobageo (which in no wifemult be long from his mouth) with his do-little fword by his fide, made by themselves of such iron as is brought them; having also his bow and quiver full of poylon Their houf. arrowes, pointed with you informe of a Stakes-fling, or elle a cafe of lauelins or Darts, pointed bold-flutts and with iron of a good breadth and fluttpe; and fometime with both. They are bigge and women riches ——mer, ftrong and couragious, of a civill-heathen difposition. They keepe themselues for the most Pur ynto their owns, or a cum-neathen autointion. They keepe themselves for me most of whom they are not alittle tealors. I could not learn heir Religious what it is: they base from themselves to the spin of the state of the spin of the spi gion what it is: they have long Images, yet know there is a God aboue: for wien wee asked them of their woodden Puppets, they would lift up their hands to heauen; more they knew Gircumcison, not : but liow focuer it comes to palle, their children are all circumcifed. They are very just and true, and theft is punished with present death. When any dieth, a little thatched fied is fet ouer

Food, Fruits and Trees, at Sierra Leona his funerall hearfe, under which in earthen pots they continually keepe fresh water, and in ear- Funerall then platters fet divers meates, flicking about them fome three or foure bones.

To the South of the Bay, some fortie or fiftie leagues distant within the Country, inhabiteth Their food a very herce people which are man-eaters, which sometime infest them. The Moores of Sierra Leona feed on Rice, of which they have no great quantitie, fowing only what is needfull, in places neare to their houses, where they have burnt up the wood, not having otherwise so much free ground : they fow also another little feed which they call Pene, of which they make bread, not much valike to Winter-fauory feed. They have fome few hennes about their houses, but no other fish, except iometime they get a Fawne of the wille Deere, running in the Mountaines (not 10 many) or some fowle. They feed also vpon Herbs, Cockles, Oysters, whereof they have great Oysters on ftore growing on the rockes and trees by the fea-fide, but of a flash taste. They take much good trees. fish with waves and other devices. They feed also much on rootes, and plant about their houses many Plantan-trees, Gourds, Potatoes, Pompions and Gumne-Pepper. But Tobacco is planted about euery mans house, which seemeth halfe their food: the boll of their Tobacco-pipe is ve. Tobacco-pipe and the position of their Tobacco-pipe is ve. ry large, and stands right voward, made of clay well burnt in the fire. In the lower end thereof they thrust in a small hollow cane, a foot and halfelong, thorow which they sucke it, both men and women drinking the most part down, each man carrying in his snap-sack a small purse (called Tuffio) full of Tobacco, and his Pipe. The women doe the like in their wrappers, carrying the Pipe in their hands. Vnto their Tobacco they adde nothing, but rather take from it : for I have

feene them strayning forth the juyce of the leaves, being greene and fresh, before they cut and drie it (making fignes that otherwise it would make them drunke) then doe they shrand it small, Little fl. sh. and drie it on a sherd vpon the coles. We beheld in a certaine lland neare (and no where else) halfe a dozen of Goats, but could not get a taile of one all our time.

They have innumerable forts of fruits, growing wilde in their woods; whole woods of Limmon trees, especially a little on this side the watering place neare the Towne, and some few O. Fruits. renge trees. Their drinke is for the most part water; yet the men deuour much Palmito wine, renge trees. Their crinke is for the most pare water; yet one men section much ration which they call Moy, giving little or none to the women. It is fitting to behold their manner Palasiro wine. of climbing these trees, which have neither boughes nor branches, save only on the top, being alfo of great height and bignefle: with a withe he graspeth his body and the tree together, and so to bearing backe his body, and lifting vp his withe before him, he foots it vp with such speed and certaintie, comming downe againe also so orderly, bringing his gourd full of wine on his arme, that it was admirable. They have divers forts of Plummes, one like a wheaten Plumme, whole. Plummes some and sauoury: a blacke one also, as bigge as a Horse-plumme, much esteemed, having an aromaticke sauour: Mansamillias like to a wheaten Plumme, very dangerous, as are likewise the boughes of the tree, full of tappe, perillous to the fight, if it should happely flye in. They have Beninganions about as bigge as a Limmon, reddish on the rinde, very wholesome : another fruit called Beguill, as bigge as an apple, with a rough knottieskinne, which being pared, it eateth like a Strawberry, being like it alto in colcur and graine, of which weedid eate many: there is flore of wilde grapes in the woods, of a wooddie and bitterish taste. They eat the nuts roasted which fall from the Palmito tree: they vie small store of Pepper and graines, this in Surgerie, that in Cookery. They have certaine fruits growing fixe or eight together on a bunch, each as long and bigge as a mans finger, of a browneyellowith colour, and somewhat downie, containing within the rindea certaine pulpie substance of pleasant taste: I know not how wholesome. There grow in the woods trees like Beeches, bearing fruits like Beans, of which I observed three Beans trees of kinds: one great and tall, bearing a cod like a Beane-cod, which hath in it foure or five fquare venomous na-Beanes, almost like the feed of a Tamarinde, enclosed with a hard pill like a shell, within which they profess is a yellow kirnell, a dangerous poison vied by the Negros, to enuenome their arrowes; they call their arrowes. the fruit Ogon. The second is lesse, his cod crooked byas-wise, of a thicke rinde, fixe or setten inches in the bending, and halfe formuch in breadth, containing fine large beanes of an inch long.

The third is large, hath short leaves like the former, the fruit much bigger, on a strong wooddie stalke, thicke and massie, a little indented on the sides, nine inches long, and sue broad : within which are fine long beanes, larger then the other, called by them Quenda, which they afterme alfo to be dangerous.

Haw Trees like Willowes, bearing fruits like Peafe-cods. They have a fruit called Gola, which Carob trees, growes up further in the Countrey, inclosed in a shell; it is hard, readish, bitter, about the big- Cola, a suite neffe of a Wal-nut, with divers corners and angles: this fruit they much fet by chewing it with much officemes the rinde of a certaine Tree, then giving it to the next, and he having chewed it to the next, so keeping it a long while (but swallowing none of the substance) before they cast it away, to which they attribute great vertue for the teeth and gummes, their Negros being visully as well & tt. rhed as Horses. This fruit passeth also amongst them for monie, this happie-haplesse-people Postoce Cotknoting none other. They plant also Potatoes, and higher within Land, Cotton, called muem-ton. ma, which of with a Spindle they make a good Threed, and weathe it artificially, making cloth thereof a water broad, to make coverings for their members, and being fewed together, fackets Come, a and Remarket broad, to make coverings for their members, and being fewed together, fackets Come, a and Breeche. They have another Wood called Cambe, wherewith they dye their Paries and words of American Cambe, wherewith they dye their Paries and words of American Cambe, where with they dye their Paries and words of American Cambe, where with they dye their Paries and words of American Cambe, where we want to be a cambe, and they are the  are the cambe, and they are they are the cambe, and they are the cambe, and they are the cambe, and they are they are they are the cambe, and they are the cambe, and they are the are they are the are they are the are they are they are they are they Limon Tree. Mats red. The Limon Tree much relembleth a Crab-Tree, and is exceeding full of prickles, carrving a flender leafe like a Willow, abounding with fruit as our Crab-trees, beginning to ripen in August, and continuing on the Trees till October; whither they beare twice a yeere I know nor

Plantan Trees

The Tree which beareth Plantans is of a realonable height, the bodie about the bigneffe of a mans thigh, and teemeth to be an annuall Plant, and in my judgement might better bee accounted among it Reedes then Trees; the bodie not beeing of wooddie fubitance, compact of many leaues, wrapped close one vpon another in manner of an Artichoke italk, adorned with leaues in flead of boughes from the very ground, which are for the most part about two ells long, and fome ell broad, having a very large rib in the middle thereof. The truit is a bunch of ten or twelve Plantans, each a fpan long, and almost as thicke as a mans wrift, some-what crooked or bending inwards, growing on a leavie stalke on the mids of the Plant, at the first greene, growing vellow 10 as they ripen, and tender: the rinde being ftripped off, the fubftance within is also yellowish. pleafant in taite. Beneath the fruit on the fame stalke hangs downe a leauie tuft , sharpe-poin-

They call this fruit Bannanas, and have reasonable plentie: they are ripe in September and October : we carryed fome to Sea greene, which lay fixe weekes in ripening. Gainny Pepper is not plentifull, it groweth in the Woods wilde, a small Plant like Prinet, or Pricke-wood, adorned with little flender leanes, bearing a small fruit like vnto our Barberie in forme and colour, greene at fit, turning as at ripeneth, red; but not growing in bunches as Barberies, but heere and there two or three together about the stalke : they call it Banque. Of their Pene whence they make their bread is spoken, a small slender herbe like grasse, the stalke full of 20 Seed, not inclosed with any huske; the fame I thinke which the Turkes call Cufeus, the Portugals Tfunde. The Palmito Tree is strait high, knottie (only in the rinde) the wood of a fost substance with-ted, which feemeth to have beene the flowre, which I know not whether it hath any feed or no.

Palmito Tree.

out boughes, except in the top, those also seeming rather Reeds then boughes, being all pithie within, inclosed with a hard rinde : the leafe long and flender in manner of Sword graffe, or the flagge of Calamu: the boughes are from the hodie of the Tree fome yard or better in length, befet on both fides with tharpe and firong prickles, Handing like the teeth of a Saw, but longer. It beareth a small fruit like to an Indian Nut, as bigge as a Chefrist, inclosed in a hardshell, and ffreaked with threeds on the out-fides, contayning a kernell of a hard hornie fubftance without taile. The people cate them roited, and call the Tree Tobell, and the fruit Bell. The manner of 30 extracting the Wine is this : they cut off one of the branches within some spanne of the head, a little opening the place by incuion, and thereto make full the mouth of a guord, which in foure and twentie hours will be filled with a cleere whitish water, diffilling from the Tree of good rellish and strong, wherewith the people will be drunke.

There grow likewife within the Bayes great flore of Oysters on Trees, resembling Willowes in forme, but the leafe broad and of thicknesses like Leather, bearing small knops like those of the Cyprefie. From this Tree hang downe many branches, (each about the bigneffe of a good walking flicke) into the water, (mooth, lithe, pithy within, ouer-flowne with the tyde, and hanging as thicke of Oysters as they can sticke together, being the only fruit the Tree beareth, begotten thereof, as it feemeth, by the Salt-water.

Fishes they have many of ordinary kind, and some which seemed to vs extraordinarie: Mullets, Raies, Thorne-backes, Old-wines with beetle Browes, Fishes like to Pikes, Gar-fishes, Canallios (like Mackerell) Sword-fishes with snowts a yard long, toothed on both fides like the teeth of a Saw, Sharkes, Dog-fishes; Shark rs, like a Sharke, but having a snowt flat and broad like a Shouell; Shoomakers, having on each fide the mouth pendants like Barbels, and grunting like Hogges. &c. We catched in an houre fixe thousand of a kind, like Bleakes. Of Fowles are Pellicans, white, as bigge as Swannes, with a large and long bill; Hearnes, Curlews, Boobies, Oxe-eyes, with divers strange kindes of water-fowles. On Land are great numbers of gray Parrets, as also flore of Guenny Hennes, which are very hurtfell to their Rice. This is a beautifull Fowle, about the bigneffe of a Phefant, with parti-coloured feathers. 50 I faw also among the Negros many Porcupine Quils, with other strange Fowles in the Woods, whereof we knew not the names. There are flore of Monkeyes leaping to and fro the Trees, Lions, Tygres, O inces on the Mountaines; heere are Elephants but no flore; wee faw but Wild beafte. three, for they are further within Land. The Negros told vs of a strange beast (which the Interpreter called a Carbuncle) oft feene, yet only by night, having a stone in his fore-head, incre-Garbuncle, a dibly flining and giving him light to feed attentive to the leaft noyle, which he no fooner heabeaft ftrange, reth, but he prefently couereth the fame with a rline or skinne, guen him as a natural courring, that his fplendor berray him not. The Commonities here are few, but are further up, viz. Gold and Elephants teeth, which at certaine times of the yeare, the Portugals get of them for Ri 60 Salt, Beads, Bels, Garlicke, French Bottles, Copper Kettles; low-prized Knices, Hats, Lanen checkered like Barbers Aprons, Latein Bafons, edge-tooles, Ironbarres, and fundry specius trifles, but for your Toyes they will not give Gold in this place but Victuals. This diligent Observer hatb taken likes paines touching Soldania , but because wee tone there often, and have alreadie given many Relations, we will double the Cape, and take a lutle view with him of Cape Saint Augustine.

of Saint Avovstine and Socotora, like Observations, with other notes taken out of his Iournall.

CHAP.4. S.2.

His place is rather a Bay then Cape or Point, not having any land, much more bearing S. Angufline. out then the reft, it lyeth in twentie three degrees, thirtie eight minutes of South latitude, hath variation fifteene degrees fortie minutes, hauing on either fide breaches, which make it easie to be differened, lying some league from the Mayne West South-well. Right from the Bay is deepe water to Sea-war !, but when you are entred, the ground is to shelme, that you shall have one Anchor aground on the North in twentie two, and your other Shelm ground in about fixtie fathomes, and in fome places more inward, not two foot at a low water, and euer that, deepe againe neere the shoare, yet all fost Ozie ground. The land within a mile or two ishigh, flonie, barren, full of small Woods. In the bottome of the Bay runne two Rivers, the Two Rivers. Land about them funken, fandie Land : forth these Rivers, came so strong a fresh , that the floud neuer fills them, although it floweth at least two fathomes, wherewith the water is thicke and muddie. Great store of Canes come downe, of which wee had feene some store, twentie or thirtie leagues off at Sea. It lyeth open to a North-west wind, we caught heere Smelts of a foot The fishes, long, and Shrimps of ten inches. The best fishing is on the sandie shoare of the low Land, neere which the Natiues catch many with strong Nets. A ledge of Rockes trending alongst, breakes off the force of the Sea. Within the Woods, we found on the low Land, infinite numbers of water Melons, which yeelded good refreshing : the Rivers nothing, faue hurt to one by an Allegator, the water not also very good, but wooding plentie.

The place seemeth not very populous. We saw not at any time about twentie together: the The people.

men are comely, lustie, tall and wel-set, of a tawnie colour, wearing no apparel, but a Girdle made. Near nakeds of rindes of Trees to couer their privities: the haire on their beards blacke, and reasonable long; neffe, on their head, likewise, which they pleate and frizzle very curioutly, neither have they bad sinels on their bodies. Behind on their Girdles are many Trinkets, fastned with Allegators teeth, some hollow to carrie Tallow to keepe their Darts bright, which are their chiefe Weapons (of which Wespons. each carries a small bundle) and a faire Lance artificially headed with Iron, and kept as bright as Silver. Their Darts are made dangerously with holes on each side backe-ward. They carry about them certaine Kniues, like Butchers Kniues, artificially made. They therefore regard no Iron, nor will barter for any thing but Siluer, for which we bought a sheepe for twelve pence, a Cow for three shillings and fixe pence, they asked Beads into the bargaine, for which yet alone they would give nothing, face a little Milke brought downe in goards, excellent fweet and good. Their Cattel haue great bunches on their fore shoulders, like a Sugar-loase in fashion and quantitie, which is a griffie fubflance, and good meat; their beete not loofe, like that of Soldania, but fall and good, little differing from Englift; as also their sheep, which have tayles weighing twenty eight pounds a peice, therefore visually cut of from the Ewes, least it should hinder their breeding. In the woods neer: about the River, is great store of beasts, as byg as Minkies, a h-coloured, Stronge beasts. with a small head, long taile like a Fox, garled with white and blacke, the surrevery fine. Wee Cantiferry killed some with Peeces, not being able to take them aliue. There are Bats as big bodied almost inhistograff as Conies, headed like a Foxe, with a hairie furre in other things like Bats. We killed one, whose chambe game as Conies, headed like a Foxe, with a haire furre in other things like thats. We knied one, whose several wings extended an ell in length: their cry is first! and load. Here are Hernes plente, white, billet of the control of the length of their crystal of the Bitthings. 10 blacke, blew, and divers mixed colours; many baltard Hawkes; birds of infinite varietie of co-Fooles, lour, having for the most part crests on their heads, like Peacocks. There are store of Lizards and Chamelions, which agree to Plinies description; onely it is airie, that they line of aire without Chamelions, other meat: for having kept one aboord but a day, we might perceive him to hant for flies, in a they cit fliss, very strange manner. Having espied her setting, he suddenly shootes a thing forth of his mouth (perhaps his tongue ) lothfome to behold, the fashion almost like a Bird-bole, where with he takes and eates them, with fuch speed, that a man can scarily discerne what he doth; euen in the twinkling of an eie. In the woods on the hils are many great Spiders, which frin their webs from tree to tree, it being very excellent frong filke of a yellow colour, as if it were died by art. I found Spicers filke alfohere great Wormes, in manner of our Grubs, with many legges, which are enclosed within a weaters. 60 double cod of white filke, hanging on the trees.

There groweth great flore of herbe Aloss, and alfo Tamerin I trees by the waters fide. Here Strangerrees. was ellostore of a very strange Plant, which I deeme a wild Coco-nut, sellome growing to the height of a tree, of a flirabby nature, with mony long prickled flakes, of fometwo yards long. At the ende of each foot-stalke, fland that afe about the bignesse of a great Cabbage leafe, sings round halte the leafe, like fword goale. From the tops thereof amongst the leanes, come forth many woodie branches, as thicke fet commonly with fruit as they can fland, one by another (I has feen forthe together clustering on one branch) about the bignesse of a great Katherine peare, and like it in colour being ripe, at the first greenish, fashioned almost like a sheepes bell, with rinde bearing forth neere the head, flat at the top, and smooth; within which rinde is contained a hard jubitance, almost like the Coco-nut-shel, in which is included a round white kernell, of a hard grifly fibiliance, yet to be eaten; and within that (for it is hollow) is about a spoonefull of pleasant tweet water and coole, like milke, or that rather of the Coco-nut.

CHAP.4. S.2.

It re groweth also another as big as a Peare tree, thicke fet with boughes and leaves, like Here groweth allo another as bug as a rear user, uncounted from the Bay-tree, bearing a great foot-ball froit (fight is the round forme) (flicking to a from those of the Bay-tree, bearing a great foot-ball froit (fight is the round forme). The find of it beeing out recent veiled to Palle, annual by certaine featnes into foure quarters. The rind of it beeing cut greene, yeelds a cl. mmie it bitance, fauouring like Turpentine. The rind is very thicke, with which I found ditiers parcels porked together, almost like the substance that groweth on trees, but harder, rather like a piece or browne woody Agarike, being thirteene in number, couched neatly together, within cash of which is contained another great kernell of a darkith white colour, hard, bitter, and vapleafint of taft.

Strange winds The King of tia ha h bere forrelles.

In Secretary, the Suzerats and English build them houses for the time of their stay, sleight with ftener (the whole lland feemeth nothing elfe) and pieces of wood laid ouerthwart, coursed with Reed and Date branches to keepe out the Sunne, for raine in that time they feare not, About the head of the Riner, and a mile further into the land, is a pleafant Valley replenished with Datetrees. On the East fide is Dibree a little Towne, little inhabited, except in their harnest of Dates. 20 In this Valley the wind bloweth with such violence in Inne and July, that it is strange; yet within a flight that off towards the Town of Delifha, over against the read, you shal not have a breath of wind, About an hundred yeers fince, this Hand was conquered by the King of Cascem (or Cufhem, as the Arabs pronounce it)a King of no great force, able to make two or three thouland fouldiors: he both this, and the two Irmanas, and Abba del curia fubiect to him. The two Irmanas, or two Brethron, are Ronie, small , barren, having nothing but Turtles or Tortoifes, not inhabited. Abba Abbade' curia. de la curia is large, hath fle re of Goa es, and fome fresh water, not aboue three or foure inhabitants, as we were certified. The Kings fonne Amor Benzaid refideth at Socotora, which he ruleth during his fathers pleasure. They have trade to the lles of Comoro, and to Melinds, for which he hath heere two good Frigats, wherewith they fetch Rice and Melo from the maine, which is their chiefe food. The Arabians here are in manner flaues to the Snakee or Prince, are all fouldiours, and attend

The Arabs there. Their armes.

Perfons, Apparell.

on him when he commands; some of them are shot. Moreover, every of them weares a kind of wood-knife, or crooked digger on their left fide, without which they dare not bee feene abroad. They have also thin, broad, painted Targets. Their dagger handles and chapes, the better fort fet forth with Silver, the other with Red Latten. They are tawney, industrious, chill in gethere: the women are fome of them reasonable white, much like to a Sun-burnned countrey maid in England. The men are of stature like ours, well proportioned in their limmes, wearing their haire most of the nlong, binding a cloth or Turbant about the same like the Turkes, and a cloath wrap-Tod about their middles, which hangeth downe to their knees; not wearing vibally other appa-40 re Lexicipt fometimes a paire of fandals on their feet, fallened with thongs; carrying their fword naked on then thoulders, or har ging from the shoulder in the sheath by a strap, or else on their arme; and thus they march up and downe. They loue Tobacco, but are loth to give any thing Divers of them fling a Pintado or other cloth in manner of an Irifb mantle over their shoulders, and others make them thirts and furpleffes of white Calico: some weare a paire of linnen

Their women, breeches under, like the Gozernter. But their women goe altogether in their fmockes hanging downe to the ground, of red, blew, or for the most part of a light black colour, being died Calicoes: and ouer their heads they put a cloth, with which (when they luit) they hide their faces, making very dainty to be feene, yet are fearlly honeit. And though the men be very pocre, and hauebut 50 to defend necessitie, yet their women (whereof some keepe foure, fiue, or fixe, as many as they are able ) are foliaden with Siluer, and tome also with tome Gold, that I have seene one not of the beft, which hath had in each care at leaft a dozen of great Siluer rings, almost like Curtaine rings, with as many finaller hanging in them: two Carkanets or chaines of filter about her necke, and one of Gold boffes; about her wrifts, tenne or twelve Manillias of Silver, each as big as ones lit le finger, but hollow, one about another, on one arme: almost every finger laden with rings, and the fmall of her legs with filter rings like horfelockes. And thus adorned, they cannot flirre, but they male a noise like Morris-dauncers. They are kept closely by their icalous husbands. They delight in Christill, Amber, or Currall beads, but have little to buy them, but will either beg them, Their children or make a fwap with you in private. The young children (except of a few of better fort) go naked till they come to some age. They are married at tenne, or twelve yeares olde. They call thom felues Aufelmen that is, Catholikes, or true beleeuers, according to their falle faithleffe faith of M. homer yea they alledge this reason for themselves (let Ielute-Catholikes acknowledge ment of rain, their owne) the great multitude of them, and the small number of vs, all the world, say they, being of our Religion, and but a handfull of yours. They eate their meat on a Mat forcal on the Their diet. ground, but neither vie Spoones nor Knines (hands are the elder) in vnmannerly manner: they drinke vitally water, vet in fecret can be content to be drunke with wine. They make in the time of yeare some wine of Dates, pleasant and strong.

Thus much for the Conquerous. They call the conquered Caffars ( misbeleeuers, or if you will The Native St. heretikes ) and fubicat them to great flattery, infomuch that fome remaine in the Mountaines li- colorans. uing in a wild liberty like beafts, the other not fuffered to have any weapons. They are well shaped, more fwart then the Arabs, weare mothing on their heads, weare their haire long, I suppose never cut, flaring as if they were frighted. About their middles they weare a cloath wrapped a-to bout them, made of Goats haire, or course wooll, would by thenrichies, on their feet flight fandals. Their women goe all in mocks of coloured Calico, or course cloth hanging to the grounds ontheir heads vivally nothing: in imitation of the Arabs, have Manill as of earth painted or of Gallant fathiyron, about their armes and legs, beads in stead of Karkanets, painting their faces with yellow ons. and blacke spots, loath some to behold. For Religion, they are meere Heathen all of them, as the Religion and Arabian certified vs, obleruing no rites of Marriage, but vie their women in common. Their na- life most miletural language is much different from the Arabique, which yet the most learne. They live very rable if the Amilerably, and many of them are familhed with hunger. Flesh they are not permitted to kill, so mice be to bee that they are forced to live of fish which they take at Sea, and by their share of Dates, not had credited. uing wherewith to buy Rice, except with the vie of their womens bodies to the Gazerates, while 10 they remaine there. Such as have the keeping of the Cattell, maintaine themselves with the

I could learne of no Merchandise the Iland yeeldeth, but Aloes, Sanguis Draconis, and Dates, Theirmerand as they fay, on the shoare of Aba del curia, blacke Ambergreese. Or Aloes, I suppose they chandise. could make yearely more then Christendome can spend, the herbe growing in great abundance, being no other then Semper visum, in all things agreeing to that description of Dioscorides, in feed, Aloes or semperstalke, &c. It is yet all of a red pricklie fort, and much chamfered in the leaves, to full of a rolin - vium, the time inyce, that it is ready to breake with it. The chiefe time to make it, is when the winds blowe thereof, Northerly, that is, about September, and that after the fall of some raine, which being then gathered, they cut in small pieces, and cast into a pit made in the ground, well cleanfed from fith

30 and paued: there it lieth to ferment in the heat of the Sunne, whereby it floweth forth. Thence they take and put it in skinnes, which they hang vp in the wind to dry, where it becommeth A hundred & hard. They fold we for twentie Rials a Quintall, which is an hundred and three pound English: but three er a hunwe were after told, that they fold to others for twelie; which confidering the abundance and ea- dred and two sie making, may becredible. Their Date trees beare fruit twice a yeare; one haruest was in Iuly pound, fine whiles we were there. It is a principall part of their fustenance, pleasant in tast: and when they ounce whiles we were there. It is a principall part of their fustenance, pleasant in tast: and when they halfe. are through-ripe, are laid on a heap vpon a skin lying floping, whence distilleth a liquor, received Dates two harin earthen pots placed in the earth, and is their Date-wine, referried for drinke, wherewith they wellwill also be drunke. Those dates beeing thus drained, they take out their stones, and pack them Wine of Dates hard into a skinne, which will so keepe long. Another meanes to preserve them, is by cutting be-40 fore they are through ripe, and taking out their stone, to dry them: these are the best of all, and eate as if they were canded: whole they will not keepe. In harnest time in enery Valley where these trees grow, the Kinghath a Deputy which seeth all gathered, and brought to a certaine HarueRand place ( none daring to touch a Date vpon paine of death without order, or feuere punishment ) diuffion. where he divideth them in three equall parts; one for the King, one for the Arabi, and the third for the Caffars : which are after distributed severally, but not alike to each.

This Iland hath store of Ciuet cats, which the Caffars take in the Mountaines with traps, and Ciuit Cats. fell them for twelue pence a piece to fuch as will buy them. Flesh is deare, tenne Rials of eight a Cow, one Goat, or two sheepe for a Rial of eight; their cattell good and fast flesh , like English Cantell and beefe: their Goats large and good flesh, their sheep small, like our English sheepe, bearing course victuals.

50 Wooll: of Goats and Sheep they have great abundance. They make very good butter, but it is alway foft like Creame, at foure pence or fixe pence a pound, Goats milke at three pence a quart, flore of Hennes, but fiue for a Riall of eight, or twelve pence a piece. In the whole Iland are not about one or two Horses, very small of the Arabian breed, and some Camels. At Delisha they take much good fish, Lobsters and others. On the Strand groweth cotton Plants, but few: there groweth also amongst the stones a shrubby Plant, with thicke, round, greene leaves, as big as a thilling, with a fruit like Capers (of which it is a kind) called Efbac, caten in Sallets. Orenges Efbac akind of there are few and deare, exceeding fweet Bafil: and on the shoare many faire she have found, with careful cuttle bones, and peerle Oystershels, which the people affirme to drive thither: for there are none found, yet shels abundant.

60 They are beggers, buy what they can, beg what they may, yet give faire viage. Their best intertainement is a China dish of Coho, a blacke bitterish drinke, made of a berry like a Bay berry, Other notes brought from Mecca, Supped off hot, good for the head and stomacke. And thus much for his and remendiscourses of these places, to which I thought good to adde these notes taken out of his Journall. brances. November the twenty ninth, 1607. in thirty foure degrees, we law a monstrous overgrowne

Снар. 4.S.3.

A hugeWhale. Whale comming up close under our fterne, and spouting water in great quantitie; hatimg much traingrowne about his head which we judged to be Limpets, and other Shel-him. At his going downe he turned up his taile, which we deemed neere as broad as our after Deck, citimating him to be at the least one hundred tunnes in weight.

Barrenneffe A ftrange tree. Or their Churches and of this whole Hand, Sec ichn they were in Christians, which (as all other not of their Faith) tue Mahometans cal rude and brupray to thefe

In Sectiona at our first landing, the people having received before injurious dealings from the Portugals, (which, they faid, had carried some of them away) were all fielde from its for feare to the Mountaines. Their Towne which they had left is built of itone insules comer with Rafts and Palme-branches, with artificiall doores and woodden lockes. Notice the See like flands their Church enclosed with awall in manner of a Church-yard, within it a couple of Ctoffes and d carre. For an Altar, with Frankintence, Wood and Gumme. They faid (when we same to speech) that this was not Socotora but Abba del Curia, which wee after found falle, wee walned vp. woo fines. Io mile, not feeing fo much as a fprig of greene graffe, but many Date trees, and one other new rery. ftrange, about the height of a man, or little better, great at the roote, and lake and lake toward the top where it ended almost piked; the trunke smooth, not covered withhatke, casting forth in the top some branches of a Cubite long void of leanes, bringing forth Reddift flowers, which after change into a fruit first greene, in forme and bignesse not valide to the Date: within Which is contayned many small whitish kernels, bitter, as are also the branches, full of ratinous sintifh, the eafter france, Whether this be the Mirrhe I leave to better judgements, They also faw another Church with a Croile on the top of it. Therefore a Mixed code such as A substitute of August 1922

of the III. Hands of the control of # Occurents in India touching the English, Durch, Portugals, and the Mogols dealing with the English.

Surat. Hee neuer cals C. Hawkins, Lord Embiffader, bu: C. Hawkins. For he, Mafter Canming and Mafter Edwards had no fuch Commission, but only Letters from his Maiestie, and orders from the Company,

The danger which men of War occasion to their Countrimen, honest Merchants, especially amongit remore and Ethnike people, I adde not the their Religion

The eight and twentieth of August, 1608. Captaine Hamkins with the Merchants and certaine others landed at Sprat, where the Captaine was secured in a Cook, and carryed before the Damne. Wee had poore lodging alloted vs, the Portes logding the Customers who fearched the Customers who fearched the Custome house : whither the next morning came the Customers who searched 30 & tumbled our Trunkes to our great diflike, which had yet brought afhore only recollaries. We were inuited to Dinner to a Merchant where wee had great cheere ; but in the midit of our Banquet fowre fawce, for hee was the man that had fuftayned almost all the losse in a ship that Sir Edward Michelborne tooke. The Captaine also of that ship dined with ys. Which when it was there told vs, the Captaine answered that hee never heard of such a matter, and rather judged it done by Flemmings: but they faid, that they knew certainely that they were English, deploring their hard fortunes, and affirming that there were Theeues in all Countries : nor would they impute that fault to honeft Merchants. This speech somewhat remued vs. The day after, Mede

The fecond of October, wee imbarqued our goods and prouision, gaue Shek Abdelreheimes 40 Present, and got dispatch to depart : the Customers denying leave, till they had searched the ship whether the had discharged all her goods, to thip any new; but meeting with Frigats they fuppoling them Malabars, durit not adventure their own Riuer. Thele Frigats were Portugals, which defired one to come talke with them, and Master Bucke rashly doing it, they detay ned him, and after (I and Nicholas Villet being alhoare) Mafter Marlow and the rest beganne to flee; the Cockfon would have fought, which he would not permit, but running a ground through ignorance of the Channell, they were taken going on the landie Hand by Portugall treacherie, and the fault of some of themselves, nineteene with Master Bucke: but the Ginne put off the Pinnace , and notwithstaning the Portugall Bullets, rowed her to Sur at. Foure escaped by swimming and got that night to Surat, befides Nicholas Viflet and my felfe, neere twentie miles from the place. 50 Yet had we relifted, we wanted shot, and in number, & armour they very much exceeded vs. The fourth, the Captaine of the Frigats fent a reuiling Letter to the Gouernour of the Towne, caland Countrey. Portugall trealing vs Lutherans and Theeues, and faid we were Flemmings and not English; charging him (on chery and hocontinuance of their friendship) to fend aboord the Captaine with the rest of vs : which Abdelreheime not only denied, but in the Mogols name commanded him to render the goods and men.

Colee the Captaine of that thip aforefail inuited vs to Supper.

The fifth, came a Captaine of one of the Frigats which vsed peremptorie words, and before the Gouernour stood upon it that the King of Spaine was Lord of those Seas, and that they had in Commission from him to take all that came in those parts without his Passe.

The thirteenth, the Gouernour called all the chiefe Merchants of the Towne vpontheir conf cience to value our cloth (before carryed to his house) which they did at a farre under rate, the Gouernour affirming that hee must and would have it, the Captaine denying his content.

On the fixteenth, we wereforced to accept for some of our cloth in their hands, promise of a little more, and were permitted to carrie away the relt : causing vs to leave fiftie pieces, and fourteene Denonshire Kersies for the King , with nine and twentie other Kersies ; and fifteene clothes for Shik Ferred, Keeping alio the foure clothes which wee referred for Prefents for the King. Wee were otherwise molested by a contention betwixt Shek Ferred and Mocron Bowean (or Mocreb (an) about the Custome-house, that wee could not get our goods from thence. Wee heard that the Portugals fold our goods for halfe that they coft: Our men were

A fight betweene the Hollanders and Portugals.

The hitteenth of December, came Mo. Bowcan with a Issuite Padre Peniero; to this our Cap- Peniero the Istaine shewed kindnesse for hope of his men; to the other he gaue Presents: both dealt treacheto roully in requitall, the lefuite (as it was reported by Mo. Bowcan himselfe) offering a lewell manife, Danwhich he faid was worth two hundred thouland Rials to betray vs. This day came to vs R. nine and Carelesse an Englishman, who had long lived among ft the Portugals, from whom hee now fledde Preaching. for feare of punishment for carrying necessaries to the Dutch at Muselparan, desiring to bee en- K. Carclife had tertayned, which we did with much circumspection.

The feuen and twentieth, Mo. Boncan delired great abatements vpon our cloth, or else hee tugsle, would returne it, and (will wee nill wee) abated two thousand seven hundred and fiftie Ma- M. Bowcom mudies, before hee would give vs licence to fetch vp the rest of our goods to make sales. My injustice. felfe was very ill of the bloady Fluxe (whereof Matter Dorchefter dyed) of which that Englishmin Carelesse, (next under God) recoursed me. Hearned of him many matters, as namely of tugals at Mar the great spoile done the last yeere to the Portugals by the Hollanders, who lying before Malac- lasta. 20 ca with fixteene ships, inclosing the Towne with helpe of other Kings by Sea and Land; newes was carryed to the Vice-Roy, then before Achen accompanied with all the Gallants of India) hauing with him a very great Fleet of Ships, Gallies and Frigats, and foure thousand Souldiers, being commanded by the King to take Achen, and there to build a Castle and appoint an Alphandra; and thence to goe and spoile for and chastife the Moluccas for gining the Hollanders traffque, being minded to roote out the Holland name in those parts, for which purpose came two thousand Castilians from the Manilias.

Andrew Hirtado then gouerned within Malacca, and fent word of their prefent destresse, Andr. Hartado. vpon which the Vice-Roy weighed from Achen (which otherwise had beene spoyled) whereof the Dutch Generall advertised, got his men and Artillery a-boord, and went forth to meete

30 him; where after a long and bloudie fight, with much loffe on both fides, the Dutch departed, enforced to ftop the leakes of their Admirall, likely otherwise to perish. The Portugals let flip this opportunitie, and fell to merriments and bragges of their Victorie, not looking any more for the Hollanders, who having stopped their leakes at lor, new rigged and returned Port. defeated; vpon the Portugals, whom they found difordered and feating alhoare, where they finke and burned the whole Fleet, making a cruell execution: and had not the Vice-Roy before fent fixe shippes on some other seruice, they had beene all heere vtterly extinguished. After this fell such sicknesse in the City, that most of them dyed, amongst which the Vice-Roy was one : and shortly after the Gouernour of the Spaniards in the Moluccas, so that their strength was laid in the dust, and the Archbishoppe made and yet ' remayneth ' Arthetime

This last yeere the Malabares vexed the Portugals, and tooke or funke of them at times, is to be obserfixtie faile or more.

This yeere also was expected a Vice-Roy to come with a strong Fleet, to drive the Hollanders Iournall. out of India.

This Fleet confifted of nine shippes of Warre, and fixe for the Voyage : they were separated noy the Port. in the calme of Guinea, and neuer met together after. Two of them came to Mosimbique, disperied. where they were fired of the Hollanders, who also much distressed the Cattle, but could not take it : and the time of the yeere requiring their departure, they fet fayle for Goa, to the number of fifteene shippes and one Pinnaile, where they rode at the Barre, challenging the great Captaine Andrew Hurtado, who durit not visit them. Another of that Voyage having aduse that the Hollanders rode at the Barre, put to the Northward , where they prefently landed their money and goods and fet fire of their thippe, to faue the Dutch a labour: and laftly, the Souldiers fell together by the eares for the fliaring of the money. This Fleet departing from Goa failed alongft the Coaft of Malabar, spoyling and burning all they could meet with. There was report of leave given them by the Samorme, to build a Cafile at Chaul.

This moneth here was also newes of an Ormus ship taken by the Malabarres, and three Fri- Gran ship gats : and shortly after of a Fleet of twentie fine Frigots from Cochen, whereof that one were taken. taken and burnt by the Malabars, which the rest escaped, if miterable spoile be an escape : also 60 of fiftie Frigats and Galiots of the Malabars ippliing on their Coast.

In lanuary, came other newes of thirtie Frigats which put for Din richly laden, taken by the Malabars, beeing at this time Mafters of thefe Seas. They are good Souldiers, and carry in each Frigat one hundred Souldiers, and in their Galiots, two hundred.

The first of February, the Captaine departed with fittle Peons, and certaine Horsemen. Aued in all this

Iniuftce clo-

CHAP.4, S.3.

bout this time was great flirre touching the Queene Mothers finip, which was to be liden for Mecha: the Torugals then riding at the Barre with two and twentie Frigats, threatned to Carry her to Din : at length they fell to compounding, the Portugals demanding an hundred thoufand Mamudies for her Carss or Pade, and after twentie thousand, at laif taking one thousand Rialls and adde money, with divers Prefents, which the Mogolls were faine to gue them. Mo. Bowcan yant me faire words, but the Duell was in his heart, he minded nothing left: indeed then paiment of his debts, tecking alto to ded of fome, others imbefelled, firiking off by new accounts fewenteene thousand of one and fortie thousand. I thought he meant to thirt, if hee could, and pay nothing, fecretly departing the Towne, owing much to certaine Banians, who must get it when they can : at last I got his Cheet for some, though with great abatements, esteeming halfe 19 better fecured, then to endanger all.

Partuge's toke

prize all thips which faile without their

422

The fix and twentieth of March 1609, it was here reported that Malacca was belieged with thirtie ships of Holland, in succour of which the Vice-Roy assembled all there his Northerne Indian forces, appointing Andrew Hurtado General!, being the more cranke, by newes of a New Vice-Roy with fourteene faile to winter at Mofambique. Meane while a thip of Cambaya which had been at Quela, came for Goga, which the Poringails finding without Cartas, made prize of. The Cultomers at that time by new prices and reckonings, fought to make prize in great part of vs. I was also in the beginning of Aprill taken with a burning Feuer, which drew from me much blood, befides ten dayes faiting with a little Rice; and after my Four, milerable stitches tormented me. The next moneth I was visited against with a burning Feuer.

Heft-liets the the Ambar (others vie to leade out the article) and fo in others. A Cofeor Courfe is a mile and halfe Englifb.

The twelfth of May came newes that Melik, Amber, King of Decan, had befreged the Citie Mogestabler, of Aurelmagar (which had been the Metropolitan of that Kingdome, conquered by the Acab.m) with two and twenne thousand herie, and that after diners affaults, the Mozells made shew tadeliner up the Citie, upon condition that hee would withdraw his armie some source or fine * Cote from thence, that they might paffe with more affirmance with bagge and baggage: which being done, they juddenly iffued forth with all their forces upon the unprouded enemie, andmade a great flaughter, but feared hee would bee reuenged on those parts which were lesse ablettresist. The Canchanna gathered great forces, and demanded of Smat three hundred thousand M. towards the charge, fending also for the Gouernour, an expert Decare

The twentieth of June, came newes of the arrivall of five thir pes at Goa, and of the Vice-Andrew Harta- Royes Death, whereupon Andrew Hurtado was chosen Vice-Roy, being the only hay left of all those parts, and reported a braue fouldier. He presently gaue order for shipping to be built, intending after the creaking vp of winter to make a bolt or that't with the Hollanders, which were now reported to lye before Malacca with eighteene thips. The Peringall thips in the way had met with one of this Towne, and finding her without Carras, brought her with them as prize for Go.; where on the Barreshee was cast away; whereupon the Governour for Can-Channa, and the Cultomer for Mo. Bowcan leifed on Tappidus the owner, a Barian, for money owing to them, whereby also we loft his debe to vs, for which we may thanke the Portugall.

Megalls.

The twentieth of July, Sha Schnecommanded Can Channa and Manfengo, two great Commandersorhis, to image all the Kingdomes from hence to the South, even to Cape Comeri; for which a huge at me was allembling. In refittance of whom, three great Kings were combined, the King of Decan (whol-chiefe Citie is Genefro) the King of Vifapor, and the King of Galcounts (whole chiese Citie is Braganadar) who altogathered great forces, making head neare Bramport, vpon the Mogalle Prontiers, expecting the breaking vp of winter, both armies lying abroad in Tents.

Afcention loft.

In August I received flying newes of an English Pinnaste at Gandone, which departing thence, was againstorced thither by three Portugall Frigats: I supposed that it might belong to some of our shipping, which standing for Socatora, might not be able to fetch in, and so be forced to 50 The Hopewell, fall on this Coait; which proceed accordingly, it being the Afcenfions Pinnaile, wanting water, wood, and victuall, the Mailer, John Eimer, with fine men and two boyes. The Molter and tours of the Company came littler on the eight and twentieth, but I had no finall aloe with the Townshien of Surat, for bringing them into the Towne, they taking them from me, pretending we were but allowed Trade, indeed fearing the Portugalls, till I should fend to the Neb & foare Penngaldomi- courie o.l., fearing force: to which cuill, was adde to work of the Portugally comming into the River with flue Frigats, and carrying away the Pinnafle, weighing also the two Falcons, which they had call by the boord and yet a worle report came the fifth of Septemb of the calling away of the Afre fon, the company about feuentic persons being faued, which the next day came to Swat, but were forced by the Towne to Ive without among the trees and tombes, I being not 60 able to produce leave for the Generall himfelfe (notwithstanding divers letters of recommendation which hee brought from Mocha, besides letters from the King himselfe) into the Tower-Gotpellith Ie- Sich is their flauith awe of the Portugalls, two Isfuits threatning tire, faggot, and veter delicate tion, it they received any more English thither. That which I could doe, was to fend them 10 freshing, and carry them to the Tanke, where they were conceniently ledged, yet among a tombes, till the Gouernor appointed them a more convenient place at a small Aldea two Course of, and with much adoe got leave for Master River, Master Jordan and the Surgion, to come hither to provide necessaries for the rest. I had other trouble by the disorder and riot committed by fome of them, especially one Thomas Tucker, which in drinke had killed a Calle, (a ilaughter Sacrilegious more then murther in India) which made mee glad of their departure, fitteene staying hehind Cafe flaughficke, or vitwilling to goe for Agra: and fome returned againe.

The fixt of October, came Letters from Captaine Hank ns, importing his mariage with the devotion of the Baniacs. daughter of an Armenian: and others in the latter end of the next moneth, for my comming to This marine Agra. In December, we stood much in feare of Bader his comming upon Surat, he lying with- of Captaine to in two dayes journey, with fixe hundred horfe and many foote : for which cause the Governour Hamilton, some ceiled all men with the entertainment of fouldiers, fetting upon my head ten men. I went to fay was uras him, and told him that I had twentie English at his command, for which hee thanked mee, and by falle friends freed mee of further charge. During this time, the Benians were forced to labour to barricado and the confe all the fireets of the Citie : great watches were appointed at the gates, certaine peeces drawne of his diffice from the Caffle, and from Carode Garrison fiftie horse, which had not lufficed, had not the Go- spect with the uernour of Amadanar fent one thouland horfe, and two thouland foot to our faccour vpon newes otherwise himof which forces, Badur withdrew to his Holds. Two yeeres before our comming, had this man felfacked Cambava, whereof his Grand-facher had been King.

The eighteenth of lanuary, I departed out of Surat towards Agra, willing yet to leave fome ded of the an notice thereof before Heaue it. The Citie is of good quantitie, with many faire Merchants ho :- Canbigar Kings ies therein, flanding twentie miles within the land vp a faire Riuer. Some three miles from the mouth of the River (where on the South-fidelyeth a fmall low Hand over-flowed in time of parts. Raine) is the Barre, where thips trade and value, whereon at a fpring tide is three fathome wa- Deteription of ter. Ouer this, the Channell is faire to the Citie lide, able to beare vellels of fiftie tunnes laden. Surat. This River runneth to Bramport; and from thence, as some lay, to Musselpatan. As you come vp The Castie. the River, on the right hand flunds the Calle well walled, dirched, regionable great and faire, with a number of faire peeces, whereof some of exceeding greatnesse. It hath one gate to the Green-ward, with a draw-bridge and a fmall Port on the Ruer fide. The Captaine hath in command two hundred horse. Before this lyeth the Medon, which is a plessant greene, in the mid-30 dest whereof is a May-pole to hang a light on, and for other pastimes on great Festivalls. On this file, the Citie lyeth open to the Greene, but on all other parts is ditched and fenced with thicke hedges, having three gates, of which one leadeth to Varian, a small Village, where is the ford to passe over for Cambaya way. Neare this Village on the left hand, lieth a small Aldea on the Ri-

ners banke very pleasant, where stands a great Pagod, much reforted to by the Indians. Another Indian Idoll. Gate leadeth to Bramport, the third to Nonfary, a Towne ten cole off, where is made great flore of Calico, having a faire River comming to it. Some ten cole further lyeth Gondoree, and a little further Belfaca, the frontire Towne vpon Daman. Hard without Nonfary gate is a faire Tank A fire Tanke fixturene square, inclosed on all sides with stone steppes, three quarters of an English mile in com- or Pond. passe, with a small house in the middest. On the further side are divers faire tombes, with a good-

40 ly paued court pleasant to behold : behind which groweth a small groue of Manga trees, whither the Citizens goe forth to banquet. Some halfe cofe behind this place, is a great Tree much wor- Stocke worshipped by the Barians, where they affirme a Dew to keepe, and that it hath been oftentimes cut downe and stocked up by the rootes, at the Moores command, and yet hath spring up againe. Neare to the Caille is the Alphandica, where is a paire of staires for lading and valuding of goods: within are roomes for keeping goods till they be cleared, the custome being two and an halfe for goods, three for victualls, and two for money. Without this gate is the great Gondoree or Bazer. Right before this gate Hands a Tree with an Arbour, whereon the Folgers (which are Indian holy men) fit in state. Betwixt this and the Castle, on the entrance of the Greene, is the market for horse and cattell. A little lower on the right hand ouer the river, is a little pleasant Towne, 50 Ranele, inhabited by a people called Nattes, speaking another language, and for the most pare Nattes, nation

Sea-men: the houses are faire therein, with high steps to each mans doore, the streets narrow: they are very friendly to the English. Heere are many pleasant Gardens, which attract many to palle there their time; and on the trees are infinite number of those great Bats, which wee faw Great Bats at Saint Augustines, ranging by the clawes on the boughes, making a shrill noise. This fowle their nature. the people say, ingendreth in the eare; on each wing it hath a hooke, and giveth the yong

The Winter heere beginneth about the first of June, and dureth till the twentieth of Septem- Winter. ber, but not with continuall raines, as at Goa, but for fome fixe or feuen dayes every change and full, with much wind, thunder and raine. But at the breaking vp, commeth alway a cruell storme, 60 Which they call the Tuffon, tearefull even to men on land; which is not alike extreame every Tuffon. yeare, but in two or three at the most. Montons heere for the South, ferue in Aprill and Septem- Montons ber, and for Mocha in February and March: from the South, thips come hither in December, Iamary and February, and from Mocha about the fifth of September, after the raines : from Ormiss for the Coalt of India in November. But none may passe without the Portugalls Passe, for what, how much, and whither they please to give licence, erecting a Custome on the sea, with conflication of shippe and goods not shewing it, in the full quantitie, to the taker and exa-

Braur descen-

Nnn 2

IIII.

His Iourney to Agra: Observations by the way, and there; and of the Decan warres there.

THe second of January, I departed from Communian (a small village three Cose from

Parans good fouldiers, twentie two to Curka 12 c it is a great Village with a River

Mountaines runne to Bramport: on them are bred many wilde Elephants, 24. to Dayia, 8c. 2 20 great Towne. In the mid-way you path a itony troublefome River. This Towne bath a Caffle.

and is almost encompassed with a River, seated in a fertile soyle. 25.to Badar, 10 c. 2 filthy towne and full of theeues : heere is made much wine of a fweete fruit called Mona, but I found it not wholesome, except it be burnt. This Towne is the last of note in Pestophanes Land, who is a fmall King or Raiam, a Gentile, keeping on the top of inaccessible Mountaines, which beginnest Curka, and extend many Courles. He holdeth two faire Cities, Salere, and the other Myliere, where the Mamudees are coyned, each having two mightie Castles, which have way to them but for two men abreit, or for an Elephant at most to get vp; having also in the way eightie small Fortresses dispersed on the Mountaines to guard the way. Vpon the top of their Moun-

Acabar besieged him seuen yeeres, and in the end was forced to compound with him, giving him Narampore, Dayta, and Badur, with divers other Aideas, for the fate conducting of his Merchants along it this Plaine; fo that he now remaineth this Kings friend, fends Prefents yeerely.

leaves one of his fonnes at Brampert, for pledge of his fealtie. He is faid to have alway in readi-nesse foure thousand Mares of a strange breed and excellent : and one hundred Elephants. 26. 7 c.

to Nonderbar a Citie, short of which are many Tombes and houses of pleasure, with a Castle and a faire Tanke. Seuen and twentie to Linguil, 10 c. a beattly Towne, with theeuish inhabitants, and a dirtie caffle; a deepe fandie way neare the Towne. 28. 10 c. to Sindkerry, a great dirtie

Towne. In the way the Gouernour of Linguil (with others as honeft as himfelfe) would have our Carts without woulde. On the further fide of Sindkerry runneth a River of brackish water, with drinking whereof, I got the bloody fluxe, which accompanied me to Bramport.'29. 104. to Taulneere, a threuish way, the Towne faire, with a Castle and a River, in time of raine not pale fable without Boat. 20. 15 c. to Chupra, a great Towne. I refted two dayes by reason of raine, in which time came the Gouernour of Nonderbar with foure hundred horse, without whose company I could not have proceeded without danger, Can-Canna having been beaten, and retired to Bramport, after the loffe of the strong and rich Towne of Ioulnapore, whereupon the Decanes grew

The second of February, 6c. to Rand, a countrey Village. The vnseasonable thunder, wind and raine, with my difeale, almost made an end of me : which made vs make Mukom the third 50 and fourth, the fifth to Beaule 10c. a great towne, with a faire cattle, 6. ftayed by foule weather,

7-16 c. to Rauere, a great Towne, 8. 10 c. to Bramport, where I pitched my Tent in the Armenians yard, not being able for money to get an house, the Towne was so full of souldiers. Some

2 c. Short of this Cicie lyeth Badurpore, a faire City, and betwixt these two Cities, the Campe of

Can-Canna vnder Tents, 2 c. in length (having some fifteene thousand Horse, two hundred faire Elephants, an hundred peeces of Ordnance of all fizes) on the North fide. On the other fide, Decans Forces, with some ten thousand of his owne cost, all braue fouldiers, and som forty thousand fo intolent, that they made roades into this way, and ipoyled many paffengers.

borrowed some money of me, but seeing it proue powder and shor, gaue ouer, and wee drew on 40

taines is good pasture, and abundance of graine, fountaines running thence into the Plaines. The 30

Surat ) to Mutta 2 great Aldea 7 c. 21.8 c. to Carode, 2 great countrey Towne, by which on the North runneth Surat River. It hath a Caffle, with two hundred horfe

Comunica. Mutta. Carode.

on the South fide. In the way 7 c. is Beca, a Cafile with a great Tanke, and a pleasant Groue, 23. Curca 10 c. to Nacampore a great Towne vnder the Pettophaw. In this way on the right hand beginned a great ridge of mountaines, which come from Amadanar-wards, neare which Badar keepeth, Beca. Necampore. holding divers strong holds thereon, that the King with all his force cannot hurt him. These lere, Cities of Berropfles. pregnable.

Wilde Elephints. Dayta. Badur.

Breed of horfe rare. Nanderbar? Lingull. Sindkerts.

Taninecre.

Chupra.

Insinarore

Rand. Mukom, stay for refreshing. Be:wle.

The Tents and within twentie or thirtie courfe, lay Amberchapon, an Ab feed, and Generall of the King of hold it against him.

Description of

he had tent to the Can-Canna to yeeld up the Citie upon composition, deeming him not able to This Citie is very great, but beaftly, fituate in a low, vnholfome aire, a very fickly place, caufed especially by the bad water : On the North-east is the Castle on the Rivers bank (comming find Decances: in so much that the Citie of Bramport had certainly been lost, had not the Prince 60 Saltan Perus, and Raison Manifengo, come instantly downe with great forces. For atthis time anibrake both his teeth. The head is painted red in the fore-head; and many simple Indians worship it. Some two Cose forth of the Citie, is Can Cannas Garden called Lost bage; the whole way thereto being whier shadie trees very pleafant. Within it are diners faire walkes, with a stately small Tanke standing square betweene soure trees, all shaded and inclosed with a wall; at the entrance without, a faire Banketting house built aloft betweene foure trees. I refted to the twelfth, for recouery (which God fent) under my Tent. Two dayes after my to comming came newes of the facking of Rauere, by fitteene hundred Decan Horle with other Rivere faceed places neere thereto, we bleffing God for our fafe arrivall, the way now not paffable with one thouland Horle. I was here certified also by an Armenians Letters, of a great ouerthrow given to the Portugall Armada upon the Mallabar Coast, confilting of fiftie Frigats and two Gallies, Portugall loffe. which being dispersed with foule weather, were sudainly out of divers creekes assailed by the Malabars, which was attended with spoile, fire, taking the rest sleeing. On the twelfth I rode to visit the Prince, and on the thirteenth, gaue him a Present, found him courteous, promising what I defired. The Prince had with him twentie thouland Horse, and three hundred faire Elephants, and with him, Afaph Can with some three thousand, and Emersee Rastein late Kine of Candbar, with fome thousand old Souldiers. And during my abode in the Campe, came also Rais Marifengo with ten thousand Horse, all Resboots, and necre a thousand Elephants : so that all the 20 Plaines for a great diffance were coursed with Tents very brane to behold; with the Armie came divers great Boates for the transportation of forces over waters. The Prince removing 1 returned to Bramport: and on the fixe and twentieth, hee beeing aduanced a c. towards the E-nemie, I went to him to take my leave, where newes came of the overthrow of certaine of Ma-The first of March, the Gouernor of Bramport departed for Agra, and I with him 12c. to Barre a great Village, ftonie & fteep way, being the pallage ouer the great ridge of Mountaines Barres. which come from Amadauxmards. About some 4 c. of this way lyeth the strong and inuincible Castle of Haffere, seated on the top of a high Mountaine, large and strong, able to re- Haffere a strong ceiue (as is reported) fortie or fiftie thouland Horle. And on the top are many faire Tankes and and fitange 30 good patture grounds. It hath had in the dayes of Badse Shalate King thereof, some fixe hundred Fort.

CHAP.4. $4. Descriptions of divers parts of the great Mogols Countrey.

Peeces of Ordnance. The Acabar besieged it a long time, circling it on all sides, and at length tooke it by composition. For it is faid, that there bred such an innumerable fort of Emmets or other small Wormes in all the waters, that the people swelled and burst with drinking thereof: which mortalitie caused him to compound and deliuer it, being by meere humane force inuincible. The third, 11 c. to Camla, a small Aldea, stonie, troublesome way. The fourth, camle, to Magergom 4 c. a great Aldea, bad way. The fifth, 10 c. to Kergom a great Village, Magergom, to Magergom 4. agreement, Bother a small Village. The security 8c, to Taxa Kergom theepeway. The fixth, 13c to Berkul a small Village. The security North Berkul pore a small Towne. At 20, on this way, you passe a faire River called Nerwor which comes from Baroche: vpon the Banke is a prettie Towne and faire Castle, and vnder it the Fer-40 rie place. To passe ouer with Camels is a way a C. lower on the left hand, where is an ouerfall, and not about three foot in the passage, but neere a mile ouer. The eight, 5 c. to Man- Mandow the dow, 3c. whereof is vp a steepe stonie Mountaine , having way but for a Coach at most. Ruers of the

This ridge of Mountaines extendeth North-east and South-west. On the top at the edge of old Towns. the Mountaine standeth the gate or entrance of the Citie, ouer which is built a faire Fort and House of pleature; the walls extending all along the Mountaines side for many Coses. On the left hand at the entrance some two or three miles distant, on the toppe of a picked Mountaine standeth a strong Fort, and in other places dispersed some ten or twelve more. For 2 c. or better within this gate the City is ruined all faue only Tombes and Meskites, which remayne in great numbers to this day, with some tottered walls of great Houses. The olde City is from gate to gate 4 c. long North and South, but East and West ten or twelve Coses; and yet to the East-ward of all lyeth good pasture ground for many courses. Aloft on this Mountaine are fome fixteene faire Tankes here and there dispersed about the Citie. That which is now standing is very faire, but small in comparison of the former, with divers goodly buildings all of firme. The present ftone, and faire, high gates, that I suppose the like not to be in all Christendome. At the entrance described. on the South within the gate of the City now inhabited, as you passe along on the left hand, stands a goodly Meskite, and ouer against it a faire Palace, wherein are interred the bodies of foure Kings, with exceeding rich Tombes. By the fide thereof standeth a high Turret of one hundred and feuentie steps high, built round with Galleries and Windowes to euery roome, all exceeding for goodly Ports, Arches, Pillars; the walls also all interlayed with a greene slone much

60 beautifying. On the North-side where I came forth lyeth a piece of a foot and an halfe bore in the mouth, but the breech was in the ground. The gate is very strong with a sleepe defeent; and without this fixe other, all very strong, with great walled places for Courts of Guard betweene gate and gate. On this fide is also a small Port, but the way thereto is exceeding steepe. All alongit on the fide also runneth the wall, with flankers ever here and there among; and yet is the

from Surat) large and well fortified. By the Castles side in the Riverlyethan El-phant of stone, Asiscial Elfrom Mara/large and went retrieved.

CHAP.4. $.4.

an a mile of ascent.

The first of it was Canloin a Patan who builtihe Turburied in the Palace adioyning with three of his Succ. f-

This Citic was yeeresagoe. Lunebeira.

Dup lowe. Ouglue.

Cozofiia. O.ium.

euckra. Berroul. Delout.

Burrow. Sukefera. Syrange.

collebige. Que' res.

Gualite. Aftrong Ca.

hill fo strepe of itselfe, that it is not almost possible for a man to climbe up on all joureto any part of it. So that to mans judgement it is altogether inuincible; and yet was taken partly by force, partly by Treaton by Hamanne, this mans Grandfather, forcing Seic She Selim whose Ancestors had conquered it from the Indians some foure hundred yeeres agoe. This Sha Selim was a very powerfull King of Dely, and once forced Hamanne to five into Persia for ret, and lyeth ayde; from whence returning with Perfian forces, he put him agains to the worft; who yet held out against him all his life time, as also a long time of Ecabars Raigne, flying from one Mountaine to another. Without the wals of the City on this fide, the Suburbs entredace long, but all ruinate, faue certaine Tombes, Meskits and goodly Seraies, no man remayning in

The way exceeding stony and bad at 4c. end ly eth Luncheira, a small Saray where built by an in wee pitched the ninth. Betweene this and the ruines about 3 c. of the way, is a goodly Tanke inclosed with flone, and a banketting house in the middest: On the South whereof are faire houses of pleasure now ruinated, from whence goeth an arched bridge to the banketting

Some halfe a Cole beyond Luneheira on the right hand, are foure or five faire Tankes with a great Pagode, a very pleasant place. The tenth, to Dapalpore 14 c. good way, a small Towne. The eleventh, to Onglue a faire City twelve long Coles. This Countrey is called Mal. Ma, a fertile foile, abounding with Opium. Here the Cole or Course is two miles English. The twelrth, wee made Mutom. The thirteenth, to Conofcia, 11 c. good way, ahttle Vil- 20 lage. I enquired the price of Opium. They give the head three feratches, from whence iffice small teares, at the first white, which with the cold of the night turneth reddish, which they daily scrape, not without infinite trouble, the head beeing very small and yeelding little. The foorteenth , to Sunenarra 8 c. way much stony and theeuish , a people called Gracia, inhabiting the hils on the left hand, which often vngraciously entertayn Carauans, A hundred of them had done the like to a Caffila now, had not our comming prevented. It is a small Towne, short of which is a great Tanke full of wilde fowle. The infteenth, 10 c. to Pimpelgom a ragged Aldea. At 4 c. end of this way lyeth Sarampore, a great Towne with a Cattle on the Southwell fide, with a faire Towne-house. Here are made taire Turbanes and good linnen. Short of this Towne we met Cann John a great Minion of the Kings with ten thousand horse, many Ele- 10 phants, and Boats carryed on Carts, going for Bramport. On the way also we passed diversof Manifengos men, hee having in all some twenty thousand, so that it was deemed there were one hundred thousand Horse assembled.

The fixteenth, 7c. to Cuckra, a great Countrey Towne abounding with all forts of Graine, Victuall and Mewa Wire : at 4c. lyeth Berroul a great Aldea. The fewenteenth, 120, to Delout, a great Aldea , the way for the fine last Coses theeuish , helly, stony, the other pleasant Plaines. The eighteenth, 7c. to Burrow a small Towne, but plentifull of Victuall, except fielh which is fearfe all this way; the way dangerous. The nineteenth, 7c. to Sukefera a small ragged Towne. The twentieth, to Syrange 9c., a very great 40 Towne, where are many Betele Gardens. The one and twentieth and two and twentieth, wee make Muchon. The three and twentieth, to Cuchenary Saray 8 c. The foure and twentieth , to Sadura 50. The five and twentieth , to Collebage 70. The fixe and twentiech, 12 c. to Qualeres , a pretty small Towns encompassed with Tamarind and Manga Trees. The feuen and twentieth, to Cipry feuen of Swrat Coules a mile and an halfe way theeuith, flony, full of Trees, a Defart panage: a walled Towne, faire Houses couered with Slate. Two nights before some fixtie or federatie Theenes (mittaking for a late pailed Carauan) allayled in a darke night one hundred and fiftie Totan Souldiers, and fell into the pit they digged for others, ten being flaine and as many taken, the rest fled. The eight and twentieth, to Norman 12c. a Defart ralcally way full of Theenes. In the Woods fate diners Chuckees to pre- 50 uent robbing, but the Foxe is often made the Goode-heard. One pretty neat Meskite and inone place at the foot of the gate, a few poore Inhabitants wee faw in this dayes journey, and nineteene faire Saraies ruinated.

The Towns at the foot of the hill, liath a Castle on the top of a stony steep mountaine, with a narrow itone causey leading to the top some mile or better in ascent. In the way stand three gates very flrong, with places for Corps du guard. At the top of all is the foorth gate, which leads into the Cafile, where itends a guard, not permitting any firang r to enter without order from the King. The Towne within is faire and great, with a descent thereto; being situate in a Valley on the top of a Mountaine very strangely. As it is reported, this cliffe is in circle some 5.006 c, and walled round with Towers and Flankers here and there dispersed, without treasen inuincible. 60 This hath been the gate or border of the Kingdome of Mandow, and hath been beautifull, and flored with Ordnance, but now is much gone to ruine. The twenty ninth to Palacha 7 c. the thirtieth to Antro, a great Towne 12 c. the thirty one to Gualere 6 c. a pleasant Citie with a Calile. On the East inie is on the top of a steep piked hill, a ruinous building where divers great men haue been interred. On the West side is the Castle, which is a steep craggy cliffe of 6 c. compatie at least (diners say eleven)all inclosed with a strong wall. At the going up to the Castle adiopning to the Citie, is a faire Court enclosed with high walls, and thut in with firong gates, where keeps a ffrong guard, not permitting any to enter without publike order. From hence to the top, leads a flone narrow cawfey, walled on both fides; in the way are three gates to be paffed, all exceeding firong, with Courts of guard to each. At the top of all at the entrance of the last gate, standeth a mightie Elephant of flone very curioully wrought. This Gate is also exceeding stately to behold, with a goodly house adioyning, whose wals are all set with greene and blue stone, with diuers gilded Turrets on the top. This is the Governours lodging: where is place to keepe Nobles that offend (he is faid to have three fuch Noble-Prifons or Caffles, this, and Rantimore 40 c. to Rentimore to which are fent fuch Nobles as he intends to put to death, which commonly is some two moneths after their arrivall, the Gouernour then bringing them to the top of the wall, and giving them a dish of milke, which having dranke, he is call downe thence on the Rockes. The third is Rotas, Rotas, a Caille in the Kingdome of Bengala, whither are fent those Nobles which are condemned to perpetuall imprisonment) from whence very few returns agains. On the top of this Mountaine of Gualere, is very good ground, with three or foure faire Tankes, and many other faire buildings. On the Towne fide are many houses cut out of the maine Rocke, for habitation and fale of goods. On the North-west side, at the foot of the hill is a spacious meadow, inclosed with a stone wall. within which are divers gardens and places of pleafure, fit also to keepe horses in time of warts.

The first of Aprill 1610. to Mendaker 9 c. the second 10 c. to Doulpore. Within 2 c. of the Mendaker. Towne, you paffe a faire River called Cambers, as broad as the Thames, thort of which is a narrow Doubert. paffage, with hills on both fides, very dangerous. The Caffle is ftrong, ditched round, and hath toure walls and gates one within an other, all very ftrong, with fleep afcents to each, paued with ftone; the Citie is inhabited most-what with Gentiles. The Castle is three quarters of a mile through, and on the further fide hath like Gates to be paffed againe. The third to laion 9 c, the laion, fourth to Agrag c. In the afternoone, the Captaine carried me before the King. I here found at Agramy comming, Captaine Thomas Boys, with three French Souldiours, a Dutch Inginer, and a Venetian Merchant with his fonne, and a fernant, newly come by land out of Christendome.

This Castle was the Gate or frontier of the Kingdome of Dely, bordering on Mandow, and is necre

In May and part of June, the Towne was much vexed with fires night and day, flaming in one part or other, whereby many thousands of houses were consumed, besides Men, Women, Children, and Cattell, that we feared the judgement of Sodome and Gomorrha vpon the place. I was at Agra. long dangeroully ticke of a Feuer; and in Iune the heat fo exceeded, that we were halfe rofted aline. Inne the twenty eighth, arrived Padre Penero, an arch-knaue (a Ichuite I should fay) who Seehow brought Letters from the Vi. eroy, with many rich Presents, tending only to thwart our affaires. Merchants In this time, Mo. Bowean was complained of by the Captaine to the King, who commaunded speake the le-Abdel Haffan the chiele Vizier to doe iuftice; but birds of a feather will flie together, and Mo. fuites, when Bowcan partly mif-reckoned, partly turned vs ouer to a Bankrupt Bannian; lo that of thirty two thouland fine hundred one M. and an halfe due, he would pay but cleuen thou and ineither would the Merchants 40 he pay that prefent.

In July came newes of the ill fuccesse of the Kings forces in Decan, who beeing within some foure dayes fourney of And manager, hoping to raile the fiege thereof, were forced through famine and drought, to make their retrait for Eramport, whereupon the Citie, after much milerie loft othe Deindured, was loft. This armie confifted of one hundred thouland horse at the least, with infinite case. numbers of Cammels and Elephanes: fo that with the whole baggage, there could not bee leffe then fine or fixe hundredthouland perfons, infomuch that the waters were not luff cient for them; Perillofhuge a Musiocke of water being fold for a Rupia and yet not enough to be had, and all victualls at an exactline rate. For the Decan army full puyled the Countrey before them, and cut betwixt them and supplies for victualing them out of Guzerate and Bramport, daily making light skirmithes vpso on them, to their great diladuantage, that without retiring the whole army had been endangered.

At their returne to Bramport , there were not to bee found thirty thousand herse , with infinite number of Elephants, Cammels, and other Cattell dead. This Moneth also came newes of the facking of Potana, a great Citie in Parrop, and furprifing of the Caffle where the Kings Trea- Potana facked, fure lay, the Citizens flying without making relistance. But upon this Caualero, prefently came agreat Ombra adioyning, and tooke him in the Cafele. The Citizens returning, he fent twelve of the chiefe of them to the King, who caused them to be shauen, and in womens attire, to bee Punishment of carried on Asles through all the streets of Agra, and on the next day (as it is fail) cut off their Cowardize.

All this Moneth allo was much stirte with the King about Christianitie, hee affirming before Christianitie his Nobles, that it was the foundest faith, and that of Mahomet lies and fibles. He commanded feemed to bee also three Princes, his deceased brothers somes, to be instructed by the Jesuites, and Christian afficed by the apparell to be made for them, the whole City admiring. And yet at the fame time, Abdel Haf. Mogal. fins judgement was, that it was not justice to pay debts to Christians, in Mo. Bowcans cale, wherof agains we had reference from the King to him, perhaps on like ground, as some European's thinke it lawfull to make price of the goods and ships of Ethnikes, co nomine, therefore setting out men of warre, so to make the Christian Name, not as an ointment powred out, that the Virgin foules may be converted, and love Chrift, but as filthy matter running out of rotten hearts and poifoned lips, yea, with force and armes, to exocupate the Kingdome of Christ in those parts at least, let reformed Profesiors reforme this Man-of-warre-Profession against innocents, that the Name of God through them be not blashemed among the Gentiles. But to returne to this diffimulation Three Princes on (as fince it hath to the world appeared ) those three Princes were Christened folemnly, conducted to Church by all the Christians of the Citie, to the number of some fixtie horse, Captaine English colours Hawkins being in the head of them, with S. Georges colours carried before him, to the honour of the English Nation, letting them flie in the Court before Sha Selim himselfe. The eldest was na- 10 displayed bemed Don Philippo, the second Don Carlo, the third Don Henrico: and on the ninth of September. was christened another young Prince, the Acabars brothers fonnes fonne, by the name Don Da arte, the King giung daily charge to the Fathers for their inftruction, that they might become chustened.

Portugals afraid to come too

October the twelfth, we were certified by Letters of M. Jourdaine from Surat, that thirtie Frigats of the Portugals were cast away on the barre of Surat, hasting before the winter was broken up, to catch more English; many of the men escaped, and were glad to beg releefe at the Enelift doore.

Descriptions of Fetipore, Byana; the way thither; of the Nill or Indice, and of divers Mogoll affaires, Cities, and Castles.

Seray is a kind of publike Inn. Sec Stell and Afmere, a childgiuing Saint.

He first of Nouember, I was sent to buy Nill or Indico at Byana. I lodged that night at Menhapoore, a great Saras, 7° by which is a Garden, and Moholl or summer house of the Queene Mothers, very curiously contriued. The second at Cannowa, 116. at 40. end, is a Moholl of the Kings. And at every cose end from Agra, is erected a stone pillar for 130c. to Afmere , where lieth interred the body of a great Moorish Saint, called Hog- 10 hee Mondee, whereto the Acabar wanting children, made a foot-pilgrimage to beg for iffue, and caused a pillar at each course to be set vp; and a Moholl with lodgings for sixteene great women at every eighth course alongst, and after his returne obtained three sonnes.

Fetipore de-

Ruines.

At 7c. on this way, and 12c. from Agra, is seated the samous citie of Fetipere, built by the Acu-bar, and inclosed with a faire stone wall, which yet standeth fresh, having soure saire and strong Gates, it being some three English miles betwixt gate and gate. In the middest it is all ruinate, lying like a waffe defart, and very dangerous to paffe through in the night, the buildings lying waft without inhabitants; much of the ground beeing now converted to Gardens, and much fowed with Nill and other graine, that a man flanding there, would little thinke he were in the To the entrance of the gate from Agra, some course in length vpon a stony ascent, lie the 40

The Bazar.

ruines of the Suburbs; as also without the Southwest gate for two English miles in length, many faire buildings being fallen to the ground; and on the left hand are many faire enclosed Gardens, three miles alongst from the citie. At the entrance of the Northeast Gate, is a goodly Bazar (market place) of stone, halfe a mile long, being a spacious straight-paued street, with faire buildings on either file. Close within the gate is the Kings Saray, with large stone lodgings, but much ruined. At the head of this ffreet flands the Kingshoule and Moholl, with much curious building and on the further fide hereof, vpon an afcent, stands the goodlieft Meskite of the East. It hath Faire Meskic: fome twentie foure or thirty steps of ascent to the Gate, which is one of the highest and fairest(I suppose ) in the whole world: on the top are a number of clustering pinnacles, curiously disposed. 50 The top of this Gate may be plainely feene eight or tenne miles diffance. Within is a goodly spacious court, very curiously paued with free stone, about sixe times the largenesse of Londons Exchange, with faire large walkes alongst the side, more then twice as broad, and double the height of those about the Burse of London, the pillars vpholding them, beeing of one intire Rone: and round about are entrances into many goodly roomes, neatly contriued. Opposite to the Gate toward the further fide, stands a faire and sumptuous Tombe, artificially inlaied with mother of Pearle, and inclosed with a grating of stone curiously carued. Ouer head is rich pargetting and paynting. Herein lyeth the body of a great Kalender, at whose cost the whole Meskite was builded. Under the court yard is a goodly Tanke of excellent water; none other being to be had through the citie, but brackish and fretting, by drinking whereof was cansed such mortality, that 60

Badwater.

the Acubar before it was quite finished, lett it, and remooued his seat to Agra; so that this goodly Citie was fhort lived, in fifty or fixty yeares space beeing built and ruinate. It was at the first called Sykary, which fignifieth, feeking or hunting; but after the Acabar was returned from his Afmere Pilgrimage, and was father of this Sha Selim, hee named it Feti-pore, that is, a Towne of content, or place of Hearts defire obtained. The North North-well fide of Feijore interthe Citie, without the walles, is a goodly Lough for 2. or 3 c. in length, abounding with good freted. fifth and wilde fowle; all ouer which groweth the herbe which be areth the Hermodactyle, and Hermodactyles another bearing a fruit like a Goblet, called Camolachachery, both very cooling fruits. The nerbe described, which beareth the Hermodactyle, is a weed abounding in most Tankes neare Agra, spreading ouer all the water; the leafe I observed not, but the fruit is inclosed with a three cornered shell, of a hard woodie fabstance, having at each angle a sharpe picked pricking point, and is a little indented on both the flat fides like two posternes. The fruit being greene, is soft and tender, white and of a mealish taste, much eaten in India, being exceeding cold in my judgement : for alwayes 10 after it. I defired Aqua-vita. It is called by the people Singarra. The other beareth a fruit in maner of a Goblet, flat on the toppe, and of a loft greenish substance, within which a little eminent, stand fixe or eight small fruits like Akornes, divided from each other, and inclosed with a whitish filme, at the first of a rusettish greene, tasting like a Nut or Akorne; in the middest is a small greene sprigge naught to be eaten.

CHAP.4. S.5. The Kings Mobolls. Defeription of New or Indico.

Cannowa is a small countrey Towne, round about which is made very good Nill, by reason of Cannowa.

the fast nesse of the soile, and brackishnesse of the water; it maketh yearely some fine hundred M. Ouchen 2 c, diffant makes very good; befides which, no Towne but Byana it lelte, compares with this. I remained heere to the two and twentieth and three and twentieth, 6 c. to Candere, a candere. roguift dirtie Alden. At 2 c. on this way, is one of those Mobols, before mentioned. It is a fquare The Kings Mo-20 stone building: within the first gate is a small court, with a place for the King to keepe his Dar- bolls described. fany, and two or three other retiring roomes, but none of note. Within the second court is the Moholl, being a foure-fquare thing, about twice as bigge, or better, then the Exchange; having ateach corner a faire open Denoncan, and in the middest of each side another, which are to bee Denoncan is a fpread with rich carpets, and to fit in to paffe the time: And betwixt each corner and this Hall. middle-most, are two faire large chambers for his women (so that each Moholl receiveth fixteene) in feuerall lodgings, without doores to any of them, all keeping open house to the Kines. pleasure. Round by the side goeth a faire paued walke, some eight foot broad : and in the middest of all the court stands the Kings chamber, where he like a Cocke of the game may crow of ver all. At Candere I remained till the eight and twentieth, and returned to Bachuna, 4 c. backe

The twentieth of December, I want to Byana 8 c. a backe way therow the fields. This citie Byana. hathbeene great and faire, but is now ruinate, faue two Sarayes and a long Bazar, with a few firagling houses, many faire ones being fallen, and many others not inhabited (except by rooms Ruines. or theeues) to that many freets are quite defolate. On the North-west some three or foure cofe off, are the ruines of a Kings house, with many other faire buildings: the like ruines are to bee feene on the South-well fide, ouer against a Towne called Scanderbade, in like distance upon the height of the rocky mountaines: the way leading up is a narrow steepe stony cawfey, not to be paffed on horse-backe, some quarter of a mile the ascent : the entrance is thorow a small wicket, passing the lips of the mountaines in a narrow gutte. On the right hand, vpon the very edge, to shands a pleasant building, where are divers Tombes: from each side, the way may be made good with stones against millions of men. Palling a mile hence on a faire cawley, you come to the Kings house, sometimes faire, now ruinate, where a few poere Googers remaine in the ruines. Many Tombes and Monuments yet remaine. At the foote of the hill toward Scanderbade, is a A ftrong Fore been in ancient times the feate of a great Parme King, and hath had the walles extending on the cliffes 8 c: in length, in those places where is any possibilitie of getting up, the rockes other-where ouer-hanging: the fortifications on the other side I saw not. It hash beene a goodly city, inhabited now only with Googers, which are keepers of cattell, and makers of Butter and Cheefe. From hence notwithstanding all this strength, did the Acabar force Sha Selim the Tyrant, and then laid it waste, as he hath done Mandow, and most of the strong holds which he tooke. The countrey which affordeth that rich Nill which takes name of Byana, is not about twenty or thir-pleafant Valley inclosed with a wall, and therein many gardens of pleasure. This City hath

The herbe Nill, groweth in forme not much valike Ciues or Cich-peafe, having a small leafe Description of like that of Sena, but shorter and broader, and set on a very short foot-stalke, the branches hard Nill or Indico. and of a woodie substance like vnto broome. It vsually groweth not aboue a yard high, and with a stalke at the biggest (which is at the third yeare) not much exceeding a mans thumbe. The feed The growth is included in a small round codde about an inch long, refembling Fornigracum, faue that it is and varietie of more blunt at both ends, as if it had been cut off with a knife. It carryeth a small flower like that the Herbe. of Hearts-cafe: the feed is ripe in November, and then gathered. The herbe once fowne dureth three yeeres, being cut every yeere in August and September after the raines. That of one yeere is tender, and thereof is made notee, which is a weighty Reddish nill sinking in water, not come to his perfection : that of the second yeere is rich, and called Cyeree, very light and of a perfect Violet colour, swimming on the water: in the third yeere the herbe is declining, and this Nill is called Catteld, being a weightie blackish Nill, the worst of the three. This herbe being cut the moneth aforefaid, is cast into a long differne, where it is pressed downe with many stones, and then filled with water tilit be coursed, which to remaineth for certaine dayes, till the fubitance of the herbe be gone into the water. Then they let the water forth into another round cifferne. in the middelt of which is another small cofferne or center : this water being thus drawne forth they labour with great states, like batter or white starch, and then let it settle, scumming off the cleare water on the toppe : then labouring it afrech, and I it it fettle againe, drawing forth the cleare water, doing this oft, till nothing but a thicke fulfilance remaine; which they take foorth and foread on cloth, to dry in the Sunne; and beeing a little hardened, they take it in their hands, and making small balls, lay them on the fand to dry ( for any other thing would drinke vp the colour) this is the cause of the fandy foot. So if raine fall, it loofeth his colour and glosse, and is To know good called Aliad. Some deceitfully will take of the herbe of all three crops, and fleepe them altogether, hard to be differned, very knamithly. Fowre things are required in Nill: a pure graine, a via olet colour, his glosse in the Sunne, and that it be dry and light, so that swimming in the water.

Their making

or burning in the fire, it cast forth a pure light violet vapour, leaving a few ashes. About the fixt of lanuary, the King being on hunting, was affailed by a Lyon which hee had The Great Mo. Wounded with his Peece, with fisch fiercenelle, that had not a Captaine of his, a Resboot, Tutor golindang rol of the late baptized Princes interpoled himfelde, thrusting his arme into the Lions mouth as hee horfe, in recompence of that his valourous loyaltie.

His thankful-

Kinge manner

feruice.

Pondelaid wis

The laft of his race was Rafe

The Kings manner of hunting is this : about the beginning of Nouember, accompanied with many thousands, he goeth forth of his Castle of Agra, and hunteth some thirty or forty Course round about the Citie; fo continuing till the ende of March, when the heat drives him home againe. He causeth, with choise men, a certaine wood or desart place to bee incircled, so contra-cting themselves to a neerer compasse, till they meet againe; and whatsoever is taken in this inclofure, is called the Kings Sikar or game, whether men or beaths; and whofoeuer lets ought escape, without the Kings mercy, muit loofe his life. The beafts taken, if mans meat, are fold, and the money given to the poore: if men, they remaine the Kings flaves, which he yearely fends to Caball, to barter for horse and dogs; these beeing paper materable theguish people that line in woods and defarts, lit le differing from beafts, ramped against his Maieste, he had in all likelihood been destroyed. In this strugling, Sultan Co.

rom, Rainer Ranides, and others came in, and amongst them slew the Lyon, that Captaine having first received thirty two wounds: whom therfore the King tooke vp into his owne Palanke, with his owne hands all o wiped and bound up his wounds, and made him a Captaine of fine thousand 20

This Moneth, the King was prouiding more forces for Decan, notwithstanding the Decanes required his peace, offering to reftore what they had taken, Caun Afom was fent Generall, and with him twentie thouland horse, accompanied with Matrobet Cann another Great Captaine, together with infinite treature. With these forces went John Frenchman, and Charles Charke, en-This Ch. Charke terrained in his feruice for the warres.

I haue spoken with fince in I amuary the minth, I departed from Agra for Labor to recouer debts, and carried twelve carts la-Lordon after den with Nil in hope of a good price. The places I palled were Romotta twelue courtes, Badeg Swa diuers yeares 10. Acabarpore 12 c. formerly a great city, still famous for the Antiquities of Indian Gobins or Iourney to La. Saints. A little hort of this place, is a faire Denry inclosed with a stone wall, in which is a De- 40 voncan, and round about a little distance in vaults (or clossers) are to be seen many Process, which India 15 idolaare stone images of monitrous men feareful to behold, but adored by the Indians with slowers and * Dely, There offerings. Houdle 12 c.At the entrance of the Saray is a faire fountaine three Hories, and one hunare faid to ce dred fleps. Pulwooll 12c. Ferreedsbade 12c. Dely 10c. On the left hand is feene the carkalle of four: De'res old Dely, * called the nine calles, and fifthe two gates, now inhabited onely by Googers. A little withing or the flort is a stone bridge of cleven arches, over a branch of Gemini: from hence a broad way shaded eldeft bu le by with great trees, leading to the sepulchre of Hamaron this Kings Grandfather, in a large roome Rafe, who by spread with rich carpets, the Tombe it selfe couered with a pure white sheet, a rich Semiane ohis Ponde or uer head, and a front, certaine bookes on small treffels, by which stand his Sword, Tucke, and Magicians counfell tried shooes: at the entrance are other Tombes of his Wives and Daughters. Beyond this, under like 50 the earth by an shaded way you come to the Kings house and Moholl, now ruinous. The City is 2c. betweene Iron flake, Gate and Gate, begint with a strong wall, but much ruinate, as are many goodly houses: within which he pulled outbloody and about this Citie are the Tombes of twenty Potan Kings, all very faire and stately. The Kings with the blood of India are here to be crowned, or elfe they are held Viarpers. It is feated in a goodly plaine, enof a Snake, vironed with goodly pleafant Gardens and Monuments. Nalero is hence 14c. about 2 c. without Dely, is the remainder of an auncient Mole or hunting figue of good house, but by Sultan Berusa great Indian Monarch, with much curiofitie of stone-worke: with and about the rest, is to be feen a stone Pillar, which passing through three stories, is higher then all twenty foure foot, having at the top a Globe, and a halfe Moone outrit. This flone they lay, stands as much winder the earth, and is placed in the water, being all one entire stone, (some lay 60 Petber), who after fewer times taking a Po an King, was at laft by him taken and flaine. He began the Patan Kingdome, They came from the mountaines betw. on Cand the and Catull. The fecond built by Total Sha, a Potan King. The third little of note. The fourth by Shrift felice. whereisthe Tombe of Hamaren. " A flately Obeliske with Greefe or Hibren inferiptions, as some affirme, supposed to be let there Naferdengady a Potan King would have taken it up, and was probabited by multitude of Scorpions, and that it hath inferiptions.) In divers parts of India the like are to be feene, and of late was found buried in the ground about Fettpore a flone piller of an bundred cubits length, which the King commanded to bring to Agra, but was broken in the way, to his great griefe. It is re- The flore of markeable, that the Quiries of nain, specially neere Ferripore ( whence they are carryed farre ) India. are of tach nature, that they may be cleft like logges, and fawne like plancks to feele chambers. and court houses of a great length and breadth. From this Monument is faid to bee a way under ground to Dely Caftle. Now here remaine onely Googers, and there are there of Deere. We law in the way the raines of diners places, and neure the same, the raines of a wall 20: in circuit, being a Parke for game. Some part of this way was theeuith, and fome report being given out of the 10 Kings death, many Rog is with that falle alarme were abroad; we met the Folder of Dels with fome 2. thousand horse and foot in their pursuit, who burnt their Townes, & tooke the and theirs what better he could get : and the next day at breakfast we were like to be surprized by the cues. Genowre 14 c. Panneput 14 c. at the entry whereof was placed a Manora, with the heads of fome hundred theenes newly taken; their bodies for on flakes a mile in length. Carmall 14 c. the way theeuilh, where but for our peece language we had been effaulted. On the North-west extend Mountaines neere to Labor from hence, with from on the tops. Timiffar 14 c. here is a Cathe, a goodly Tanke, and by it Pageds, much reverenced by all the Gentiles throughout India. Pageds. Neere it also ore the Sal-armoniake pits. Shahador Goobade 100. Amballa 120. Holloma Saray Sal-armoniake 14 C. Sprinam 7 C, it hatha faire Tanke with a Summer-house in the middest, to which hads a Fits. 20 Bridge of fifteene from arches very pleafant. From hence is a fmall River out to the Kings Garden a corfe distant, with a cawfey of forty foot broad, planted with trees on both fides to it. The Garden is fowre square, each square a cose in length, or better, inclessed with a Bricke-will, the kingsgarrichly planted with all forts of fruits and flowers, rented yearely (as I was told) for rifty thou- it was made, fand Rupias: croffed with two maine walkes forty foot broad, and eight high, with v a crrem- an Dom. 1550. ning along it flone channells in the middel, and planted on both fides thicke with faire Cyprelles: one of these cawleys is also paued with peble curiously inter-wrought. At the croffing flands an eight fquare Mohol with eight chambers for women, in the midft thereof a faire I ank ouer thefe eight other roomes, with faire Galleries round about: on the top of all a faire Iounter; the whole building curiously wrought in stone, with faire painting, rich carning, and par-30 getting and on two fides two faire Tankes in the midfe of a faire frome chounter, planted round with Cypreffe trees: a little distant is another Mobel, but not fo curious.

From hence we passed to Dorapy 15 . Pulloceque Saray 13. Nicoder 12. Sultanpoore 11 . Fee tipere 7 c. a Saray built (if it were finished) by Sha Selim, in memorial of the overthrow ginen Sultan Cuffercom his eldelt fonne: the occasion whereof was this. Sha Seltan vpon fome difficult The coule of tooke armes in his fathers life time, and fled into Purrop, where he kept the flrong Caffle of A. the querrel lebaffe (but came in time three moneths before his fathers deceaffe) whereupon Acabar gaue the twist he Mo-Crowne to Sultan Cufferoom his fenne. But after Acabars death, Selim by his friends, feized on golland his elthe Calle and treature, and his forme fled for Labor, where hee gathered fome twelve thousand caft once.

horse all good souldiours and Mogols, possessing the Suburbs twelve dates, and proclaimed King in 40 the Kaffe, and his Father in the Caltle. In this place he game battell to Stree Forced, and diff ruered his three hundred horle, and put them to the fword: to the fecond of him came Meke Ale Cutwall (the King being fome 20 c behind) with fome two handred herfe, beating up the Kings dr. mmes, and guing a brane affault, thousing God faue Kmg Sel.m, upon which the Princes fauldiours far ted and fied, the Prince himfel'e fleeing only with fine horfe, and got 20 c beyond Isebor for Cabull, which if he had gotten, he would have put his father to further trouble: but becing to passe a River where hee gave Mohors of Gold, the Boate-man grew in distrust, and in the middelt of the Channell leapt ouer-board, and fwamme to the shorte, where hee gaue notice to the Governour of the Towne adiovning, who prefently with aftic horse came downe to the River, where the Boat was fell ficting, imbarqued himfelfe in any ther, and filleted. The Prince 50 him by the name of King, diffemblingly offering his aide, and inviting him to his heliful which taken. the Prince accepting, was looked up with his Company and guarded, till hee had fent the King word, who fent Girmaniaber to fetch him fettered on an Elephant. From hence his Father proceeded to Cabul, punishing such as he found tur lie in this result, carrying his sonne with him prifoner, and returning by this place where the battell was fought (as feme fay ) caused by eyeste be burned out with a glaffer others fay, one ly't lind-felded him with a naphin typing it beliefel and fealing it with his owne leale, which yet remaineth, and him affe primer in the Coffee f Agest followed been All along it on both fides the way from Cabul to Agra, a reasonal le distance, the King cassed in Sect. Race trees to be planted to made the way, in remembrance of this exploit, and called this place rem. Journall. pore, that is, bearts content, as ye before heard of the Citie, which for his both was named to by Two Feliperes 60 his Father Accular : these arany decay, must by the peoples toyle be supplied.

From hence to Hoghe Mehocde 10 c. Cancan a Saray 12 c. Labor 7 c. where I around February the course. On the twentie eighth, arrived here a Perfess Embaffalour allied to She Abafo, with Colles Teara great Carattin accompanying him. Hey them learned, that the way to Candibar was now for o two there, the warres being ended, which the Timbel Gelole had caused, who the former years had Bongs.

fied to the Persian with some ten thousand Turkes, and had obtained some laggere necre thereto. whereof he purpoing to make himselfe King, was ouerthrowne, and being sent sorby the Porfian, refuled to come, till deluded by promise of a mariage, he was got to the Court, and there lost his head. We heard also of the Persians taking from the Turke, the strong Castle of Curdes, after a yeeres fiege, with other Asian and European newes.

V I.

Description of Lahor, and of the Kings house there : how the Mogolls entred India : Of divers strong holds, strange Beasts, and Plants; find Supersti. tions : Of the Wayes, Theenes, Outlawes, Cities, Buildings, adioyned and intermixed: Princes not (ubiect: Agra and Echebars Sepulchre described.

Abor is one of the greatest Cities of the East, containing some 24 c. in circuit by the ditch which is now casting up about it, and by the Kings command, now to be inclosed with a strong wall. In the time of the Potans it was but a Village, Multan then flour rishing, till Hamann enlarged this. The Towne and Suburb is some 6 c. thorow. The castle or Towne is included with a strong bricke wall, having thereto twelve faire gates, nineby 20 land, and three openings to the River: the streets faire and well paved, the inhabitants most Bameans and handicrafts men; all white men of notelying in the Suburbs. The buildings are time and high, with bricke and much curiofitie of carued windowes and doores : most of the Gentiles doores of fixe or fruen steps alcent, and very troublesome to get vp, so built for more securitie. and that paffengers should not fee into their houses. The calife is feated on Rance, a goodly River which falleth into India, downe which go many Boats, of fixtie tunne or vpwards, for Tattain Sind, after the fall of the raine, being a journey of some fortic dayes along t by Mulian, Seepore, Buchur, Rauree, &c. This River commeth from the East, and runneth Westerly by the North side of the Citie : vp-on which within the Caffle is the Kings house, passing in at the middle gate to the River-ward, 30 Within the Citie on the left-hand, you enter thorow a ftrong gate; and a Musket shot further another smaller, into a faire great square court, with Atescanna for the Kings guard to watch in. On the left-hand, thorow another gate you enter into an inner court, where the King keepes his Darbar, and round about which court are Atescanna's also for great men to watch in. In the middest there stands a high pole to hang a light on. From hence you go vp to a faire stone Iounter or small court, in the middest whereof stands a faire Denoncan, with two or three other retiring rooms, wherein the King fits out all the first part of the night, commonly from eight to deuen. On the welles is the Kings Picture fitting croffe-legged on a chaire of State: on his righthand Sultan Peruefe, Sultan Caroone, and Sultan Timoret, his fonnes : next theie, Sha Morat, and Don Sha, two of his trothers (the three baptized before spoken, were sonnes of this later) 40 next them Emerfee Sheriff, eldest brother to Cann Afom (ot whom it is reported his estate tobe fuch, that of one hundred chiefe women which he kept, he never suffeed any of their clothing after their first wearing to be euer touched by any stranger, but caused them to bee buried in the ground there to rot : as also that he alway had in service five hundred Massalgees, in so much that when beuer he went from court to his house in Agra, which was at least a corse, no man removed foote with his torch, but flood all alongst to his house) next this man, Emerfee Rostene, late King The Pictures of Candhar, then Can Canna (Which tignifie h Prince of the Cannes) then Curing Caun, Raism the Princes or Manifengo, Caun Asom, Asoph Caun, Shee! Fereed, Kelish Caun, and Rainw Inggonat (who athis death had feuen of his friends that burned the mielues with him, befides one of his fifters, and a brothers childe.) On the left hand of the King stands Raiam Bowfing, who beats away flyes, then so Raism Ramdas, who holds his sword, Cleriff Coun, Caun Iohn, Iemana Lege or Mambet Caun, Mocrow Bowcan, Raiaw Bossow, Raiaw Ransing, Maio Kesso, and Lala Bersing. Note also that in this Galle. y, as you enter, on the right-hand of the King, ouer the doore is the Picture of our Sauiour ; opposite on this left-hand of the Virgin Mary. This Denozear is very pleasantly feated, ouer-looking the Rauce.

The houses.

The River

Pictures.

From hence passing thorow a small entrie to the West, you enter another small court, where is another open Chounter of Hone to fit in, covered with rich Semianes. From hence you enter into a small Gallery, at the end of which next the River, therow a small window, the King looks forth at his Derfance, to behold the fights of willie healts on the medow by the River. On the wall of this Gallery is drawne the Picture of the Acabar fitting in his State, and before him 60 Sha Selim his fonne, ftanding with a Hawke on his bill, and by him Sultan Cufferoom, Sultan Pernis, Sultan Coroome, his three fonnes: at the end is a small Denoncan, where the King yieth to sit; behind which is his lodging chamber, and before it all open into a pauce court, along it the right-The Moholls. hand whereof runneth a small Moholl of two stories, each containing eight faire ledgings for feuerall women, with Galleries and windowes looking to the River, and to the court. All the doores of these chambers are to bee fattened on the out-fide, and none within. In the Gallery where the King vieth to fit, are drawne ouer-head many P. ctures of Angels, with Pictures of Pictures of Banian Dews, or rather Diuels, intermixt in most very shape, with long hornes, staring eyes, Angels and the control of the property and deforming and deform thagge haire, great fangs, vgly pawes, long tailes, with fuch horrible difformity and deformity. that I wonder the poore women are not frighted there with. Within this court is a pleafant Dewoncan and lodgings, and the way to another Mohell for the King to palle, but none other.

Now to returne to the former court, where the Adees or Guard keepe their watch, there is allo on the left hand the ne w Derbar, beyond it another small court with Atescanna, and passing 10 thorow another gate, a faire large square Moholl, called the new Moholl, of that largenesse that Large Moholl it may lodge two hundred women in state all seuerall. Likewise returning to the great court, for two hunpalling right on, you enter another small paued court on the left hand, and into another Moholl, deed women. the stateliest of the three, contriued into fixteene seuerall great lodgings, each having faire lodgings, a Denoncan (or Hall) a small paned court, each her Tanke, and enjoying a little world of pleafure and state to her selfe; all seated very pleasantly vpon the River. Before the Moholl of Sultan Casserooms mother, is placed an high pole to hang a light on, as before the King, for that thee brought forth his first fonne and heire. In the midst stands a goodly Gallery for the King to fit in, with fuch vgly Pictures over-head as before. At the end are drawne many portraitures of the King in flate fitting amongst his women, one holding a flaske of wine, another a napkin, a Pistures of his 20 third prefenting the Peally, behind one punkawing, another holding his fword, another his bow, their offices,

Before this Gallery is a faire paued court, with stone gratings, and windowes along st the wa-and two or three arrowes, &c.

ters fide; at the end a faire marble Iounter, conuexed ouer-head, looking ouer the River, beneath it a Garden of pleasure; behind, the Kings lodgings very sumptuous, the walles and seelings all ouer-laid with pure gold; and round along it the ades, about a mans height, some three foote diftant are placed faire Venice Looking-glailes, three and three each aboue other : and below thefe alongst the walles, are drawne many pictures of this mans Ancestors, as of Acabar his Father, Hamowne his Grand-father, Babur his great Grand-father, who first fet foote into India, with Babur histconthirtie of his Nobles, all clad like Kalendars or Fookeers, which so came to Dely to Secanders Court querour : his 30 then raigning, where by his very countenance he was discouered, yet found mercy, and returned flatagems. vpon his oath not to attempt any thing during the faid Secanders raigne; which he performed: but after his death, he fent his sonne Hamanne vpon his Successor Abram, from whom he tooke the whole Kingdome. Yet at length rose vp a great Captaine of the Blood-Royall in Bengala, who fought a great battel with Hamanne neare Ganger, put him to flight, and so closely followed him, that he draue him forth of the Kingdome to the Perfian Shaw; of whom hee obtained new Forces (with whom came Byram, Caun Canna his father, for Generall) and reconquered all, liuing after that in security. This King dying, left Acabar very yong, appointed Byram Caun Protector, whom the Acabar, comming to yeares, cast off, and on a Roomery or Pilgrimage to Mec-ea, as is said, made away with him. His sonne Can Canna or Caun, of the Caunees, doth also much 40 curbe Sha Selim the King, with his friends and Allyes, being able to make better then an hundred thousand horse. Sha Selim affirmeth himselfe to be the ninth lawfully descended from the loynes of Tamerlane the Great, being the Great-grand-child of Babur, King of Cabull.

But to returne to the entrance of this Moholl, pa fing forth of that court thorow a strong gate, you enter into the City againe; this house and appurtenances of Mohols being at the least two English miles in circuit. On the East-side of the Castle hard without the wall, is the Garden of A Josh Caun, small, neat, with walkes (planted with Cypresse-trees) divers Tankes and Ioun- Afosh Caun his ters : as you enter, a faire Deuonean supported with stone pillars, with a faire Tanke in the midst, Garden and in the midit of that, on foure stone pillars, a Jounter for coolenesse. Beyond are other Galleries and walkes, divers lodgings for his women nearly contriued; and behind, a small Garden,

50 and Garden-house. In the midit of the Garden is a very stately Jounter with faire buildings ouer-head, and a Tanke in the center with large and goodly Galleries along it the foure fides thereof, surported with high stone pillars. Adioyning to this is a Garden of the Kings, in which are Apples, with very good Apples, but small, Toot whiteand red, Almonds, Peaches, Figges, Grapes, Quinces, fruits and Orenges, Limmons, Pomgranats, Roses, Stock-gellow-flowers, Marigolds, Wall-flowers, Ireos, flowers. Pinkes white and red, with divers forts of Indian Flowers.

On the West-side of the Castle is the Ferry to passe over to Cabul (and so to Tartary or Casear,) a very great road-way, and the further fide of the River is a goodly Countrey. Infinit numbers of Gardens full of rarity exceeds, two or 3 c. in length. Patting the Sugar Gonge is a faire Meskite ball by Shecke Fereed ; beyond it (without the Towne, in the way to the Gardens) is 60 a faire nonument for Don Sha his mother, one of the Acabar his wives, with whom it is faid Sha Selm and to do(her name was Immacque Kelle, or Pomgranate kernell) vpon notice of which the King casted her to be inclosed quicke within a wall in his Moholl, where shee dyed : and the Ning in to ken of his love, commands a sumptious Tombe to be built of stone in the midst of a foure-I quare Garden richly walled, with a gate, and divers roomes over it: the convexity of the were otherwise contriued, would have roome to entertaine a very good man, with his whole houshold. Without the Dely Dromare, where the Nolat or great Drum beats, is a goodly fireight ffreet, about three quarters of a mile long, all paved; at the end of which is the Bazar, by it the great Saray, besides which are divers others, both in the City and Suburbs, wherein divers neare lodgings are to be let, with doores, lockes and keyes to each. Hence to the North-east lyeth Ambere, the place of hospitality : from hence to the South-east the habitation of divers louing &c.

Tombe he hath willed to be wrought in workes of gold, with a large faire lounter with roomes

The fewenteenth of May, came news of the facking of Cabal by the Potan theeues, which kepe in the Mountains, being eleven thousand foot, and one thousand horse, the Governour thereof being at Gelalabade about other affaires, & the Garrilon fo weak, that they were able only to maintaine the Calile. In fix houres they spoiled the City and retired with great booty. The King for better awing of theferebels, hath placed twenty three Ombraes betwixt Labor and Cabul, and IQ yet all will not ferue, they often fallying from the mountains, robbing Carauans and ranfacking townes. The eighteenth of August, arrived a great Caravan from Persia, by whom we had newes from an Armenian, which had terued M. Boys, of the French Kings death, and of affaires betwire the Turk and Persian; he having destroyed the country about Tauris, raced the Citie, and filled vp the wells to hinder the Turks armie : the Merchants by this means (to our griefe) not daring to adventure beyond Candhar.

Of divers wayes in the Mogols Kingdome to and from Lahor and Agra, and to Cabull beyond cabul 60 c. runne mountaines, which lyeth places of note in them.

Relation of the TROM Labor to Cabul passing the Rauce at 10c. stands Googes Sersy: beyond which &c. way from Labor I Emenbade, a faire City: thence to Chumaguckur 12 c. a great towne: to Guzarat 14c, 2 20 faire Citie of great trade : at 7 c. of this way you passe the River Chantrom, neare a corse ouer : to Homaspore 12 c. to Loure Rotas 15 c. a Citie with a strong Castle on a Mountaine, the Frontier of the Potan kingdome to Hattea 15 c. to Puckow 4 c. to Raulepende 14 c. to Collapanne 1 5 c. to Haffanabdall 4 c. a pleasant Towne with a small River, and many faire Tanks, in which are many fifthes with gold rings in their notes hung by Acabar, the water fo cleare, that the way to Caf- you may fee a penny in the bottome : to Attock 15 c. a Citie with a strong Castle, by which Indu paffeth in great beautietto Pifhore 36 c. to Alleck Meshite 10 c. the way dangerous for rebels, which are able to make ten'or twelve thousand men : to Ducka 12 c. to Befonle 6 c. to Abareck 6 c. to Aleboga 9 c. by which runneth Com, a great River, which comes from Cabul: (way fill theeuish) to Gelalabade 4 c. to Loure-charebage 4 c. to Budde-charbag 6 c. to N.mla 8 c. to Gondo- 30 ma 4 c. to Surcrood 4 c. a Saray, with a small River which lookes red, and makes to have a good Stomack: to Zagdelee 8 c. to Abereel 8 c. to Dowaba 8 c. a great mountain in the way 4 c. alcent: to Butta Cauke 8c. to Camree 3c. to Cabul 3 . It is a great and faire Citie, the first seate of this Kings great Grand-father, with two Castles and many Sarayes. 20 c. beyond is Chare-cullow, 2 pleafant faire Citie, and 20 c. beyond Gorebond, a great Citie bordering vpon V/beke. 150 c. beyond Cabu! is Taul Caun, a Citie in Buddocha.

Carcar. China

From Cabulto Cascar, with the Carauan, is some two or three moneths journey. It is a great kingdome, and under the Tartar. A chiefe Citie of trade in his Territorie is Tar Chaun, whence comes much Silke, Purilane, Muske, and Rheubarb, with other Merchandize: all which come from China, the gate or entrance whereof is some two or three moneths journey from hence. 40 When they come to this entrance, they are forced to remaine under their Tents, and by license fend some ten or fifteene Merchants at once to doe their businesse, which being returned, they may fend as many more. But by no meanes can the whole Carauan enter at once. From Labor to Cassimere the way is as in Cabull way to Guzerat : from thence North, or somewhat Eisterly withall 16 c. to Bimbar; to loagek Hately 14 c. to Chingefa, Hately 10 c. to Petty which is a goodly plaine, from whence to Cassimer is 12 c. thorew a goodly Countrey. The City fome 150 c. in length, and 50 c. in breadth, abounding with fruits, graine, Saffron, faire and cold, subject to frosts and great snowes, neare to Cascar, but seperated with such mountaines, that there is no passage for Carauans : yet there commeth oft-times Musk, with Silke and other merchandize this way by men, and goods are faine to be triced up, and let downe often by engines and deuices. Vpon these mountaines keepes a small King called Tibbot, who of late sent one of white women. Heere are made the rich Pomberies which ferue all the Indians. This Countrey is 50

Pilg.L4.c.12. 5.: 10 c. to Conorna 12 c. thence 8 c. you afcend a mountaine called Haft Caunk Gate, on the top of from Labor to Cabaland China is strong, seated on the River Babas, the Countrie is a goodly Plaine, lying on the mountaines,

Impaffible

Another way from Agra to

Ga-chitto an impregnable

his daughters to Sha Selim to make affinitie. Nicholas Vphet made another way from Agra to Surat, by Fetipore, Scanderbade, Hindoine, Chening om, Mogell Saray, Nonnigong at the foot of a Mountaine, which with others adjoyning, are held by two Raisms of no note. Opposite to these on the left hand, beginne the mountaines of Marwa, which extend neare Amadauer. Vpon these mountaines stands an impregnable Castle, 60 called Gur Chitto, the cheefe feat of Rana, a very powerfull Raiaw, whom neither Potan, or the Acabar himselfe could ever subdue: which comes to palle by reason that all India hath been Gentiles, and this Prince hath bin, and still is effeemed in like reverence by them, as the Pope of Rome the Residues or by the Papills. And for this cause the Residues, which have been sent against him, frame some ex-India: Gentiles. cufes that they may not indamage much his Territories, which extend hence alongit Amadano way an hundred and fifty great corfes, and in breadth toward Ongen 2000. inclosed for the most part with inaccessible mountaines, and fortified well by art in places accessible. He is able to make twelue thousand good horse vpon any occasion, and holds many faire Townes and goodly Cities. Prironits are The way followeth by Gamgra, Charfoot (chiefe feat of Raian Manifengo his Prigonies) Lada - Lordfhips. ney, Moufalde, Banderamde.

Almere, feated upon the top of an inacceffible Mountaine of 3 c. ascent, being a Fort inuin- Description of cible: the Citie at the foot not great, inclosed with a stone wall, ditched round, the buildings Asserted the Morell reasonable faire; without the wals are many Antiquities, amongst which some a c. toward A- made it his graisa very faire Tanke. This place is only famous for the Sepulchre of Hoghes Mundes, a Saint Royallreft. much respected by the Mogols, to whom (as is faid before) the Acabar made a Romery on foot dence. 10 from Agra to obtayne a Sonne. Before you come to this Tombe, you passe three faire Courts, of which the first contayneth neere an acre of ground, paued all with blacke and white Marble. wherein are interred many of Mahomets curfed Kindred : on the left hand is a faire Tanke in- Effeeme of a closed with stone. The second Court is paued like the former, but richer, twice as bigge as the Mahumetan S Exchange in London; in the middest whereof hangs a curious Candlesticke with many lights. Hegbee Munds, Into the third you paffe by a Brazen gate curioufly wrought; it is the fairest of the three, especially, neere the doore of the Sepulchre, where the pauement is curioufly interlayed : the doore is large and inlayed with Mother of Pearle, & the pauement about the Tombe of interlaid Marble; the Sepulchre very curiously wrought in worke of Mother of Pearle, and Gold, with an Epitaph in the Persian Tongue. A little distant stands his seate in a darke obscure place, where he fat to 20 fore-tell of matters, and is much reverenced. On the East-side stand three other Courts, in each a faire Tanke; on the North and West stand divers faire houses, wherein keepe their Sides or Church-men. Note, that you may not enter any of these places but bare-foot. From hence the way lyeth to Cairo, Mearta (which hath a ftone Cafile with many faire Tur- Pagodes, rets, a faire Tanke, and three faire Pagodes richly wrought with inlayd Workes, adorned richly letoure aftrong with Iewels, and maintayned with rich Offerings) Pipera, louges gong Settrange, Canderupe, Ielowe, (this last is a Castle, seated on the height of asteepe Mountaine, 3 c. in ascent, by a faire stone cawfey, broad enough for two men to passea-breit. At the first Cose end is a gate and place of Armes: there the cawfey is inclosed with wals on both fides, and at the 2 cend is a double gate : at the 3 e. stands the Caitle where you must enter three severall gates, the first very 30 strongly plated with Iron, the second not so strong, with places ouer it to throw downe scalding Lead or Oyle : the third ftrongly plated with Pikes, flicking forth like harping Irons. Betwixt each of these gates are spacious Courts for Armes, and within the further gate is a faire Portcullis. Being entred on the right hand stands a faire Meskite, with divers Devoncans adioyning, both to doe Iustice, and to take the Aire. On the left hand stands the Gouernours house on the height of the hils ouer-looking all.

A flight-shot within the Castle is a faire Pagode built by the Founders of the Castle, Ancestors of Gidney Cases which were Indians. He turned Moore, and bereaued his elder Brother of this hold by this stratageme. He inuited him and his women to a Banket, which his brother requiting with like inuitation of him and his, in freed of women he fends choice Souldiers well Cunning treaappointed and close couered, two and two in a Dowle; who beeing entred after this manner, A Dowl or possest themselves of the Ports, and held it for the Great Mogoll, to whom it now appertay- Desile is a neth, being one of the strongest seated Forts in the world. Some halfe Cole within the gate is a Charge or goodly Tanke foure square, cut directly downe into the Rocke, affirmed to bee fiftie fathome Cage wherein deepe, of cleere and good water. A little turther is a fair? Plaine shaded with many goodly trees, they carry beyond which on the top of a little piqued Mountayne, is the Sepulchre of King Haffward, on mens tholwhile he lived a great Souldier, fince his death a great Saint, honoured in these paris. Here lye ders. also interred two sonnes of Gillould a Potan King of Dely: neere to which is a wall which diuides the Castle neere a Cole in circuit, (the whole Castle beeing about 8 . in compasse) nigh AhugeSnake, whereto is faid to keepe a huge Snake of five and twentie foot long, and as bigge as a man in the 30 waste, which the people will by no meanes hurt, holding it a good fortune; for it hurts no man, but keepes amongst the bushes and bryars of this piqued Mountaine. This Cattle is called the Gate or Frontire of Guzurate. From hence you come to Mudre, Billmall (the foundations of Billmall agrees whose ancient wall, are yet seene) they have beene 24 c. in circuit, many goodly Tankes also go- Cine. ing to ruine, by one of which is the Founders Sepulchre, whither the Indians relort to worthip: From hence to Amadabade, is a deepe fandy Defart Countrey. Rodespore in this way hath many Sepulchres, (I let passe it and the rest. )

Amadabade or Amadauar 182 goodly City, and scittate on a faire River, inclosed with strong Amadauar dewals and faire gates, with many beautifull Turrets. The Cafile is large and strong, where relideth tenbed. Coun Asom his Sonne, the Vice-Roy in these parts. The buildings comparable to any Citie in 6c Asia or Africa, the streets large and well paued, the Trade great (for almost every ten dayes goe from hence two hundred Coaches richly laden with Merchandise for Cambaya) the Merchants rich, the Artificers excellent for Carnings, Paintings, Inlayd Workes, imbroydery with Gold and Silver: at an houres warning it hath in readincife fixe thousand Horse; the gates perpetually Badur, whose ffrong guarded, none suffered without license to enter, nor to depart without Certificate. The Progenitors cause of this is Bader: Neighbour-hood in his strong hold, within 500, of this Citie to the East, were Kings of where Nature with some helps of Art and Industry hath fortified him against all the Mogolis Guarras.

Two other ft:nd out. Anescellent race of hories.

436

power; and whence fome foure yeeres fince (proclaiming Liberty and Lawes of good fellows thip) hee facked Cambaya with a fudden power, combined by hope of spoile, of one hundred thousan i men, which for fourteene dayes continued pessessors there and sharkers. There is also betwint this and Trage a certaine Rains on the Mountaines able to make feuenteene thousand Two other the work of the people called Collees or Quallees, keeping in a Defart Wildernesse which see cures him from Conquest; and on the right hand is another able to make tenne thousand Horse. holding in a Defart Plaine a Cattle impregnable; whose Land is subject to Gidney Cause government, but thefe feuen yeeres hee hath denyed him Tribute, and stands on his defence. This Raiaw is faid to have a Race of Hories not equalled in all the East, each valued at fifteene thoufand R. reported to bee much swifter then the Arabian, and able to continue with reasonable to speed a whole day without once drawing bette; of which he is faid to have one hundred Mares. From Geloure to this Citie is all a landy, woody Country, full of theeuish beaftly men, and of Mankind, Sauage Beafts, Lions, Tygres, &c. 30 c. about this City is made Nill called City of a Towne 4 c. from Amadanar, not to good as that of Biana.

Munkeyes.

Cambaya is hence 38 c. fandy, wooddie, the euish way ; it stands by the Sea, encompassed with a firong bricke wall, the houses high, and faire, the fireets paued in a direct Line with strong gates at the end of each, the Bazar large : about the Citie are such infinite numbers of Munkeyes, leaping from house to house, that they doe much mischiefe, and vityling the houses, are readie to braine men as they paffe in the fireets with the ftones that fall. On the South is a goodly Gar. den with a Natch-tower of an exceeding height; on the North are many faire Tankes. It is 20 the Mart of Guzurat, and so haunted by the Portugals, that you shall often finde two hundred Frigats at once riding there. It aboundeth with all fores of cloth and rich Drugges. The Bay is 8 c. over, dang rous to passe by reason of the great Bore which drownes many, and therefore called the sore. requires Guides skilfull f the tydes : in the neape tydes is leaft perill. Theeues alfo, when you are ouer the Channell are not a little dangerous, forcing you (if not the better prouided) to quit your goods, or in long backerings, betraying you to the tydes fury, which comes to fwift that ten to one you escape not. Foure Cofes beyond this Bay is loumbefer, now much ruined, and from thence eighteene to Boroche, a wondie, dangerous pallage, in which are many wilde Peacockes, Within 4 c. of Boroche is a great Mine of Agats. It is a faire Castle seated on a River twice as broad as the Thames, to the mouth of which is hence 12 c. Here are made the rich Baffatas, in 30 finenelle surpating Halland Cloth, for fiftie Rupias a Booke, which contayneth fourteene Eng-Lib yards, and are not three quarters i road. Hence to Varian 20 c. a goodly Countrey and fertile, full of Villages, abounding with wild

Date Trees, which generally are plentifull by the Sea-fide in most places, whence they draw all quor called Tarrie or Sure, as alfo from another wild Coco-tree called Tarrie, a chence is Surat.

fire. Diners in the way goe with great chaines on their legges, and with their handschained

In a Towne betweene Boroche and Amadinar, lyeth a Great Saint of the Moores called Polle-

Agats.

Tarrie or Taddie, a strong Wine. Pole Medemy a More bouler Medony much reforced to out of all places of India, for wealth, children, or what elfe they de-Saint. Prignmage to him. Mi: acles as Certaine places of note Connectors. Garges his beginning and grearneffe. Lacarones.

Indian-Affe-

together, and their mouthes locked up, (only opening them for food) and when they come before him in this manner of their humble deuotion, they afirme that prefently their chaines and 40 lockes flye open, not one returning in vaine; if themselves bee not vaine in their hopes, and in thefe and other like a lections, which maying on lying Varities, for sake their owne Indge. From Agra to Cannomer is 130 c. East, the Citie great and vinwalled, scated on an ascent, and the Cafile on the height well fortified : at the foot whereof anciently Garges tooke his course, in he Coun- but hath now broken a passage thorow the Valley some 4 c. distant, notwiti standing as yeta trey of Parrop. Small branch remay north there. Ganges is within his bounds three quarters of a mile bread, but with great raines iw Is out r his bankes, couring the whole Vale necre 10 %. It hath thirtie Riuers of note which fall into it, as doth he himfelfe into the Gulfe of Bengala. In it are innumerable Aligneers or Crocodiles, there called Murgurmach. It hath eighteene faire branches. Thence to Lacanimes is 20 C. a Towne of great traffique for Linnen and other Merchandize. To Onde 10 from thence are 50 %. a Civic of ancient note, and feate of a Potan King, new much ruined : the Caffle built four hundred yeeres agoe. Heere are also the raines of Ranichard Caffle and Houfes win h the Irdians acknowlede for the great God, faying, that he tooke fiesh youn him to fee the Tonafla of the World. In their ruines remayne certaine Bramenes, who record the names of all fisch Indians as wash themselves in the River running thereby; which cuftome they say, hat a continued four lackes of years (which is three hundred ninetic four thousand, and fine hundred yeares before the Worlds Creation.) Some two miles on the further fide of the River is a Cauc of his, with a narrow entrance, but fo fpacious and full of turnings within, that a man may well loofe himfelie there, if he take not better heed; where it is thought his after were buried. Hither refert many from all parts of India, which carry from hence in remembrance cer- 60 tai ie graines of Rice as blacke as Gun-powder, which they fay have beene referued ever fince. Out of the ruines of this Catile is yet much Gold tryed : here is great Trade, and fuch abundance of Indian Affe-horne, that they make hereof Bucklers, and divers forts of Drinking Cups. There are of these Hornes, all the Indians affirme, some rare of great price, no lewell comparable, some effeeming them the right Vincornes Horne.

From Oudee to Acabarpore 30 c. fome 30 c. from whence lyeth Bonarce the principall Mart of Bengala goods. From Acab, to Journpore 30c. lented on a small River, over which is a bridge with Houles like London Bridge, but nothing fo good. The Castle hath beenea leat of the Potan Kings, there yet remayning two faire Meskites, with many other ancient Monuments: the houfes are like those of Amadanar, the circuit some 8. or 10 c. Hence come excellent sweete Ovles, Carpets, Hangings embrodered with Silke, all forts of fine Linnen, &c.

Thus much from Agra to lowspore this way : from thence (returning that way to Agra) to Alabaffe is 110 c. 30 c. all which are thorow a continual Forrest. The Towne and Cattle The returne fland on the further fide of Garges pleasantly feated, called anciently Prage, and is held one of to the Wonders of the East. Divers Potan Kings have fought to build here a Castle, but none could to dishift to doe it, till Acabar layd the foundation and proceeded with the Worke, It stands on a Point or Agra. Angle having the River Gemins on the South-fide falling into Ganges. It hath beene fortie yeeres Asbaffe Callle a building, and is not yet finished, neither is like to bee in a long time. The Acabar for many Casile. veeres had attending this worke by report twentie thousand persons, and as yet there continue working thereon some fine thousand of all forts. It will be one of the most ramous buildings of the World. In this Castle Sha Selim kept when he rebelled against his Father. The outward wals are of an admirable height, of a red square stone, like Agra Castle, within which are two other wals nothing to high. You enter thorow two faire gates into a faire Court, in which stands a Piller of Hone fiftie Cubits aboue ground (to deeply placed within ground that no end can be 20 found) which by circumstances of the Indians, fremeth to have beene placed by Alexander or Alexanders fome other great Conquerour, who could not passe further for Ganges. Passing this Court you Piller. enter a leffe, beyond that a larger, where the King fits on high at his Derfane to behold Elephants and other Beafts to fight. Right under him within a Vault are many Pagodes, being Monuments of Baba Adam, and Mama Hanah, (as they call them) and of their Progenie, with Pictures of Noah and his Descent. The Indians Suppose that Man was heere created, or kept heere at least for many yeeres, affr- Mon. of Adam ming themselves to be of that Religion, whereof these Fathers were. To this place resort ma- and Euc, and of ny thousands from all parts to worship : but before they approch these Reliques, they wash their bodies in Ganger, shauing their heads and beards, thereby deeming themselues elensed from Holy-water. 30 all their former fins. Our of this Court is another tighly paued where the King keepes his Der-bar; beyond it another whence you enter into the Mobility large, divided into fixteene feuerall

Lodgings for fixteene great Women with their Slaves and Attendants : in the middeft of all, the Kings Lodgings of three Stories each contayning fixteene roomes, in all eight and fortie Lodgings, all wrought ouer-head with rich Pargetting and curious Painting in all kind of Colours. In the midft of the lowest storie is a curious Tanke.

In this Moball is a Tree which the Indians call the Tree of Life (beeing a wilde Indian figge Strange Tree; Tree) for that it could never bee destroyed by the Potan Kings and this mans Ancestors, which have fought to doe it by all meanes, stocking it vp and sifting the very earth vnder it to gather forth the sprigs, itstill springing againe, insomuch that this King lets it alone seeking to cherish 40 it. This Tree is of no small esteeme with the Indians. In the waters side within the Moholl are divers large Denoncans, where the King with his Women often paffe their times in beholding Gemini, paying his Tribute to Ganges. Betweene them and the waters fide at the foote of the wall is a pleasant Garden shaded with Cypresse Trees, and abounding with excellent fruits and flowres, having in the midft a faire Banquetting House, with privile staires to take Boate. From hence in October or November when the great Frost is past, you may passe by Boats for Bengala; but the passage is dangerous: 4c. downe are two Caltles opposite on the Bankes, Harrayle and Guffee, feated on two hils rayled by industry, built by the Potans.

From Alabaffe to Menepore is 20c. along the Ruer Ganges. At 2c. on this way is a fump- Menepore. tuous Tombe for this Kings first Wife, Mother to Sulian Cufferoon, and Sister to Raia Manifen-50 go, who vpon the newes of her Sonnes reuol: poyloned her felfe. From hence passing Ganges is a more direct way to lowpore.

To Chappergat is 12 c. here is one of the fairest Saraies in India , liker a goodly Castle then a chappereat. Inne to lodge itrangers, the lodgings very faire of stone with Lockes and Keyes able to lodge a Afaire Saray, thouland men: a man can fearle thoote from fide to fide with an Arrow; neere to it is a faire bridge both built by one man : the way perillous for Theeues. Itay is thence 12 c. anciently 1141, Face worthe leate of a Potan King but now ruined. On the height of the hill cut fleep downe, is feated a shipped. strong Cattle double walled, having at the entrance the figure of a mans face which the Indiane much worship powring abundance of Oyle vpon it. To Amedipore 15 42 c. 2 plentifull Countrey foll of good Sarares for Carauans. Much Indico called Cole of a groffe fort is made in this 60 way, which is spent in India, or transported for Samereand, Cafeat, and these parts, none pasfing into Christendome, except mixed with that of Biana. Hence to Agrais 7 c. passing Gemsm close to the Citie.

Lands lying Easterly from Lahor with their Lords. Longle the Rance Eaflerly, lycta the Land of Rain Boffow, whose chiefe feate is Tem-mery, Ton-mey. A 500, tro Luber. He a is mighty Prince now lubiect to the Mogol, a great Minion of Sha Selim.

Out of this, and the adioyning Regions, come most of the Indian Drugges, growing on the Mountaines, Spikenard, Turbith, Miras, Kebals, Gunlack, Turpentine, Costus, &c. This Rain confines the Kings Land Easterly. Bordering to him is another great Raisen, called Tulluck-Chand whose chiefe City is Negercoat, 80 c. from Labor, and as much from Syrinan, in which City is a famous Pagod, called Is or Durga, vnto which worlds of people refort out of all parts of India. Idolatrous pil. It is a small short Idoll of stone, cut in forme of a man; much is consumed in offerings to him, in which some also are reported to cut off a piece of their tongue, and throwing it at the Idols feet. haue found it whole the next day (able to lye I am afraid; to ferue the father of lyes and lyers, how ever) yea fome out of impious piety heere facrifice themselves, cutting their throats, and presently recourring: the holyer the man, the sooner for sooth he is healed, some (more grienous finners) remaining halfe a day in paine, before the Diuell will attend their cure. Hither they refort to crave children, to enquire of money hidden by their parents, or loft by themselves, which having made their offerings, by dreames in the night receive answere, not one departing discontented. They report this Pagan Deity to have beene a woman (if a holy Virgin may have that name) yea that shee still lines (the Dinell shee doth) but will not shew her selfe. Diners Moores also resort to this Peer. This Rain is powerfull, by his Mountaines situation secure, not once vouchfafing to visite Sha Selim.

On this Raian Easterly confineth another, called Deceampergas, a mightie Prince, his chiefe feat Calfery about an 150 c. from Agra, his Country held 500 c. long, North and South 300 c. broad, populous, able to raile vpon occasion fine hundred thousand foot, but few or no horse: the 20 Land plentifull in it selfe, but fends forth little. To the Eastward of this Raian, betwixt lemini and Ganges lyeth the Land of Raian Mania.

a mighty Prince and very rich, reported to be ferued, all in veffels of maffie gold : his Country 300 c. long, and one hundred and fifty broad, his chiefe feat Serenegar : the Mountaines called Dow Lager, vpon which in time of Winter falls fuch extreame Snowes, that the Inhabitants are forced to remooue into the Valleyes. Yet doe I not thinke that any of thele Lands extend Northerly aboue forty degrees, but the height of the Mountaines causeth this extremity of cold. This Raise Land extendeth within some 200c, of Agra, part within 50c, of Syrinan, very

On the further fide of Ganges lyeth a very mighty Prince, called Raism Rodoron, holding a 30 mountainous Countrey, his chiefe feat Camon; his territories extend 400 c. long, and not much leile in breadth, abounding with graine, haue many goodly Cities: thence commeth much Muske, and heere is the great breed of a small kind of Horle, called Gunts, a true travelling scalecliffe Gants, arace of beaft. This Prince is puissant in foot, but hath few Horse or Elephants, the mountaines not requiring the one, and the cold excluding the other : his Lands thought to reach neare China. harfe to climbe hil'es. To the South of this Raia, thwart the streames of Ganges, is seated another, Raia Mugg, very powerfull in horse, foote, and Elephants. In his Land is the old rocke of naturall Dia-Rocke of Diamonds, which yeelds him no small benefit. His Lands extend East, somewhat South 700 c. from Agra. Beneath himamong it the streames of Ganges, keepeth a Potan Prince of the Dely-Kings race, whom the King cannot subdue, by reason of the streames and Ilands of Ganges. He con-40 fineth upon Purroy, and makes often inroades upon the Kings lands, enforcing Sha Selim to maintaine a frontire army. Hence to the mouth of Ganges, all is the Kings land : only in the mouth, the Portugall Out-lawes hold a small Fort, and doe much milchiefe, living in no forme of sub-Port-outlawes. iection to God or man.

Extremitie of

On the further fide of Ganges, is the mightie King of Arracan, enioying a large territory, and infinite numbers of small Barkes. Eastward from him is the Kingdome of Siam; behind it Ona and langoma. Betweene Tanasfar and Arracan is the Kingdome of Pegu; the Land nowlyeth waite. To the South is the Kingdome of Queda, Malacca, &c. On the Sea-coast of Beagala, this King hath two chiefe Ports, Ongolee (tyrannized by the Portugali) and Pipilee, pailing which, and the Land of Orixa, you enter into the Lands of Goloconda, on whom Sha Selim ma- 10 keth warres, and hath forcibly taken much of his Land. His chiefe Pert is Masulipatan, and his Royall feat Braganadar and Goloconda, that late builded. Alongst the sea side toward the Cape, is the mightie King of Bezeneger, under whom the Portugals hold Saint Thome and Negapatan, but are not suffered to build a Castle. But I let passe these neighbouring Indies, and returne to Agra, Agra hath not been in fame aboue fiftie yeeres, being before Acabars time a Village, who re-

Description of moued (as you have heard) from Fetipore for want of good water. It is spacious, large, populous beyond measure, that you can hardly passe in the streets, which are for the most part dirty and narrow, faue only the great Bazer and fome few others, which are large and faire. The Citie lyeth in manner of a halfe-moone, bellying to the land-ward fome 5 c. in length, and as much by the Rivers fide. vpon the bankes, whereof are many goodly houses of the Nobility, pleufantly ouer-looking Gemini, which runneth with a swift current from the North to the South, somewhat Easterly into Ganges. Vpon the banke of this River stands the Castle, one of the fairest and admirablest buildings of the East, some three or foure miles in compasse, inclosed with a faire and strong wall of squared stone; about which is cast a faire ditch, ouer it draw-bridges. The walles are built with bulwarkes fomewhat defensible, regalled with a counter-scarfe or front without, some fifteene yards broad. Within this are two other strong walls and gates. To the Castle are foure gates, one to the North, by which you passe to a Rampire with great peeces, another West to the Bazar, called the Cichery gate, within which, ouer against the great gate, is the Seats of Id-Caff his feat of Chiefe-Luftice in matters of law, and by it two or three murtherers very great face. (one three foot in the bore, and fifteene long) of call braffe. Ouer-against this feat is the Cicher, or Court of Rolls, where the Kings Vifeer fits every morning fome three houres, by whose hands raile all matters of Rents, Grants, Lands, Firmans, Debts, &c. Beyond thefe two gates you palle a fecond gate, ouer which are two Raises in stone , who "Itis said that 10 were flaine in the Kings Derbar before the Kings eyes, for being ouer-bold in speech, they felling. they were two Brothers Referribles brauely, in remembrance of which they are heere placed. Passing this gate, you enter before successions. into a faire freete, with houses and munition all along to on both fides. At the end of this street to a Prince being a quarter of a mile, you come to the third gate, which leads to the Kings Derbar, alwayes their Nephew, chained, all men, but the King and his children, there alighting. This gate is to the South called whom the Acabar Dromage, close within which is the Whores child, many hundreds of which attend king demannthere day and night, according as their feuerall turnes come every feverth day, that they may bee They refused. grady when the King or his women shall please to call any of them to sing or dance in his Mo- andwere com-holl, he giving to every one of them stipends according to their viworthy worth.

The fourth Gate is to the River called the Derfane leading into a faire Court extending alongst drew on the Officer a flow the River, in which the King lookes forth every morning at Sun-rifing, which liee fabrices, and weles, and at weles, and at then his Nobles refort to their Teffillam. Right vinder the place where he lookes out, is a kind of left by multiscaffold whereon his Nobles stand, but the Addees with others awayt below in the Court. Here sudes oppresalso every moone he looketh forth to behold Tama'han, or aghting of Elephants, Lyons, Buffles, fing were flain, allo enery noone he looketh forth to behold I ama nan, or nighting or Elephanics, Lyons, Luciues, and here have killing of Deare with Leopards; which is a custome on enery day of the weeke, Sanday excepted, Elephanis of on which is no fighting; but Tuesday on the contrary is a day of blood, both of fighting beasts, stone, and and infliced men, the King judging and feeing execution. To returne to the third Gate, with- themselves fiand utilized men, the sing susging and useing executions.

If a susging and use of the susging and susging analysis and susging and susging and susging and susging and susgin further you enter within a rayle into a more inward Court, with in which none but the Kings ding. Some fay 30 Adders, and men of fort areadmitted, vnder paine of fwacking by the Porters cudgells, which they are there lay on load without respect of persons.

lay on load without relipect of persons.

Being entred, you approach the Kings Derbur or Seat, before which is also a small Court in

Being entred, you approach the Kings Derbur or Seat, before which is also a small Court in

Build of wo
Being entred, you approach the Kings Derbur or Seat, before which is also for the most of which

Build of wo
B in a Gallery, the King lits in his chaire of State, accompanied with his Children and chiefe Vizier (who goeth vp by a short ladder forth of the Court) no other without calling daring to goe daily by success vp to him, faue onely two Punkaw's to gather wind. And right before him below on a scatfold so is a third, who with a horse taile makes hauocke of poore flies. On the right hand of the King, on Teffillam is a the wall behind him, is the picture of our Saujour; on the left, of the Virgin. Within these railes miliation. nonevnder the degree of foure hundred horseare permitted to enter. On the further side of this The Kings Derto Court of presence, are hanged golden bels, that if any be oppressed and can get no instice by the bar. Kings Officers, by ringing these bells when the King sits, he is called, and the matter discussed before the King. But let them be fure their cause be good, least he be punished for presumption to trouble the King. Here every day betweene three and foure a clocke, the King comes forth ( and many thousands resort to doe their duties, each taking place according to his degree) where hee remaines hearing of matters, receiving of newes by letters read by his Vizier, graunting of fuites, Of his Ele-&c. till shutting in of the Euening, the drumme meane while beating, and Instruments playing phanes yearly from a high Gallery on the next building opposite: his Elephants and Horses pussing by in braue presenting, of fashion, doing their Tessillam, and being perused by Officers to see rithey prosper. In the Castle in this Castle in the Castle in this Castle in the Castle in this Castle in the Cas are two high turrets, ouer-laid with pure massie gold, which may be seen from farre, one ouer his &c. see Capt. 10 Mohol, the other over his Treasury. After his going in from the Derbar in the Evening, some Hamkins fortwo houres after he comes out againe, fitting forth in a small more inward Court, behind the o- mer relations. ther, close to his Moholl, into which none but the Grandes, and they also with tickets to be re- Of other newed with enery Moone, are permitted to enter, where he drinkes by number and measure, which followes fometimes one and thirtie, and running ouer, mixing also among, seuere indicatures. From this in Sirt Rees Court is his priny passage into a curious Garden, and to his Barge, by which he often passeth the Iournall. River to an other Garden opposite. It is remarkeable, that both in Court, and here in these " A written Gardens, no Courtiers or Gardeners are tied to attendance, but by their feuenth dayes turne.

ardens, no Courtiers or Gardeners are tied to attendance, but by their leventh dayes turne.

Ed, A difference
Some adde, * that the Citie hath no walls, but a ditch round about, not broad, and dry alforade of Agra, and the oyning to the ditch without the Citie are very large suburbs. The City and suburbs are one way four princial 60 feuen mile in length, three in breadth. The Noble mens houses and Merchants built with bricke water to it. I and itone, flat roofed, the common fort of mudde walls, couered with thatch, which cause often known to and terrible fires. The Citie hath fixe Gates, the adioyning River Gemini being broader then the exceptible Thames at London, on which are many Boats, some of one hundred Tunnes, but these cannot re- Nic Tibks.

turne against the streame. Most of the Noble mens houses are by the Rivers side. From Jerato Labor fixe lundred miles, the way is fet on both fides with Mulbery-trees.

440

Description of King Acabars Sepulchre is 3 c. distant from Agra in the way to Labor, nothing neere finished Acabari Tomb. as yet, after tenne yeares worke. It is placed in the midft of a faire and large Garden, inclosed with bricke walls, neere two miles in circuit; is to haue foure Gates (but one of which is yet in hand) each, if answerable to this foundation, able to receive a great Prince with a reasonable traine ) along it the way fide is a spacious Moholl for his fathers women (as is faid) to remayne and end their dayes in deploring their deceased Lord, each enjoying the lands they before had in the Kings time, by the pay or rents of fine thousand horse the principall, so that this should be to them a perpetuall Numery, neuer to marry againe.

In the Center of this Garden stands the Tombe foure square, about three quarters of a mile in 10 compalle. The first inclosure is with a curious rayle, to which you ascend some fixe steps into a fmall fquare Garden quartered in curious Tankes, planted with variety of fweets: adioyning to which is the Tombe, rounded with this gardenet, being also foure square, all of hewne stone, with faire spacious Galleries on each si le, having at each corner a small beautifull Turret, arched ouer head, and couered with various Marble. Betwixt corner and corner are foure other Turrets at like distance. Here within a faire round coffin of Gold, lieth the body of this Monarch, who fometimes thought the World too little for him. This Tombe is much worshipped both by the Moores and Gentiles, holding him for a great Saint. Some tenne or twelve foot higher, youafcend by flaires to another Gallery, (like, but narrower, to the former, as are also the rest that follow) containing onely three of those Turrets between corner and corner. Here in the midft is 20 his Wardrobe for a memoriall. The third flory hath but two of those middle Turrets on a side: the fourth one: the fifth hath only the corner Turret, and a small square Gallery. The Tombe was not finished at my departure, but lay in manner of a coffin, couered with a white sheet, interwrought with Gold flowers. By his head stands his Sword and Target, and on a small pillow his Turbant, and thereby two or three faire gilded bookes. At his feet stand his shooes, and a rich Bason and Ewre. Every one approaching neere makes his reverence, and puts off his shooes, bringing in his hand some sweete smelling flowers to bestrew the Carpets, or to adorne the Tombe.

At my last fight thereof, there was onely ouer head a rich Tent, with a Semiane ouer the Tombe. But it is to be inarched ouer with the most curious white and speckled Marble, and to be feeled all within, with pure fleet-Gold richly inwrought. Thefe foure last Turrets also inclo- 30 fing the Sepulchre, are of most rich curious Marble, & the ground underfoot paued with the like. There are in continuall worke about this and other buildings about it, the Moholland Gate, not fo few as three thousand. The itone is brought from a rich Quarrey neere Feipore, which (wee have faid ) may be cut in length and forme, as Timber with lawes, and Plankes and feelings are made thereof.

CHAP. V.

The ninth Voyage of the Indian Companie to the East Indies, in the lames, whereof was Captaine M. EDMVND MARLOWE of Briftoll, and the Master IOHN DAV.Y, which wrote this Iournall.

He tenth of February, 1611. we departed from the Downes vpon our Voyage. The thirteenth at night we anchored within the He of Wight, where we hap one and twentieth of the fame Moneth, and then fet faile and turned out at S. He lens point. The fame day at noone we had Dunnofe North from vs three leques. thirteenth at night we anchored within the Ile of Wight, where we stayed till the off, the Dragon before vs, and the Hosiander and the Salemon put in the Needles. 50

Aprill 11.1612.

The eleventh day of Aprill, 1612. by observation wee were vnder the Equi-Theyeroffethe noctiall line: and in longitude from the Meridian of the Lizard, fixe degrees twenty minutes West. This night the variation was fine degrees thirty seuen minutes from North to the East. The twenty feuenth, the variation of the Needle was foureteene degrees feuen minutes. This day at noone we were in latitude by observation, nineteene degrees fortie minutes : the longitude from the meridian of the Lizard, eleuen degrees twenty foure minutes West. These twenty foure houres we failed two leagues South by East. Here we saw an Iland South-east from vs fourteene leagues. This Iland I faw when I was with Sir Edward Michelborne. This Iland is like Corne. The latitude is twenty degrees thirty minutes: the longitude eleuen degrees thirty minutes West 60 from the Lizard. The variation of the Needle foureteene degrees thirty minutes. This Iland rifeth ragged: vpon the Easter end standeth a little pike, but the Hand is round like Corns. East North-east from this Iland is another Iland or two in fight, feuen or eight leagues off.

This feemeth

English Voyages to the East-Indies. CHAP. 5.

The feuen and twentieth of June, at nine of the clocke at night, wee law the Land of Saint Laurence, in latitude by judgement foure and twentie degrees eight minures, and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope, fine and twentie degrees no minutes. The variation was bifteene degrees, and ten minutes.

The eight and twentieth, in the morning the variation of the needle was fifteene degrees, no minutes, in four eleagues off the shoare, betweene the headland of the Bay, and the Ilands before the Bay, is no ground in feuentie or eightie fathomes.

This night were anchored in the Bay of Saint Angustine, in fine fathomes by the South-land. They anchor This night were anchored in the pay or saint canguages, in the factionines by the South Later in the Bay of the This day were weighted and came in by the River with the shippe. The one of our anchors lay saint Appears. in flue and thirtie fathomes, and the other in ten fathomes. You may ride in shoalder water off fine. each fide, if you will : for this channell of deepe water is but narrow. Here no Sea can come to hurt you, because the Shoalds and Land breake it off. It may well be called an harbour, for the goodnesse of the place. Wee ipent twentie dayes in this Bay.

The eighteenth of L.lic, in the morning we fee faile for Bantam, and wee fleered off West by Julie 18, north from the river to go to the northward of the Hands, Ant in this course you have no go and They depart with the lead; for it is all steepe home to the shoare of the other side; for when you have twen- from the River tie fathomes within the Ilands, you are hard by the stones; but by the II nds and shoulds is faire or saint Angu-shoulding from seven to thirtie tathoms, and no ground, the gut betweene the hills being East. by South from you, you goe right into the rode, or East.

The eighteenth, at noone wee were in latitude three and twentie degrees, fine and fortie minutes, and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope, two and twentre degrees, eight and fiftie minutes East, and two leagues off the next land. Here the land is all white by the waters file.

The nineteenth, in the morning the variation was fifteene degrees no minutes, and then the thip They faile towas from the negret land twelte leagues; and the latitude by judgement three and twentie deg wind estimate by otherwise formand twentie degree by the outlier by the outlie fue and fiftie minutes. At noone, the latitude by obfervation foure and twentie degrees, one and thirtie minutes: and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope two and twentie degrees, two and Saint Lucrone, twentie minutes East. These foure and twentie houres we failed upon a right line South-weit by South, twentie leagues. This night the variation was fourteene degrees thirtie minutes. The foure and twentieth of September, in the morning wee faw the Hes of Nintam, which

30 are in latitude, one degree, thirtie minutes. The Sound betweene the two great Hands is eigh- September 14. teene leagues from Priaman, and el uen leagues from the Shoal is before Tecou. Beware you lles of Nintam. come not neere these Shoalds by night, but rather he short three or four leagues till day-light, And then when you fee three hommockes, that will rife vp like three llands, have a speciall care, that you have one at your bolt-spreet end, to give warning of any spots in your way : for there are Corralhods that you may eafily perceive. Your course from this Sound of the two great Hands of Nintam to goe for Tecon or Priaman, is East North-cast to the shoalds aforclaid. But when you come thorow the Sound, keepe your lead going : and come no neerer the South great Hand then fixteene fithome : for towards the Eastifile are Shoalds : and a breach off the Norther-Iland alfo, as you shall see vpon your Lasboard-side going in.

For your better knowing when you draw neere the Shoalds of Tecon, let the three hommocks which are like three Hands, but are vpon the Maine, for it is low land by them : and when you haue them North-east and by East, you shall begin to meet with them : and when the said land is North North-east you are past them. But bee very carefull every where : for it is all bad ground hereabout before you passe the high land of Manancabo, which is in latitude foure degrees, thirtie minutes, or thereabout.

The fixe and twentieth, wee anchored in the rode of Priaman; where wee found the Thomas: and wee flayed there to recouer ficke men four eene dayes. And then the Hellor and wee did They arrive in fet faile for Bantam. The latitude of Priaman is in fiftie minutes Southerly. The variation foure the Rode of degrees ten minutes. The Rode is behind the fecond Hand in fixe fathomes: vpon which Hand mare. 50 you have fresh water and wood. The Barre of Priaman is fast by.

The eight of October, the ship came downe by the Heller, where wee stayed for her to goe for Bantam, and in the morning fet faile.

The three and twentieth, wee came into the rode of Bantam with the lames and the Hellor. The fourth of November 1612, wee weighed from the rode of Bantam, to goe for Coroman- They arrive at The fourth of Notember 1612, wee weighted from the roug or naturn, cogot to commanded, by the straight of Sanda: but the wind and streams were in much against vs. that we were Notember. forced into the Straight of Sund ragaine, to fit our flip being much weather-braten.

The eleuenth of December, wee anchored againe by Pulo Panian, and went to worke to ro- December 11. mage our ship to take in ballast.

The tenth of lanuarie, being ballasted, watered, and fitted, wee set faile for the Straight of Lanuarie to. 60 Malacca: but being late in the monion, streames and winds both against vs, with much toyle to The Straight they and men wee plied fewentie leagues from Bantam, and could get no farther from the tenth of Malacca, of this month to the few of March, of this moneth to the first of March: whereupon our hope was then past for that. And taking They are put aduife amongst ourfelues, wee concluded to water and wood, and so to returne for Bantam, and back to Reato proceed without Sumatra.

CHAP.5.

Iune 5. 1613.

They discrie

The eleventh, being fitted with wood and water, we bare vp for Bantam the fecond time. The fifth of lune 1613 at noone, in latitude 12 degr. no minutes, and longitude from the ble hills, 23. degrees no minutes West. Heere you shall see plainly, that we have been carryed with A special note, the streame foure degrees, thirty minutes, which is ninty leagues, For wholoeuer he be, that shall faile downe from Bantam, or vp, he shall find such vncertaine failing, if he looke not well to the variation of the needle, that he may well miffe his expectation for the arrivall at his Port. For there is neither English nor Hollander, that can find any way how to deale with those streames. but only by the variation : for that will helpe much in ten or fifteene leagues, if it be carefullo observed. Heere we saw the land, it is so low, that you cannot see it before you see the Pagods or Pagan Churches: and we were when we faw the land four leagues off. You may be bold with 10 your lead in fifteene fathomes by night vpon the Coaft, and by day in ten fathomes : but take heed you have a fure man at the lead, for it will should suddenly; for after you come to have thirty fathoms, you will come presently to shoald water, for it is like a well, and the ground Ozie. Your courie along the shoare is North and by East to Paleacate, and so vp to Masalipatan. This land was about Negaparan. Heere we steered North North-east all night, in three and twenty and seventeene fathoms, three or soure leagues: the variation thirteene degrees, ten minutes, you shall in twelue degrees of latitude furely see the land. The fixth at noone, we anchored in the Road of Paleacate in eight fathoms fund. There is a middle ground, where you have but five fathoms, and fixe, feuen, eight, within that agains. The markes for the Roade are the round Hill by the other hill Weit Northerly, and the Hollander; 20 Fort South-west and by West, as wee road. The variation is thirteene degrees, ten minutes.

The latitude thirteene degrees, thirty minutes. The eight at noone, we were in latitude fourteene degrees, forty minutes : we failed fince we weighed the last night twenty three leagues, the depths his and twenty and three and twenty fathoms : the course North and by East; but the lead is our guid vnder God.

The minth at noone, in latitude fifteene degrees, thir y minutes. Heere you have the land in fight, but not the high land of Petopoli. There foure and twenty houres were failed fearnteene leagues North in fifteene and fixteene fathoms. And this high land is a Pagodie or Pages Church.

You may, if you will, hale in with it into fine fathoms, when the hill is North North-west, but you must goe off East for it, for we did so. But beware in going off for a lownesse of fand, and 30 come no nearer it then twelve or thirteene fathoms, till you be furely part it. This high land is from the high land of Petepoli fixe leagues. The tenth, we anchored in the Road of Petepoli, in five fathoms fand. This new high Iland inthe Road of North North-west from vs, and the platforme of Palme-trees vpon the Island East North-east, Easterly, and the Barre North-west and by North from vs. All the Sea-cost is low land. The latitude hiteene degrees, two and fiftie minutes. The variation thirteene degrees, fifty minutes, perfect and full. The nineteenth, in the after-noone we fet faile, when the Factory was fitted. The Merchants which wee left there, were Mafter George Chaufer, and our Purser, with feuen men more to keep 40 And a Peteron, our house and goods. The twentieth calme, you goe East South-east nine leagues, in seuen or eight fathomes, and then North North-west : feare not in five fathoms or leste, after you are about the point, for it is low land. There is but one great tree bigger then any of the rest to know the Road by, that must chiefe marke you bring West and by North from you, and you shal have three fathoms and a quarter soft Ozie, for to know the Roade.

A Factory with

and ride three miles off the land. The one and twentieth, we anchored in the Roade of Masulipatan, where we found a ship of They arrive at Holland: heere we were well entertained. Heere we did stay about fixe moneths, to wit, vntill the fixteenth of Ianuary: and then we weighed and went for Petipoli, where wee arrived the nineteenth of the same, and stayed there to take in the goods and Merchants, till the seuenth of so February. And then wee fet faile for Bantam, and kept the fame courses which wee did before They returne from Petereli downe, all the way vp. We arrived at Bartam the twentieth of Aprill 1614. where we stayed for Bantam. They arrive a They fet our till the tenth of June 1614. and then fet faile for Patane. The tenth of Iune 1614, at noone, we had light of the Islands nine leagues from Bantam, our going is from five, fixe, feuen, eight, twelve, fourteene, and fo to foure and twentie fathomes: June 10.1614 at this time our course was North North-east, after you are cleare off the Road, the wind from the East South-east : the latitude Southerly fine degrees, foure and forty minutes.

The eleventh, at fixe of the clocke in the morning, we wereby the two llands that lye North from Bantam, in fine degrees of latitude by Sumatra, in twentie fathomes, which is the furest course out and home. Heere you must be carefull to looke well out for two sands, that lye even 60 with the water. From fix in the morning we failed feuen leagues North North-east, in fixteen, fitteene, fourteene and thirteene fathoms, and are now from Bantam feuen and twentie leagues Northand by East nearest, the wind from the East to the South South-east. From twelue in the night we failed eleuen leagues North, in ten and eleuen fathoms Ozie : but when you paile the Riffe, you have hard fand : the latitude foure degrees, twelve minutes Southerly. Beware by night, goe no: without ten fathomes, nor within to the Maine to leffe then fixe or feuen. And to be bold with a fire man at the Lead : for that must be the best Pilot.

The twelfth, in the morning from eight degrees Easterly, wee failed seuen leagues North North-east in eight, seuen, fixe and five fathomes, and are with the second Riffe. From the fecond in the morning to eleuen in the morning, wee failed feuen leagues North

North-east by judgement : but the streame did set so fast in , that wee were forced to anchor in foure fathome and a quarter leffe: the riffe land in fight, but not Lucapara. Heere must especiall carebre had, when you come with the land off the Riffe, that is, twelue leagues short of Luca- The lie Lucapara, and fortie eight leagues from Bantam, that you come not within fixe fathomes till you fee in Lucapara, for it is very vincertaine ground, full of pits. And for a warning to avoid it, beware you bring not the Riffe land last mentioned South-west and by South, but keepe off in seuen fathomes, till you fee Lucapara, and then you need not feare, for the Iland is bold two leagues off, but remember you must leave it to the Eastward of you, and when you see it, feare not five or foure fathomes, for that is the depth you may be bold in with the Maine of Sumatra, but in the best toward the Iland is five and an halfe, and fixe fathomes. The streame setteth North Northwest, and South South-east, it hath sixe foot water. The floud commeth from the South-ward, and the ebbe from the North-ward. The thirteenth, we rid still with very vncertaine weather. The fourteenth, we came with the Iland and Maine, and put through betweene them in fine fathomes and an halfe. And at noone we had the lland East North-east a league from vs, for so neere is the deepest water: then seere North till the point bee North-west and by West in fine or fixe fathomes. The diffance is four eleagues, keepe the Iland South South-east from you, for about it is very vncertaine ground. Then the next reach lyeth North North-west neerest: but keepe Sumatra side, and not Bana, although you have deeper water: for Banca fide is Rockes, and founding depths, Sumatra is Ozie. And you may bee bold in this first reach : and you shall have nine, ten, eleven, twelve, eighteene or twentie fathomes, till you come with the high land of Banca, which at Lucapara wil shew like Hands, then shal you see Hands, besides the great Hand of Banca three leagues before Banca is a great you, and Sumatra fide fall in with a bite, and all flat ground : wherefore come no neerer then feuen, and no farther off then nine fathomes, but rather for aduantage hale neere vnto the flats of Sumatra in fixe or five fathomes. Here is the Channell and narroweft: heregoes tydes ftrongly one way, aswell as the other. The fifteenth, the next reach lyeth North-west by North eight leagues, and wee were with it fixe degrees Eaft. The fixteenth, the next reach lyeth North-west and by West, and West North-west downe to Palimbam point: but keepe neere Sumatra in fixe or feuen fathomes: for Banca fide is not good: Palimbam point although it bee deeper water, yet there are many Rockes toward the end of the great Iland of Banca. This reach is seventeene leagues long to the Towne of Palimbam, and the hill Morpin is The hill Mor North from you, which standeth vpon the Norther end of Banca. Then is the Road of Palim- Pin, vponthe bam South South-west from you: your depth ten fathomes off Sumarra side. The distance be-end of Banca.

tweene the Iland and Sumatra at this end is fixe leagues in my judgement. Keepe Sumatra fide by night or day in seuen fathomes, till you have the Norther end of Banca East South-east for a Riffe that lyeth off the Norther end two leagues : and then will your latitude bee one degree, one and twentie minutes Southerly, and foure leagues off Banca. But you must alter courses to bring it thus. For when Banca is North-east and by East. Then you must steere North North-east, and North, as Lead and discretion shall guide : but goe not with leffe then ten fathomes by night. The fenenteenth, at noone one degree ten minutes Southerly : Here you faile North in eight The lle of Pa-or nine fathomes Ozie : and here you fee that Ile of Pulo Tino without you. Here by reason we lo Tino. had it calme, we anchored in nine fathomes. Heere the streame did set West South-west and East The eighteenth, heere your courfe is North North-east, seuen, eight, nine and ten fathomes.

And when you have the two Northermost Hands in the Offing South-east from you, then is Pulo Sio North-west and by North. And being thus it hath two hils with a Valley in the midst, and two little Hands by it. And when it is South-west, it sheweth round like the Mew-stone.

The nineteenth, this Hand hath water and wood, but none Inhabitants. The latitude of this Iland is fortie minutes South.

The twentieth, now your depths must bee from fifteene to twentie in and off, and your course North to Linga, the land is faire in light, goe not off by any meanes, rather anchor. Heere Linga is hard ground.

Now your course to Bintam is North & by West neerest, but go not without soure and twen- Bintam to tie, nor within twentie. And that will bring you in fight of the round hill of Bintam, which hath in latitude one deg, ten min, and is the fairest way. The hill standeth in the middle of the Hand.

The one and twentieth, now your course for Pulo Timon is North North-west, and North Pulo Timon by West hauing alwayes sight of land, I meane Ilands; and your depths are twentie, nineteene, and eight eene fathomes, Ozie. The latitude of Pulo Timon is two degrees fortie fenen minutes Northerly, or much thereupon.

CHAP.6. S.I. The best course to passe the Equinoctial Line.

Pula Capas.

The two and twentieth, from Pulo Timon to Pulo Capas is thirtie fixe leagues North by West neereit in eighteene, nimeteene, twentie, and twentie two fathomes. And when you have the Ilands Weit off you, then have you thirtie fixe fathomes close by the Iland. If occasion lenge you may goo betweene the Ilands and the Maine in a faire Channell, Thefe Ilands are in the latie tude of foure degrees fittie two minutes Northerly.

The foure and twentieth, from Pulo Capas to the other Hands, which are fo many that you can not tell them, the course is North-west by North sourceene leagues: and then the Northerend of the Iles is diffant from the Souther end nine leagues. The depths are twentie two and twentie

The flue and twentieth, now your course to Patane is West North-west fortic eight leagues: lo goe no further off the land then twentie leagues, nor no neerer, then twelue or thirteene leagues, vnleffe you have occasion to anchor. The Land is bold and high. After you passe sixteene leagues West North-west, there are no more Handstill you come to Patane, but only one Rocke; and you may if you will, goe betweene the Maine and it. This Rocke is fourteene leagues thort of

They arrive at Sangora.

The thirtieth, we anchored in the Roade of Patane in three fathomes and an halfe, where we did ride til the first of August and then set faile for Sangora to trimme our ship. This Sangora isa very good place under two Ilands, fast by the Maine, and from Patane fourteene or hitteene

The third of August 1614. We came to an Anchor in the Road of Sangora vnder the Easter- 20 August, 3.1614. most Iland of the two, and there we trimmed our ship well, and came away the ninth of September, arrived at Parane the next day following, where we stayed till the fixt of October, to take in the goods of the Globe, to carrie them for Bantam.

The ninth of October we let faile from Patane, being bound for Bantam; holding the fame course backe, that we came forth : and the ninth of Nouember we arrived safe at Bantam. Wee rid there till the feuen and twentieth of Ianuary, to lade our ships, and to fit all things for our Voyage home for England.

They returne The death of Capt, Edmund

The nine and twentieth, wee fet faile from thence: And within some hundred leagues from Bantam home-ward bound dyed our Captaine Master Edmund Marlow, an excellent man in the Art of Nauigation, and all the Mathematicks. The first place at which we anchored was the Bay 30 of Saldanha, where we stayed for our Confort the Globe: which arrived there the next day

The nine and twentieth of Aprill 1615. wee came to an anchor in the Roade, where wee flaved till the feuenteenth of May. And then being well fitted in both our ships, wee did set faile for Santa Helena, where wee fafely arrived the third of June, and rode there till the feuenth in the morning. Then wee let faile together for England, where, God bee prayled, we fafely arrived the third of August 1615.

CHAP. VI.

ARuter, or briefe direction for readie sayling into the East-India, digested into a plaine method by Master I O H N DAVIS of Lime-house, Dpon experience of his fine Voyages thither, and home againe.

Nauticall Obsernation of places betwixt the Lizard and Saint Augustine in the Ile of Saint Laurence.

Iff, the Lizard lath in latitude fiftie degrees ten minutes. The Cape Finishere in Galicia hath in latitude forty three degrees twentie minutes, and longitude from the Meridian of the Lizard, two degrees thertie fixe minutes West. The lland of Lancerota hath in latitude twentie eight degrees, forty minutes, and longitude from the Lizard five degrees twentie foure degrees West. The variation of the 60 Compasse fixe minutes from North to East. And when you are in the latitude of thirtie three degrees thirtie minutes, and chance to have fine degrees twentie minutes of variation, you may affure your felte to be North North-east from the faid lland, and your course is South South-west to goe with it.

The Grand Canaria hath in latitude twenty feuen degrees fortie minutes, and longitude from the Lizard fixe degrees that is minutes West. The variation is fixe degrees from North to East. Likewife in the Lititude thirty degrees thirty minutes: when you have due degrees and firtie minutes variation, you have the faid Hand South and by West from you.

The Hand of Saint Marie, being the Eaflermost of the Azores, hath in latitude thirtie funn degrees; and longitude from the Lizard fourteene degrees West. The variation of the Compalle one degree fortie minutes from North to East. But when you are in the latitude of thirtie degrees thirtie minutes comming home-ward, and finde fine degrees variation, and would fee the Hands in your course, goe North-east for Saint Marie ; but it is better to goe more Northerly, and fo you shall bee fore to see some of them: for the variation is much upon that rate in 10 the North-east course, till you come in with the Hands.

The latitude of Sal, which is one of the Ilands of Cape Verde, is ten degrees thirtie minutes, Sal. and longitude from the Lizard twelve degrees twelve minutes. The variation three degrees, thirtie minutes from North to East.

Bonauffa is from Sal fixe leagues. The mid-way betweene the Meridian of Cape Forde and Bonauffa. these llands in the latitude of nine degrees, you have two degrees fifteen eminutes of variation to the East-ward : and the never you are to the Maine land, the lesse variation. But when you come in fine degrees of latitude, if the Ternados doe not meete with you before, there you shall beginne to have them , which are winds blowing every-where.

But if you will passe the Equinoctiall, vie what diligence yournay, in plying to get from The left to their vihicalthfull and troublesome windes: but keepe your selfe so, that you may bee the Franco but South and by East, or South South-east from Mais, because it may bee in your minde, all Line. that your much going to the East-ward will bee a helpe when you stand ouer with the generall wind. But you may there spend much time, and get little a mantage. Now assoone as you have the wind at South South-east, and are in two or three degrees off the Line, stand away with ir. For if you may passe the Line in ten degrees of longitude from the Lizard, your variation will be fixe degrees ten minutes from North to East, and you shall feele neither the East Southeast streame to hurt you, nor the North-west and by West streame, that setteth over to the

But if the wind doe hinder you much, feare not to peffethe Line in fourteene degrees of 30 longitude from the Lizard, your variation will bee in that place fixe degrees fortie fine minures. And beeing pall, make your way to the South-ward as speedily as you may; but if the wind be at East North-east or East, as many times it will bee, doe not goe to the East-ward of the South-east and by East, although in your minde it were the best course: for it you doc, you shall find the wind at South-east and South South-east, and it will bring you downe to your South courfeagaine, although you have fpent to much time as in your South courfe would have carried you without the Tropicke into the variable winds way, which is in twentic fixe or

For it is great oddes, when a man may faile thirtie fixe leagues in foure and twentie hours, and will fayle but foure and twentie close vpon a wind. For when you have brought your fille o into the variable winds way, it cannot be long before you have a flent to get vp to the Cape of Good Hope, where you shall note, that your variation will increase in running South from the Line. For when you come in twentie degrees to the South-ward, you shall have fifteene degrees of variation, and more to the Well-ward fourteene. Whereby if you note it well, you Increase of fiall perceine, that in these parts, betweene the Tropickes I meane, it keepeth no method fiation in ranin Eafting or Weffing, as it doth without them: as you may fee at the He De Fernands de Los-ronha, the Intitude whereof is foure decrees touch, and Intitude whereof is foured decrees touch, roubs, the latitude whereof is foure degrees South, and lengitude from the Lizard nineteene line. degrees twentie minutes Weff. The variation is there eight degrees ten minutes, from North The Be of to East: if you come there to ride, the Roade is vpon the North-east file, but it is ill ground in Tournday fome place. The depth, nine, eight and feuen fathomes water, familie grounds, with a from er 50 Rocke heere and there.

This land rifeth like Paules Reeple, and that land like the Reeple will bee when you are in the Roade South South-west from you. There is much broken ground and Hand's by the He at felfe. Heere is good refreshing and good water, but dangerous landing for the Sea to sinke your Boats and drowne your men.

The Portugals of Fernamburo have some few Slaves heere that make Cotton and keepe their Cattell. They have Guiney Wheate there growing.

The Iland of Santa Helena hath in South latitude fixteen degrees, & longitude from the Lie and The fle of foure degrees thirtie minutes Eastiand from the Cape of Good Hope twentie three degrees thirtie Sana Hiller minutes West. The variation is seuen degrees thirtie minutes from North to East. This Hand & is one of the best for the bignesse thereof for the refreshing of men, that I know in the Sea : it flandeth to healthy, and hath to good a Roade for Simples, as a man can de re-The Roade is open to the North-well fide: right before the Chappell you may rule in twelve. tenne, nine, eight, or seuen fathomes water, good ground and no danger, but what you he a long the shoare.

The lland is little, but very high land, a man may see it eighteene leagues off. Vpon it are all things fitting for a mans comfort, comming with it in distresse. If you will fee this lland, you have the wind alway at South-east or thereabouts. Therefore keepe your felfe in the latitude of fixteene degrees tenne minutes, or fifteene degrees, and runne West vpon that height, and you cannot mille it: whether it bee day or night you need not feare. but this you may affure your felfe, that in your course from the Cape of Good Hope, there is nothing that will wrong you. I meane no fireame nor Current. For I have feene that my felfe three times comming from the Cape the South-east wind will take you in thirtie degrees, and fometimes before, and will carrie you to the North-ward of the Equinoctiall Line.

The Bay of Saldanka.

Saldanha, which is the Bay where we doe commonly anchor out-ward bound, hath in latitude thirtie foure degrees twentie fine minutes, and longitude from the Lizard twentie eight degrees East. The variation thirtie minutes from North to East. For the knowing of the land hereabout Saldanha, it is all high land. But commonly when you come from the Westward it is foggie and darke vpon it, fo that you shall fee the breach of the shoare, before you can come to make it, or know it. It you see the land when you are in the Offing rise like a Table, and other round hils by it, one like a Sugar-loafe; bring this Table East by South, and then stirre so see, till you come close under the land, for this course will bring you in with the point of the Souther land going into the Roade. Now when you fee the point it felfe, which is low land, you shall see the Ile of Penguin but keepe your felfe neerer the point then to Pen- 20 quin Iland, because there are sunken Rockes all toward the Iland: keepe your Lead going, for toward the point you shall have ground at fifteene fathomes, and then you may bee bold to goe by it in ten fathomes water. Then the Roade is South-east by East from this point in fixefathomes, or fine if you lift. The Table will bee South South-west the middle of it, and the Sugar-loafe South-west halfe Westerly. The worst winds for that Roade are from the Northwest to the North-east. Heere is good watering and fresh victuals, when the people come

There is fresh-fish in the Riuer to bee had at sometime of the tyde with a seine: it doth high fometimes five foote water, and sometimes fixe, sometimes more, and some-

Betweene the Coast of Brasil and this Roade the Compasse hath twentie degrees variation, and more or leffe as you are to the North-ward or South. For the more you are to the South-ward, the more you have, and to the North-ward the leffe. But in thirtie three degrees thirty minutes, you have the highest variation twenty one degrees from North to East, & longitule from the Lizardieuen deg thirtie minutes, or from the Cape of Good Hope, thirtie five deg. and the Cape thirtie minutes West: Now when you come in eleuen degrees no minutes of variation, you may affare your felfe, if your variation bee good, you are three hundred and thirtie leagues short: and it will keepe a good method in decreasing after the rate of thirtie or eight and twentie leagues to a degree for when you are in two degrees of variation, you shall bee eight and fortie or fiftie leagues short : and when you have fortie minutes, and cannot see the land, you are but 40

Now if you can see the Land close by the waters side, before you can see the other high land, the foggehanging upon the flioare, and are in thirtie foure degrees of latitude, you may fee white fandie waves clefe by the waters fide, your course is to the point, if they heare East South-east from you, and beeing neere the shoare is North-east. For these white sandie wayes are almost three leagues short of that point going into the Roade, and fast by the point to the South-weil from the fand point going for the Roade, the two points doe lye North-east and South-west. And then the land toward the Cape lyeth South-east and by East, and South South-east. So likewise the land lyeth to the North-ward off the Bay North North-west, and South South-west.

Penguin Iland and this Point lye North and by West, and South and by East.

To the Northward of this lland is an lland called Connie Iland, and it lyeth in latitude thirtie three degrees twentie feuen minutes, and North North-west from Penguine Ile. This Connie lle hath bad ground about it : but you may goe betweene the Maine and that I and, It you will anchor, this He upon the Weiter-fide hath a dangerous ledge of Rockes lying off it to the Seawar l. The Maine all along the shoare is bold, but what you may see.

Connie Iland.

Charmans

Chance.

The highest tweene Brafil

of Good Hore.

Chapmans Chance hath in latitude thirtie foure degrees tenne minutues, and is an Harbour, which lyeth within the South-west point under a little Hill like Charing Crosse, close hanging by the Sea-fide of the South South-well-fide of the land like a Table, flanding in the very bottome of the Bav.

This is a very good Harbour for the ships: for the maine land of the Cape will be shut in vpon the Wester-side of the land : and there is good ground, and a good depth to ride in , as ten, mine, eight, fegen, fixe, or fine fathomes.

This Harlier is not past ten miles over land to Soldanha from it; and a man may comeaway with that wind that you cannot come forth withall from Soldanha. Wherefore when any shall have beene there with a ship, they shall better know it. Wee went not in with our ship, because we were all fit to goe about, before wee did know it to bee a Harbor. For wee did suspect it by chance Handing in with a feant wind, and being toward night our Captaine Master Edmund Marlow fent one of the Mafters Mates in the Pinnaffe to fee whether it were a Harbor or not, having little wind, and by that time hee came in with it, the Sunne was downe, so that he could not fee and take that notice he would, for quick returning to the flip.

CHAP. 6. S. I. Sailers course about the Cape of Good Hope.

Cape Fals hath in latitude thirty foure degrees thirty minutes, and is diffant from the Cape of Good Hope , nine leagues East South-east. 10 Betweene these two Capes there is a deepe Bay, and before it there is a Rocke even with the water; but it with neere the Cape of Good Hope. In this Bay is the great River called Rio Dolce, that runneth farre vp in the Land. There is good refreshing, as the Hollanders report, Rio Dolce. for they have beene there with their fh ps.

Heereat Cape Falso is no variation that I can find by observing South from it. The Land Novariation lyeth to the Cape das Aguilhas East South-east from the Cape of Good Hope, and is distant fixe Cape das Aand twentie leagues: no danger is to be seene, but a bould shoare along the coast. And so it is guilban. bould fixtre leagues to the Eastward : for so farre I have failed to the East-ward of Cape Das Aguilbas the land lyeth East Northerly for one hundred leagues.

The very Cape Das Aguilhas hath in latitude thirtie foure degrees , fiftie minutes 20 South, and is very low land. But there is high land to the East-ward of the last named Cape. You may have ground with your Lead in feuen or eight leagues off the land, for one hundred leagues East, at seuentie, fixtie, fixtie fiue, fiftie fiue, fiftie, fortie fathomes, sandie blacke ground voon your Lèade, which will helpe you much in comming home if you cannot observe the variation nor latitude. The variation of Cape Das Aguillas is no degrees thirtie minutes from North to West. And at the Cape of Good Hope the Compalle is varied from North to East fine and twentie minutes. Assoone as you are to the West-ward of Cape Das Aguilhas, you shall have Ozie and deepe water; whereby you may fee that this will helpe you well. in darke weather to know how the lands are from you, and how to hale in with the Cape of

When you faile into the East-India from the Cape of Good Hope, you must bee very carefull in your course: for till you come up to have seven or eight degrees of variation, you shall find it sometimes very vincertaine, shouts of streames that will let a man sometimes one way, fometimes another as I have often found it to bee so, and have stad none other meanes to helpe my felfe, but by the variation, which is very fure, if you bee carefull in observing. But after Thegreatheyou passe eight degrees of variation, you shall not need to seare the streames, if you bee bound ness of the Vato the East-ward, for the streames or tydes doe set betweene the variation afore-said, and the riation. Cape Das Aguilhas.

Now if you find betweene the Cape and this variation of Teuen or eight degrees that you doe not alteritto your ship running East; for this is your sittest course, if you bee bound for 40 Bantam, or within for any place of the Ile of Saint Laurence, till you come up to the variation aforefaid, as you may chance at fine or fixe degrees, affire your felte you are wrong with it. For the variation will increase by the rate of nine and twentie or thirtie leagues, to the Ile of Saint Laurence. I meane these leagues in Easting from the Meridians, and not the course you faile by, for if you faile North-east and by East, and you shall have thirtie fixe leagues for one degree and halfe Easting, or longitude, which will alter one degree of variation.

And the more North-ward your course is, the leffe variation you have, as you shall plainly Note. vnderstand: for in fine and twentie of latitude in fight of Saint Laurence, you have fixteene degrees no minutes. And running North by the land to the River of Saint Augustine, you shall have but fifteene degrees in the latitude of twentie three degrees and thirtie minutes, 30 which is plaine that it is leffe to the North-ward, then to the South-ward. So likewife vp to the East-ward in the latitude of eleuen degrees no minutes, the highest variation is twentie three degrees forty minutes. And in the latitude of thirtie three degrees no minutes, the highest variation is twentie feuen degrees ten minutes, as I haue feene and observed my self, and in my judgement in ten leagues Easting and Westing of the same Meridian, as hereafter shall more plainely appeare in their due places.

Ppp 2

ø. II.

A note for finding out of the River of Saint Augustine in Saint Laurence; of divers (mall Iles in the way thence to Achen, and of many Ports and paffages in and about

His River of S. Augustine hath in latitude, twenty three degrees thirtie five minutes, and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope, twenty three degrees twenty minutes Eath. The variation is fourteene degrees thity minutes from North to Well. But where variation is fourteene degrees fifty minutes from North to Weft. But when you goe to for it, feeke the land in the latitude of twenty foure degrees twenty minutes, because in the latitude of twenty fine degrees tenne minutes, there is dangerous falling for Rockesand shoulds, which I have seene. And in this latitude twenty foure degrees twenty minutes, you haue the variation fifteene degrees forty minates. The shoare bold, but what you see before you. And the coalt lieth South and North by a meridian Compalle, without counting the variation, or medling in this place with it, but steere North and North and by East, as discretion will guide you by the land: then comming along the shoare in twenty foure degrees tenne minutes, you thall fee a head-land, which hath upon it around hill of white fand, and is like a Cattle, with some few trees by it. This head-land is short of the Bay thirteene leagues, and your course is North and by East and North still, no danger till you see the Hes and hoalds before the Bay: and in the Countrey you shall see a land rife like vnto Wostminster Hall, and a gut betweene two highlands, The River of like Darimonth. The River is between these two hils: when you come with the Hesand shoulds. and will goe into the North-ward of them, you may be bold of the shoalds in seuen fathomes, if you will loofe in by them, but anchor not by them: for it is bad ground, with Corrall that will cut your Cable in funder, if you ride but little time there; but rather hale East, vp for the Channell comming from the River, where you have Ozie by the Maine, in twelve, four eteen, or twenty fathomes water: and you shall find deepe water in along to the Ruser, till you come fait by the two hills, and Westminster Hall within the point on the West North-west fide. There you may choose your roade from twenty fathomes to twelue, eleuen, tenne, nine, eight, seuen, sixe, or hue fathomes. But it is Ozie ground without the two headlands, and fand within. This Riverlieth from the Iles without shoalds East, and is distant fine leagues. Here is good filling of water, and wooding, very good victuals; but you pay filter : for that they defire most. The people are of a reasonable disposition; but you need not to trust them, nor none elle where you come, but stand alwayes vpon your Guard, while your Boat goe into the River to fill water. You shall have a very good Oxe for foure shillings, and a Goat for one shilling English, and as good as you have in England. The men of this place are tall and well made. The Cape of S. Sebaftian hath in latitude twentie fine degrees fertie fine minutes; and longi-tule from the Cape of Good Hope, twentie fine degrees no minutes. The variation of the Com-

paffe fixteene degrees fortie minutes from North to West. Here vpon the South-east side is a very good place for retreiling, as the Hollanders report, much vpon the latitude of twenty foure degrees no minutes. It is named Santa Lucia; for as they have reported to mee, there is a race of the Portugalls left there. They fay the ships ride verie fecure, and have about nine or eight fathomes water, fandie ground, and an Hand or two before it. And this must bee much better for shipping bound up or downe, then the River of S. Augustine, because it is upon the head of the

The Cape of S. Sebaflian.

Santa Lucia, 1 refreshing.

The Ile of S.

The Ile of S. Marie, vpon the East fide of S. Laurence, hath in latitude fixteene degrees thirtie minutes, and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope thirty one degrees no minutes. The variation on nineteene degrees fiftie minutes from North to West. This Iland is inhabited; and therewe had Hennes, Limons, and other refreshing, good water; but neuer a Harbour, all Roads: you may 10 ride off the Well fide, before a Towne of twelve or fixteene houses. The depth of water is twenty fathomes, more or leffe. The diffance from this Island, ouer to the Maine is tenne leagues. To the North North-west, from this Iland is a great Bay , that lieth sixteene leagues deepe West North West in from the Souther-side of the Bay, there is good riding vnder a little Iland, and in from that upon the Maine, there is a River of fresh water. And there is likewise water and wood vpon the He by the Roade, you may ride in twelue, tenne, nine, or eight fathomes: but you had need to flue your anchors for it is io foft Ozie, that your anchors will come home. Here you have Rice in abundance, hens, and some cattell. The people have warre, one fide of the Bay with the other. Trust these people not too farre for treachery. It is a place of very vincertaine and contagious weather, for raine, thunder and lightning, as etter I came in, and very vinholiome, for we 60 loft many men here. But if diftreffe vrge a man to it, you may volade a ship, or doe any butneffe by the lland, with funding vpon your guard, and vfing the people friendly, as the Hollanders have been driven vnto. The latitude of this Bay is, fifteene degrees fortie minutes. But if you go with S. Marie first, you cannot misse it: for it is the next Bay upon the Maine unto the Hand. The name of this Bay is Antongill. We did tide here in the first East Indian Voyage for the Merchants The bay of of London, in the yeere 1601. from December to March, and then we went for the East Indies, The latitude of the Ile de Roque Pro is elemen degrees no minutes, and longitude from the Cape The Ile de of Good Hope, forty one degrees no minutes of the great Circle East. Here in the fight of these Roque Pir. two llands, we had the highest variation of the Compasse, which was twenty three degrees thir. The highest ty minutes. Now South from this place, as necre as I can judge by fundry times going vp and variation, downe, we have likewise the most variation, that is: if you be in the latitude of twentie seven or twenty eight degrees, then you have twenty fixe degrees no minutes : if you bee in thirty three degrees no minutes of latitude, you have twenty feuen degrees twenty minutes of vari-10 ation. And this you may fee in my Voyage in the lames, begun in February, 1611. and ended the third of August, 1615.

CHAP.6. S.2. Rutter or fea-courfe for the East-Indies.

The Shoalds, called Baixos das Chagas, haue in latitude fixe degrees no minutes, and longitude Baixos das Cha. from the Cape of Good Hope, fiftie three degrees thirty fix minutes East. The variation is nineteen 240. degr. fiftie min. from North to West. These shoalds are very dangerous. There are three or toure llands and other dry fands: we were twenty foure houres vpon and among these Shoalds. There is in some places corall, in other some sand; sometimes tenne fathomes, and by and by fixe sathomes: the best water the ships had, was foure fathomes: but God be thanked, we had no hur t to any one of the ships. We were cleere by keeping the lles South South-west from vs: for vpon the North North-east fide it is, that we found the way out. If they had been well laid in our 20 Charts, we had miffed them.

In the Channel of Maldina, the Compaffe varieth 17. degrees. And at the Cape de Comori fixteene degrees. The Hands of Nicubar, lying off the North end of Sumarra, have in North latitude The Linds of feuen degrees tenne minutes, and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope, feuentie three degrees Nicaba. no minutes East. The variation is seuen degrees fine minutes from North to West. If you goe with thele Iles of Nicubar, as you come from the West-ward, when you come within liftie or fortie leagues, you shall meete with our fals, or the ramping of some tydes, which will make you mistrust should water; but we found none with our Lead when we founded. Many such you shall passe. I thinke they be the streames comming from the Bay of Bengala. Among these llands there is no danger, but what you fee : you may bee bold to water and fit your felies here. The 30 people will not come aboord your hip, but will buy and fell in their Canoes. Farther into the North-ward are more Hands; as in eight degrees heth an Hand called Ilha de Sombrero, because Ibade Somvpon the Souther-side the land is like a hat. Vnder this Hand is good riding; and the people will bora come to your shippe from the other Hands to the East-ward, for there are many Hands. Achen, which is a Citie vpon the West North-west side of Sumatra, hath in latitude fine de- Achen in Su-

grees forty minutes, and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope leuentie foure degrees fortie mi- matta. nutes East. And the variation is fixe degrees twentie five minutes from North to West. You may ride in seuen or eight fathomes, or at low water in sine or sixe; it hyeth sine soot upon the Barre. Your roade is to the East ward of the Castle, and a round hil in the Countrey South-east from you. The ground is Ozie where your ide. There is high land upon the Wester-side of the Towne. The to hill, which is South-east of you, is called the hil of Pedir, because there is a Towns of that name under it, twenty fine leagues from Achen. Before the Road in the Offing are fine or fixe llands. The Pepper of this place is better then the Pepper of Bantam. At Pedir Pepper is to be had, but little elfe. The land lieth from the Road of Achen forty or fifty leagues Last and West.

And if you will goe for the straight of Malacca, there is no danger till you come to the East- The Hesdau ward of the lles das larras, but a faire depth, at twenty five or thirtie fathomes water. The tydes larsa, fet as much one way as the other. At their lles das larras, you may fee the high land of Malacca: but here about Sumatra, is all low land. And your variation here about the Equinoctial is all one, as I faid before, when I spake of the highest, that there is within less variation then without, in the latitude of foureteene or fifteene degrees. For when you have feuen degrees fiftie minutes so in the Offing, you are much upon feuen degrees thirtie minutes longitude from Rantam. And that distance you are in for longitule from Bantam, when you are under the Equinoctial line, and have fixe degrees thirty fine minutes of variation. So that much upon that rate of thirtie one leagues in the Offing of Easting or Westing, will alter one degree of variation, or one degree and an halfe of longitude; and within you runne fortie leagues, or two degrees. This I have found by experience both within and without going home from Bantam. If you were at Achen, and would faile for Priaman, which is a Towne vpon the West fide of Sumatra, and hath in latitude no degrees fiftie minutes South, and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope seuentie seuen degrees forty minutes East: The variation foure degrees forty minutes from North to West: The surest way is this. To the East-ward of Priaman there are Ilands, in 6c the South latitude of one degree and thirty minutes, which are called the Iles of Nimam. Your The lles of course is to goe with these slands, and come not betweene the maine, but keepe the Sea, till von Nimiem. fee those Ilands; keepe in one degree twenty minutes of South latitude, and you shall surely fall with the North end of the biggeft. Now this great Hand being the biggeft of the two, is twenty leagues long very neere; and there are many little Hands neere it. And when you are with this

CHAP. 6. S. 2.

450

Iland, go vp by it, for it is the bolder of the two, but have your Lead going now and then topreuent dangers, yet I haue found the least to be tenne fathomes water. When you are shut within thel- Ilands, your course is East by North eighteene leagues: but faile not by night, but hall rather, and faile by day. Now although Priaman and this Iland doe lie East by North, and West by South, yet your best way is, to direct your course East North-east, and North-east by East, among; and then you shall see three hummocks in the maine, before you can see the low land; and then having fight of them, you may goe in till you fee the low land of the Maine: but looke well about you; for when these hills come to the North-east from you, there is should water, and bankes of flone: but you may borrow of them with your Lead in feuen fathomes: then are you fix Pankes of Hone. Face you may be and your course East South-east, or South-east by East with 10 your Lead going now and then. For the knowing of the road of Priaman, when you have the hils North and West from you, you shall see many Hands to the South-ward; but the first will shew white, and none of the rest. So that Iland lieth West South-west from the roade three leagues. And the land in the Countrey aboue Priaman is high, and like a Saddle in the middeft. This high land beareth from the road North-east and by East. I set it downe with this notice, because there are foure Hands before the roade within which you ride, and may mistrust to goe within these Ilands, when you come from the West North-west, because they will not be open, but shew like a paire of breeches till you have brought them East North-east from you; then will they beginne to open, for there is good going in betweene them, leaving two on the one fide, and two on the other. But come not neere that little vttermost He by the maine: for there is all flat ground. But 20 keepe in nine or eight fathomes, till you come with the other three Iles that lie in a row, and then goe into the South-ward of the Norther of these three Hands, and under that Hand is the road. Wherefore be bold of it in fine or fixe fathomes, because it is but narrow between that lle, and the River running from the Towne, to wit, much vpon the breadth of the Thames at Blackswall. Vpon this lie, under which you ride, is a Well made artificially by those that have vsed to water there. It is a good road when you are in, but moore your ship fure. The people here are couetous, and still begging for one thing or other; yet they vsed vs very well, and brought vs hens and fuch vict valls as the place affoardeth. Here is good trade from Jana with Iunkes, for their Pepp.r they bring them falt, which is verie teant vpon this fide of the Iland. And about September and October there commeth euery yeare a Guferate with Cotton cloth to ferue this side of the 30 Iland, and ladeth away Pepper, and carrieth away some Gold: for Gold is more plentie there, then Silver, as we might plainely fee by the Countrie-people: for they are very delirous of Rials of eight. Here is some Beniamin to be had, and verie good Storax, with other Commodities.

The road of

Stere of Gold in Sumatra Storax.

Many Ilands South of Pria-

Tecou is feuen leagues from this road, but it is shoaldie water, and ill for ships, because they must ride farte off. But Prawes and such small vestels as the Countrey people vie, are sittest, and will bring all their Commodities vnto you into Priaman road, after they know a shippe tobee there, tenne leagues. To the Northward of Priaman there are no Ilands three or foure leagues off: but to the Southward the coast is full of Hands along till you come into two degrees and an halfe of latitude. The coast lieth from Priaman two degrees twenty minutes of latitude South. Your course is South. 40 when you fet faile from Priaman, you may goe within those Ilands by the road : because by the Souther Hand lieth a shoald close by the off side: your depth is fine and fixe fathomes. Ingoing downe to the Southward, keepe the maine still, and goe not without among those Ilands: for it is ill ground and shoalds. But saile not by night, till you come into the latitude of two degrees thirtie minutes. For as you passe by the high land, that is distant from the road of Priaman thirteene leagues, it is very dangerous: keep your felfe in twenty or thirty fathomes water off the maine, and looke well about you when this high land commeth toward the East. Between that gut of high land as you palle like Dartmouth, is the Towne of Celledai. I have had by going mere those Ilands here, about thirteene leagues from the aforesaid road, but soure fathomes water, and haue feen thestones under the ship, and haue gone but little in agains toward the maine, and haue 10 had fixteene fathomes, and twelue fathomes water: wherefore there is no feare by the maine land, keeping your Lead going: then being cleare off thefe Ilands, your course is South and by East by the maine, till you come to two degrees thirty minutes: and then the land lieth to three degrees tenne minutes South-east, and then South-east and by South to four degrees, and to to five degrees no minutes by the fame course.

The Ile of Engano. A very go od

The land is very high and bold heere in fine degrees, no minutes. In fine degrees and thirtie minutes lyeth the Isle of Engano, but there is no anchoring by it; for I have fought to anchor, but it is rockes and deepe water. But if you have any occasion, you shall find in the latitude of foure degrees, ten minutes, a very good roade under an Illand fait by the maine, where you may ride in leuen fathous, and no danger but what you fee, but may boldly turne into the Roade, if 60 the wind, a strong, and in came to the wind, a strong, and in came to the wind, a strong, and in came to the roade, if 60 the wind, a strong, and in came to the roade, if 60 the wind, a strong, and in came to the roade, if 60 the wind, a strong, and in came to the roade, if 60 the wind, a strong which is a strong with the road with the the wind e at South-east, Ozie ground. Heere you may have wood and water, if you have need: But beware, two leagues West South-west from this Island, it is very dangerous shoald in the sea, the water breaketh much vponit; wherefore keepe in by the Island, and give the point a birth: but you cannot go betweene the maine and this Ifle with a ship, because it is narrow and shouldy water. This Road or Harbour is named by the Countrie people, Celebar: we did ride heere with Celebar. Sir Edward Michelborne thirteene daies, to doe fome bufinefle. You shall never with a South-east wind miffe fome Lunckes of Iana, or of fome other place riding there. The land to the Northward in the countrie is high, but by the fea-fide reasonable, not very low neither. This high land in fine degrees, twentie minutes, is called Manancabo, and is extraordinary high. The Mazencabo. course along it the shoare is South South-east, Easterly, till you come to see a little Island fast by the maine, that lieth in fixe degrees, no minutes, or much thereupon. Heere you shall see a round hill in the countrie East from you, which will be North, when you come with the three Isles by to the point of Sumatra, that lye East one from the other. Then shall you have the Salt-hills East The salt hills and by South from you, when this hill is North, and the distance from the three Islands lying East and West, to the three salt hills, which are three Islands, that Iye South and North one from another, to be ten leagues. The Land of Sumatra, from the little Island to the other three Islands, lyeth East South east, and is diffant foure leagues. This land is not very high, but in the countrie it is high land. The dep h by this land is foure and fiftie fathomes; and by the three East and West Islands, there is fixteene fathoms water; and further up, you have thirtie fathomes, when theround hill is North from you. Now you must vinderstand, that I eere as you goe upon the Coast of Sumatra, are more Islands then a man can number. But if you will go into a e Road of Marrough, you may boldly beare in among those Islands that lye North-east and by East, till The Roade of you come to the maine land of Sumara, where you shall have twentie or thirtie fathomes, and Matrough.

20 no danger, but what you fee. Now when you come in with the maine foure leagues Well Southwell from this Head-land, which is called Marrough, you shall have all to the Northward off you low land, and many Islands; but you must go East South-east vnto the Head-land of Sumatra: for this Roade of Marrough is along the shoare from the three little Islands fast by the maine, till you come almost to the point that maketh the Straight of Sunda, you may anchor in twentie or twelve fathomes water, Ozie ground, a faire birth off: There is good refreshing, and Rivers all along the shoare. The land is very high heere in from the Roade, But if you come with the three Salt hills or Islands, that Iye South and North one from the other, which are distant, as I said before, from the three East and West Islands by Sumatra ten leagues, and would go for this place of Marrough, steere in with the high land North, when you are to the Eastward of the South Salt 30 hill, and you go right with it; for the land aboue it is like a barne, and none there-about like it:

you may be bold every way hereabout, for there is no danger, but what you fee with your eyes, no where without the Straights mouth. In the very straight or narrow betweene Sumatra and lana fide, which you will, if you go to the Westward of the three South and North Islands, you need not feare, although you fee three rockes stand three miles West from the Salt hill; for you Three Rockes may come fait by them, or put betweene any of those Islands, the depth will bee much about three miles twentie or thirtie fathoms. The course from the Head-land of Sumatra, we ere the three East W ft tom the and West Islands are, is East North-east with the Point or Head-land of Sumarra, that maketh falt bils. the Straights entrie. The Coast of land 1, eth from the Point of Talmbam downe to feuen de-Thelving of grees almost of Southerly latitude; where are many Islands on this side, South-west and North-omegattos

40 east, and you have ground with the lead at thirtie or fortie fathomes in some place: But a little the Coastof without the Point of Palimbam you may anchor in twelue fathomes, Ozie ground. The latitude 14 a of the South-east falt hill, is fixe degrees, ten minutes : The longitude from the Cape of Good The Souther Hope eightie one East, the variation three degrees, twentie minutes. These falt hills stand nearer cichie one de-Iana then Sumatra by two leagues, you may see both Maines at one time, if it be cleare, and you grees o longibe in the mid-way. The land of lana is high within the countrie, and low by the water-fide, tudefrom me The streams in the Straight setteth twelve hours one way, and twelve hours the other, but Cape of Good most strongly; for you cannot beare a head with a hard gale at som : times: wherefore go of on one Hope. fide, and anchor, it maketh no matter on which. But if you chance to go in by Sumatra fide, keep nearer Sumatra by a good deale, then to the Islands, till the Islands bee East and by South from

50 you, for there is a rock under water, which breaketh at low water, that Iyeth West and by North A rocke under from the Island. Sumarra is bold, so you can keepe off the land; and so is lana side also. The way water. to Bantam, when you are about the Point of Palimbam, is by the land East South-est, and Southeast and by East, with your lead going till you see a flat Island c. lled Pule Panian, which is di- Pule Pasianfrant from the Point of Palimbam nine or ten leagues. When you come to this Island, you may go without it, or within it at your pleasure : but keepe your lead going, and come not nearer then fine or fixe fathomes off that Island. Then if you looke in upon the maine, you shall see a round hill in the countrie bearing South, or betweene that and South South-well. This hill standeth right ouer the Towne of Bantam: if you have it South South-weil from you, goe in with that courfe, till you come to fee fiu- Islands together, right from Pulo Panian. Your Road

60 is by these five Islands called Pulo Lima, where you may ride in what depth you will under foure Pulo Lima. fathoms, Ozie ground. It higheth flue foote water in the Roade. Wherefore when you chule to fathoms, Ozie ground. It highetin flue fooce water in the Roale. Wherefore when you chule to The variation tride, tremember the Tide, for otherwife you may be en ground at low water. The variation is three digning the Road to the Road is three digning the Road to the Ro Koada.

d. III.

The way from Bantam to the Straight of Palimbon, wpon the East-side of Su. matra, of Banca, Bintam, Straights of Sincapura, and Sunda, with other places.

Hen you weigh from Bantam Roade, you goe North-east by East in foure or fine fal thoms, till you come with the point of the maine, where it commeth to beare Southeast by South, you have very should water vpon that spit of hard ground. Wherefore 10 keepe off betime: before you come neare in foure or fine fathoms, there is a good bigge Island on your North North-west, as you go from Bantam, which you may leave on your larbord fide in going from the aforesaid Towne, and your depthes are fine or fixe fathoms. Heere will the land toward the Straight make like an Island, because you have lost fight of the low land. Hetre A long bed of in your North North-east course, you have a long bed of small Islands in your way, and low withall, but bold : for there is eighteene or twentie fathomes water among them, Bantam bearing South-west by South Westerly from these Islands. Their latitude is from fine degrees, to fine degrees, thirtie minutes.

When you are at the Norther end of these Illands, go North North-east and North ouer for the Coast of Sumatra: and in your course your depthes will be thirteene, twelve, ten, nine, eight, 20 feuen, fixe, fiue, foure and a halfe fathomes; and then you shall fee the low land of Sumara, the Sumatra. trees I meane, and your ground under your lead will be Ozie. The latitude about three degrees, thirtie minutes South. Now when you come in with a riffe of hard fand here-about, and have in your North and by West course foure fathoms and an halfe : Note it well, and hale off agains

Note.

East North-east into your old depthes, which are from ten to feuen fathoms or fine off Sumatra, your course North by West, and North North-west, to hold the coast from five to ten fathoms. But go not without ten fathoms neither by night nor day; for the Coast is bold in fixe fathoms. But if you go from Bantam North, you must looke very carefully about for a shoald, that lyeth in that course from the aforesaid Towns off the Roade, till you have sight of the two Islands vpon the Coast of Sumatra, that Ive three leagues from that maine land; and then you have no more to Islands by Sumatra, till you come in three degrees of South latitude; and there shall you fall with Lulapara-falla, which is the first of those foure Hands, at the South South-west end of Banca. And looke out very well for them, in going your North by West course, as the depths wil guide you from fine or fixe, to nine or ten fathoms, Ozie ground. When you have fight of these foure Islands, you shall see much broken ground by them, and among them very should water. Heere likewise you shall see two round homockes of a good height: and though they seeme to you to stand upon the maine of Sumatra, yet they doe not so, but upon the Island of Banca. The aforefaid foure Itlands have three degrees, no minutes South latitude. When you come to have these Islands East from you, your shoalding will be fue and foure fathomes, and your course North, and

The life of

North by West, till you have the Southermost lile South-east by East from you. Then you go North North-east by Banca, in eight and seven fathomes, for the Island of Banca is steepe. When you come with these Itlands, keepe Sumatra side for the holder side : the channell is in breadth three miles. Now in edging to the other fide, you shall go from eight fathoms into three fathoms. Then have you hard ground on that fide, and Ozie ground on Sumatra fide. This course of North North-east, is but one reach or three miles, before you go North againe. Heere at the narrow the Tide fetteth North and South, and runneth twelve houres one way, and twelve houres the other. When you are past the bankes or shoulds by these Islands, your depthes are ten and nine sathoms: then you saile three leagues North by the land. The next reach lieth North by West, and the depth in the best is fifteene fathoms. And when you draw neare to the high land vpon the North fide of the Island of Banca, your course is North North-west, and the best depthes twentie fathomes. It is very flat and should heere vpon Sumatra side. This course of North North-west, and North-west by North, continueth nine leagues. Then you faile twentie leagues North-west by West, the depth will be foure and twentie fathoms. The latitude in this course, is one degree, eight and thirtie minutes South. When you have the North-end of these Islands Southeast by South from you, it will shew like broken Islands. But as you go, keepe off the maine, hecause it is should still. Your next course is North ten leagues, in ten, nine, eight and seuen fathoms. Heere you have fight of three or foure Islands, to the Northwards of the great Island, but no fight of the maine land. The latitude heere is one degree, fine minutes South. Then your course is North-east by North, with a round Island, and other little Islands by it. This round Island is 60 like the Moniton of Dartmonth, the depthes ten, nine, eight, and seuen fathoms, and latitude a bout fortie minutes South. This Isle is called by the Countrie people Pulo Sio, but Linfcor calleth it Pulo Powe. Heere you may have water and wood, if you need. Then your course is to go without Linga from hence North North-west, and the depth is fifteene or fixteene fathoms : and the distance from Pulo Sio to Linga, is thirteene leagues. At the Souther end of Linga are many Islands; and there are at the Norther end also many. This Island of Linga lyeth under the Equi-Linga lyeth under noctiall line, as wee found by observation, where the Charts make it to lye almost a degree in derthe Equi-South latitude. It is full of Islands and funcken grounds hereabout. Heere we found the tide to noticell Line. runne South South -: aft, and North North-west. The depth in the offing is twentie fathom: s. Ozie eround: your course is North by West fifteene or fixteen leagues, where you shall see eight other Islands. But in your going beware of the tide, and krepe in fifteene or fixteene fathoms water, and Ozie ground : the latitude of these eight Islands is fiftie minutes North. Heere you may likewife haue wood and water among thefe Itlands. Thefe Itlands and fincken grounds continue to one degree, ten minutes of North latitude : the Tide runneth twelue houres, the flood 10 from the Northward, and ebbe from the Southward, the depth twentie fathomes. Heere along by thefe Islands is fourteene fathomes, till you come up to the Isle of Bintam, which hath in latitude one degree, ten minutes North, vpon the South-east tide of this Island is bold shealding Fintame from fourteene to nine fathomes, yet hath a round hill in the middest of it, and it is a greater Island, then any that is neare it : vpon the Easter point I came ouer in seven fathomes : the Tide of the Norther fide letteth Weit by North. And when you are past this Easter point, you are open of the Straight of Sincapura. Heere the Tide letteth East from the Straight of Sinca- The Straight pura. Thence you go North-east and by North seuen leagues, with a strong streame against you, of smajura. for an Island called Pulo Tinge, vpon the Coast of Ior, in latitude two degrees, twentie minutes PasoTiege. North, you may fee the round hill of Bintam even with the water, for their diffance twentie

20 leagues, and the course is North by West. Heere wee saw an Island called Pulo Timon: and the OF Pulo Timon. ther Islands by it are called Pulo Lore, leaving two round hilles upon it. And Pulo Tinge, where we roade, hath a piked hill upon it. Their latitudes are two degrees, thirtie minutes, and two degrees fortie minutes.

The Coast of Icr is bold from Pulo Tinge. When you have made the Straight of Sincapure, and Icr. would goe for Ier, your courie is North-west by West. But beware of the Current, you may bee bold in fixteene, eighteene, twentie, or fine and twentie fathomes, and good ground to

From Pulo Sio fteere South-east for an Iland called Pulo Paccadoure, distant from Pulo Sio e- Pulo Paccadoure leuen leagues, in latitude one degree no minutes South. It is a ragged Hand, and hath by it two 30 little Ilands. The depth is fifteene fathomes. Be fure to keep in that depth, and you shall goe without denger. From this ragged Hand your course is South-east by East nine leagues, to an other Hand called Pulo Pagadure, and your depths are fifteene or fixteene fathomes. In that course Pula Pagadure be very carefull: for Banca upon this fide is all Rockes and breaches, in some places eighter nine leagues off, and to it is without you againe all bad ground. Then from this lland your course is South-east by East, to an Hand called Pulo Calafui, or the Mariners Hand : and their distance is Pulo Calafai, fortie leagues: when you see this Hand of Mariners, lie short off it, because you cannot anchor by it for fowle ground. Your depth from this Iland to the other is fifteene fathomes. From this Mariners Hand, you may fee the high land upon Banca beare West by North from it, and is distant fif- Banca,

The head of Banca lieth from this He South-west by West nine leagues. Saile not by night by any meanes when you fee this Hand: for if you goe neuer to well by your Compatis, the Chinabate. streams will deceive you, and put you to the East-ward of an Hand called Chinabata. Your course is to goe betweene Banca and thefe Hands; because it is all Rockes to the East-ward like steeples. This lie of Chinabata and Pulo Calafai, lie South and North one from the other, and are dittant thirteene leagues. Your courfe betweene Banca and Chinabata is South South-west: looke to the streame, and borrow of Banca in this place in twentie or twentie flue fathomes. The distance betweene them is tenne leagues. The Rockes in the Offing are called Pulo Pelican. From which firaight to the coast of Sumatra, the course is South-west by South, till you have shoulding off the maine. And goe as you did outward from Bantam, keeping the shoalding of Sumura in seven

10 or eight fathomes, till you draw neere the ftraight of Sunda. I have hereunto added like Nauticall observations, I suppose, written by Thomas Clayborne, leauing the censure and vie to the more skilfull. He intituleth them,

Certaine principall Notes, gathered by mine owne experience, in my three Voyages into these parts : wherein the true course, and distances, with shoulds androckes is shewed : and on which side you may leave them: as hereafter followeth.

The Souther-most Salt hill lyeth in fixe degrees no minutes of South latitude, and if you be bound for Banam, you may goe betwixthe Salt hils, or on either fide of them, if mede be: but most men goe to the South of them. If you bee South from the Southermost Solt hill, about two leagues, or lesse, your best course to Palimbam point, is betweene the North-East by East,

Ia

Certaine Notes from Bantam Roade to the Ilands of the Maluccaes, with the course and distances: as hercafter followeth.

TRom Bantam roade North-east by North two leagues, then East by North, and East North-Leaft two leagues, and that will bring the low point to the Eastward of Bantam Bay, South from you about one league: but come no neerer that point then three fathome; then Eaft, and East by North foure leagues, and then you shall have foureteene fathome, and shall be neere five Hands, with white fand without them, and a Ledge of Rockes East from them about halfe a mile; these you must leave to the North-wards of you. From these Hands your course is East South-East, with the Eastermost Hand of Jacatra. From the Eastermost Hand of Jacatra, which is the Norther-most from this Hand, your courfe is North-east by East foure or fine leagues, then East thirtie leagues; then looke out for a fand that lieth about three leagues from the Maine, and if it be 20 cleare weather, you shall see a low Hand to the North of you, but you may goe either betweene the Iland and the find, or betweene the find and the Maine: but the best way is to goe three leagues to the Southward of the Hand. Then East by South and East fewenty leagues, and that wil bring you in fight of Madura. Note, if you be foure or fine leagues from the Well end of Madara, you shall have thirtie three fathome; and being flue leagues off the Easter end, you shall have fortie one or fortie two fathomes. All alongst this coast, you shall have Ozie ground. From the Welt ende of Madara, your beit course is to steere East by North, while you have brought your felfe in the latitude of fixe degrees; and then keepe your felfe in that latitude if it be possible, and to (by Gods helpe) you shall goe cleare betweene the shoales of Celebes, and another shoale that lieth South South-well from the shoales of Celebes. The Southermost point of the shoales of Ce- 30 lebes lieth in fix degrees. From the South point of the shoales of Celebes, your course is East North-East with the straights of Celebes: the distance betweene them is thirty leagues. From the ftraights of Celeber to Ternata, the principall Hand of the Maluccas, vpon a ftraight line, the courie is North-east, distant about two hundred leagues.

If you be minded to goe for the Molaccas, then from the straights of Celebes, your course is North-east by East, and North-east thirty leagues, and that will bring you into a straight between two lands, namely, Celebes and Cambyna: the distance betweene these two lands is fine leagues: in the middle between them, you shall have thirtie eight fathomes, fandy ground. But this is to be noted, when you come betweens these two llands, you cannot faile by night : for it is dangeof S. Thomas, diffant from this place aforenamed twen-40 ty leagues; fo that you must goe voon seuerall courses, as hereafter followeth.

First, North-east by North fixe leagues, then North North-east eight leagues, then East and East by North tenne leagues, and this will bring you into the flraights of S. Thomas, which ftraights you shall hardly perceine, vntill you come very necrethem: for they are narrowe, and one land thooteth in an other. The going through is East about one league, and the least water you shall have in running of that league, is eleven or twelve fathomes. In running of those twentie leagues fore-named, you shall be land-locked, and shall see fixe or seven fands dry with the rimme of the water, most of them will be on your Lar-board side: but this course as renamed (by Godshelpe ) will carry you cleare of them all. From the straights of S. Thomas, your courses North-east by East, and East North-east foureteene leagues, and that will carry you into the Sea, 50 but not cut of the light of land: then North North-east thirty eight leagues; and then looke out for a small lland, and a shoale that lieth North North-west from that small lland. You must bring that finall Hand East from you about two leagues, or seven miles: then steere North by East, and North North-east fine leagues, then West North-west, and North-west by North two or three leagues, then North-east by North foure or fine leagues, and that North-east by North courie, will carry you betweene two shoales, that lie in two degrees no minutes South latitude. The distance between them is not one mile, and they are dry at low water: you shall have forceteene fathome betweene them. When you are cleare of theleshoales, and ar: within one league of that land, which that North Eaithy North courfe doth carry you wato, then you mult livere Eait South-cuit about two leagues, then North-eaithy Eait with the flraights of Eergan, which he in one degree twenty minutes to the South of the Equinoctial: this straight lyeth North-east by North, and so you must goe through.

of sengaia.

Machian. Bachia :.

From the straights of Bangaia to Machian, the course is North-cast by East distant seventie

CHAP. 6. S.3. The fland of Botun, and others described.

two leagues. Bachian lieth in no degrees thirty minutes to the North of the Equinoctiall, and being neere this lland, if it bee cleare weather, you shall fee all the Cloue llands, which shew like high piked hills in the middeft of them. You may steere with any of them at your pleasure, if wind and weather ferue: for there is no danger lying neere them.

Notes of Botun.

Down is a great Iland, and an high land, the longest part of it lieth North North-east, and 10 B South South-west. Vpon the North North-West part or ende of the Iland, there is a River of fresh water. If a man be at the Norther ende of Botun, and bee minded to saile to the Kings Towne, his course is betweene the South by West, and South South-West, and so shall sayle along the land twenty leagues, as it were vp a River, betwirt two lands, Botun to the Eastward, and Cambina to the West, distance betweene them foure leagues, in some places but three, in some places but two leagues, and in some very narrow.

In this course afore-named, nine leagues short of the Kings Towne, there is a shoale, not very A dangerous bigge, yet dangerous, and dry at a low water. Now to know when you are neere it, you shall should. fee a round hill vpon Buttoone, neere the water fide : that hill and the shoale lie East by North, and West by South one from the other; you must leave that shoale on your Lar-board side. From this shoale, your coarse is still betweene the South by West, and South South-West, to 20 goe with the narrow straights, foure miles short of the Kings Towne: this Straight is one league through, and about halfe a mile broad, the course is South South-West through, and it is no great matter for the course in that place, so you keepe the shippe in the middle, which is best: for there is no riding in the narrow, by reason of the swife Tydes that runne there. Hee that goe h through, must take his Tyde with him to drive him through, for (lightly) there is never any wind there, the land is so high ouer the Masts on both sides. But you may anchor two leagues short of this narrowe, and ride well (by Gods helpe) in thirty fathome fand. So, when you be through this straight, you must steere South South-west one league, to goe cleare of a point of land that you must leaue on your Lar-boord side; and beeing cleare of that point, you must hale vp South South-East about foure miles, if the wind will give you leave, and then you may come 30 to an anchor in eight and twentie fathome, hard fand, neere a flat lland.

Then you shall see the Towne of Botun, upon the side of an hill, from you about one league. The road of The Roade of Borun lieth in fine degrees fifteene minutes of South latitude. From Borun road Borunis in fue West South-West foure leagues, then South-West, and South-West by South fine leagues, degrees fifteen then West by South and West thirtie leagues, and that will bring you to the Straights of Southlanded

From the Straights of Celebes to the Iland of Banda vpon seuerall courses, as followeth: First, East seuen and chirtie leagues, then East by South fifteene leagues, then North-east halfe a point to the North-ward, about seuenteene leagues, and that will bring you into the latitude of fine degrees tenne minntes, and then your best course is East North-east, with Buro, distance 40 betweene that and Buro fixtie three leagues. From the South part of Buro to the South part of Buro. Amboyno, are eight and twenty leagues. From the South part of Amboyno to Banda, the course Amboyno is East South East distance about thirty leagues. Banda lieth in foure degrees fortie minutes. Banda. Your going in is betweene the high Mountaine called Gunappi, and the great Iland of Bands, the hill beeing on your Lar-boord fide, and the great Hand on your Star-boord fide.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

A Journall of the tenth Voyage to the East-India, with two shippes, the Dragon, and the Hosiander (accompanied with the lames and Salomon, but those for other Voyages) and in them three hundred and eightie persons, or ihere-about : Written by Master THOMAS BEST, chiefe Comman-IC der thereof.

Observations in their way to Surat.

February 1 1611. March 22.

Maio

He first of February, 1611. we set saile from Granesend, and anchored in Tilbury The two and twentieth of March, at noone latitude oblerued fifteene degrees. 20 twentie minutes, At two of the clocke in the after-noone faire aboord Maio, Bonauista and Masolye South-west by South, distant some twelve leagues. Note that the North North-well, and the North part of Maio is all foule ground: and due North from the high homockes, there lyeth a great ledge of rockes from the land, some fine or line miles off; and a mile without the rockes you shall have twentie fathomes water. On the West-side of the Hand you may borrow in twelue or sifteene fathomes, till you come into the Roade, where we anchored in foure and twentie fathomes.

The eight and twentieth in the morning, we came close by an Iland, the latitude of it is twentie degrees, thirtie minutes, and longitude from the Meridian of Maio, one degree, fiftie minutes East. We did not land upon it, but came within two or three miles of it. I take it there is hardly anchoring to be found: there may be some refreshing in it; wood there is, and there may bee water : for on the Souther part of it there is a faire plaine plot, and it was very greene : wee Another Hand, could not finde ground comming within two or three miles of it. From this Hand East North-Two or three east, some seuen or eight leagues syeth another Iland : and from the first Iland East by South, or East South-east, lye two or three high white rockes, some foure or fine leagues off.

high white rockes. June 28-They depart

The eight and twentieth of Iune, we all fet to fea: we stayed in Saldanha Road one and twentie dayes, and bought for the three shippes nine and thirtie Beeues, and an hundred and fifteene sheepe, with a little brase, which we cut out of two or three old kertles: The sheepe we bought for small pieces of thinne braile, worth some peny or three halfe pence a piece : the Beenes with the bralle cut of kettles, to the value of twelte pence for a Beefelt is a place of great refrehing. for befides the Beefe and Mutton, there is great Plentie of good fifth, and fowles of many lores, great flore of fat Deere, but wee could kill none, very excellent Rivers of fresh water, and an healthiell and good ayre. I landed eightie or ninetic ficke men, and lodged them in Tentseighteene dayes, and they all recoursed their healthes, faue one that dyed. From the feuenth of lune, till the day of our departure from Saldanha, being the eight and twentieth of Iune, we hadnothing but faire weather; the Sunne very warme, and the ayre very weet and healthfull. Wee were an hundred leagues Eaft from Cabo das Aguilhas, before wee found any current, and then

Note. Iuly : 1. The life de

The one and thirtieth of July, Latitude observed seventeene degrees, eight minutes, and longittale twentie degrees, feuen and forcie minutes, the wind at South, faire weather. At foure in 50 the after-noone, we law the Hand de Inan da Nona from vs East South-east, distant foure lagues, in bignesle, to much as we saw, (and I thinke wee saw all of it) for length some three or learmiles, very low, and rifeth like rockes; of the West-end, a mile or two from it, we saw a breadly but we could not get ground with an hundred and thirtie fathomes, founding with our Pinnade or skille: the latitude of it is feuenteene degrees, no minutes, very certainly observed, and in our judgements well laid in our plats, both for latitude and longitude: it is a most fure time of being neare this lland de Iuan de Nona, it you find or fee great store of fowle; from having the Iland North-east to South-east, we saw much fowle, some white, their wings topped or printed

August 1.

Inan da Noue.

The first of August, North North-east thirtie leagues, latitude fifteene degrees, one and fortie inutes, longitude one and remain degrees two and remains the contract of the only with blacke, and fome blacke fowle. minutes, longitude one and twentie degrees, two and twentie minutes.

The fecond, North-east by North one quarter North, fixe and twentie leagues, latitude fourteene degrees, fine and thirrie minutes, longitude one and twentie degrees, eight and iftic minutes. Then

The third, North-east by North, one quarter North two and twenty leagues latitude observed thirteene degrees, fine and thirtie minutes, and longitude from the Cape twenty two degrathirty minutes, the wind at South South-cast, partly calme. Note that comming this course from the Note, Ille luan da Noua, we have not met with any Currents: whereby it is evident that the Current which runneth to the South-west, very strongly abound the Maine, from the latitude of fourteen degr. South, doth not runne in the offing twenty leagues from land. At foure in the after-noone we faw land East North-east, and North-east by East from vs, some twelve leagues off; having on the Easter-part of it a very faire Sugar-loafe hill. This Ile is called Mal-Ilha, and is one of the Mal-Ilha one 10 lles of Comoro. Alfo at the fame time we faw the Hand Comoro bearing off vs North North-welt of the lles of and North by Weit high-land.

CHAP. 7. S.I.

The fourth, at fix in the morning, we were faire abourd the South South-cast end of Mal-Ilha; and haling in with the hand to have found some place to anchor in, when we were some eight or nine miles from the shoare, we saw the ground under the ship; but not lesse then eight or ten fa- Shoald-water, thoms water : the Hostander being two miles within vs, shee finding not lesse then foure or fine fathoms, but her Boat was in three fathoms. Then we fent off both our Pinnafies, which kept shoulding on a Banke of eight, ten, and twelve fathomes, being from the Banke halfe a Cables length, no ground in an hundred fathomes. At the North-end of this Mal-Ilha there is a faire big Hand high land, and may be some fine or fixe miles about; and from this little Hand to the maine A great Lodge land of Mal-liha, may be some eight or nine miles, full of rockes, two of them of good height. of Rockes. 10 Now the Banke or ledge of Rockes, for fo it is, lyeth all along the West-side of Mal-Ilha : and continueth untill the little high Iland (before mentioned) beare South-east of you, and then it endeth. Heere I had fixteene fathom, faire white fand, fi hing ground. And thus being at the North-end of this Ledge, and the littl: Hand bearing South-east, you may steere in with land, keeping the Hand faire aboord : and within the rockes or broken ground and Mal-Ilba, you shall fee a Bay, wherein there is good anchoring. The Dutch shipping hath been there fixe or eight faile of them together: That yeare they were heere, when they affaulted Mezambique, two Sixor eight of my men now in my ship, were then in the shippes. Now to the Eastward of you, as you come ships of Hol. in from the Banke or Ledge of Rockes, you have likewife a great should, and the offermost end land at Malof it lyeth from the little Iland North-east, or North-east by East, but from the Iland at least five Illus 30 or fixe miles, and no ground betweene, that we could find, in forty or fifty fathomes. In fine, all the North-fide of Mal-Ilha is very dangerous : but the channell mentioned, without danger: for we flood in as farre as the little Hand: but the wind being faire Southerly, we could not lead it in. For I would have anchored in the Bay if I could have got in; for a mile to the West-ward of the Bay is a Towne, the people good, and great refreshing; as Beeues, Goats, Hennes, Limons, Coco Nuts, of each great store; and good water. The aforesaid Fleet of Hollanders, in this place, recouered the healthes of foure or nue hundred men in fine weekes. In those parts there is no place of greater refreshing then this. Now the best way to come to this place, is to come by the Southeast fide of the Iland. Mal-Ilha hath latitude twelve degrees, thirty minutes, and longitude three and twenty degree, two minutes; Variation fifteene degrees, twenty minutes. This Iland is well named Mal-Ilha, for it is the most dangerous of any place that ever I saw: it is the next to Co- Mal-Ilha next more, on the South-east fide of Comore, and is distant some twelve or fourteene leagues. The first of September, at the breaking of the dawning we faw the land East from vs, some September 1 three or four eleigues off. When we saw the land, I was short of my reckoning eightie or nine- Sight of land. tie leagues : which I judge to proceed of some Current from the Coast of Melinde, letting to the East : neither from the latitude of Socator a to Daman could we fee the Sunne, to know that va-

The third, at seven in the morning, we commanded two Boats of the countrey, by shooting foure peeces to them, to come aboord of vs: and they told vs that the Church, and Caffle, and Towne which we faw, and now did beare off vs South-east by South, was the Towne of Daman. Out of these two Boats I tooke two men, which undertooke to carry the Dragon to the Barre of Smat, with promite that they would not bring me into leffe then feuen fathoms water.

The fifth, a Boat of Surat came aboord of vs with Inddow the Broker, which had ferued Captaine William Hawkins three yeeres, and Sir Henry Middleton the time of his being heere; and the Customers brother, and three or foure others. All which continued with vs till the feuenth day. And then at four in the after-noone we came to an anchor at the Barre of Surat: the Barre hach They arrive at latitude one and twenty degrees, ten minutes. Variation fixteene degrees, twenty minutes, or the harreof fixteene degr. felien and twenty min. Heere I came to an anchor in eight fathomes and a quarter at high water, and at low water fixe fathoms and an halfe nepe tides : but in the fpring tides it would rife heere in the offing, for is have I found, three fathoms, and three fathoms and a halfe.

The eleventh, Thomse Kerridge came aboord, and fignified their kind intreaty, and much welcome to the people, and brought with him from the Juffice and Gouernour of Surat, a Certificate under their Seale for our quiet and peaceable trade and entercourse with them, and also a Letter of relation written by Sir Henry Middleton, which hee left with the Mocadan of Swally. The fame day we returned him againe with Hugh Gittins.

è. II.

Their Acts with the Mogols Subjects, and fights against the Portugals: felling a Factorie, and departure to Achen.

HE thirteenth of September, fixteene Sailes of Portugall Frigats put into the River. The two and twentieth it was determined by counsell, that wee thould fend a Poft to Agra to the King, to fignifie our arrival, and to require his answere certaine, Whether hee would permit vs trade, and to fettle a Factorie. Otherwile to depart

The thirtieth, this morning I heard of the taking of Master Canning the Purser, and William Chambers: whereupon I caused the Guewrat ship to anchor fast by me, thereby to stay her. till I might fee and heare how all flood on land. Alto wee flayed a Barke of Rice, being informed that it belonged to the Portugals of Baffare : and from Baffare the came. In fine, I tooke out of her twelve or fourteene Quintals of Rice, and gave them thirteene pence a Quintall for it. After I had the thip, I wrote to the chiefe on land, that they thould fend me all my men, with the value of all the goods which I had landed; which being performed, I would then deliuer their thip with all their people, and gaue time till the fift of October to returne mee answere; by which time if they did not, then I would dispote of ship and goods at my pleasure. Some tenne 20 of the chiefe men of the ship I tooke into my ship : in the ship there being some source hundred men . or toure hundred and fiftie-

The fixth, Medi Ioffer came aboord accompanied with four chiefe men, and many others. Hee brought me a great Preient. He came to intreate of Trade, and release of the ship which

The tenth, Heft the Barre of Surat, and came to the Roade of Swally, and anchored in eight fathor es at high-water. It is from the Barre of Surat some ten or twelve miles North. The le-The Gourmor uenteenth; the Gourmour of Amadauar came to the water-fide. The nineteenth, Hanked, hauing aboord of my ship foure men for pledges. The one and twentieth, I concluded with the Gocame to Swally. uernours and Merchants for trading with them, and fetling a Factorie in any part of their

The Articles agreed upon, and fealed by the Gouernour of Amadauar, and the Gonernour of Surat, and foure principall Merchants, and to be confirmed by the Seale and Firme of the Great Mogoll within fortie dayes after the former fealing, or elfe to be void; for the feeling of Trade and Factories in the Cities of Surat, Cambaya, Amadauar, Goga, or in any other part or parts of this Country within the Great Mogol's Dominions. Witnessed under our hands and Seales, the one and twentieth of Oftober, 1612.

T Nprimis, that all which concerneth Sir Henrie Middleton be remitted, acquited and clered I to vs : that they shall neuer make seisure, stoppage, nor stay of our Goods, Wares and Merchandizes to fatisfie for the same.

That they field procure from their King the great Wat their proper cost his grant and commation of all the costs of the product the great his Land, and shall deliver the his Land, and shall deliver the firmation of all the and dealing with them with- 50 fame unto us for inforcie dayes afte

3 That it Sha Embassadour at the Court of the Great all such great and weig That at all time. reypeople of mation in the Citie of Sura

ail forts to come downe to the That all English Com at the time that it is put into the 6 That all pettie and Pedlerly

Reals of eight. That we shall have ten Manu for o ter the same rate backe againe : and for Carts Surar, and at Surat to repaire to the Broker for

8 That if any of our men dye in those parts, that then neither the King, nor Gouernour, nor under Officer Shall make title or challenge to any thing that to the dead belonged, nor demand fees, nor any kind of Taxes, nor Customes.

9 That if all our men dye beere is these parts, betweene the times of the comming of our shippes. that then by some Office thereto appointed iust and true Inventorie, notice, and knowledge be taken, of all such Monies, Goods, lewels, Provisions, Appareil, and what elfe to our Nation belongeth : and the same hall fafely preserve and keepe, and deliver to the Generall, Captaine, or Merchants of the first ships that hall after heere arrive : and to receive a discharge from the Generall, Captaine, or Merchants, to whom such Goods and Monies shall be delinered.

10 That they secure our men and goods upon the Land redseming all such both goods and men as shall baspen to be taken upon the Land by the Portugals: and shall deliner both men and goods agains to us free of all charges, or the value of our goods and men instantly.

11 That as in all Kingdomes there are some Rebels and disobedient Subjects; so in our Nation there may be some Pirats, and Sea-Rouers, which may happen to come into these parts, and heere may rob and fleale : if any such shall happen, then will not we by our Trade and Factorie heere bee lyable or answerable for fuch goods to taken, but will ayde them with our best meanes that are to gricued by Instice to our King, for redresse and restitution unto them.

11 That all such provisions of victuals as shall bee spent during the time that our ships shall remayne beere in the Roades of Surat and Swally, Chalbe free of Custome: provided, it doe not amount unto about 10 athousand Dollers in Money.

13 That in all Questions of wrongs and injuries that shall be offered unto us, and to our Nation, that we doe receive from the ludges and those that be in authoritic, present and speedie Instice according to the qualitie of our complaints and wrongs be done us, and that by delayes we be not put off, and wearied either

The fourteenth, I landed the Present for the Great Mogol, and brought it to the Tent of the Gouernour of Amadanar, who tooke notice of the particulars : also of our Kings Letter to their King to aduertife their King thereof. Which done, I returned the Present to my shippe againe, according to agreement with the faid Gouernour. For I had told him, that vnleffe their 10 King would confirme the Articles concluded on, and likewife write our King a Letter, I would not deliver the Prefent, nor our Kings Letter; for if he refused so to do, then was he not a friend, but an enemie, and to the enemie of my King, I neither had Letter nor Prefent. Also the same day, the former finished, I delivered our Present to the Governour of Amadanar, and another to

The fourteenth of November, 1 & 1 2. the Califa of Frigats came in fight of vs, some two hundred and fortie faile. I had thought they had come to fight with vs : but they were the Fleet of the Merchant men bound for Cambaya. And every years there commeth the like Fleet, all Portugals from the South Coalt, to wit, from Goa, Chaul, &c. to goe to Cambaya: and from thence they bring the greatest part of the lading, which the Caracks and Gallions carrie for Por- Notice of to tagall. By which may appeare the great Trade that the Portugals have in these parts.

The feuen and twentieth, I received Letters from Mafter Canning and Edward Christian both The fight befignified of the comming of foure Gallions to fight with vs, and that they were readie, riding at tweene foure the Barre of Goa, the fourteenth of Nouember.

The nine and twentieth, Mafter Canning came aboord : and the Portugal Fleet comming in Of these fights fight of vs yefterday, drew neere vp with the floud : and at two in the after-noone I did fet fee a larger Re. faile, and at foure I was about two Cables lengths from the Vice-Admirall, fearing to goe lation in my neerer for want of depth, and then I began to play upon him both with great and small shot, that can 64. The by an houre we had well peppered him with some fittie fixe great shot. From him wee received Peringals had one small shot, Saker or Minion into our Maine Mait, and with another he sunke our long Boate: four great 50 now being night we anchored, and faued our Boate, but loft many things out of it.

The thirtieth, affoone as the day gaue light, I fet faile and steered betweene them, bestirring our felues with our best endeuours, putting three of their foure shippes on ground on the They lost in finds thwart of the Barre of Smat.

At nine I anchored. This morning the Hofiander did good ferrice, and came through also be their quandam At annel anchored. This morning the Holpanar was good terrance, and came condemned to we credit and one tween the hips, and anchored by me, you the floud the three hips on ground came off: we credit and one tween the hips, and anchored bundred and fee faile, they at anchor, and came to them, and spent you three of them, one hundred Bundred and Bundred Bundred and Bundred and Bundred and Bundred and Bundred Bundred and Bundred and Bundred and Bundred Bundred and Bundred Bundred and Bundred and Bundred Bund and iff ie great floot; and in the morning some fiftie shot; and at night we giving the Admirall there such unrour source Peeces out of the sterne for a fare-well, he gave vs one of his Prow Peeces, either a dred men. And whole or Demi-culuring, which came even with the top of our Fore-callle, that thorow our English Trade Dauie, killed one man, to wit, William Burrell, and flot the . rme of another.

This day the Hostander spent wholly upon one of the ships, which was on ground, and from Nathenid Salthe enemie received many ot, one of which killed the Boat-Iwayne Richard Barker. Night monof Legh, eing come wee birthed our felues fome fixe miles from them, and anchored : and at nine of the was Meffer se they fent a Frigat to vs, which being come neere, came drining righton the halfe of the the Hofar ler.

foure Gallions.

Their Acts with the Mogols Subjects, and fights against the Portugals: setling a Factorie, and departure to Achen.

THE thirteenth of September, fixteene Sailes of Portugall Frigats put into the River. to the two and twentieth it was determined by counfell, that wee should fent a Post to Agra to the King, to signifie our arrual, and to require his answere certaine, Whether nee would permit vs trade, and to settle a Factorie. Otherwise to depart to his Countrey. The thirtieth, this morning I heard of the taking of Malter Canning the Purfer, and William Chambers: whereupon I caused the Guzmat thip to anchor fast by me, thereby to stay her, till I might fee and heare how all stood on land. Also wee stayed a Barke of Rice, being informed that it belonged to the Portugals of Baffare : and from Baffare the came. In fine, I tooke out of her twelve or fourteene Quintals of Rice, and gave them thirteene pence a Quintall for it. After I had the ship, I wrote to the chiefe on land, that they should fend me all my men, with the value of all the goods which I had landed; which being performed, I would then deliuer their thip with all their people, and gaue time till the fift of October to returne mee answere : by which time if they did not, then I would dispose of ship and goods at my pleasure. Some tenne 20 of the chiefe men of the ship I tooke into my ship ; in the ship there being some foure hundred men, or toure hundred and fiftie-

The fixth, Medi loffer came aboord accompanied with four chiefe men, and many others. Hee brought me a great Preient. He came to intreate of Trade, and release of the ship which

The tenth. Heft the Barre of Swrat, and came to the Roade of Swally, and anchored in eight fathon es at high-water. It is from the Barre of Surat some ten or twelve miles North. The feuenteenth; the Gouernour of Amadanar came to the water-fide. The nineteenth, Handed, hauing aboord of my thip foure men for pledges. The one and twentieth, I concluded with the Gocameto Swelly. uernours and Merchants for trading with them, and fetling a Factorie in any part of their

The Articles agreed upon, and fealed by the Gouernour of Amadauar, and the Gouernour of Surat, and foure principall Merchants, and to be confirmed by the Scale and Firme of the Great Mogoll within fortie dayes after the former fealing, or elfe to be void; for the feeling of Trade and Factories in the Cities of Surat, Cambaya, Amadauar, Goga, or in any other part or parts of this Countrey within the Great Mogol's Dominions. Witnessed under our hands and Seales, the one and twentieth of Oftober, 1612. T Nprimis , that all which concerneth Sir Henrie Middleton be remitted, acquited and cluved I to us : that they Shall neuer make seisure, stoppage, nor stay of our Goods, Wares and Merchandizes to fatisfie for the same.

2 That they fault procure from their King the great Mogoll at their proper cess his grant and confirmation of all the Articles of agreement under the great Seale of his Land, and shall deliner the Same unto us for our securitie and certaintie of perpetuall amitie, commerce and dealing with them with- 50 inforcie dayes after the fealing hereof.

3 That it shall bee lawfull for the King of England to keepe and continue his Embassadour at the Court of the Great Mogell during the time of the faid peace and commerce, there to compound and end all such great and weightie Questions, as may any way tend to the breach of the said peace. 4 That at all times upon the arrivall of our ships in the Roade of Swally there shall bee Proclamation in the Citie of Surar three severall dayes together, that it Shall bee free for the Countrespeople of all forts to come downe to the water side, there to have free trade, dealing and commerce with vs. That all English Commodities Stall payenstome, according to the value or price that it beareth at the time that it is put into the Custome-house, after the rate of three and an halfe the hundred.

6 That all pettie and Pedlerly ware be free of Custome, provided that it exceed not in value tenne 60

7 That we shall have ten Manu for our Manuda carryed from the waters side to Surat : and af ter the same rate backe agains : and for Carts we are to repaire to the Moccadam of Swally to send for Surar, and at Surat to repaire to the Broker for Carts downe againe.

CHAP.7. S.2. Fight of the English with the Portugals.

8 That if any of our men dye in those parts, that then neither the King, nor Gouernour, nor under Officer shall make title or challenge to any thing that to the dead belonged, nor demand fees, nor any kind of Taxes, nor Customes.

That if all our men dye beere in these parts, betweene the times of the comming of our shippes. that then by some Office thereto appointed inst and true Inventorie, notice, and knowledge be taken, of all such Monies, Goods, lewels, Proxisions, Apparell, and what else to our Nation belongeth : and the same shall safely preserve and keepe, and deliver to the Generall, Captaine, or Merchants of the first ships that Rall after heere arrive : and to receive a discharge from the Generall, Captaine, or Merchants, to whom Such Goods and Monies Shall be delinered.

10 That they secure our men and goods upon the Land, redeeming all such both goods and men as shall buspen to be taken upon the Land by the Portugals: and shall deliner toth men and goods againe to us free of all charges, or the value of our goods and men instantly.

11 That as in all Kingdomes there are some Rebels and disobedient Subjects; so in our Nation there may be some Pirats, and Sea-Rouers, which may happen to come into these parts, and heere may rob and steale : if any such shall happen, then will not me by our Trade and Fastorie heere beelyable or answerable for fuch goods so taken, but will ayde shem with our best meanes that are so grieved, by Justice to our King, for redresse and restitution vato them.

11 That all such provisions of victuals as shall bee spent during the time that our ships shall remayne beere in the Roades of Surat and Swally, Chalbe free of Custome: provided, it doe not amount unto about 10 athousand Dollers in Money.

13 That in all Questions of wrongs and injuries that shall be offered unto us, and to our Nation, that we doe receive from the ludges and those that be in authoritie, present and specdie lustice according to the qualitie of our complaints and wrongs be done us, and that by delayes we be not put off, and wearied either

The fourteenth, I landed the Present for the Great Mogol, and brought it to the Tent of the Gouernour of Amadanar, who tooke notice of the particulars : also of our Kings Letter to their King to aduertife their King thereof. Which done, I returned the Present to my shippe againe, according to agreement with the faid Gouernour. For I had told him, that whilefie their King would confirme the Articles concluded on, and likewife write our King a Letter, I would not deliuer the Present, nor our Kings Letter : for if he refused so to do, then was he not a friend, but an enemie, and to the enemie of my King, I neither had Letter nor Prefent. Also the same day, the former finished, I deliuered our Present to the Governour of Amadanar, and another to

The fourteenth of November, 1 & 1 2. the Cafila of Frigats came in fight of vs, some two hundred and fortie faile. I had thought they had come to fight wish vs : but they were the Fleet of the Merchant men bound for Cambaya. And every yeare there commeth the like Fleet, all Portugals from the South Coalt, to wit, from Goa, Chaul, &c. to goe to Cambaya: and from thence they bring the greatest part of the lading, which the Caracks and Gallions carrie for Por- Notice of 40 tugall. By which may appeare the great Trade that the Portugals have in these parts.

The feuen and twentieth, I received Letters from Mafter Canning and Edward Christian: both The fight befignified of the comming of foure Gallions to fight with vs, and that they were readie, riding at tweene foure Portugals Galthe Barre of Goa, the fourteenth of Nouember.

The nine and twentieth, Mafter Carning came abootd : and the Portugall Fleet comming in Of these fights fight of vs yesterday, drew neere vp with the floud : and at two in the after-noone I did fet see a larger Re. faile, and at foure I was about two Cables lengths from the Vice-Admirall, fearing to goe lation in my faile, and at foure I was about two Cables lengths from the Vice-Admirall, fearing to goe Pilgrimagelis.5 neerer for want of depth, and then I began to play upon him both with great and finall shot, that (23.7 § 4. The by an houre we had well peppered him with some fittie fixe great shot. From him wee received Persugals had one small shot, Saker or Minion into our Maine Mast, and with another he sunke our long Boate: fouregreat

50 now being night we anchored, and faued our Boate, but loft many things out of it. The thirtieth, affoone as the day gaue light, I fet faile and fleered betweene them, bestirring our felues with our best endeuours, putting three of their foure shippes on ground on the They lost in fands thwart of the Barre of Smat. At nine I anchored. This morning the Hofiander did good feruice, and came through also be- their quandam tweene the ships, and anchored by me, vpon the floud the three ships on ground came off: we credit and one fer sails, they at anchor, and came to them, and spent vpon three of them, one hundred and ships or a said first and ships of ships or a said first and ships or a said fir and fiftie great shot : and in the morning some fiftie shot : and at night we giving the Admirall there sue hunour foure Peeces out of the sterne for a fare-well, he gave vs one of his Prow Peeces, either a dred men. And whole or Demi-culturing, which came even with the top of our Fore-callle, that thorow our English Trade feeled manager to Dauie, killed one man, to wit, William Borrell, and that the arme of another.

This day the Hofe and report whole report on our of the things, which was on ground, and from Nathentistate the enemie received many liou, and his bid killed the Boat-fwayne Richard Barker. Night manel keep, being some were brinched under the many liou, and the sing the most limit and artine of the was Material Clock they fent a Frigat to y. It is seen to come never, came drining right on the half of the the Hofen in.

these fights

Tois Frigat the shot, as Mr. her men were t ken vo drow-

December, 1. The Portugalls gine oner the

Sixehundred

and five and twentie great

Madafeldebar.

Holiander: and being discovered by their good watch, they made to shoote at it; the first, caused it to fet faile; the fecond went thorow their failes, and so they tooke their leave. Their purpose. doubtlelle, was to have fired vs, if they had found vs without good watch. The first of December, 1612. we rode, they not comming to vs, nor we to them : they might ther voto me, without danger of the lands have come to vs, not we to them. This day I called a Counfell and and eightie of concluded to go downe to haue a broader channell, hoping also that the Gallions would follow vs. The second, we went downe some sixe or seven leagues, but they followed vs not. The third, at flood we plyed vp againe, and anchored faire in fight of them.

The fourth in the morning, we weighed, and flood away before them. In the after-mone they gaue vs ouer, and stood in with the land againe : and at night we directed our course for Din. The fifth night, we anchored some source or fine leagues to the Eastward of Divintourteene fathoms, fand abourd the shoare.

The ninth, we came to Madafeldebar, and anchored in eight fathomes. It is from Din some ten or eleuen leagues, and lyeth nearest East and by North, a faire Coast, no danger but that you fee : your depth, if neare Din, fifteene, fixteene, when halfe-way, twelve fathoms, then ten and nine, not leffe : it is a faire fandy Bay ; and on the Welt-fide of the Bay is a River that goeth faire into the Countrey: and this place is some fine or fixe miles short to the Westward of the Isles of Mortie. The fifteenth in the morning, we departed from Madafeldebar, to go to Mohar, only 10 discouer the Bay : because some that were there in the Ascension, reported it to be a good place to winter in. At foure of the clocke in the after-noone, we anchored in the Bay of Moha; which is 20 from Madafeldebar nine or ten leagues, East North-east. Having found the Coast and channell ye. ry good, depth ten fathomes; no danger, but what you fee. I fent our Pinnasse on land, where presently we had twenty good sheepe, at three shillings a sheepe, the best we had this Voyage. The fixteenth in the morning, I fent our Pinnaffe on land, where we found few people, but the mines of a great Towne. The feuenteenth in the morning, the Generall of the Campe fent to me foure men, to intrest me to fend vnto him one of my men, that he might talke with mee.

The one and twentieth Handed, and had much conference with the Generall of the Campe: he much defired that I would land two peeces of Ordnance, making many and great promifes of fauour to our Nation; but I refused him. He presented me with a norse and furniture, and two Agra Girdles : And I presented him a Vest of Stammell, two Peeces, two Bottels of Aquanite, and a Knife. The two and twentieth, we faw the foure Gallions comming toward vs, and at nine at night they anchored within shot of vs.

The three and twentieth in the morning, by Sunne, we weighed, and began with them, and continued fight till ten or eleuen. Then they all foure weighed, and flood away before the wind, and so went from vs : for they failed large, much better then wee : wee followed them two or three houres, and then anchored. This day I spent upon them an handred thirtie three great thot, and fome feven hundred small thot. In this fight lohn Hackwel was killed with a great thot. The foure Gallions anchored from me fome two leagues.

The foure and twentieth, by Sunne rifing, I weighed and went to the foure Gallions, and by 40 eight began our fight, and continued it till twelve. And this day shot two hundred and fiftie great fhot, and one thousand small shot. By this time both sides were weary, and we all stood into the fea, and ifeered away South by East. The foure flurs following of vs, at two or three of clocke they laid it about and anchored. Now I began take knowledge of our powder and shot, and found more then halfe of our flot ipent, and of the Hosianders, having now ipent on the foure thippes fixe hundred, five and twenty great thot, and three thousand fmall thot. Being from the land some foure or fine leagues, we met with a fand, whereon there was some two or two fathoms and an halfe, and it lyeth from Moss South South-east, or thereabout, the end of the faid fand, I went ouer it in nine fathoms : and then were the two high hills, which are ouer the foure Gal. Goga nearest North of vs. Vpon this land was the Aftension cast away. The shoalding is some lions, and three thing fail. Betweene the land and this fand is nine and ten fathoms. Wee continued fleering thouland small South, with an ebbe. At low water we anchored in eight fathoms, the tide setting at East Northeast, and West South-west, by the Compasse. At twelve at mid-night I weighed, wind at North North-west, and steered South South-cast, depths twelve and fourteene sathoms. At soure steered East South-east. At fixe steered East still twelve fathoms, halfe a fathome more or liste. At nine we met with a banke, feuen fathomes, fiue or fixe cafts, then prefently ten, twelve, fourteene. Then the wind shortned on vs: we lay South-east. And about twelve taw the land of Daman East South-east. The high land to the Southward of Daman South-east by East. And being ouer this fand, we had prefently fourteene, fitteene, feuenteene, twenty fathoms. At two, being 60 high water, we anchored in feuenteene fathoms, faire in fight of land, Daman East Sou h east. The highest land to the Southward, South-east by South. At eight at night, wee set faile halfe tide, calme, still fifteene and fixteene fathoms, anchored all the ebbe.

The fixe and twentieth, at nine of the clocke in the morning, we fet faile, in the afternoone anchored off the Barre of Surat.

The feuenand twentieth in the morning, we were three or foure miles flort of Swally, and about twelve of the clocke we anchored in the Road of Smally. In the after-noon Thomas Kerridce and Edward Christian came aboord.

The fixt of February, the Firma came to Swally, as a private Letter : therefore I refuled to re. February 6. reque it, being lealous it was a counterfeit; requiring the chiefe men of Swat to come downe and deliuer it to me, with those rights that to it belonged.

The cleventh, the Sabandar, his father in law Medigoffer, and divers others came to Smally, and Ireceived the deliuered it to me, with profession of their Kings loue to our Nation. 10 The fourteenth, we landed all our cloath, three hundred and ten Elephants teeth, and all our firming of Quick-filter. The Gallions came within some three or foure miles of vs. The fixteenth, I landed Anthony Starkey, to trauerse home over-land for England, with Letters and aduertifement of our good fuccelle. The feuenteenth, I received all my goods from Surat: at night I fet faile, taking my leave of fent over-land thefe coafts: it fell calme, and I anchored. Note that in the Land of Cambaya it floweth South- for England, he weit and North-east. The eighteenth, I fet faile againe, came faire by the Gallions. They all weighed and followed and his Indias me fome two or three houres, and then we departed without shooting a shot on either side ... The nineteenth, thwart of Bafaim we tooke three Malabars, which had nothing in them: we Helesgeth tooke a Boat from one of them.

The twentieth, still we were faire aboord some fine leagues off, and came along the shoare in shaping his fourteene, eighteene, twentie fathomes water. At night we were faire ouer-against Chaul, feeing both Towns and Caftle.

The one and twentieth in the after-noone, wee were faire aboord Dabull, and heere were a- chaulboord three Iunckes, all of Calicut, laden with Cokers.

The two and twentieth, the Hoffander in the morning fent her Boat vnto two lunckes. At twelue of the clocke we were at the rockes, which lye at the Northward of Goa, ten or cleuen Goa. leagues, and lye from the Maine fixe or eight miles. Two or three of thefe rocks are higher then the hull of any ship. At fixe we were thwart of Goa, which is easily knowne by the Hand, which lyethat the mouth of the River, and vpon the Iland a Castle. From Daman till you come to 30 Goa, the shoare is very faire, no danger, and faire shoalding, not without fixteene or seventeene, nor within ten fathoms : good anchoring all the Coast, And all this Coast from Daman to God. lyeth nearest South and North, we steered along the Land. The foure and twentieth, we faw a Fleet of Frigats, some fixtie or eightie faile. bound to the AFleet of Fri-

Southward : heere Norther latitude thirteene degrees, halfe a minute. The high land by the was gats. ters fide left vs; and the land began to be very low, and faire shoulding sixteene or seventeene fathomes, some three or foure leagues off. In the after-noone we came into a Bay, where all the Aprize taken Frigats, and three or foure Gallyes were, and fetched out a thip laden with Rice : all the Portugalls fled in their two Boates; and also there were two Frigats abound of her, so that all good things they carryed away with them.

The fine and twentieth, we romaged our prize, finding nothing but Rice and course Sugar, of which we stored our felues, and tooke out both high masts, and what firing we could, and at night funcke her, taking out of her all the people, twentie or fine and twentie, all Moores.

The fixe and twentieth, wee met with a little Boate of Maldina, laden with Cokers, bound for Cananor, into which I put all the people of the prize; onely eight I kept for labour, one of cananor; them a Pilot for this Coalt. At twelve we were thwart of Cananor, latitude eleven degrees. The fenenand twentieth, we were shot a little past Calicut, and were thwart of Pannaire, at Caicut.

noone latitude ten degrees, thirtie minutes. The eight and twentieth in the morning, we faw Cochin, which maketh it felfe by the Towers Cochin.

and Caille : and in latitude nine degrees, fortie minutes, or there-about. Note that from God to Cochin, we never had aboue twentie fathomes, being fometime foure or fine leagues from land: Shoaldings. and being three, four and fixe miles off ten or twelve fathomes, from latitude eleven degrees. thirtie minutes to Cochin, very low land by the waters fide; but vp in the Countrie all along high land. Note that fhort of Cochin foure or five leagues, you shall see a high land in the Coun- Marks of land. trie, somewhat like a table, but rounding aloft. And to the Northward of this round hill, high long hills or mountaines. All this day we ran within fix or eight miles of the land, in nine, ten, twelve fathomes.

The nine and twentieth, calme, latitude eight degrees, some fixe leagues off, no ground in for- They ancho. tie or fiftie fathomes.

The thirtieth, we anchored in fifteene fathomes, some fixe and twentie leagues short of Cape orgenized organization. 60 Comori, against a little Village: and presently fixe or eight Canoes came aboord, and brought vs freshing. all proussions, water, Hennes, Cocos, &c. The name of this place is " Beringar : the Kings name " Our Mari

The one and thirtieth, all the day the people came to vs with Hennes, an lother victuals. The first of February, the people came with prouisions, and the King sent a messenger to me, February 1, great Megel his ling a Factory Anthony Stark was poy oned thefe Coafts,

The

CHAP.7.S.2.

to know whether I would trade with him : which if I would, he offered to lade my shippe with Pepper and Cinamom.

The fourth, the people still came to vs with provisions. At two of the clocke in the afternoone, we fet faile from Beringar : all the night I anchored.

The fifth in the morning we let faile, being faire aboord Cape Comorin: and heere met with fresh gale of wind at East by North, which split our fore-top-saile and maine bonnet, yet a Canoa with eight men came aboord me, three or foure leagues from land: in the after-noone came another Canoa. Heere we were troubled with calmes and great heate, many of our mentaken ficke, my felfe one of them. The eight, we came againe into the Roade of Beringar,

The Thirteenth, we fet faile from Beringar. Note that this place guieth good refreshing, with plentie of water, and the people harmeleffe, and not friends with the Portugals. From this place to the Cape, all the people that dwell by the waters fide are Christians, and have a Portugal Frier or Priest that dwelleth among them. All the night we anchored some foure of five miles from the two rockes, which lye of the Cape in eighteene fathomes. The two rockes lye fue or fixe miles from land.

The fourteenth in the morning, I fet faile, wind at East, and plyed to windward: wee haue a little current to the Southward. Note that the Coast of Malabar, even from Daman to Cape Comorin is free of danger, and faire shoalding on all the Coast from Cochin to the Cape: more Cape Comerin, neale fixteene, eighteene, twentie fathoms faire by the land: and fine or fix leagues off no ground after you come within fine and twentie or thirtie leagues of the Cape. The variation at Damas 20 degrees, thirtie is fixteene degrees, thirtie minutes. And halfe way to the Cape, it is fifteene or thereabout; and minutes. And heere at the Cape it is fourteene. And the Cape hath latitude North feuen degrees, thirtie milongitude from nutes. In the after-noone, we ran off open of the Cape, and found much wind at East South-tast, Good Hore fiftie which gaue no small hope of going to the Eastward, till the end of the Monson, which will bee the fifth of Aprill, or thereabout, as the Indians report. So I bore vp and anchored foure or five fixe degrees, leagues within the Cape, in twentie fathomes, faire by the two rockes. Right off from thele two thirriemin. A very dangerockes, lyeth a funcken rocke, which is very dangerous, and is some two miles without the forerous luncken faid two Rockes. If you come within twentie fathomes, you shall be in clanger of them : but fare and free of danger, is not to come within foure and twentie or fine and twentie fathomes. Here we flaved nine daves.

The life of

The eight and twentieth in the morning, at fixe of the clocke, we faw the Isle of Ceylon, East South-east, off fome eight or nine leagues : little wind at South, latitude observed seven degrees North. At foure of the clocke, we were faire aboord the land, depths thirteene, fifteene, fixteene fathomes. At eight flood off till day: little wind at South, being from the land five or fix leagues, no ground in fixtie or feuentie fathomes.

The first of March, all the morning becalmed: in the after-noone a Sea-turne at North-west March t. columbo in fixe and Weil. At fixe of the clocke, we were faire aboord Columbo, the latitude whereof is fix dedegrees, thirtie grees, thirtie minutes, or nearethere-about, dephts foure and twenty, fine and twenty fathoms,

> The twelfth, we flood in with the land, and anchored in foure and twentie fathomes, wind at South-east and South. I fent my Boat on land, foure leagues to the North of Punta de Galle: and after some stay, a woman came to talke with an Indian, that went out of our Boat : shee told him that we should have there no provisions: but faid shee would go and tell the men; which we defired. Afterward two men came to my Indian, and told him, that we should not have anything there, for that our Nation had sometimes taken a Boat of theirs : but it was the Hollanders, and not our Nation.

The fourteenth in the morning, at fixe of the clocke, the Southermost point of Cerlon, called Tenadare, whose latitude is fine degrees, thirtie minutes, and lyeth from Punta de Galle, East South-east, some ten or twelve leagues, bare East North-east some five leagues off. The leuenteenth, we were neare to one of the fands that Linfeor writteth of: it lieth from the land two leagues. We had fine and twenty fathomes when we flaid: ypon the land right against

A fand lying leagues off the

Captaine Best his entertainement at Achen.

He twelfth of Aprill at noone, we came to an anchor in the Road of Achen, in twelve fathomes; but you may ride in tenne or eight fithomes. Your best road is, to the East-ward of the Calile, and Rivers mouth. The thirteenth, I landed the Merchants, the King not beeing in Towne. The fitteenth, the King came, and fent his Chap to me for my landing, brought by an Emuch, and fixe or eight more, and also the Xabandar. To whom we gaue an hundred and twen- 60 Tick ngs tv M.m. With them the same day Handed ; and two houres after my landing, the King fent me . Present in victuals : I having presently upon my landing sent the King two peeces : for the certo ne is, at landing to prefent the King with some small thing, and he requireth it by scuerall this fand is a high Rocke like a great Tower. The land lieth here East North-east.

The fenenteenth, the King having fent an Elephant with a bason of Gold for our Kings letters, I rode to the Court accompanied with fortie of our men, all admitted into the Kings pretence; and after many complements, the King returned the Letter vnto me, for to read it; and Our Kings letso the substance of it was deliuered vnto him in his owne language. The contents pleased him to read to the very well. The day wel spent, the King told me, he would now shew me some of his pleasures; King of Achen. and caused his Elephants to fight before vs:and after fixe of them had fought, then he caused foure Buffles to fight before him, which made a very excellent and fierce fight. Their fiercenelle was fuch, that har ly fixtie or eightie men could part them, fastening ropes to their hinder legges, to draw them afunder. And after them some tenne or twelue Rams, which likewise made a very 10 great fight, and so continued till it was so darke that we could not see any longer. The King prelented me with a banket of at least foure hundred dishes, with fuch plentie of hot drinkes, as might have sufficed a drunken army. Betweene nine and tenne at night, he gave me leave to depart, fending me two Elephants to carry me home; but I rode not on them, they having no coue-The eighteenth, I went to th: Court againe, the King so appointing; where we beganne to treat of the Articles formerly made by his Grand-father, and M. James Lancaster. And comming to the matter of having all goods both brought in, and carried out free of custome, were ended, without concluding any thing. The nineteenth, the Embassa lour of Siam came to visit me, telling me of the three Englishmen The Embassa. that came to the King of Sam, and of their great entertainment, and toy of their King to receive come toyling a Letter from the King of England: and that it was some thirty Moneths since. They also told me. me how ioyfull their King would be, if our fhipping came to his coals; telling me what great Othis you quantities of cloath of Portugall, which is English cloth, would fell in their Countreys. The co-may read in lours most in request, stammed and reds, with some others, as yellowes, and other pleasing light M. Floris his colours, as at Surat. They also told me that their King had made a Congruent over all foundal, colours, as at Surat. They also told me that their King had made a Conquest ouer the whole Escaphicad Countrey of Pegu, and fo is now the greatest King of this Orientall part, except the King of clothes well China, and hath under him twentie fixe petty Kings; and in the warres is able to make fixe thou-find Elephants. Their coyne is all Silver. Their Gold is leffe effected then the valew thereof. Old in the sale of the mother of Into Eropains. Their coyie is an amount and rawe Silke. He faith, that the Hellunders have the water the representation of the restriction of the restriction of the restriction of the state cherical their Factories, whom they call English, at Patane, which is an excellent Port: the entrance of instance of instance of instance. twelue and four eteene fathomes. Likewise Stam is a good Port, and is needer vnto the Kings Hollanders cal-Court then Patane. Those that doe goe to the Citie of the King, alwaies come to this Port of St. led or calling am. And from this Port of Stam to the Kings Court, is some twenty dayes journey by land. I hemiclaes mound the Embalishour for his Letter to the King. which he promited me and allo for his Letter to the King. mooued the Embassadour for his Letter to the King, which he promised me, and also for his Letter to the Gouernours of Ports, in lauour of our Nation, when we should come vpon those coalts. And lattly, changed coynes with him, giving of our English coyne, and receiving the Kings coine of Siam. I had after this, often entercourse with their Embassadours.

The twentieth, I went to the Court, but spake not with the King : whereupon I sent to the Kings Deputie, and complained of my dehonour, and of tome abuse by the Xabandar offered vinto me. He promited that I should have prefent redresse, and that he would enforme the King thereof: which accordingly he performed the same day. The twentie one, the King sent two Officers vnto me, to fignifie that at all times I might repaire vnto his Court, with free accesse, and passe all the Gates without floppe, or attending for his Crest, and likewife removued the Nabardar, and appointed me the Gentleman, whom the King fent Vice-Embassa.lour into Holland, to attend, and accompany me at all times to the Court, and eliewhere at my pleafure.

The foure and twentieth, I wrote vnto the Court, and had acceffe vnto the King, who gave me all content, and promifed the rat fying of all the Articles, formerly agreed upon by his Predecellour, and M. lames Lancaster. Soufter divers complements, he tooke leave, and fent me home presently after my returne an Elephant to attend me, and to carrie me whither focuer it pleased. Afigneof most in me to trauell. And this is a figne of the honourablest esteeme that they hold of the parties to honourable whom they fend their Elephants: for none may haue an Elephant, nor ride on them, but those siteeme.

whom the King doth honour.

The fecond of May, the King inuited me to his fountaine to swimme, and I was with him; it May 1. 16:3; being some fine or fixe miles from the Citie, and he sent me two Elephants to carrie me and my prouifion; and having washed and bathed our felues in the water, the King presented me with an exceeding great banquet, with too much Racke, all to be eaten and drunken as we fate in the water; all his Nobles and great Captaines being prefent. Our banquet continued from one of the clocke till towards fine:at which time the King released me; and halfe an houreafter all strangers, and presently after followed himselfe.

The foureteenth, certaine Portugalls came into Achen, which came from Malacca with an 60 The four-teenth, certaine Portugalls came into Acres, which same from Postages to the Embaling from the Governour to this King. The wind thort, they landed three leagues to the Edward Carlo the Rule which came. Eastward of the Road of Achen. This day I fent the Hoftander to feeke the Barke which came as Capting from Malacca, making Edward Christian Captaine in her. The seuenteenth in the morning, the of the history Portugal Barke was brought vitto me aboord the Dragon. But before the came aboord, the King dr.

462

fent two Messengers to me, to desire me to release both her, and that which might bee in her. which I retufed to doe: answering, that I would not release her, untill I had seen both the Barke and that which was in her: but willed them to tell the King, that in honour of him, whatformer he required, I would doe for him. Afterward the Barke came, and by Edward Christian I was informed, that there were some foure or fine fardels in her, and that nothing was medled withall that was in her. Wherein being certified, I came on land, and found my Merchants to be at the Court, who by and by after came in, informing me of the Kings great diff leafure, for taking the Portugall Barke in his Port, proteiting by his god, That he would make them all prisoners, if the Barke were not releated. The King having intelligence of my comming on land, prefently fent

Barke were not released. The anguards away going, I meta Gentleman that came from the room on the way to the Court, as I was going, I meta Gentleman that came from the room of the room o fine, I came to the Court, and presently was brought before the King: where after much discourse. at the Kings request, I gaue him the Barke, and all that was in her, with which hee was much pleased, and gaue me an honourable title, to wit, Arancaia Puto: which fignifieth, The honourable White man, requiring his Nobles to call me by the same name. And further, to acknowledge his thankefulneffe to me, he fold me his Beniamin at mine owne price; namely, at twenty Tayls the Bahar, it being worth thirty foure and thirty fine, professing by generall tearmes his love, and much efteeme of mee, willing me to aske whatfoeuer I would of him. I required onely his Letters of fauour vnto Priaman, which he most willingly promised. Of his Mangoes, whereof him. felfe did eate, he gaue me to eate, and likewise to carry to my lodging, and so I tooke leaueand 20 The feuen and twentieth, Malim Gauy came to Achen, by whom I received Letters from our Letters from Merchants at Surat, and also a Copie of the Kings Firma, lent them from Agra, bearing date the twenty fifth of lanuary, and the leventh yeare of the Great Mogols raigne, confirming all that Copie of the Great Ategels was paffed betweene the Governour of Amadauar and me. The seuenteenth of June, 1613. came there a Merchant of the Hollanders into Achen from Iune, 1613. Masulipatan, and had been eight moneths on his journey. He told vs of the death of Captaine Anthonie Hippon, who died in Patane, and of M. Browne Mafter of the Globe, who died in Mafulipates, and that they had been cuill dealt with at Mafulipatan.

The foure and twentieth, I received of the King his Present for the King of England; namely, 30 his Letter, a Cryse or Dagger, an Hasega, foure pieces of fine Callican lawne, and eight Camphire

See this Letter transcribed, as a ravitie for the Reader, out of M. Copelands Journall, which was Minister in that Voyage, and followeth in the next Chapter.

July, 1613. The Factorie The third of Iuly, the Kings Armada arrived, and had been but twenty dayes from the coast of for to Achen. In for they tooke the Factorie of the Hollanders, and made a prey of all their of the Hollangoods, and brought hither prisoners of the Hollanders some twenty or twenty source. The seventh, ders deftroyed I received the Kings Letter for Priaman, and the Chap for my departure. The twelfth, I tooke He departeth my leaue in Achen, and came aboord. from Achen.

The thirteenth in the morning, I fet faile, and comming neere the great Westermost Iland, open 40 of the Northermost gut; in the same He we found faire shoulding twenty fathomes, cleane ground, fand, agood birth from the land. This depth with cleare ground continued almost to the end of the Hands to that on the East fide of this Hand, there is very good anchoring, and on the Hand great store of wood. But beeing neere the great Hand, to the East-ward of this, wee could get no ground: betweene these two great Ilands is the bestand safest course, going on or out to the road of Achen. Likewise, to the Eastward of the Eastermost Hand, but that is out of the way. Note, that from the twelfth of Aprill to the middeft of June, we had much raine, feldome two dayes without raine, with guils and much wind. From the fifteenth of June, to the twelfth of July, very much wind, very fore stresses, alwayes at South-West, and West South-West, and West.

d. III.

Trade at Tecoo and Passaman : their going to Bantam, and thence home.

Tecoo.

Surat, with the

He third of August, we were in fight of Priaman, nine or tenne leagues off, it bearing from vs North-east by East, it shewing with two great high hils, making attaire swamp or faddle betweene them both. We fawe aifs Tocoo the high land on it : it is not more then halfe so high as Priaman land, and rifeth something flat. Then we saw also the high 60 land of Passaman, which lieth some seuen or eight leagues to the North-ward of Tecoo, even mid way betweene Fassaman and Priaman, which Mountaine is very high, and rifeth like Monte Gi-

Paffanan. They arrive at Tecor.

The fewenth in the afternoone we came to Tecoo, and anchored on the East fide of the three

CHAP.7.S.3. The commodious Roade, and plentie of Santa Helena. Hands in feuen fathomes. The Souther-most Ile bore West South-west. The middlemost West

North-West. The Northermost North, and halfe East a mile from the Ilands. The ninth, I landed my Merchants; and in the afternoone I landed with the King of Achens Letter. The eleventh, Icalled a Counfell for fending the Hofiander for Priaman with the Kings Letter, which departed the next day, and returned the eighteenth, and was fent to Bantam.

The fine and twentieth, there came in a luncke of Bantam, the Owners Chinefes. They confirmed vnto me the death of Sir Henrie Middleton, with the lotte of most of the men of the Death of Sir Trades Increase, and Maine Mast which brake with forcing her downe to carine her, and that H. Middleton. now the was gone from Pulo Panian to Bantam: that three hundred Chinefes dyed in working The Tradepering

The eight and twentieth, my Boat and men returned from Pallaman, having beene well intreated, and brought with them the Scrivane of the place to deale with me : with whom I dealt and went through.

The fourteenth, the Gouernour called me on Land, being fet with all the chiefe: I came to him. and after much talke agreed for the price of Pepper: Money, eighteene Dollers the Barre. Lastage, eight pence the Barre. Canikins, thirtie the Barre. Seilars, thirtie fiue the Barre. They indented for Presents to fixteene great men.

The thirtieth, Henrie Long came from Passaman, and gaue mee knowledge of the sicknesse of Master Olmer and divers others dead, whereupon I fent my Shalop to setch both him and all o-20 ther of my men away, and to furcease my Factorie there.

The one & twentieth of October, the Hoffander returned. The Merchants from Bantam wrote to me that they had readie feuenteen thousand bags of Peppertail which, if it pleased me to come thither, Ishould have, or as much thereof, as should seeme good vnto me, at thirteene Dollers the Timbane. Out of these and many other considerations, I presently called a Counsell: wherein we concluded that the Dragon should goe for Bantam; and the Hosander should flay in the Road of Teco, vpon the fale of Surat goods: all which being put aboord of her, I departed from the Roade of Teco the thirtieth of October.

In this Roade I had stayed eleuen weekes, and bought one hundred and sisteene or one hundred and twentie tunnes of Pepper, and buried of our men fine and twentie. All which either 30 dyed, or contracted their deaths at Passaman, and not at Teco. And certainly, had wee not at Passamanis a tempted trading at Passaman, they had been either all, or the greatest part of them now living, very contagi-Therefore I doe with all our Nation neverto attempt the sending of our men to Passaman, For our place. the Ayre is fo contagious there, and the water fo euill, that it is impossible for our people to liue The thirtieth, in the after-noone I fet faile from Teco: at fixe at night wee were thwart of He departed the offerm of of the three Hands; all night we steered South South-west.

The eleventh of November, we arrived in the Roade of Bantam in foure fathomes one quarter They prived lesse. The twelfth, I called the Merchants abourd, and concluded on the price of Pepper at thir- in the Road of teene Dollers the Bahar: which is fixe hundred pound of our weight. The fourth of March at eight at night I fet faile from Saldanha, having bought heere with a little Copper, which at ten pence the pound might be worth fome three pound tenne shillings, foure hundred ninetie foure Sheepe, foure Beeues, nine Calues. On the day of our comming to Sea the people brought vs more then we could buy, or knew what to doe withall. We brought to Sea eightie Sheepe, two Beenes, and one Calfe. The foure & twentieth North North-west halfe West till nine, ten leagues & an halfe. Then They saw San-

West till fixe in the morning twelue leagues. Then we saw Sanita Helena from vsWest North- ta Helena, west some eight or nine leagues off. I find the latitude of it to be sixteene Southerly. Also we obferued at noone : and it hath longitude from the Meridian of the Cape of Good Hope, twentie two degrees. At three of the clocke we anchored in the Roade right against the Chappell. 50 While I was at Saint Helena, I fent my Boates to the West-ward to find a shorter way to the Another Road

Limon Trees, and to bring downe Goates and Hogges with more east. For from the Chappell at Santa Helena, to the Limon Trees is a most wicked way: and euen a dayes worke to goe and come. In fine, in feeking they found some three or foure miles to the South-west a faire Valley, which leadeth the former. directly up to the Limon Trees. It is the greatest and fairest Valley from the Chappell; and either the next or the next lane one from the South-west point from the Chappell : Heere in this The best water Valley is better water, and more cleere, then at the Chappell, the Reade all one for ground and depth. Heere at this Valley it is much better being then at the Chappell, both for getting of all prouisions, and for watering. It is from the Chappell some three or foure miles, and is from it the fourth Valley or Swampe : and from the Point to the Weft-ward of it, the fecond. So that 60 you cannot mille of it. It is heere much better riding then at any other place on the Hand, From this place you may goe up to the Limon Trees, and downe againe in three houres. Heere we got some thirtie Hogges and Pigges, and some twelve or fourteene hundred Limons. In eight or ten dayes a man may heere get two hundred Hogges, and many Goates, lying on land of purpole to kill them. The variation is here feuen degrees thirtie minutes.

The fourth of lune 1614, we faw the Lizard North from vs , some foure or fine leagues off And now our iongitude from the Cape of Good Hope was twentie feuen degrees twentie minures, and two degrees carryed by the Current. So that the difference of longitude betweene the Cape of Good Hope and the Lizard is twentie nine degrees twentie minutes, or very neere thereabout.

Note, that this day three moneths at night I did fet faile in the roade of Saldanha: yet not with standing our short passage, having beene from Santa Helena but two monethes and nine dares, the one halfe or more of our Company are laid up of the Scurule : and two dead of it. Yet had we plentie of victuals, as Beefe, Bread, Wine, Rice, O, le, Vinegar, Sugar; and all Comming fad these without allowance. Note, that all our men that are sicke, have taken their sicknesse since IC denyout of long heat into wee fell with Flores and Corno. For fince that time wee haue had it very cold, especially in two great fformes, the one with the wind a: North and North North-east: The other with the wind at South-west. From the Cape of Good Hope to the llands of Flores and Corno, I had not one man ficke. The variation foure or fine leaguesoff, the Start is nine degrees thirtie minutes, little great cause of more or leffe.

They arrive in the Thames.

The fifteenth, wee came into the River of Thames, it being that day fixe moneths fince wee came from Bantam in Iana.

Bleffed bee God.

CHAP. VIII.

Certaine Observations written by others employed in the same Voyage. Master Copland Minister, ROBERT BONER Master, NICHOLAS WITHING-TON Merchant.

Remembrances taken out of a Tractate written by Mafter PATRIKE COPLAND Minister in the former Voyage.

N the Tropickes are feldome or no stormes, but a smooth Sea with lost gales : sying fishes are frequent as bigge as a small Whiting : they flye twice the length of a thip. Turnados (guits within two degrees of the Line) cause all things, specially cloaths, to finell. They had ninetie or a hundred ficke, the rest weake, before they came to Soldania.

The Bay of Soldania and all about the Cape is so healthfull and fruitfull, as might grow a Paradife of the World; it well agrees with English bodies, for all but one in twenons of Soldania, tie dayes recourred, as at the first day they set forth. They had then in lune, Snow upon the hils, the weather warmish. The Countrey is mixed, Mountaines, Plaines, Medowes, Streams, the Woods as if they were artificially planted for order. There is free frone to build with, plentie of fish and fowle, wilde Geese, Partriches and Duckes, Antilopes, Deere, Riners, They had thirtie nine Beeues, one hundred and fifteene sheepe for a little Brasse cut out of two or three old Kettles. For the sheepe worth one penny, or one penny halfe penny the piece; the Berues twelve pence. The people are louing, afraid at first by reason of the vinkindnesse of Duich (which came there to make traine Oyle, who killed and thole their Cattell) and at our returne more 50 kind : of middle fize, well limmed, very nimble and active. They dance in true measure all nakel, only weare a short Cloke of sheepe or Seale skinnes to their middle, the hairie side inward, a Cap of the same, and a kind of Rats skinne about their printies; some had a Sole on their feet tyed about; their neckes were adorned with greafie Tripes, which fometimes they would pull off and eatraw. When we threw away their beatts entrailes, they would eate them halfe raw, the bloud lothfomely flanering : Bracelets about their armes they had of Copper or Juorie, with many Offrich feat! ers and shels.

Their persons

The Womens habit is as the Mens. They were shame-fac't at first; but at our returne homewards they would lift up their Rat-skinnes and flew their principles. Their Breaths hang to the middle, their haire curled. Copper with them i Gold; Iron, Silver, their Houses little Tents in 60 the field, of Skins, mourable at pleafure, their Language with doubling the tongue in their throat. There is a high hill, called the Table, ouer-couring all the adjoying Territories one hundred miles. Some went and discourred many Bayes and Rivers. The Negroes behaved themselves peaceably at Sinon, yet feeme of little or no Religion; they cut their skinnes like Baals Prietls, one I cemed (by making price) to be Commander.

CHAP. 8. S. I. The English royally entertained at Achen.

The Guzerates tooke fea-coale to carry for a wonder to the Mogol. The Fortugall Fleete was two hundred fortie fiyle of Frigats, Merchants bound for Cambaya, which furnish the Carracks, foure Gallions, with twenty fine or twenty fixe Frigats. The Admirall was Numo de Anenna. When the Sabandar perswaded him to keep between vs and shoare; heanswered proudly, that he Po.tugalpride. formed to spend a weekes prouision on his men in hindering vs, being able to force vs to yeeld inan houre. They had all red colours displayed. After three fights, they manned a Frigat, with fixe or feuen score best men to fire vs, which were all funke.

Medhaphrabads is now ruined by the Mogols warres, which sometime hath beene a faire Ci-Medhaprabads, tie, and walled. Here was a Cattle kept by the Ratifinches, in which at that time a strong Rebell to to the Mogoll, was belieged by the Nabob, with fittle or fixtie thousand people in his Campe. The Nabob had a flately and spacious Tent, couered aboue with Cloth of Gold, beneath spread with Turkie Carpets. The Generall would not firre till he had taken the Caitle. He fent a horse, and two Vests wrought with Silke and Gold to our Generall, and soure Vests for foure other. They have store of good Grapes, yet none but Rasin wine.

The three and twentieth and foure and twentieth of December, in view of the whole Army The fecond

we had a fecond fight, and forced them first to cut their Cables, and then flee from vs, being better place of fight. of faile then we. I rode to Surat in a Coach drawne with Oxen(which is most ordinary, though they have store M. Copelands of goodly hories) here in the way was the goodliest Spring and Haruest together that ever I saw; journey hence the Fields iowning, one greene as a Meadow, the other yellow as Gold, ready to bee cut: their ouer-land graine Wheat and Rice; they have excellent bread. All along were goodly Villages, full of Trees yeelding Taddy, like new sweet wine, much strengthening and fatting. Smat hath stone and taddy or bricke houses faire, square, stat-roosed, goodly Gardens, with Pomegranats, Pomecitrons, Li-Falme-wine, mons, Melons, Figs, continuing all the yeere, with curious fprings of fresh water: the people are grave, indicious, neat, tall, goodly cloathed in long white Callico or Silke robes. The Sabandar allured vs, that we had killed of the Portugals about three hundred and fiftie: we heard after that there were spoyled and killed aboue fine hundred. The Generall sent Letters by land, and the Meffenger with his Indian were poyloned by two Friers homewards; but a fecond Letter was delivered to a Mariner, which came to their hands.

The twelfth of Aprill, they anchored in the road of Achen , where the King welcomed our Anno 1613. men. The Arancaia came riding in a Tent on an Elephants backe, with two or three of the Kings boyes (for he is attended with Boyes abroad, Women within ) holding a Bafon of Gold, to receine the Kings letter. Our Generall followed with fortie or fiftie men. After the Letter and Prefent delivered, the King told vs we should see some of his Pastime, and called for his Cockes. which after they have fought about once or twice, they take them vp,bath them, picke their feathers, and fow up their wounds. After an houre thus fpent in Cock-fighting: his Rammes fought very fiercely; then his tame Elephants more cruelly: then his Buffles most stomackfully. Finally, our Antilopes wherewith our Generall had prefented him, whole fight best pleased him. Hee all this while drinkes Tobacco in a Siluer Pipe; given by his Women which are in a close roome behind him. After this. Supper was ferued in by young Boyes of foureteene or fifteene yeeres in Smaffe(a mettall halfe Copper halfe Gold.) This Supper continued from feuen till almost twelve, in which we had foure hundred dishes with hot drinkes. The next day the King sent the Generall an Elephant to ride on, and appointed one of his chiefe Arancaias to attend him alwayes. They had continuall free accesse granted, without the Kings Creese (which is vied as a Scepter) and promife to ratifie the Articles agreed vpon by his Predeceffors, and Sir lames Lancafter.

The second of May, all Srangers were invited to a banquet fixe miles off, for which purpose two Elephants were fent for our Generall, Here were all the diffes brought by water, the boyes holding the dish with one hand, and swimming with the other : so did they carrie the strong drinke also, whereof when they had tasted (which they must of all) they threw the rest into the 10 River. It continued from one till five. In it were five hundred difhes well dreffed. Our General (weary with fitting by the King thus long in the water) was difmiffed an houre before the reft. The Captaine of the Dutch house, taking there his bane, either with hot drinke, or cold fitting fo long in the water, foone after died.

The fecond of June, they were entertained with a fight of foure Elephants, with a wild Tvgre tied at a stake, which yet fastening on their Trunks and legges, made them to roare and bleed extreamely. This day we were told, that one eye of a Noble man was plucked out, for looking on one of the Kings women washing in a River. Another Gentleman wearing a Shash, had his head round out to farre as that was too large. Some he is faid to boyle in scalding oyle, some are fawneapences, others their legges out off, or spitted aline, or empaled on stakes.

The twentie fifth, was before the King a fight of wild Elephants, which would quickly kill Elephants The twentie http, was perore the Ming a ignit of who sharp them backe, formetime eighty each other, but that fome tame are made fail to them, which draw them backe, formetime eighty the formetime. or an hundred men helping. They fe one wild betweene two tame to tame them. He fent the King a Letter, for painting and writing most stately, a Creele, &c. for a Pretent.

The

The Table. Porcupins

The Letter is thus Englished.

EDVCKA SIRIE SVLTAN King of Kings, renowmed for bis Warres , and fole King of Sumatra, and a King more famous then his Predecessors, feared in his Kingdome, and honoured of all bordering Nations: in Whom there is the true Image of a King, in whome raignes the true meshode of Gouernment, formed as it were of the most pure Mestall, and adorned with the most fimest colours: Whose Seat is high, and most compleat, like to a Christall River, pure and cleare as the Christall Glasse: From whom sloweth the pure streams of Bountie and Instice: whose Presence is as the finest Gold, King of Priaman, and of the Mountaine of Gold, viz. Solida, and Lord of nine forts of Stones, Used, A long of Himmircocs of Seaten Gold, human for his Seat ment of Gold, but presisted States, they of two Seat ment of Gold, but presisted States Here of the Armous for his field, seeing likes of of pure Gold. His Elephan with test of Gold, and all Produces the Gold, Laife States, his foodlink test of Gold, and all Produces the Gold, Laife States, his foodlink of the lane, a Saddle also for an other Elephant of the same Mettall: a Tent of Silver, and all his Scales halfe Gold halfe Silver. His Vessels for bathing of pure Gold, his Sepulchre of Gold (where is his Predecessours had all these halfe Gold balfo Silner ) his services compleat of Gold and Silner. A King, water whom there are many Kings, hauing taken the King of Arrow: All the Country of Priaman, Tecco, Baroule, beeing subjused by him, is now under his Command: Seventic Elephants, and much Provisions carried by fea, to make his Warres at Attow, where God gaue me more Victory, then any of my Predesesfors.

This Great King sendeth this Letter of Salutation to IA MES, King of Great Britaine, viz. Eng. Into Great Copy and reland, To signific the great content he bath received by his Highnesse Later, delivered by the bands of Arancaia Pulo, Thomas Belt his Maiesties Embassar, as the recept whereof, his eyes were surprized with a Celestial brightnesse, and his spirits ramified with a Dinine in: the opening thereof rendred a saucur more fragrant then the most odoriferous Flowers, or sweetest persumes in the World. For which cuife, I the great King of Sumatra, doe professe my Selje to bee of one heart, of one mind, and of one stells with the most Potent Prince I A M E & K. of E. igland, and do exceeding desire that the League begun, may le continued to all Posterities. And herein I take my greatest Felicitie, there being nothing in the World incre pleasant or toy full to me. And for a Testimony of my defire, that the League and Amitie begun may be continued betwirt Us, I have returned this Letter unto your Maissis, making also my Prayers unto the Great GOD for the continuance of the same. And it shall be my greatest Honour to receive Memoriall from fo Great a Potentate, and fo remote a Nation. And for a Pledge of my 30 Lone, and Honour, and continuance of Our League, I fend your Maiestie a Creefe wrought with Gold the Hilt thereof being beaten Gold with a Ring of Stones, an Assaya of Smalle, halfe Copper halfe Gold, eight Purstan Dishes small and great, of Camfire one piece of sowring stuffe stores pieces of Calico Lawne: Which your Maiestic accepting as from a Brother, I shall rest satisfied, and much honoured. And so with my Prayers to the Great GOD, Creator of Heauen and Earth for your Maiesties long life, with Vi-Story over your enemies, and Properitie in your Land, Given at our Pallace of Achen, the 1022. yeere of Mahomet, by the accompt of the Moores,

Description of the King and

This King of Achen is a proper Gallant man of Warre, of thirty two yeares, of mildle fize, fill of spirit, strong by sea and land, his Countrey populous; his Elephants many, whereof wee 40 faw one hundred fixtie, or one hundred eightie at a time, his Gallies and Frigats carry in them very good Braffe Ordnance, Demicanon, Culuerin, Sakar, Minion, &c. his building stately and spacious, though not firong; his Court at Achen pleafant, having a goodly branch of the Maine Riuer about and through his Pallace, which branch he cut and brought fixe or eight miles of, in twenty dayes, while we continued at Achen. Sumatra is very Mountainous and Woodie: the people courteous: wept at our departure, leaving little without his chop. Strangers may neither come at him, nor depart from him. He defired the Generall to commend him to the King of England, and to entreat him to fend him two white women. For (faid hee) if I begetone of them with child, and it prooue a Sonne, I will make him King of Priaman, Paffaman, and of the Coast from whence you tetch your Pepper: so that yee shall not need to come any more to mee, 50 but to your owne English King for these Commodities, July the twelfth we tooke I age of of-

The ninth of August they went on shoare at Tecoo: here they stayed eleven weekes, hought The aire and one hundred twenty Tunne of Pepper, buried twenty fine men, which got their death at Palawater at Pass. man, for Tecco is healthfull. Perper growes most at Passaman, and the Countrey about.

> I have thought good also here to adde a word or two taken out of the Journall of Nathaniel S.Imon, Master of the Salomon.

The Sabandar counfelled the Admirall Numba del Cunha, to cause his Frigats to ride l'etwixt the shoare and vs, so to keepe vs from watering, which he refuted: yea, M. Canning ( which had 60 been taken by them) was delinered at our house in scorne, they protessing this their only feare and care, least we should run away. The three that were driven a ground had there perished, but for their Frigats. Out of the fire-Frigat were taken up eightic foure men drowned. The Dragon in these fights hath spent fixe hundred thirtie nine great shot, and we three hundred eightie sugar

At what time most conveniently to passe the Line. CHAP.8. S.Z.

> ð. II. Notes taken out of M. Robert Boners Journall, who was then Mafter in the Dragon.

He first of February, having received in all provisions for so long a Voyage, we set faile Departed from from Grauefend, and the same day at ten of the clocke we anchored in the Hope. Aprill the thirteenth, wee had the generall wind. Indee that you man remove meete with the generall wind, till you come in two or three degrees to the South ward of the Line, and then, when you cometto meete with the Ternadors, (as you find the Southers, as the Southers are the Southers and Southers are the Southers are the Southers are the Southers are the Southers and Southers are the Southers and Southers are the Southers are the Southers and Southers are the South Aprill the thirteenth, wee had the generall wind. Note that you shall seldome The generall 10 fure to meete them in two or three, and fometimes in foure degrees to the North-ward of South e fla the Line: you must be very diligent to ply to the South-ward) for therein lyeth the mayne of Taracter. your good or bad passage, and likewise for the health of your men, or they are very villealthfull, and for paffing the Line, order it fo by your course from Maio, that you may passe the Line betwist feuen and ten degrees of longitude from the Lizard. But couet not to come within fixe degrees, for feare of the calmes upon the Coaft of Guinea, and not without ten degrees of lon- This endanges gitude from the Lizard, if it be possible, for feate of meeting with the West North-west streame, red and much gitting from the Location, in the performance of the West-Indies. And so passing the Line in seuen, eight, or nine degrees to the West-ward of the Meridian of the Lizard, you shall not feare Borin the third the flats of Brafil. For the generall wind will blow at the East South-east, and at South-east; so Voyage, as you 20 that you shall make a South South-west way commonly, and so keepe the ship good full, that may read in the may goe through, for there is loffe of time, in hawking of the ship crosse by the wind, therefore give her a fathome of the sheete.

Note, he that comes out of the Sea, bound in for the of Bay of Soldania, let him keep himselfe betweene thirtie three degrees fiftie minutes, and thirtie foure degrees twentie minutes of latitude, fo shall you be fure not to come much wide of the Bay. If seeing the land you find it high, then you are to the South-west-ward of the Bay; if low fand hils, then know that you are to the North-ward of the Bay of Soldania. But falling with the high land to the South-ward of the Soldania Bay, which is betwixt the Cape and the Bay, the land lyeth North North-west; and South South-east from the Cape seuen leagues, and then it trents away North-east and South-west-30 towards the point of the Sugar-loafe, fome foure leagues : and from this point of the Sugar-loafe lyeth Penguin Iland, but keepe faire by the point : for two miles from Penguin lland lyes a shoales: it is from the point to the Iland some seuen or eight miles North and South, and so borrowing on the faid point, at eight or nine fathome, your courfe South-east, and East South-east, vntill you bring the Table South South-west, and the Sugarloafe hill South-west and by West, and so you may anchor in fixe and an halfe or fixe fathome, as you will, and then will the point of the land by the Sugar-loafe beare from you West Northwest, and Penguin Hand North North-west some three leagues off, and the point some two miles off. The latitude of the Bay of Soldania, I meane of the point going in, is three foure degrees fine minutes, the variation of the Needle is fortie minutes Eafterly : when you come in with the 40 land heereabouts (although it be thicke) feare not : for the land is bold within a Cables length.

I am of opinion that the Current neere Cape Das Aguilhas fets Southerly not past fittie or Current neers fixtie leagues off the land, and therefore being bound to the East-ward haule off the land fixtie Cape Das A. leagues, after you are to the East-ward of Cape Das Aguilhas, so shall you find no Current. The tuibu. land lyes from the Cape Das Aguilhas, ninetie or one hundred leagues East Northerly, and not as in the Cards East North-east.

Ino de Nona, is a low ragged Hand, about foure miles in length, lying South South-east, and North North-west. This Hand hath latitude seuenteene degrees thirtie minutes, and longitude Note. from the Cape of Good Hope, nineteene degrees fortie minutes, &c. Wee had no ground at one hundred fathome: we can perceiue no danger from it, only at the South-South-east end of it lies So a small breach about a mile off: therefore feare not to haule in fight of it, being bound this waies, for if you shall haule over for the Maine, you shall be mightily troubled with a strong Current fetting to the South-ward, and there are likewise many dangerous bankes, whereon many Porsugals have lost their ships, wherefore be fore you have not much to the West-ward of this lle Ino de Nova, for you may very boldly haule in fight of it without danger, and fo shall you not meete with the Current.

The eight & twentieth day of Nouember, we received a Letter from M. Canning, & our Purfer Foure Gallions eccerning foure Gallions of War, with thirty faile of Frigats, which were comming to fight with & 30. Frigate vs. And this day we faw them fome two leagues to the South-ward of the Barre of Surat. This Salander a day the Sahandar of Surat came abourd to verw vs as wee indge being a friend to the Portugalt, Spyc. but the more he looked the worle he liked, we having all things readie, &c.

The nine and twentieth day, at two in the after-moone wee let faile, and flood with the foure This day wee Gallions and Frigats which were come within some two leagues of vs. The first which we met began our withall was the Vice-Admirall: wee gane her fach a welcome, as that the was glad to hafte vnto fight. the reft with all speed; night being neere and our long Boat funke, at our sterne with an valuekey shot, we anchored.

Ian. 3,

The thirtieth day, early in the moorning wee fet faile, and stood with them, and atter some houres fight put three of the Gallions afheare on the offermost land, and then wee stood into deeper water, and anchored: their F. igats were fraight aboord the ships aground, and shoared them vp with their yards, or els I thinke they had neuer come off. Afloone as the Floudcome wee weighed, but they were affoate ere wee could get to them : wee fought with them till it was darke, and had one man kild, and another burt.

The first day of December, 1612. we roade within a league one of the other, alwayes we had thought they would have come to vs, we having gone to them three leverall times, but they are not to hastie, I thinke they have more minde to goe for Goa againe.

The nineteenth day, there came a second Messenger from a great Lord of the great Mogels 10 from a place called the Castellet, which place this great man lyes in Campe against, sending our Generali word that if he will but come thwart that place with his ships to grace him , hee will be a fworne friend vnto the English for ever. The Generall hearing that hee was a great manin fauour with the King, resolved to goe spend a day or two with him, to see what his defire was.

The twe stieth day, we anchored thwart of the Campe beeing close by the Sea-side, for the Caitle be fiegedbutted upon the Sea, they in the Caitle being a companie of Rebels and Rouers on the Sea.

The one and twentieth day, upon the receit of good caution for his person, our Generall landed, and at three returned to thip.

The two and twentieth day, we law the foure Gallions and Frigats againe in fight, having 20 beene at Din for more fresh Souldiers, to have a bout more with vs. At night they anchored within a mile of vs.

The three and twentieth day by day light, we were under-faile, and stood with the Admirall. and so fought till two of the clocke, at which time they cut their Cable, and began to runne, the Admirall having received a shot under water: but the helpe of the Frigats brought her upon the Carine presently, and stopped it, and so for this time sled, all the Campe standing by the Seafide looking on vs, within a league or two miles of vs. For a great Commander did there inft by vs befiege a Castle holden by Rebels and Pirats, and were willing Spectators of this Sea-fight.

Perttugale fain to five.

The foure and twentieth day, we flood with them againe, and fought with them till two or three of the clocke in the after-noone. They fled, and being light thips and cleane, went from vs: 30 one man kild, and no more hurt, prayfed be God for all his mercies. Note, that wee have frent The number of five hundred eightic great flot, and three thousand small shot out of the Dragon, and some fixtie thor pent in our fue fights. Barrels of Powder: their Admirall had thirtie eight Peeces, and the rest thirtie by ship, very good Ordnance. This night we feered for Surat South-east, to haule without the fands. South from Mea fome fixe leagues off lyes the first spit, on which fand the Ascension was lost.

The foorth day of February 1612. wee fet faile and flood to the South-ward, wind at

The fifth day, being some eight leagues thert of Cape Comorin, were met with the wind at East very much wind, so that we plaine see there is no going to the East-wards, the Easterly Monfon not being done. Heere we anchored at a point of the land, from which point the land 40 trents away East South-east with the Cape of Comorin, and distant eight leagues : but beware Sunten rocks, how you come neere this point, for thwait of it foure miles off lyes two funken Rockes closeby the edge of the water, and lyes in the streame of twentie or twentie two fathomes : wherefore keepe off in twentie eight or thirtie fathome, and feare them not. But bee fure that you keepe within thirtie fine or fortie fathome, for the Current fets off South with the Maldines, and being calme fome Portugal thips have beene driven to the Maldines, and beene in great danger. You shall know this point from the which these two susken Rockes lye, by this. Thwart of the pointlye two bigge Rockes a good heighth about the water : a league right of from the Eathermost of the dry Rockes lye the two funken Rockes, where we reade, the two dry rockes did beare from vs South-east and by East foure miles of the Nor-hermost: here the people will come 50 aboord of your ship enery day with prouitions as Hons, and Hogges with linnesse in their little

The fine and twentieth day at four a clocke, the Cape of Comorin did beare North North-Note, for the west some source leagues off. Note, that the Cape it solle is very low land with two craggie Cape of Comor Rockes lying a little from it, but up in the Countrey, high rogged land; the Cape of Comorin ria, for longi-tude, latitude feuen degrees ifftie minutes, and longuade from the Meridian of the Cape of Good tude, latitude, Hope, fiftie feuen degrees twentie minutes East. The variation is fourteene degrees thirtie mi-and variation. nutes Welterly: we have very faire shoulding of from it twentie foure fathomes, foure leagues of fand, from the Cape the land trents away East North-east.

I doe thinke that the Gulfe of Cambaya is the worst place in all the indies for W. rmes, and 60 therefore the ships which goe for Swat, must have good provision. The Barre of Surat hath latitude twentie one degrees ten minutes, and longitude from the Cape of Good Hope fiftie three degrees thirtie minutes Easterly. Variation sixteene degrees situe minutes Westerly. Latitude of Smally is twentie one degrees twentie minutes. Variation Luenteene degrees no minutes.

The Road of Achen hath latitude fine degrees fortie minutes South, and longitude from the The Lands. Cape of Good Hope of feuentie three deg. thirtie foure min, East, And from the Cape of Comorn longitude and Cape of Committee of Association and Association and Association of the Committee of Committee o fterly. As you ride in the Road one high great Hand will beare North of you, diffant force fixe Aben, leagues, and the two other bigge Hands will beare from the West South-west to the North-west and by Weil, anchor hold good : in the Weilerly Monion, you shall have many times very much wind, with guits of raine, but you shall ride very well: there goes a small Current to the Eastward, and West-ward in manner of a tyde, but not so certaine, and heights and fals some fine to or fixe foot water.

The King loueth our Generall exceeding well, in fo much that hee maketh no fport, but hee commands forme one of his Nobles to goe for the Arrankaia Patee, for so hath hee named him: to that all the Citie through is he called by that name, and all our men by the common people very kindly entertayned, more then euer any strangers heretofore have beene.

In steering North North-west from the little Hand, which lyes South-west and by West seuen leagues from Priaman Iland, wee faw a should bearing from the faid little Iland South-east and by South flue miles off. We fent our Boat to it, who found it but three fathome Rockes. From this should the Homockes of Tecu beare North and by West: wherefore beeing bound for Notesfor the Teen, keeper off, so that the Homockes may beare North, or North and by East, and feare not. Road of Teed. The Homockes are two round alls standing upon the low-land close by the Sea-side. At two a 20 clocke we saw the three little round ilands of Tecu, which Hands you must ride under, they beare of ws. North and by East some foure leagues off, wee steere North, keeping the Hands open on our ftarboard bow.

Note, that by good looking out you shall perceive any danger by this: it will shew it selfe in white spots. For otherwise the Sea is of his perfect colour, as in the maine Ocean. At night wee anchored within two leagues of the two outermost Hends of Tecn in thirtie fathomes, the llands bearing North and by East, and the Homocks North Easterly.

Note, the Homockes doc trand tome three leagues to the Northward of the Hands of Tecu, Variation of there being in all three of them, but the Northermost of the three Homockes doth not shew it Texas 4-degre felte fo perfectly, as the other doe.

The feuenth of August in the morning, weighed and plyed in, the wind at the North Northeast of the land we see a shoale, bearing from the two offermost Ilands of Tecu South-west & by South foure or fine miles off, right in the faire way. We fent our Boat to it and found it but two fathome & a halfe, being a Rocke of two Cables length long. This is the valuekey Rocke where- A ledge of on the Princely Trade received her destruction, as we understand by those people. About eleven Rockes, of the clocke we anchored on the Easter-tide of the vttermost Hand in nine tathome, fort, Ozie, The Rocke of the clocke we an increase on the Land 1 line of the three we faw a breach, bearing South Tradition and played by Carlot Bouth and by East some three or source leagues off, which breach as was brusted you come for this place, you must leave betwirt you and the sheare: wherefore keepe this outer Hand North and by Eath, or North North-east, and feare nothing. But beware when you come within two leagues of this Iland. For South-west and by South two leagues or five miles off lyes the Rocke whereon the vinappie Trade grounded. Wherefore keepe this Iland North and by East, and vpon life feare not, your depth as you come neere the Hand will bee from thirtie to ten, nine and eight fathomes foft, Ozie, you shall have nine fathomes within your ships length of either fide of the Hand.

The ninth day, some people came aboord: we find them very base and subtile.

The eleuenth day, the Hoziander departed for Priaman, to show them likewise that wee have brought the Kings Letter of Achen, without the which you cannot trade. Note, that as wee ride here vpon the Poope, we fee the foure Hands of Priaman bearing South-cuft and by South fome feuen leagues off.

This day at nine of the clocke wee failed into the inner Roade, which is betwirt the Mayne and the innermost Iland, halfe a mile from the Mayne, and a Cables length from the Iland, your depth foure fathome foft, Ozie, our depth in was twentie two foot beeing halfe tyde, it highes and fals some fine or fixe foot water, the tyde, as I perceine, runnes twelve houres North Northwest, and twelve houres contrarie. To the North-ward of all the Ilands in comming in you shall haue foure fathomes and an halte : but keepe neere the inner Hand, for from the Mayne on that fide lyes a should. The llands are all of one bignesse, being halfe a mile a piece in circuit, they will beare from the South-west and by South to the North-west : your best water is on the Ilana digge a Well, and prefently watercomes. Thus much out of Mafter Boner; the reft you have before in Captaine Best.

Northeafterlye

Extracts of a Tractate, written by NICHOLAS WHITHING TON. which was left in the Mogols Countrey by Captaine BEST, a Factor, bis Aduentures and Travels therein.

Some have two bers, another on their bumme, elfe naked : fome cappes of leather close to their pates, and show foles to their feet, much broader and longer then their feet : their armes very small: Lances with and (is the one heads artificially made: Bowes and Arrowes of little or no force: they are very expert in throwaffirmed to him) w:re flaues the o-

He eleventh of Aprill, 1612. we croffed the Eq inoctiall : foule weather eight daies together, wind and raine. Soldania theep are hairy : the Brenes lirge, and most leanethe people Negros, woolly pates, flat nofed, very ftraight or body the men haue but *Captaine $4. the people Negros, woolly pates, flat noted, very ittraight of body the men haue but one flone a peece; the other is cut out when they are yong apparelled with a skin riscold me that about their shoulders, which reacheth downe to the waste, the skin of a Ratte before their mem-floned gallants ing their Darts, where with they kill many fish in the Sea : they weare about their neckes guts of theepe and oxen, fmelling, which being hungry they eate; and would fcramble for our garhage like dogges, and eate it raw and foule. The fix and twentieth of July, they had fight of Saint Laurence. The thirteenth of August. croffed the Equinoctiall, temperate weather: on the thirtieth, they faw Snakes in the Stain 20 eighteene degrees and a halfe, one and thirtie min. white water at nineteene fathoms. The first of September, they faw land. The fecond, anchor against Daman Towne, inhabited and conquered by Portugalls. The Flaxe infelted them all that remained on land at Surat, Mafter Aldworth was ficke forty dayes. Strangers heere present any Inhabitants of fashion whom he visits; and they returne presents. Norwithstanding Sir Henry Middleton taking their ships in the Red-sea, yet they promifed vs good dealing, confidering elfe they must burne their ships (faid Mill Jeffed, one of the chiefe Merchants of Swat) and give over their trade by Sea. Import ble it was to have any trade at Surat, by reason of Portugall Frigats in the Rivers mouth. Therefore the Generall repaired with his fnips to Swally, whence he might by land go and come without danger. The third of October, Sheke Shuffe, Gouernour of Amadauar, chiefe Citie of Guzerat, came 30 to Surat, and to to Swally, and agreed upon Articles. Matter Canning had been taken by the Por-before the fall. tugals, but the Vice-Roy commanded to let him ashoare at Surat, faying, Let him goe helpehis Country-men to fight, and then we will take their ship, and the rest of them altogether. But the Purfer made an elcape, and so came to vs on land : Master Canning was set on shoare at Surat, according to promife, and to went aboord. And the fame day, being the twentieth ninth of Octo-Fleet of Portu- ber, the foure Portugall Gallions, with a whole Fleet of Frigats, came in fight. The Generall, after words of encouragement, met them, and neuer shot one shot, till hee came betweene their Admirall and Vice-Admirall, gaue cach a broad side, and a volly of small shot, which made them come no more neare for that day. The other two ships were not as yet come vp; and the Hof-

The fecond.

ander could not get cleare of her anchors, and shot not one shot that day. In the evening all came 40 to an anchor in fight of other; and the next morning renued their fight: the Hofiander brauely redeemed the former dayes doing nothing : the Dragon droue three of them on groun !, and the Hossander daunced the Hay about them, so that they durit not shew a man upon the Hatches. In the after-noone they got affore with the flood, and fought till night; then anchored, and lay fill

The next day after, the Dragon drawing much water, and the Bay shallow, removed to the other file of the Bay, rode at Mendafrobay, where all that time Sarder Cham, a great Noble-man of the Mogolls, with two thousand Horie, was belieging a Castle of the Razbooches (which were before the Mogolls Conquest, the Nobles of that countrey now living by robbery). He prefented our Generall with a horfe and furniture, which he againe gaue to the Gouernour of Gogs, 50 a Port Towne to the West of Surat. After ten dayes stay heere, the Portugalls having refreshed, came thither to our ships. Sarder Cham councelled to flee : but the Generall chased the Portugals in foure houres, driving them out of light, before thoulands of the countrey people, Sarder Cham relating this to the King (after the Caille razed) to his admiration, which thought none like the Portugalleat fea. The feuen and twentieth of December, they recurred to Smally, having lost three Saylers, and one mans arme shot off: Portugals confeile of theirs an hundred and sixtie, some report three hundred and odde.

Nicholas Whi.

The thirteenth of Ianuary, I was entertained Fictor, and bound to the Company in foure thing on Factor. hundred pound. The flip departed the eighteenth of January, the Gallions near offering one Matter coming hundred pound. The thip departed the engineering of Juliany, the Granden sear of the way betweene Surat and Agra, with many croubles, fet on by the elemie, who shot him into the belly with an Arrow, and another English man thorow the arme, and killed and have many of his Pions. He was cured before his arruall at Agra. Two of his English tell out with him and return ned, leaving two Musicians onely to attend him. The ninth of Aprill he arrived : the tenth prefented the King with our Kings Letter, and a Prefent of little value. He asked if our King fent that prefent : who answered, it was fent by the Merchants. The King graced him with a cup of wine from his owne hands, and referred him to Moracke Chan. One of the Mulicians cycle. and was buried in the Portugalls Church-yard, whom they tooke vp,and busied in the high-way: but upon complaint, were compelled by the King to bury him there againe, threatning to turne them all out of his Countrey, and their buryed bodies out of their Church-yard,

CHAP. 8.S.3. An English man poyfoned by the Iefuits in India.

After this Mafter Canning wrote of the feare hee was in to be poyloned by the Islaits, and Mifter Canning therefore defired that I might come up to a lift him; which among it vs at Surat was concluded. Poyloned by The nine and twentieth of May, 1613, he dyed and fo Mafter Keridge went the two and twen-10 tieth of June. I should have been fent by the way of Mocha to England, but the Master of the thip which went, faid it was impossible, except I were circumcifed, to come neare Mecca. The thirteenth of October, 1613. the ship returned, and our Messenger taken, notwithstanding their late palle at the Barre of Surat, by the Portugalls Armada of Frigats, worth an hundred thousand pound, with seuen hundred persons going to Goa. This is like to be their ouerthrow heere, for no Portugall might passe without a faretie, nor in, nor out. Merchants of Smat are by this meanes impouerished, and our goods left in our hands : with which we went to Amadabar. Iohn Alkin which had runne from Sir Henry Middleton to the Portugalls, came now to vs. Portuga perils. told vs of dizers their Townes belieged by the Decares, and other neighbouring Moores : in fo much that they were faine to fend away many hundreths of Banians, and many others that 20 dwelt among it them, for want of victuals : three Barkes of which came to Surat, and divers others to Canbaya. Their weaknesse in fight with vs caused all this. Robert Claron of the Dragon. fled to Portugall for feare of punishment, and came to vs with an Almanne, which had been flaue in Turkie. Robert Johnson came to the Portugals, and thence intending to vs. passing thorow the Decanes Countrey, was perfinaded by another English man, which was turned Moore, and lived Fugitives and there : and was circumcifed, and received feuen shillings fix pence a day of the King and his diet Renegado's, at the Kings table : But eight dayes after his Circumcifion he died. Robert Trully, the Mulician in Agra, not agreeing with Master Kerridge, went to the King of Decan, and carrying with him a German for interpreter, offered both to turne Moores. Trully had in his Circumcifion a new name given, with great allowance from the King, with whom he continues. But the German former-

30 ly cut in Persia, now thought to deceine the Decan, but was not entertained : he returned to Agra, and ferueth a French man, and goeth to Maile againe. Robert Claxon also turned Moore, at the Decan Court had good allowance : but not content, came to Swat, and provoked pitie with feeming penitence, but getting fome fortie and odde pounds, whiler pretence of buying commons. gaue them the flip, and returned whence he came. So there are foure English with the Decan, and diners Portugal Moores.

The feuen and twentieth of October, 1613, we received letters from Mefulopatan of Mailer A description Gurney, written by Captaine Marlo of the lames, of their arrivall and trade. From Surat I went of his journey to Periano three Course: to Cosumbay a little Village 10 c. Barocho 10 c. a prettie Citie on a high by Indihorow hill, compassed with a wall, a great River running by, as broad as Thames; divers shippes of two the Mogells 40 hundred tunnes and odde there riding: best Calicoes in the Kingdome, store of Cotton: to Sarin- red thorstor ga 10 c. to Carron 10 c. to Boldia a leffe Citie then Barocho, but faire built, a ftrong wall, and guard against three thousand horse under Mussuff Chan: to Wassich a Ruser 100, where Mussifust was ready to therees. fight with the Razbooches or Radgepoots, that lay on the other fide the River : the chiefe of thefe of the race of the old Kings of Surat: to Niriand 140. a great Towne where they make Indico. To Amadabar 10 c. chiefe City of Guzerat, neare as great as London, walled with a firong wall, fituate in the Plain by the River fide, store of Merchants Moores, Christians, Heathens : Commodities are Indicoes, Cloath of gold, filuer Tiffue, Veluets (not comparable to ours) Tadataes, Gum-

buck, coloured Baffataes, Drugges, &c. Abdalachon Gouernor, a man of fine thouland horse pay. I went from thence to Cambaya, leuen course to Barengeo, where every Tuesday the Coffig of Cam- A Courseis 2 50 baya meete, and fo keepe company for feare of theeues. Hence fixteene courte to Soquatera, a fine mile and half Towne well manned with foul liers. Departed at midnight, and about eight of the clocke next Eight. Laorning came 10 c. to Cambaya,

In November, we rode to Serkeffe, three course from Amadabar, where are the Sepulchres of the Kings of Guzerai, a very delicate Church and faire Tombes, which are kept very comely, much refort to vitite them from all parts of the Kingdome: a course off is a pleasant House, with a Garden a mile about, by the Rivers fide, which Chon Chin Nam, the greatest of the Mogoll Nobilitie, built in memorial of the great victory which he got of the last King of Guzerat, whom he tooke prisoner, and subjected his Kingdome, the battell being fought in this place. No man dwells in this house, but a few poore men keepe the Orenyard. We lodged one night in it, and 60 fent for fix Fisher-men, who in halfe an houre tooke vs more fish then all our company could eat;

The eight and twentieth of November, we had newes at Amadabar of three English shippes arrived at Lowribander, the Port Towne of Gutu Negar Tutta, chiefe Citie of Sinda. A French Tutta. Ichit at Amadabar made poore, by the Portugals imbarkement, begged or our Agent, who gave Mitter Alehim ten Rupias. I was fent thither, and the the thirteenh of December came to Caffingura, worth wis As where I ouertocke a Caphilo, trauelling to Radenpare, fix dayes journey on my way, fourteene to Callualowny, a faire Castle : thirteene 7 c. to Callwalla, a pretty Village, which Echar saue to a company of women, and their postericy for euer, to bring vp their children in dancing, &c, they did this in our Carauan, every man giving them fomewhat; and then they openly asked if any wanted a bed-tellow. The fixteenth 8 c. to Carrya, where is a well manned Fortreffe : and the eighteenth (till which, for feare of theenes, wee stayed for another Caranan) to Deccanaura, our Camell itolne, and a man flaine. The nineteenth 10 c. to Bollodo, a Fort kept by Newlock Abram Cabrate, for the Mogoll, who that day came with an hundred fixtie nine heads of the Coolies (a robbing people.) The twentieth 13 c. to Sariandgo, a Fort. The one and twentieth 10c. to Radempoore, a bigge Towne with a Fort. Heere we stayed to prouide vs of water and necessary Io ries for our defert journey : and the three and twentieth travelled 7c. and lay in the fields, met a Carauan robbed of all from Tutta. The foure and twentieth 120 dispeeded one of my Pions to Lowrsbander with a Letter, which promised to doe it in ten dayes; but I thinke was flaine. The five and twentieth 14c. lodged by a well of water fo falt, that our cattell could not drinke it. The fix and twentieth 100 to fuch another well, there gaue our Camells water, not having drunke

The few nand twentieth, 14c lodged in fields. The eight and twentieth, 10c toa Village called Negar Parkar. In this defart we faw great flore of wild Asles, red Deere, Foxes, and other wild beafts. The nine and twentieth, we staid and met with an other Carauan, robbed within two dayes journey of Tutta. The thirtieth, we departed from Parkar, which payes a yearely tri- 20 Anarchy worft bute to the Mogol: all hence till Inno, halfe a dayes journey from Tutta, acknowledge no King, but rob and spare at pleasure. When any army of the Mogols comes against them, they fire their houses, and flee into the Mountaines: their houses are made of straw and morter like Ber-hiues. foone rebuilded. They take for cuftome what they please, and guard Passengers, being loath any but themselves should have the robbing of them. We travelled 6 c. and lay by a Tanke or Pond of fresh water. The thirty one 8 c. and lay in the fields by a brackish Well. The first of Ianuary, we went 10 c. to Burdiano, many were sicke of this water, we prouided vs yet of it for foure dayes, and travelled more the second 18 c. all night. The third in the afternoone till midnight 10 c. the fourth 12 c. Here I fell ficke, and vomited by reason of the water. The fifth 7 c. and came to three Wells, two falt, one sweetish. The fixth, to Nuraquimire a pretie 30 Towne 10 c. Here our Raddingpoore company left vs. We remained, two Merchants, my lefte, fiue of their feruants, foure of mine, with tenne Camels, fiue Camel-men. This Towne is within three dayes of Tutta, and feemed to vs after our Defart a Paradife. We agreed with one of the Ragies or Gouernours kinred for twenty Laries (twenty shillings) to conduct vs, who departed with vs the eighth, and we trauelled 10 c. to Gundaiam, where we had beene robbed but for our guard. The ninth, we were twice fet on, and forced to give each time five Laries: wee came to Sarruna, a great Towne of the Razbootches, with a Caffle, whence it is 14 c. to Tutta. We vilited 14° of Tutta. the Governour Ragee Bourna, eldelt fonne to Sultan Bulbul ( who lately captived by the Mogol, Of thesethings had his eyes pulled out, and two Moneths before this had escaped) now living in the Mountains, and caufeth all his kinred to reuenge. This Ragee was kind to me as a ftranger, asking many questions of our Countrey, made me sup with him, gaue me Wine till he was stared. A Banian here told me, how Sir Robert Sherly had been much abused by the Portugals, and Gouernour at Lowribander, his house fired, men hurt in the night; and arriving at Tutta thirteene daies journy thence, Mer fa Rusto vied him vinkindly. He admied to get this Ragee to guide vs, told of the great trade of Tutta, the chiefe that he had seene, and that a shippe of three hundred Tunne might come to

We hired the Ragee for fortie Laries with fifty horsemen to the gates of Tutta: and on the e-

leuenth departed from Sarruna 5 c. and lay by a Rivers fide. At two in the morning we departed, and he lead vs a contrary way, and came about breake of day into a Thicket, where he made vs vnlode, then caused vs to be bound, and tooke our weapons from vs, sudainly hanged the Mer-50

chants and their fine men, with their Camels ropes fastened about their neckes with a Truncheton robbed and ont stripped and threw them into a hole they made in the earth. He tooke from me my horse, and eightie Rupias, fent me and my men 20 c. vp the Mountaines to his brothers, Ianuary the fourteenth, where I continued two and twentie dayes shur up. February the seuenth, order came to Robbed again. fend me to Parkar to the Gouernour of their kinred, to fend me to Radingpore. But I was robbed by them in the way of all my clothes, and all I had. February the twenty eighth, we begged for our victualls, finding the inhabitants charitable: for my horse ( which not beeing worth the taking, they left me) I could get but foure Mamoodies, or foure thillings; but changing on a Bannian of Amadabar whom I had knowne, I was releeved with my men. Wee were this dayes between Parkar and Raddingpoore, whither I came March nineteenth. I came to Amadabar, April 60 the fecond, being absent one hundred and eleven dayes. Thence I went to Brodia, Barengeo thence 16 c. to Soquitera, 10. to Cambaya: then the large River 7. course broad, yeerly swallowing many hundreds to Saurau. On the other fide the River is a Towns and Calife of the Razboorches. The fixteenth of Aprill, I travelled 25 c. to Borocho: the fedenteenth, passed that River, and 10c. to Caffimba: the eighteenth, 13 c. to Surat.

Concerning Sinda, no Citie is by generall report of greater trade in the Indies then Tutta, the chiefe Port Lowribander, three dayes journey from it; a faire roade without the Rivers mouth. cleare of Wormes, which about Surat especially, and in other places of the Indies, after three or foure Moneths riding (if it were not for theathing) would hinder returne. The Ports and Roads of Sinda are free. In two Moneths from hence by water they goe to Laher, and returne in one downe. There are these Commodities, Bassitas, Stuffes, Lawnes, Indico course, not so good as Biana. Goods may be connected from Agra on Camels to Bucker twenty dayes, which is on Sin-& River, thence in fifteene or fixteene dayes abourd the thips. One may goe as foone from A. gra to Sinde as Surat, but there is more theening, which the Mogoll feekes to preuent.

Inhabitants of Sinda are most Razbootches, Barians, and Boloches: in Cities and great Townes, Razbootch. the Gouernours are Mogols. The Country people are rule, naked from the wast yowards, with Turbants contrary to the Wogoll fashion. Their Armes, Sword, Buckler, and Launce; their Buckler great, in fashion of a Bee-hiue, in which they will give their Camels drinke, and Horses prouender, their horses good, swift strong, which they ride vnshod, most desperately. They back them at twelve Moneths old. The Mogoll fayes, the Razbootch knowes as well to die as any in the world. They eate no Beefe nor Buffoll, but pray to them.

CHAP.8. S.3.

The Banians kill nothing: there are thirtie and odde feuerall Cafts of these that differ some- Banian, thing in Religion, and may not eat with each other; but all burne their dead. When the husband dies, the wife shaues her head, and weares her iewels no more, so continuing till death. When Funerals, the Rasbut dies, his wife accompanies his bodie going to be burned, in her best array, accompani. Burning of the ed with her friends and kinred, and Musique, and the fire beeing made at the place appointed, Rasbut winces. compasseth the same twice or thrice, bewailing first her husbands death, and then rejoycing that the thall now line with him againe, after which, embracing her friends, thee laftly fits downe on the top of the pile, and dry flicks, taking her husbands head in her lap, and b.ds them put fire, which done, her friends throw oile and other tweete perfumes on her, the enduring the hre with admirable patience, loofe and not bound. I have feene many, the first in Swrat, the woman but tenne yeeres old, and a Virgin, he a Souldiour flaine in warre, from whence his cloathes and Turbant were brought home. She would needs burne with his cloathes; the Gouernour forbad her. which she tooke grieuously, bidding them put to fire presently, her husband was a great way be-30 fore: which they durst not, till her kinred intreated, with a Present given, the Governours licence, to her exceeding joy. The husbands kinred neuer force this, but the womans holding it a difgrace else to their family. They may choose, (but few doe) but then must shaue their haire, and breake their iewels, and thenceforth are not fuffered to eat, drinke, fleepe, or company with any body, and to continue till death. If after purpose to burne they leape our of the fire, her father and mother will bind her, and throw her in, and burne her perforce. But this weakenede is fel-The Boloches are of Mahomets Religion. They deale much in Camels; most of them robbers Boloches, by land, and on the River, murthering fuch as they rob. When I was in Sinda, they tooke a hoat with leven Italians, one Portugall Friar, the rest slaine in fight, this was ripped by them for 40 Gold. There are very honest of them in Guzerate, and about Agra.

Banion marriages are made at the age of three yeares, and vnder; sometimes they make mutu- Benian marriages all promife if two pregnant women prooue to haue one a male, the other a female. But alwayes ages. one of their owne cast and religion, and of the same trade, as a Barbar, &c. When they be three or foure yeere old, they make a great Feath, fet the two thus espoused on horsebacke ( a man behind each to hold them) in their best clothes, accompanied with the Bramens or Priests, and many others according to their state, and so lead them vp and downe the Citie where they dwell, and then to the Pagod or Church; and after Ceremonies there done, come home, continue certein dayes feafting, as they areable. Being tenne yeeres old they lie together of which they give this reason, not to leave them wivelesse, if their Parents die and seave them Parentsesse. Their Bramens keepe their Pageds, and have Almes or Tithes, effeemed marvellous hely, married and follow occupations, good workemen, apt to learne any patterne. They eate but once a day, and wash before and after meat all their bodies, as also after vrine or stoole.

John Mild all * an Englishman had beene employed with three English young men, which hee . See before poiloned in Persia, to make himselfe Master of the goods, but he was likewise poyloned, yet by his Letters, prefernatines lived many Moneths after, but fivelled exceedingly, and to came to Agra, with the value of twenty thousand dollers: thither therefore I went, May the fourth, 1614. from Surat: came to Bramport, where Sultan Perner lies, fit nate in a plaine, the River of Surat running by in agreat breadth, having a large Casile. Hence to Agratiwenty sixe dayes, betweene Surat and Agra are feuen hundred courses, 1010. English miles, which I travelled in seven and thirty daies 6c in Win er, wherein it almost continually raineth. From Surat to Bramport is a pleasant and champion Countrey, full of Rivers, Brookes, and Springs. Betweene Bramport and Agra, very Mountainous, not patiable for a Coach, harily for Camels; by Mando is the nearest way : there are high hils and ffrong Cattles in the wav many, Townes and Cities every dayes journey, well inhabited, the Countrey peaceable, and cleare of theeues.

CHAP.9.5.1.

Mildrill had given all to a Frenchman, to marry his bastard-daughter in Perfia, and bring vpan

The Issuites have a very faire Church built by the King, and a house: the King allowes the chiefe fouen Rupias a day, and the rest three, with licence to conuert as many as they can: which they doe, but alas, it is for moneys take. For when by the fact of the Portugalle, they werede. barred of their pay, their new converts brought them their beads againe, faying, they had beene long without their pay, and therefore would be Christians no longer. The Portugals not deline. ring the goods taken in Surat, the King caused the Church-doores to bee locked vp, as they have ring the goods taken in Surat, the Jung contenue of one of their Chambers, where they faute continued euer fince; to the Padres make a Church of one of their Chambers, where they far to the Armenaus and Magneta in the Chambers and Chamb Maile twice a day, and preach every Sunday in Persian, first to the Armenians and Moores, atter in Portuguife, for themselves, the Italians and Greeks. These told me the particulars of Mildrals goods, who gaue all to a French Protestant, himselfe a Papist, which he denying, was put in priion. After foure Moneths all were deliuered.

The fecond of March, 1614, tenne Gallions, two Gallies, fixtie Frigats fight.

Betweene Agminere and Agra every tenne courie (which is an ordinarie dayes journey) a Seralia, or place of lodging for man and horie, and Hostesses to drosse your victuall, it you please, paying a matter of three pence for both horse and meat drelling. Betweene these places (120 c.) at enery courie end is a great pillar erected, and at every tenne course a faire house built by Echar when he went on Pilgrimage from Agra to Aggimere on foot, faying his prayers at enery course end. Thele houses serue the King and his women, none elle. This King lies in Agimere, vpon 20 occasion of warres with Rabna a Razboch , who hath now done homage, and peace is betweene

Ganges. AZTE

Pilgrimage.

I rode to the River Ganges, two dayes from Agra. The Banians carry the water of Ganges many hundred miles thence, and as they affirme, it will neuer stinke, though kept neuer folong. By Agra runnes a large river Geminie. Agra is a huge Towne, the wall two course in compasse, fajrest and highest that ever I saw, well repleni hed with Ordnance: the rest ( except Noble-mens houses, faire seated by the river) ruinous. The anneient royall seat was Fatipoore (twelve course from Agra) now decayed. Betweene these two, the Sepulchre of the Kings Father, to which is none that ever I faw to be compared. And yet the Church of Fatipoore comes necreit, builded by Geometry as is the other.

The foure and twentieth of May, 1616. we in our returns entred the Bay of Soldania, where were divers English thips outward bound, the Charles, Vnicorne, Iames, Globe, Swan, the Generall was Beniamin Ioleph.

The fifteenth of September, we arrived at Douer.

CHAP. IX.

The elementh Poyage to the East-India in the Salomon, begunne in the yeere of our Lord 1611, after the account of the Church of England, and ended in the yeere 1613. Written by RALPH WILSON, one of the Mates in the (aid ship.

February, r. 1611.

He first of February 1611. we set faile from Granesend, being foure ships, the Dragon, the lames, the Salomon, and the Hostander; being counted as three seuerall Voyages: the lames the ninth; the Dragon and Hosiander the tenth; and wee in the Salomon the eleventh. The reason was, because we were directed to severall parts of the East-India.

In our course betweene the Iles of the Canaries, and the Iles of Capo Verde, we 50 must steere a more Westerly course, then that which the Platslay downe, without they be Porrugall Plats, which lay it a quarter of a point more then the truth is.

A new Iland discouered in 19. degrees 24. minutes Southerly. San'a Maria d'ajola. The lile of Martin Vaz.

The feuen and twentieth of Aprill, we in Salomon descried an Iland in the South latitude of nineteene degrees, foure and thirty minutes, and it bare from vs, South-east one third part Southerly, fifteene leagues off. This Ile is a place, which in my opinion yeeldeth water, and fish in great abundance : the Sea-fowle were fo many, that our people in the galleries of our ship might strike them downe, they were so tame. To the Eastward of this Ile lye two llands more, the one about the bignelle of the first, the other a great He. By these lles we found a Current, which set-

The eight and twentieth of June, we departed from Soldanha. I would aduife them which go forth of Soldanha Bay, with the wind at East, or South-east, to get off some pretie distance from the land, before they hale up to the Southward : for if they doe otherwise, the high land will take their wind from them. And if a man should be becalmed, he should very much be troubled: for most commonly thereabout you shall meete a mightie Westerne Sea. Secondly, the streame fetteth to the shoare-ward, if the wind have been at the North North-west, West or South-west. And thirdly, the shoare is neald to; so that a man cannot anchor.

The Ext of October, wee met a great Current fetting to the Northwards, when wee were October 6. within one degree of the Equinoctiall.

The twelfth, wee met with a great deale of rubbish, as Canes, Sties, and many other things. which viually are on the theare about Sumatra.

The fixteenth, draue by our thip rubbith, as Rock-weeds, Canes, branches of trees, the huskes of Coco Nuts, and fuch like.

The feuenteenth at noone, draue by vs a bed of rubbish, which was at least two miles long:

10 it lay North North-west, and South South-east, and draue off West South-west. The eighteenth in the morning, we discried land, which lyeth by Celeber in the Ile of Suma- They discrie tra, which Towne of Celeber Handeth about three degrees of Southerly latitude. The feuen and twentieth, wee had a Current fetting to the Southward. The nine and twentieth, the falt hill, or He bare East North-east fixteene or eighteene leagues from vs.

The first of November, at fix of the clocke at night, we were shot within the falt Ile.

The fecond at noone, comming betweene the Land of lana and a ragged lle, which lyeth to the Westward of the point of Palimban, we met a great tide running out so fast, that we could fearce stemme it with a life gale of wind, And afterward the wind slaked, fo we chopped to an anchor, and then I found that tide to runne three leagues and an halfe in a watch. Heere I have noted, that the tide or ftrea ne keepeth no course, but in the day time setteth out, and in the night time in. This day at noone, the point of Palymbam bare North-east by East three leagues off vs. From thence to the Road of Bantam is fine leagues; South South-east one third part Easterly; So the longitude of Bantam is an hundred fortie five degrees, two minutes. The latitude fix degrees, ten minutes. The variation three degrees. This longitude of an hundred fortie fine degrees, and two minutes, is somewhat to Easterly for the Road of Bantam. But for the first falling with the land, for an hundred fortie foure degrees is the truest longitude for Bantam from the I fland of Flores.

The eighteenth, nine failes of Hollanders came into the Road, and the other two, which went Excellented out the day before, came with them to Pulo Parian : they had refreshed themselves at the Hes freshing at the Mascarenhas, which stand in one and twentie degrees and an halfe of South latitude. Of which place they gaue fingular commendations for great plentie of refreshing which they found there.

The federich of March, at fine of the clocke in the afternoone, in the latitude of twentie de- March 7. grees, foure and thirtie minutes, we descried land, which bare North-east, halfe a point Northerly, nine leagues off: the South-east part is somewhat high, but falleth downe with a low point; the Wester part is not very high, but flat and smoth towards the end of it, and falleth right downe. This lie is very till of shoulds and broken ground, the Souther and Wester parts : for An Ile discowe diffeoured neither of the other fides. By all likelihood it feemeth to have good refreshing usered in were on it; the long tule of this lie is an hundred and foure degrees from Flores, but by more degrees, on it: the longicule of this Ile is an hundred and foure degrees from Flores, but by my compute foure and this tation an hundred and feuen degrees; but in these courses we rely not altogether on our recko-tiemmates, nings, vfing as much diligence for the finding out the true longitude, as possibly wee may, it being a maine point to give vs light to other helpes.

The tenth, we had fight of the land of Diego Roiz. The fourteenth in the morning, wee di. The Hand of ferred land, which was part of the Ile Do Cime, which the Hollanders call the Ile of Macritius. Diego Roix, the Ile of There is an Iland that lyeth from the maine Ile foure leagues off; and two other small lles ten Cyme, or Man. leagues off. We founded a league and a halfe off, but found no ground at fortie fathoms. When THE BE you are thwart of the Road, the hill with three pikes will beare South-eaft.

The fixteenth, at fix of the clocke in the morning, we discried the Ile Do Mascarenbus. There The Ile Mascai is a breach which lyeth foure miles off, and lyeth three leagues long; and heere is very good re- rental. freiling. The lle Mauritim hath longitude ninetie nine degrees, latitude twentie degr. fifteene minutes. The Ile Do Mascarenhas hath longitude ninetic seuen degrees, and latitude one and twentiedegrees, no minutes. The fecond of Aprill, 1613. about feuen of the clocke it began to lighten, continuing with fuch Aprill 1.1813; mightie great flashes, as I neuer faw the like, vntill eleuen, and then it began to raine, or powre downe mightily, and on a fudden became flat and calme : and in leffe then a quarter of an houre, a har I gole at South-west, blowing for the time, which was not long, as much as it did before, at North-oft. By these two contrary winds the sea grew so exceeding loftie, that our ship strucke into de fea abart, as it the gelleries would have flowne off. About twelve of the clock the wind voces at to the South, and on a fulden up at the North-east againe. Our failes were iplit, so as we hald till morning.

60 The seas sof fune, we differred the He of Afcenfon. This He hath shoulds lying on the Wester June 10 part, at least two miles off.

The onread twentieth, we had a great ripling of the fea, in the feuen and twentieth degrees cenfun of North Littude, which came out of the Eafter-boord like a fresh out of a River, like many fronts or whilewinds or Celeber.

Nouember 1.

The

August 6.

The fixth of August wee had great riplings or over-fals of the Sea. The fourteenth day, being in thirtie eight degrees fiftie nine minutes North latitude, weehad great riplings of the Sea; which made a noyle, as if water had runne out of a fluce: they came out of the North-east.

CHAP. X.

A lournall of all principall matters passed in the twelfth Voyage to the 10 East-India, observed by me WALTER PAYTON, in the good Ship the Expedition: the Captaine whereof was M. CHRISTOPHER NEWPORT, being fet out, Anno 1612. Written by WALTER PAYTON.

Their comming to Saint Augustine, Mohelia, and diners parts of Arabia.

He seuenth of Ianuarie we set faile from Granesend for the East-India, in the good thip, the Expedition of London, being about the burthen of two hundred and fixtie tunnes which carryeth in her fiftie fixe persons , besides the Persian Ambassadour and his followers, who are in number fifteene, which we had order to receiue into our ship, to be transported in o the K ngdome of Persia, at the costs 30 and charges of the Wor hipfull Company aforefuld. The names of the Ambassadour, and his people, are these. Sir Robert Sherler, the Ambassadour. Teroha, his Ladie, a Circafian. Sir Thomas Powell. Tomafin his Ladie. Leylye, a Persian Woman. Morgan Powell, Gentleman, Captaine Iohn Ward. Francis Bubb, Secretarie. Iohn Barbar, Apothecarie. Iohn Herriot, Musicioner. Iohn Georg son, Goldsmith and Hollander. Gabriel, an olde Armenian. Nazerbege, Scanderbege, Molhter, all Persians.

The fixe and twentieth of Aprill, 1613. in the morning, wee fell with a part of the land of Athiopia, whereunto, close adioyning, is an Hand of small compasse, called Connie Hand, beeing a very low land, and inuironed about with many dangerous Rockes, to Sea-ward : and standeth in the latitude of thirtie three degrees, and thirtie minutes. The wind taking vs short, we were 40 inforced to come to an anchor betwirt this lland and the Maine: where wee had very good ground in nineteen or twentie fathom water. Here we fent our Schiffe aftere to the Hand, where we found Penguins, wild Geefe, and other Fowles, & Seale-fishes in great abundance, whereof we tooke for our refreshing, as much as we would. By a carued boord, wee perceived the Hollanders had beene there, who made great store of the raine Oyle of the Scales, as it should feeme, for their necessary spending, outward bound. They left their Implements wherewith they wrought, and a grea. Copper Caldron, standing upon a Furnace, full of traine: all which wee left as wee found. Thus having spent two dayes at an anchor, and the wind favouring vs to proceed, we let faile from hence for Caput Bona Spei.

The Bay of

The thirtieth day, by Gods grace, we arrived at Saldanha, where wee found riding at an an- 10 chor fixe ships, whereof two English, namely, the Hellor and the Thomas, the other foure were Hollanders: all bound homeward. Here we watered and refreshed our felues very well, with reasonable store of that Countrey sheepe, and Bullockes, which we bought; and fresh fish which we caught with our Savne. The tenth of May, 1613. the Pepper-corne arrived heere at Saldanha, also bound homewards.

Shee having beene long out, was not very well fitted with necessaries, which wee supplyed out of our small store, so much as we could spare : who also dispatched and was readie to set faile with the first faire wind, which was, on the fifteenth of May, from whence we set faile all together, out of the Bay, taking our leave each of other, according to the common fashion of the Sea, directing our courie for Saint Augustine. And in our way we had tight of Cape do Arceife, 60 being part of the mayne land of Athiopia; and standeth in the latitude of thirtie three degrees Variation fixe twentie fine minutes, the Compaffe varying there fixe degrees and nine minutes, which was on the foure and twentieth of this present.

The fifteenth of June, we had fight of Sain: Laurence Hand, and on the feuenteenth day, we came to an anchor, by Port Augustine of purpose, to search the founding and way into the Bay, Port de S. Anbefore we entred; because there was none in our ship well acquainted therewith. Which be- guitage. ing done, wee entred and came to an anchor, on the eighteenth day in ten fathome water : but our ship roade in fortie fathomes. Heere we had wood and water, and great abundance of fresh fifth, which we tooke with our Sayne, sufficient to have satisfied halfe a doozen ships men , if they had beene there. But for flesh, we could get none of the Countrey people, they being as it feemed, fearefull of vs, who came to vs once, and promifed to bring vs Cattell, the next day in the morning : which, I thinke, was rather in policie to carrie away their Cattell , wherein they imployed themselves in the meane time, for they never returned to vs againe. We marched to vp into the Woods, with about fortie shot, to fee if we would have met with any of them, to Houses made buy fome of their Cattell: but wee found none but emptie houses made of Canes, where wee of Canes, perceived that people had beene not long before, by the fires which were yet burning, and feales of fish which had beene broyled thereon. Also we perceived the footing, and tracing of many Cattell, which had beene there not long before: so wee returned emptie as wee came. This Port Augustine, standeth in the latitude of twentie three degrees and thirtie minutes. The va- Fiscene degr. riation of the Compasse is fifteene degrees fortie minutes.

CHAP.9. S.I. The Iland Mohelia yeeldeth very good refreshing.

The entrance into this Port relembleth Dartmouth, and to goe in there, you must bring that variation. which is called Westminster-Hall, being not vnlike, North-east by East off you, and so steere in due East, borrowing a little to the South-fide of the Bay, where you shall have founding thirto teene, nine, eight, and seuen fathomes water, good ground, till you bee shut within the shoale : and then you have deepe water, vntill you come to the Road, and then you have feven, eight, and ten fathomes water. But if you goe in too farre behind the hill on your larboard tide (which resembleth an old Barne) then you shall have thirtie five or fortie fathomes. From hence wee fet faile, on the three and twentieth of this prefent, directing our course for the Hand of Mohelia The third of huly 1613, we had fight of an Hand called Inan, being to the East-ward of Mohelia some nine or ten leagues, and beareth from it East and by South. Also this day we came to Mokilalland an anchor at Mobelia, betwixt broken land (which lyeth on the Souther fide) and the Iland. neces vnto Co-

Here we had great store of refreshing and very cheape, for we bought fine Bullockes in trucke of more. there we had great itereon retreating and vary competitions, Pines, Cocker Nuts, Plantanes, Oranges, Great flore one Leuant Sword: also we bought Goates, Hennes, Pines, Cocker Nuts, Plantanes, Oranges, refredung, Limons, and Limes, for Trifles or little Money. One Riall of Plate we paid for a Bullocke, or else ten pieces of foure pence halfe-penie, and so we bought about fortie one head of Cattle, befides other refreshing aforefaid. The fifth, the Inhabitants of this Iland, are chiefly Moores: but there are Arabians, Turkes and other Nations amongst them, and are in Warre with the people of Inan, and Comora Ilands neere adjoyning. They told vs that the King of Mobelia dyed the fame day, that we came into the Roade : and Phandomale his sonne succeeded in his place, being as yet but of tender yeeres, was to raigne under protection of his Mother Queene. His Brother-in-law came downe (as chiefe man accompanyed with divers other men of fort) to speake with vs., who bad vs very to kindly welcome. Both he and many other of the fame lland do speake reasonable good Portuguse The largenesse Language, by reason whereof I had great conference with them, and was resoluted in any thing I Tongue.

They build Barkes upon this Iland, and trade with them, alongft the Coast of Melinde, and Arabia, with flaues and fruits, whereby they furnish themselves with Royals of Plate, and other necessaries. Also I thinke, they have some Trade with the Portugals, but they will not bee a knowne thereof, because we should not suspect any treacherous dealings amongst them. They told vs, that we were very welcome, and that the whole Iland was at our command : but if we had beene Portugals, they told mee, that they would have put vs all every man to the Sword. But how foeuer, I hold it not good to repose too much confidence in them. The Kings Brother 50 shewed me a Letter of commendations of the place, left there by an Hollander, which was written in Durch : and withall defired vs to leave another to the fame effect, thereby to specifie their honest and kind dealings towards vs, and to shew it vnto others of our Nation, which should come thither after vs: to which we confented, and I made them a Writing accordingly, which was fealed by the Captaine of our ship, expressing therein our good entertainment, and the prices of victuals. But neuertheleffe, with fuch a Prouifo, that our Nation should not trust them any further then in their difcretions they should thinke requisite for their owne safeties. They speake a kind of Morifco Language, which is somewhat difficult to learne, and our emtinuance there short: so that I only tooke notice of these few words following, which are sufficient to call for victuals and fruits, when Portugue Language is wanting; and to speake to any of the Countrey people, who vinderstand not the Portuguje. viz.

Gumber, a Bull cke. Buze, a Goat. Coquo, an Henne. Tudah, Oranges. Demon, Limons. Mage, Water. Surra, a kind of Drinke. Quename, a Pine. Scianoye, Cocker Nuts. Figo, Plantans. Cartassa, Paper. Sinzano, a Needle. Arembo, Bracelets. Soutan, the King. This Iland flandeth in the latitude of twelve degrees ten minutes, and in the Road is good Mobelia in 12.

ground deg.10,min.

Cape de

retreshed our selves very sufficiently, God be thanked ) directing our course for the Hand of Se-fight of land, which we supposed to have been Cape Guardafus, which lieth at the entrance of the Red Sea; and so thicking to steere for Socotora, found it not. Whereupon we were inforced to bethinke our felies, where to goe that wee might shelter our selues from the cruelty of the

The nineteenth, we passed under the Equinoctial line; and on the twentie fifth day, weehad

ò. II.

Their comming on the Persian Coast: the treacherie of the Baluches.

He tenth of September, crofting the Galic, wee had fight of the Coaft of Perfia, our Septemb. 15. this being in the latitude of twentie fine degrees and tenne minutes: the variation of the Compade eighteens degrees thry minutextand being forme feuen leagues of from the floars, we fent our Skiffe with Sir Thomas Powell, accompanied with two of the Emballadors Perfuns, together with Albertus our Linguist, of purpose to discouer the Countrey, and to feeke force consument place to land his Lordhip. Where when they came to a lettle VilTiff-gues finally lags, called Tiff-gue, they hake with Caneil men, and others of the Country people, by whom Villed in they vinefrhood, that that Country was called Grobe Obsergation, and the inhibitating Balles.

24th Sept. ches: all hising vn ler the government of one King, named Melicke Meirza, whose chiefe relidence was some five or fixe dayes journey from hence, at a Port called Guader. And they further told them, that all that Countrey of Macquerona, paid yearely Tribute unto the King of Perlia. Also they vn.lerstanding our intents to land the Embassadour, told vs, that by Melick Meirza his conueiance, his Lordship should have safe conduct from Guader in nine dayes to Chirman, and from thence to Spakaum in Perfia, in eleuen dayes. So we fayled along ft the Coast, and fent our Skiffe

20 againe alhoure on the eleventh of this prefent, with Sir Thomas Powell and others, accompanyed as before, both to enquire further of the Countrey, and to fee if they could hire a P.lot to direct vs for Guader; because we knew not how the Coast did lie. And they lighted on a place called Pollegue, about one dayes journey from the other place before; where we found the like newes Pefferue, and reports of these people to agree directly with the former; all commending the Port of Guader to be our best place of landing. Whereof we being very glad to heare, presently set downe our determinations, with Gods leave, to faile thither with all the speed we might, although we had no Pilot. And in our way, on the thirteenth of this prefent in the morning, wee efficed comming from the East-ward, two great Boates called Teradus, sayling alongst the shoare towards Or- Two great mis: whereupon, to the end we might have a Pilot out of them, we manned our Skiffe fufficient - Boate called 30 ly, of purpose to bring them to our thip (if intreaty did faile) perforce; yet without any intent to have o fered them the haft discourtefie, or to have fent them away vngratified. But when our Ski je came vp to them, in flead of answering our mens hailes, they weated our Skide to Leeward with a naked Sword, Wherefore our men thinking to feare them, and to make them amaine their failes, that of a niece at randome towards them; for answer whereof, they discharged another peece at our Skiffe, with halfe an hundred of arrowes to boote; which our men perceiuing, plyed all their Muskets at them againer but our Skirfe not able to hold way with them fayling, was constrained to leave them, and returne to our ship againe, with one man very dangerously hert with an arrow in his breaft, although after recovered. Now wee aboord perceiuing our Skiffe to be too weake, and returning againe without them, prefently hoyled out our long boat, 40 and lent her after them; we following with our ship to neare to the shoare as conveniently wee might with fafetie. For it imported vs much now to speake with them, whereby wee might auoid the foreading of their feandalous reports of vs, in that Countrey; which might have fruitrated our chiefe hopes in landing the Emballadour there, beeing the place whereon wee most depended, especially confidering how destitute we were of any other place, if this should fayle, by reason of r. fail. So our long Boat feeding the Teradas up, drage them into a Bay, from whence they coal i not escape; which strooke such a feare into them, that they desperately sayled so farre into the Bay, that one of them was cast away upon the shoare; and the other neere upon follow- One of the ing, had not our men faued her from the breach thereof. All the Buluches for the most part leaped Teridas cast cuerboard, whereof tome of them narrowly escaped drowning; and other taken in againe by our away.

somen, were brought with the Tends aboord our ship, beeing onely nine Baluches left of about Onely nine twenty like. Who when they came aboord, perceining them to be of Gu der, wee told them, Estubes squed; that we were forv for the losse of their other Terada, and that we meant them no harme; but only to speake with them, whereof they were glad to heare ( for they thought we had been as mercileffe as themfel ies ) imputing their loffes vinto their owne follies. Then we told them, that we were boun I to Gualer, to land a Perfun Emballa lour there, and that we would intreat the Mafter of the Boat, whole name was Noradim, to pilot our thip chither, and we would content him for his paines. To which (knowing himfelte not to be freed by demali) he yeel.led, conditionally that we would let the Terada and his men proceede in their Voyage for Mufcat, which wee thought not fir, for fore of clamours and newes to be spread about the Gulfe, of our beeing there 60 among the Portugale but rather to carry the Terada with vs to Guader, thereby to make manifell our good dealings towards them. The P lot perceiving himfelfe to be viged between feare and free allhip, in the end agreed; of whom we made very much, and in our way to Guader had ma he merence with him and his men, both concerning the flate of the Countrey and King and touching thepassage of the Embassadour into Persia, through the same. Their answers, reports, Winter in those parts, and also to refresh vs againe. So we determined to faile for the llands of Curia Muria, the bodies whereof he in the latitude of about eighteene degrees to the Northward of the Equinoctiall, ouer against the wast of Arabia Falix. In our way, we never had other 10 weather then fogges, which were so thicke, that we could not disry halfe an English mile before vs (being a thing vituall energy years in July, August, and part of September. In all this time, both the Sunne and the Starres were fo obficured, that we could not helpe our felues any way by observation; but God being our gaide, at length we grouped out the land by our lead, well perceiting the colour of the water to be changed white, and many yellow graffy weeds swimming thereon; we founding still as we sailed, and our first ground was fortie three fathomes. So as we neered the land, our founding leffened to twenty two fathomes, where we anchored in very good ground, but could fee no land (although we heard the rut of the floare not to be farre off ) vntill the next day, which was somewhat cleare weather. And then we fent our Skiffe a houre to fee if they could difcouer a place of more fecuritie for our ship to ride in : but by reason of the 20 great Seas which came rowling into the Bay, there went fo great a feedge that they could not come neere the shoare, and therefore returned as they went: onely they had descried a situation offaire houses, built of stone, hard by the Sea side, which propued to be the Citie of Doffar in A. rabia Falix. When God had fent vs a little clear, weather, we perceived an high Cape land, on the Wester side of the Bay, the which we discouered with our Skiffe (at the second time of her going ) to be a very good road for all winds, except from East to the South by East (God make vs thankfull ) for thirher we warped in our ship, although with much toyle of our men, beeing diftant fixe or feuen leagues from the place where we were.

August. 3. Reseit a small

Doffar a Citie

Of Arabia

The third of August, we came to an anchor in the said roade, and went ashoare with our Skiffe at a little Village, called Refoit , standing close by the Sea fide. The Inhabitants thereof are Ara- 30 bians, and for the most part fishermen, who gave vs very kind intertainment, and told vs all concerning the Countrey, that we defired. Also the chiefe Gouernour of Doffar came downe to vs (whole name is Meir habamud Madoffar ) and bade vs very kindly welcome, and prefented vs with three Bullocks, Sheepe, Goates, Sugarcanes, Hennes, Plantans, and Coco-ntis, and fuch like. For requitall whereof, we prefented him againe, with a fine piece of Damaske double lockt, which was greatly by him efteemed the defiring our friendthip as much, as we defired his, and gaue vs licence forth with to come alhoare when we would. Also he gaue order to have a Market kept at this little Village of Refoir, purposely for vs to buy any kind of victual's which the Country did affoard. Their cattell are both deare and leane, and their fresh water is very scarce and bad, and very hard to come by : to that we were inforced to hire people to bring it downe to the fea 40 fide in skinnes, paying therefore twenty foure faillings fterling, for every five pipes filling. Before our departure from hence, Meir bahamud Madoffar defired vs to leave a writing of commondations in his behalfe, specifying the good and kind entertainment we had received there; which was graunted; and I made it in parchment, begun with great letters, the effect whereof being correspondent to the other writing, before left at Mobelia, also figured by the Captaine. And the Gouernour fent vs three notes, by him figned, to the end we might fend them in leuerall ships, if they should happen to come upon that coast (as we did perforce) whereby he might know our thips from others, and to give them intertainment accordingly. This Cape Refort flandeth in the latitude of fixteene degrees, and thirty eight minutes, to the Northward of the Equinoctial line, and is good anchorage, in five and an halte or fixe fathomes water.

Sixteene degrees, thirtie eight min.

The eight and twentieth, we let fulle from hence, directing our course for the coast of Persia. ftill coasting alongst the Arabian shoares for there were our cheifest hopes fixed . in setting the For Captain Lord Embaffadour ashoare. By reason of the * newes, and adultes wee heard and received at the Hawkins com-Cape Bona Efteranza, our expectations were fruffrated, both of Surat Dabull and all other carts ng away in diffaft, and de_ thereabouts. nied trade, the

The fecond of September, we failed close by an Iland, lying along it the Arabian shoare called Eng! fb wron-Maryra, the body of which standeth in twentic degrees thirtie minutes, North latitude, the variation of the Needle being twenty digrees tenne minutes.

The fourth day, we passed the Eastermost part of the Arabian land, called Cape Resolution mite (as before standing in the latitude of twenty two degrees, and thirty four minutes, and nineteened agrees 60 is the wed) for twenty minutes variation.

the Red Sea on his Subjects; which after (leaft the Sea and Merchandizing flould be that up to them ) procured the Priviledges octained by Captaine Beft, especially seeing the Englishable to withstand the Partugals, who selector ces held the Gazerais in Marine Subjection, and made them afraid of trading with Englifemen. The He de Macyra, in 20, degr. 10. min, variation. Cape 62, 11 a.

and speeches all concurring with the former, in a manner confirmed our hopefull intents, with

This Terrada was about the burden of fifteene Tunnes, her lading, for the most part, was victor alls of those parts; as Rice, Dates, and Wheat, and such like. They had a Portugall passe, which September 15. they shewed vs, thinking at the first we had beene Portugals. The Original whereof I translated out of the Portuguife language, because it might be knowne in what subjection the Portuguis doe keepe all these Countrey people: without which Passe, they are not suffered to faile to nor fro, vpon paine both of loffe of life, thip, and goods: The Copie whereof followeth. viz.

The Caftle of Mafcat.

Antonio Pereira de Laserda, Captaine of the Castle of Mascat, and the Iurisdiction of the fame, for his Maiestie, &c.

A Pertugall Pasport by fea, thewinghow by them, Fats, and otherse A Baluche.

LL those, to whom these Presents shall beeshewed: Know that I have thought good, to give secure A licence unto this Terraila, of the burden of fiftie (andses, the Master whereof is Norradim a Moore, and Baluche, and a dweller in Guader, of the age of fiftie yeeres, and carrieth for his defence sure areawed artea Swords, three Bucklers, fine Bowes with their Arrowes, three Caliners, two Launces, and twelne Oares: That in this manner following declared, the may passe and sayle from this said Fort, to Soar, Dobar, Must-That in this manner, pulses and the first plant of shall appeare by a Certificate, written on the Back-side hereof. And to performe well the said Voyage, she shall neither carry nor bring any prohibited goods, v.z. Steele, Iron, Lead, Tobacco, Ginger, Cinamon of 20 Seilon, and all other things what soener prohibited, and not tollerated by the Regiment of his Maiestie. And in this manner shall the said Terrada make her Voyage, without let or hinderance of any Generalls, Captaines, or other of the faid Signories Fleete, or Ship, what sower, which she shall happen to meet with.

all. And this shall be of sorce and sufficiency for one whole yeere, in going and comming. If it be expired, then to ferue other so long time, as the making bereof.

Ginen from the said Castle of Mascat, this sixteenth of November, Ann. Dom. 1611.

I Anthonio de Peitas, Notarie of this faid Factorie, bane written this, &c.

Sealed and Signed, ANTHONIO PERRIRA.

The Certificate written on the backe fide hereof is this: viz. Registred in the booke of Certificates, in Folio x x x i j. and so forwards. Signed, ANTH. PRITAS.

The feuenteenth of September, we fayled by high ragged Cliffes, whereto close adioyning, is Juane a Village. a good watering place, at a Village called Juane, (as Norradim told vs) beeing about fifteene leagues diffant from the Port of Guader, to the Westerside thereof, which beareth North of you.

Allo, vpon this day in the evening, wee arrived at Guader, and anchored at the Ports mouth vnt:ll the next day in the morning; where, about thirty Boates came out of Guader to fish. 40 Some of them came to speake with the Baluches, which wee had abourd; but what they faid was spoken in Baluche language, and therefore not by vs understood. So betimes this morning, we cleared our Balucha Pilot, with his Boat and men; and told him, that when he would come aboord againe, hee should be satisfied for his paines: and so hee departed, being very well contented therewith.

And prefently after, the Ambassadour sent one of his Persians, named Nazerbeg, alhoare in our Skiffe, with a mellage to the chiefe Gouernour concerning his landing, and palling thorow that Countrey into Perfia: who by the way was met with the Gouernours Boat, comming about our ship, into which Nazerbeg was taken out of our Skiffe, and went with them ashoare to performe his message, according to direction, being accompanied with many people vnto the Gouernours Tent. Where, he having delivered his message to the said Governour in the Persian language (which is as well vnderstood there, as their owne) was very much made of, and kindly entertained. The answere of which message by the Gouernour, was, that although that Counane country trey of Macquerona was not the King of Terfus; yet they did acknowledge a kind of dutial of Al sparrers, love vinco his Maierly, and that they had been Tributaries vinto him and his Predecessor for massocial king. ny yeeres past, as they were now at present. Also, he further said, that the King of Macquerona was the King of Persias Slaue, with such like fained and trapping complements , and the Ambalfadour should be as welcome, as if he were in the Persian Land; only tending by treachery to al-Jure his Lordinip ashoare, as by the euent it appeared.

This answere being returned by Nazerbeg, hee had to accompany him about (and to confirme the same with addition) about a dozen of the ancientest men there of Baluebes: who, when they came aboord our ship, faluted the Ambassadour with great submission, both in their Gouernours behalfe, and in their owne : some of them offering to kiffe his feete, telling his Lording, that he was the happiest man aliue in comming thither to that place. For, but one day past, the CHAP. 10. S.2. Horrible treachery intended to the English, and reneated.

Vice-roy was come downe with a troope of men, to visite a Saint; and therefore his Lordship should bee conducted with more lifetie thorow his Countrey (from the danger of Rebels and Theeues, which were betweene Guader and Persia) either to Chirman or Sistan, and so to Spaham. Alto that the Vice-roy would furnish his Lordship with Camels and Hories, and other necellaries requifites and that he would accommodate him with all the meanes he had in his power. And moreover faid, that they much rejoyced to have fuch fit opportunitie, to fnew their vufained love towards the King of Perfin : and withall, he should be dispatched from Guader (if hee would) in two dayes at the furtheit : and told vs, for our flip, we should have both water, and other necessaries whatfocuer we needed they bringing then with them three bagges of bruiled September 12. 10 Dates, being about three hundred pound weight, with two Goats, and fent abourd the faid fifthboats, that every one of them should fend two files (upon the Gougmours account) abourd our thip, who did accordingly. So that, what with their exterior thew of vinfained love and kindneffe towards vs, together with all mens speeches (of whom enquiry was made, as aforeskid) agreeing to tumpe one with another, wee were throughly perfivalled, without any kinde of distruit, that they meant vs as well as they faid: Especially, the Lord Ambassadour was exceedingly well conceited of them, being joyfull to arrive in Persia in twentie dayes; and wee not fory, in bringing to perfection our long defired hopes. But God, from whose Diuine knowledge the fecrets of no hearts can bee hidden, knew their contrary meanings towards vs : for had not his Mercy exceeded his Inflice, we had been confumed, and it never could have 20 been knowne what had been become of vs, thip nor goods.

